CANADIAN TROOPS BREACH MOUNT ETNA LINE
BRITISH WARSHIPS, PLANES SINK 2 U-BOATS

Capture Regalbuto And Yanks Take Capizzi and Cerami

Decisive Sicilian Offensive Now On As Nazis Driven Into Sicily's 'Cape Bon'

VICIOUS ALLIED STABS

(By DANIEL DE LUCE
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 3 (AP) — Canadians captured Regalbuto yesterday to breach the Mount Etna line and American troops routed the Germans from Capizzi and Cerami in the decisive Sicilian offensive, it was announced today.

German divisions backed into Italy's "Cape Bon" reeled under fiery, concerted attacks by British, American and Canadian troops heavily supported from the air.

General Sir Bernard Montgomery's men established a substantial bridgehead north of Dittaino River and entered the western end of the Catania plain.

These successes were but the highlights of a series of vicious Allied jabs which headquarters said had cost the Germans many dead.

(Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent in Sicily, said in a delayed dispatch written August 1, before the big push opened, that when the German Mount Etna defence line collapses "the Sicilian campaign is likely to be over except for mopping up."

("It is doubtful," Munro said, "if the Germans can make another stand in Sicily, pinched in as they already are around Etna." He said the Germans apparently had decided the best they could hope for in Sicily is to gain time by sacrificing the estimated three divisions on the island.)

Fighting Is Raging

Fighting between the Germans and American troops was reported raging on from Capizza and Cerami to within five miles of the strategic inland road junction of Troina, between the sea and Mount Etna 20 miles southeast of American-held San Stefano.

(Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons that the American 7th Army was reported to have entered Troina yesterday evening.)

Canadian and British troops manning the bridgehead north of Dittaino fought the new 15th German armored division — successor of the 15th which was lost in Tunisia — in the area of Catenanuova, on the north bank of the river five miles south of Regalbuto and 22 miles west of Catania. The struggle was fierce.

No information was given by official sources on the progress of British attacks across the plain. British artillery batteries, however, were reported to have outshot the German guns defending the southern approaches to Catania on the east.

(The fall of Centuripe, five miles southeast of Regalbuto, to the 8th Army was announced by Mr. Churchill in his House of Commons talk.

Capture Centuripe

("The 78th. Division has captured Centuripe after some very bitter fighting in the streets," the Prime Minister said. "The 51st. Division are making progress on their right. To the left the Canadians have captured Regalbuto, where opposition was particularly fierce. Further north, the American 7th. Army are reported to have entered Troina yesterday evening.")

The mighty ground offensive was accompanied by fresh aerial blows at Naples railways communications and the dwindling Messina bridgehead. Six enemy aircraft were destroyed and seven Allied planes failed to return.

Headquarters reported that stiffening of enemy resistance continued all along the Sicilian front, but "our troops, fighting hard, are forcing their way through rugged and roadless country."

Eighth army gunners reported they had outshot the Germans in artillery duelling along the coast south of Catania.

"Pushing north from Ramacca [illegible]0 miles southwest of Catania), we have entered the western end of the plain of Catania," the communique said.

"Further west our advance from Raddusa (28 miles west of Catania) continues in spite of strong enemy resistance. A substantial bridgehead north of the Dittaino (which flows between Rudduss and Catania) has been established.

On Catania Plain

"After an advance through most difficult country, with much fierce fighting, our troops gained positions overlooking Agira (32 miles northwest of Catania and 25 miles south of coastal San Stefano, newly captured by the Americans.)"

Agira fell to the Canadians last week.

The 7th Army blocked out a bulge of some 70 square miles in North Sicily by the capture of Capizzi and Cerami.

Striking from bases at Mistretta, six miles due south of San Stefano, and NNicosia, 12 —miles frrther south, they forged a triangle of steel to Cerami, about seven miles east of the Mistretta-Nicosia line. Capizzi lies between Mistretta and Cerami.

Fighter-bombers and medium bombers attacked enemy ports and communications behind the Axis battle line. Fighters maintained their sweeps and patrols. Adrano, Milazzo, Messina, Randazzo and enemy troops positions all felt the weight of Allied explosives.

Prior to today's announcements it was disclosed that in furious fighting the American 7th Army had cracked through the enemy's right flank and then captured San Stefano, Mistretta and 10,000 prisoners, while the Canadians pushed ahead over mountainous terrain in the Regalbuto sector at the centre of the line, and the 8th Army in the south had stormed into the Catania defence line to fulfil Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's promise that "we will now drive the Germans from Sicily."

Traffic Resumed Over Main Line

Napanee, Aug. 3 (CP)—Traffic was resumed over both tracks on the C.N.R. main line at 3 a.m. today after a derailed engine had been righted and several rails replaced. Workmen are now engaged reloading the cargoes of western wheat strewn from six cars at the time of the collision Sunday night. Traffic was held up for 17 hours after the accident but a one-way passage was opened on the west track Monday noon. A rear-end collision between a standing and east bound freight three miles east of here Sunday night, demolishing nine cars, caused the tie-up.

BENEFIT OF LABOR DAY

Ottawa, Aug. 3—(CP)—Although United States war workers have been asked to stay on the job on Labor Day, workers in Canadian war plants will have the advantage of the holiday, Munitions Department officials said today.

Labor Day is one of six statutory holidays set aside for Canadian workers under a definite, government policy announced last October. The other holidays are New Year's Day, Good Friday, Dominion Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day.

These holidays now are written into union agreements in most Canadian war plants.

Hundreds of Intact Fighter Planes Found Abandoned on Sicily's Dromes

London, Aug. 3—(CP Cable)—A Reuters news agency dispatch from the Sicilian front today said that when the British 8th Army crossed the Dittaino River in the first stage of the new offensive it found hundreds of intact fighter planes abandoned on 13 airfields of Gerbini.

(Today's Allied headquarters communique said a substantial bridgehead had been established on the Caanian Plains north of the Dittaino River.)

There were Messerschmitts, Focke-Wulfs and Macchis, many of them in perfect condition, the dispatch said.

There was every evidence the Axis had based its entire fighter force on Gerbini for strong resistance [illegible] that the Allied bombings had made Gerbini untenable.

British troops found runways torn up in the entire, area, pockmarked by thousands of craters.

Millions of gallons of aviation gasoline were left intact in dumps. Many of the abandoned aircraft can be converted to Allied use.

30 BOMBERS LOST

London, Aug. 3 — (CP) — The mighty bombing fleet of the R.A.F. and R. C. A. F. last night gave Hamburg its eighth pounding in 10 days and also raided other targets in northwest Germany. Today's announcement of the resumption of the European offensive said the night's activities cost 30 bombers.

A great fleet of the biggest bombers returned to battered Hamburg to break all records for sustained attacks upon a single target. A large number of Canadian bombers took part in the raid.

Fires set in the last assault on Hamburg Thursday night were still burning as the R. A. F. and Canadians swept over the city to add to the havoc created by some 8,000 tons of bombs dropped in the seven previous raids.

Thirty bombers were reported lost in the raid, which was carried out in great force and was accompanied by attacks upon other objectives in northwest Germany, an announcement said.

Break Two-night Lull

The assaults broke a two-night lull in the great Allied aerial offensive which was launched on Saturday, July 24.

The smashing blows at Hamburg, which apparently represented an experiment in obliteration bombing technique, were begun by the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. that night, when 2,300 tons of high explosives were unloaded on Germany's second largest city.

United States Flying Fortresses struck at Hamburg again the next day and R. A. F. and Canadian bombers followed up with a night attack. The same procedure was followed on Monday, and on Tuesday the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. made its second 2,300-ton night assault. Mosquitos maintained the offensive Wednesday night and on Thursday night the R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. carried out its third 2,300-ton raid.

TWO BOYS ARRESTED AFTER HOLD-UP

London, Ont., Aug. 3 —(CP)— Police today arrested Donald MacFarlane, 17, of Detroit and a juvenile shortly after a taxi driver, James Snowden, reported that two youths stuck a gun in his ribs and stole $12 and his cab.

The pair were arrested in a downtown hotel where they were registered. MacFarlane was charged with armed robbery, car theft and unlawful possession of a gun.

JUDGMENT DELIVERED

Ottawa, Aug. 3 —(CP)— The Supreme Court of Canada, in a judgment handed down today on a reference by the Dominion Government, expressed unanimous opinion that the Federal Government has power to legislate so as to grant exemption from criminal proceedings in Canadian courts to members of the United States forces in Canada.

150 to 200 U.S.-Built Ships To Be Turned Over To British Government

London, Aug. 3 —(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that President Roosevelt has promised to turn over to Great Britain between 150 and 200 American-constructed plus is being turned over to Britstarted.

Mr. Churchill also disclosed that the Canadian government was making similar arrangements concerning ships built in Canada.

A letter which the Prime Minister read in the House explained that the process of handing over the ships would be spread over a 10-month period.

He told Commons this would absorb the reserves of trained seafaring population and the resources of the countries concerned would be "economically and providentially applied to the main purpose of the war."

Mr. Churchill's statement recalled a recent Washington announcement that some ships would be placed under the British flag because of a temporary shortage of ship's crews in the United States.

Mr. Churchill said there was no financial arrangement and that the matter would be dealt with by the usual method that things were used to a common advantage.

Surplus Sent to Britain

Ottawa, Aug. 3. (CP)— Munition Minister Howe informed the House of Commons several weeks ago that Canada is building more ships than she can man. The surp' is being turned oved to Britain on a "bare boat basis".

The ships are chartered to Great Britain for a nominal sum, usually $' a year. The title remains in Canada and after the war the ships will be brought back to form part of a merchant fleet of more than 200 Canadian vessels which [illegible]. Howe has envisaged as a means of providing employment for a number of men now serving in the Canadian army.

It is presumed in Ottawa that it was this arrangement Prime Minister Churchill was referring to today when he spoke in the British House of Commons on Britain receiving ships from Canada and the United States.

PRIME MINISTER SAYS INVASION OF EUROPE 'CLOSER'

Reviewed Events in Italy in Half-Hour Radio Address

ITALY MAY COLLAPSE

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the Canadian people in a broadcast address last night that recent events on the European war fronts have brought "inexorably closer" the final phase of the battle of Europe—invasion and occupation of Germany.

Speaking over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Prime Minister included in those events the fall of Mussolini, the recent successes of Soviet arms on the eastern front, the "virtual annihilation" of Hamburg by Allied bombers and the "large-scale and destructive" aerial bombardment of the Rumanian oil fields.

Mr. King devoted most of his half-hour address to a review of events in Italy and said it was possible that Italy "may experience complete political and social collapse" as a result of the turmoil in the ousting of Mussolini and his Fascist party.

It was still too soon, however, to say what effect Mussolini's dismissal would have on Italy's course in the war. It was difficult, too, to know how much freedom of choice was open to the new regime headed by Marshal Badoglio, "or, indeed, to any regime."

But regardless of the course adoted by the Italian government, said Mr. King, tnere are "the best of reasons" for believing that, except in the north resistance in Italy cannot be prolonged.

BATTLE OF MUNDA NEARING CLIMAX BY LATEST DRIVE

SALAMANA RAIDED

(By C. YATES McDANIEL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 3. (AP) — The Battle of Munda neared its climax today with United States forces breaking down final Japanese defensive positions after a general advance of 500 to 1,200 yards carried them almost to the edge of the strategic New Georgia airfield.

Supplementing Allied headquarters' Tuesday communique which announced the advance, a naval spokesman for Admiral William F. Halsey's command in the South Pacific said American troops reached a point "close to the eastern edge of the field".

A portion of Biblo Hill, enemy strongpoint defending the northeast approach to Munda, was captured. The spokesman disclosed that tanks, flame throwers and artillery supported marine and army units in their advance.

The Munda advance, a general movement along the whole line, took the Americans to within at least 1,400 yards of the airdrome. The communique said considerable quantities of materials were captured.

Hans Peter Krug Again at Large

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 3. (CP) — possibility that Windsor has again been the avenue of escape to the United States for Ober-Lieutenant Hans Peter Krug, German bomber Possibility that Windsor has again from a Canadian prison camp, was being investigated today by military and police officials on both sides of the Detroit Rover.

The report that a man at about three a.m., today ignored shots from a guard of the Ambassador bridge, plunged into the river and started swimming for Detroit, started hundreds of Detroit, Wayne County Police and United States Coastguardmen searching the American shore in a vain hunt for the swimmer.

Krug first escaped to Detroit from Windsor in a stolen rowboat, when he fled from a prison camp at Bowmanville. Yesterday's escape was made from an officers' camp at Gravenhurst.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE TWO MAIN ROADS LEADING TO OREL

Threaten All German Communications With Bryansk in Latest Offensive

MAY ISOLATE NAZIS

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 3 —(AP)— The Red Star reported today that the Soviet army has captured two main roads leading from Bolkhov south to Orel and southwest to Karachev threatening the German communications with Bryansk and leaving them only one unmenaced highway from Orel southwest to Dmitrovsk.

The Germans had concentrated large forces northwest of Orel and established a strong system of fortified points in an effort to hold the two roads, the Red Army newspaper said, but intensified Russian attacks broke the enemy line and it now appeared that Orel itself might be in danger of complete isolation as the Germans continued to withdraw westward from their shattered positions.

The Red army advanced within a few miles of the town of Karachev, occupation of which would finally cut the highway running northwest from Orel through Karachev to Bryansk, German supply base.

On this front the Russians have fanned out from the recently captured base of Bolkhov in a widely developing movement against the rear of the German defenders of Orel.

Naples Targets Again Pelted By Night Fliers

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 3 — (AP) — Night-flying Wellingtons of the R. A. F. again pelted Naples and its vital railway targets on the Italian mainland with blockbusters and incendiaries, and Allied air power dumped destruction on enemy ports and communications on the shrinking Messina bridgehead in Sicily, Allied Headquarters announced today.

Six Axis aircraft were destroyed and seven Allied planes were lost.

New havoc was produced in the semi-paralyzed railway centres of Naples Sunday night by the Wellingtons.

Randazzo, supply base of the enemy's Mount Etna line, was severely shaken by a heavy weight of explosives the same night.

American fight-bombers and bombers in a series of attacks, damaged and disorganized enemy supply lines by smashing at Adrano at the western base of Mount Etna and the reinforcement ports of Milazzo and Messina in Sicily and Reggio Calabria across the strait.

R. A. F. Beaufighters strafed a destroyer and three motor torpedo boats off Cagliari, Sardinia, in exercising their continuing superiority over the Tyrrhenian Sea and almost up to the coast of France.

Seven-Point Armistice Proposal Advanced by Roosevelt, Reported

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—A D.N.B. broadcast of a Geneva dispatch to Il Popolo Di Roma, recorded by Reuters news agency, declared today President Roosevelt had advanced a seven-point armistice proposal to Italy.

1. The Italian army and navy are to cease all resistance.
2. Collaboration with Germany must cease at once.
3. Italian troops in Greece, Albania, France and former Yugoslavia are to be withdrawn at once.
4. War materials must be handed over to the Allies undamaged.
5. An Anglo-American-Soviet military government will be established in Italy until the end of operations.
6. The arrest of all war criminals.
7. The release of all Allied prisoners-of-war on Italian soil.

The roundabout report through Axis channels followed repeated German and Italian rumors of negotiations for an armistice, as opposed to the Allied demands for unconditional surrender.

Premier Badoglio continued his silent defiance of the Allied warnings of air bombardments and invasion to come.

Anti-Fascist forces inside Italy were reported gathering strength to aid Allied divisions when defences of the Italian mainland are finally breached.

Prevent Enemy From Launching Attack on Convoy

Battle Rages For 3 Days Against Force of 25 to 30 Enemy Subs

3RD U-BOAT LOST?

London, Aug. 3—(CP) — British warships and planes sank two of a force of between 25 and 30 U-boats trying to intercept a big Allied convoy and probably destroyed another an admiralty communique announced today.

So successful was the British defence that the great force of U-boats was unable to launch a single attack, the admiralty said. The convoy was eastbound.

The fight between the warships and planes on one side and the submarines lasted three days. The action occurred some weeks ago.

ORDER RESTORED WITHIN HARLEM AFTER RIOTING

Five Dead, 545 Injured, Five Million Dollars of Damage Reported

CAUSE OF DISORDERS

New York, Aug. 3 (AP) — Order returned to New York's Harlem today but authorities remained on the alert to prevent a possible recurrence of yesterday's rioting which left in its wake five Negroes dead, 545 injured, 509 arrests and an estimated $5,000,000 in property damage.

As 6,000 police and 1,500 members of the city patrol corps patrolled the streets only a few isolated disturbances were reported last night in the heavily-populated Negro section.

Mayor F. H. Laguardia, who made four radio appeals for order and aided in directing police activities for more than 24 hours, returned to his home at 1.15 a.m. today.

Earlier in the night he said, "we have the situation under complete control."

Nearly all of those arrested yesterday were arraigned before four magistrates, two of whom sat until midnight last night, the majority accused of burglary—outgrowth of the looting. Matthew J. Eder, executive secretary of the Uptown Chamber of Commerce, estimated that looting and damage caused to stores would cost merchants five million dollars.

The widespread disorders were touched off early Sunday night after a policeman shot and slightly wounded a Negro soldier who, police said, attempted to interfere with the arrest of a Negro woman.

GREAT FIRE RAGES IN OIL FIELDS NEAR PLOESTI

ONE CRASHES IN SEA

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 2 (Delayed) — Rumanian and German fire fighting services are battling a great fire which has been raging in the entire petroleum area near Ploesti hit Sunday by American bombers, according to the first eyewitness account reaching neutral Turkey today.

The latest information was that seven bombers participating in the raid were forced down in Turkey, while an eighth was reported to have crashed in the sea near enough to the Turkish shore for the crew boat. All the crews were internboats. Al lthe crews were interned.

Three of the bombers came down in the Izmir district of the west Turkish coast. There were no details concerning the others.

The first report of the Ploesti fire came in a telephone conversation with an eyewitness who was near hysteria and obviously awed by the terrific destruction the raid had inflicted.

He said the fires were the biggest he had ever seen anywhere.

Hit Everything in Sight

He said the bombers hit just about everything worth hitting in the entire mile-long oil pumping and refinery district in and around Ploesti.

A terrific air battle raged during the attack. Swarms of Rumanian and German fighters were waiting at high altitudes for the American bomber fleet and pounced as it neared the target.

The defences had been on the alert approximately an hour, as the flight of the Americans had been charted while they were crossing Rumania.

The eyewitness said he saw some big bombers crash but that many more of the attacking fighters came down.

The raiders headed straight for their individual targets, heedless of the fierce opposition—while the gunners poured steel into Focke-Wulf 190s flown by Germans and Messerschmitts piloted by Rumanians.

The low height at which the American airmen flew to the attack threw the ground gunners off their aim.

The eyewitness said it still was impossible to assess accurately the damage because of the widespread fires, but that the Ploesti region's efficiency as an oil producing and refining centre probably had been cut by half at least.

War Industry In Hamburg Halted by Raids

Stockholm, Aug. 3—(AP)—An indication of the way in which the wheels of Hamburg's war industry have been halted by the Allied air attacks was given today upon the arrival of the Danish consulate secretary in Copenhagen from the stricken city.

"All obligations to work are suspended at the moment," he said.

Another eyewitness report of the shambles to which Germany's greatest seaport has been reduced was given by a Danish worker quoted in the Svenska Dagbladet, who said:

"After the attack nothing was the same as before. I saw only ruins. The city was burning everywhere—even the streets. Many persons were as good as naked. Some wore only underclothes.

"Whoever didn't see this devastation can't begin to imagine it. Bodies were lying everywhere and what was worse, almost all had their eyes open. They died from air pressure of giant bombs and their clothes were torn from their bodies."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

IDEAL WEATHER DURING JULY

Farmers in the Bay of Quinte district were favored with almost ideal harvest weather throughout July, it was indicated this morning by weather statistics from the Belleville Water Purification Plant which showed only ten days of precipitation during the month. Rainfall received totalled 2.78 inches, considerably less than normal and .37 less than the 3.15 inches received during July last year.

Hottest temperature recorded during the month just passed was 89.8 degrees with a low of 46.2. This compares with the 87 degrees as top temperature recorded for July, 1942, while the low for the month last year was 46.5. Rain fell on fourteen days during July last year.

Omar Z. Younghusband, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Younghusband, who received the degree of M. D. at Queen's University last week, also receiving the W. W. Near and Susan Near prize of $100 awarded to the student making the highest standingg throughout the medical course and the Hanna Washburn Polson prize of $50 for proficiency in clinical diagnosis in medicine, surgery and obstetrics.

TELEPHONE POLE BROKEN BY CAR

With the exception of the apprehension of several who had been imbibing too freely on intoxicating spirits, police circles were comparatively quiet over the weekend holiday. Only one matter arising out of a motor accident was investigated, that being a telephone pole broken off at the corner of Strachan and Grier streets some time early Tuesday morning. The matter was not reported to police by the persons responsible for the breaking of the pole but police have information regarding the auto responsible and expect the early apprehension of the guilty party.

PROVINCIAL POLICE MAKE QUICK ARREST

Wesley Arnold, Prince Edward County farm hand, enjoyed only a brief period of freedom on Sunday afternoon when after been alleged by police to have stolen $270 from Arnold Babcock, R.R.1., Carrying Place, he was apprehended, while riding a bicycle on Highway No. 2 near Marysville.

Babcock missed the money almost immediately it was taken and notifying police of the loss gave a description of the person thought to be guilty. As the result of the description given, Provincial Constable Harry Caldwell was able to apprehend Arnold as he was cycling east on the highway. The matter is further pending, it was stated by police.

16-POUND SALMON TROUT LANDED

Isaac Walton started something when he popularized the kingly sport of snaffling fish on the end of a piece of string. Size seems to be the greatest boast of returning fishermen for nothing is ever heard of the beauty of color, the symmetry of form, or the tigerish scrimmage experienced before the fish is landed.

The fish story is not about "the one that got away", but of the one that was captured, hooked or snaffled by three Bellevillites, Messrs. Allen Lennox, Charlie Heath and Harold Bird. It seems that these three gentlemen have been spending a couple of weeks up at Lake Papineau where they were regarded by the piscatorial world as the season's greatest menaces, and especially by the surviving members of a sixteen (16) pound Salmon Trout's family. This monster of the deep was landed by all three gentlemen, that is, they were all in they bask in the glory, but the truth is that Mr. Lennox actually landed the finny giant.

"That isn't all though", said Mr Bird, reporting the incident. "We also got a three and three quarter pound Speckled Trout, and I landed him. And, even that isn't all . . . . .we got our catch several times".

INVITATION GIVEN TO GENERAL PUBLIC

Celebrating the second anniversary of its official opening, station personnel of No. 5 Initial Training School at Belleville have extended a cordial invitation to the Belleville and district public to attend their sports day on ednesday afternoon.

A full round of psorting events have been planned by station officers with several of the events to be of the open varity featuring top-ranking athletes from many of the district stations. A colorful march past including the entire station personnel and competitors in the sporting events will inaugurate the afternoon's proceedings at exactly 1:45 following which the many events will get under way.

In the evening a dance will be held in the station drill hall with No. 6 R.D. orchestra being featured. The public is also welcomed at the evening dance, which will get under way at nine o'clock.

Col. Vanderwater Praises Economies And Benefits of Liberal Regime

Marmora, Aug. 3 (Special)—Col. Vanderwater, Liberal candidate for the riding of West Hastings, addressed a meeting in the council chamber at Marmora Town Hall on Monday evening. Mr. H. W. Sabine acted as chairman and introduced Colonel Vanderwater, who, in his opening remarks, said he appreciated very much the interest taken by those present and was not discouraged by the small attendance and did not blame the electors for not coming out in larger numbers, as they could sit down at their radios and by turning on a button, could get all the information in this strenuous weather and busy time for every one. He said that last week he held a meeting in a house at Wallbridge and had fifty present, while the Conservatives held a meeting in the hall with only thirty present. He said this would be the last meeting before the election and he would like to give a few figures and give a brief outline of work done at Queen's Park by the present Government.

Gives Liberal Gov't. Credit

At Bancroft and Maynooth it was told that Hastings County was free from debt, but was the whole story told, he asked. From 1934 to 1943, one-half a million was relieved from the taxpayers and that was due to the Liberal Government at Queen's Park. Highways have been constructed in Hastings County, but West Hastings had not received their share of highways.

Highways in Hastings

He said he had no quarrel within the county but if he was their choice at the polls on Wednesday, he publicly promised to have the highway extended from Marmora through Wollaston Township at the termination of the war, but he told his listeners to keep permanent in mind that the war had to be won first.

In 1934, when the Liberals came into power, Hastings County was paying twenty per cent. of the cost of the construction of highways, which amounted to $40,000 to $75,000 a year. This came from the taxpayers but at the first session of the Liberal Government, they assumed one hundred per cent of the cost of highways and also of county roads. $20,000 had been spent every year on the road north of Madoc. Every municipality has been used. Every municipality has received a subsidy of 1 mill and last year 1½ mills and the government was also paying 20 per cent. of Mothers' Allowances.

Equipment For Roads

In addition service charge on electric lights had been abolished. Many rural residents would like to have electricity installed, but it was impossible to erect any more rural lines. Colonel Vanderwater promised that next year the Department of Highways will supply equipment for township roads for removing the snow the same as county roads on highways, and the people in rural districts will have the same advantages as the urban residents. The city of Belleville had benefited by this tax reduction. The county had made a saving on highways of $632,714.55 and on township roads a saving of $16,792.00.

Savings to County

The government had saved the county of Hastings in subsidies paid to municipalities $207,337.50 and for maintenance of indigent patients $67,267.00. The saving to tax payers on highways was $460,248.24, on county roads $40,797.50. Savings in Mothers' Allowance from March 1, 1935 to March 31 1943 was $259,745. He also showed that the government had paid a cheese subsidy in Hastings County of $414,595.30 and a hog subsidy of $51,553.00. These he said are some of the achievements at Queen's Park during the last nine years.

Attacks Col. Drew's Program

He then spoke of the 22-point platform of the Progressive Conservative party and asked his listeners if it occurred to them, where this money was coming from. He said there are only three sources to obtain this money from—borrowed money, natural resources and tax payers.

Surplus Should Go to War Effort

He said: "We have a war to fight and that it is not won yet, and I think you are unanimous that any surplus should go to the war effort." He spoke of Mr. Drew's criticism of the Bren Gun question, and the good work that the Bren gun was now doing. He also spoke of Col. Drew's criticism over Hong Kong and Colonel Vanderwater said if the crack English Guards had been sent there would have been the same result as they were outnumbered by the enemy. He thought more constructive criticism would have been better.

Colonel Vanderwater criticized the Progressive Conservative candidate who spoke on Wednesday night at Bancroft, praising Mitchell Hepburn and at Wallbridge a few nights later for criticizing him and saying he had not been fair with labor.

First Duty is to Win War

Colonel Vanderwater said there is a war on and "our first duty is to win it as soon as possible." Mr. Nixon has a personal interest in winning this war, as he has lost a son in the Air Force and two members of his family are in the services.

"Look at the speaker, Mr. Drew, at Belleville, tonight, who comes into West Hastings on the eve of the election.

"Previous to the war, this gentleman visited Germany and on his return asked us to be more friendly with Germany. He also visited Russia and told us Russia had a meagre army. I ask you now what would we have done without them and our neighbours to the south of us?"

The proxy vote that has been criticized so freely, could not have been taken in any other way, with the men in the services, in so many different localities and he was of the opinion that they were willing to let the people at home run the affairs of the country.

Colonel Vanderwater said he would like to ask the leader of the Progressive Conservatives why George Henry and Leopold Macauley are not seeking re-election.

Confident in Nixon's Election

In his closing remarks, Colonel Vanderwater told his listeners he was leaving it in their hands. He said: "No doubt Harry Nixon is going to be elected and I ask you to send me to repesent you. If I was fifteen years younger, I would not be with you, but giving my services to my country. If elected, I will represent you to the best of my ability."

Mr. H. W. Sabine and Mr. Hugh Maloney gave brief addresses and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Obituary

REV. WILLIAM D. HARRISON

The Rev. William D. Harrison died at his home, 177 William St., late Sunday evening, August 1st. He was in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Harrison was born at Alton in Peel County and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Harrison. As a young man he was ordained to the ministry of the Methodist Church and for forty-four years he was actively engaged in the work of this church and later the United Church. More than half of his ministry was devoted to work in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties and eighteen years were spent in the Belleville district. In the various places where he served Mr. Harrison was popular and held a high place in the regard of his people and to them his death will bring much regret as well as to many friends in Belleville where he lived retired for the past ten years, his last charge being at Deseronto.

Although superannuated from the active ministry of the Church, the Rev. W. D. Harrison gave freely of his services in assisting the church at Country points and for a considerable time and until last year, he conducted services regularly at the Rossmore United Church and the United Church in the 2nd Concession of Thurlow Township. He served his church well and was a friend to the poor and to those in trouble. He will be much missed by those near to him and by many persons who enjoyed his friendship. Mr. Harrison was a member of Bridge Street United Church and fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Dorothy C. Robinson one brother, the Rev. James T. Harrison of Haney, B.C., and one sister, Mrs. J. J. McClellan of British Columbia.

ALFRED W. DICKENS

After an illness of several weeks' duration Alfred Willoughby Dickens died at his home, 249 John Street, on Sunday, August 1st.

The late Mr. Dickens was born in Trenton eighty seven years ago and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Dickens. At an early age he came with his parents to live in Belleville and he learned the bakery and confectionery business with his father who was the founder of the Dickens business in this city. When a young man he went to Philadelphia, Pa., and after some years he returned to his native city and for a considerable time he was engaged in the confectionery business here on his own account. For some years he has been living retired. In the city Mr. Dickens was well known, by many friends and acquaintances he was highly esteemed. In religion he was a member of Bridge Street United Church. Many old friends will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Alice Maude Gibbons; two brothers, Mr. Ed. F. Dickens, Belleville, and Mr. B. F. Dickens of Vancouver, B. C., Mr. Ernest Dickens of this city and Mr. Clark Dickens of Oshawa, are nephews and Mrs. George Meyers, Toronto, and Miss Ivey Dickens of Belleville, are nieces of the late Mr. Dickens. There are also several other nieces and nephews in Toronto, Vancouver and England.

Drew Urges Victory for Ontario, Leader Speaks in R.D. Arnott's Behalf

With less than thirty-six hours left before the people of Ontario present themselves at the polls to select a new governmental leader or retain the present encumbant, Col. George Drew, Progressive-Conservative leader, speaking before a gathering of over 600 in the Hume Arena at Belleville on Monday night, stressed the importance of a full vote on election day. "The fate of any party or any individual is not important," said Col. Drew. "It is not important whether it is a victory for the Progressive-Conservative or any party, but whether it is going to be a victory for the Province of Ontario."

"It is not the proxy vote which is the issue," said Col Drew; "it is the denial of the right of the vote to the men and women in uniform and the deliberate way the government left not a step undone to complete the disenfranchisement of these men and women. When Mr. Nixon says that we approved this proxy vote he is right, but like other acts brought before the House it was never framed in the House but was to be put into effect by order-in-council behind closed doors; we had fallen too much into the habit of passing acts and leaving the making to be done behind closed doors. Neither Mr. Arnott or myself, or any other member of the Opposition ever saw these proxy forms."

People of Ontario are the Rulers

Stating that the Government refused to permit the Progressive-Conservative party representation overseas so that they might see that the men and women over there would have some information about the vote, know who the candidates were so they could make up their own mind. He went on to say that a printed circular was prepared for distribution to the men at camp in Ontario but, "the Dominion Government, playing the same game with Toronto all along, ordered the commanding officers not to circulate the information sheets." Col. Drew called this "the greatest piece of impudence." He urged his listeners to make their ballot count as it never counted before. "We, the people, are the rulers and Ottawa is not going to tell us what we are going to do and what not to do. You are making up for 200,000 ballots of men and women who were denied the right to vote."

The Nixon Appointment

Col. Drew called the appointment of Mr. Nixon to the Premiership "a shot-gun marriage between Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Nixon at which time Mr. Nixon promised faithfully to love, honor and obey . . . Mr. Mackenzie King no matter what happened." He said that Mr. Nixon had given his solemn word that he would not call an election until the proxies had been distributed and returned. He referred to Mr. Nixon's appointment in Toronto as being done by "hand-picked hacks." He said that it was the middle of July before the proxies were in Britain and that no effort was made to make the proxy vote available to the men in the Mediterranean area, "although Mr. Nixon knew, through his Ottawa associations, that these men were in that area and not yet in action.

Instances Cited

Col Drew said that a proclamation had been printed in Trenton announcing an Advance Poll to be open from 9 to 4 and from 7 to 10 to register votes of those unable to be in their home riding on Wednesday. The poll opened at the scheduled time, nine o'clock in the morning, but was closed at seven o'clock in the evening and remained closed in spite of the proclamation. He gave a further illustration which occurred in Guelph: "A mother of a boy overseas received his proxy back and driving 18 miles into Guelph, presented it for registration. She was told she would have to wait until the following day as the only time the judge would sit was from 10 to 12 in the morning." He pointed out how impossible it is for some people to get in to town at that time and that he believed local election boards were able to extend the rules to meet the situation.

Would Revise Electoral System

Col. Drew pledged himself to a complete revision of the electoral system so that there could never be a repetition of such "dishonest" tactics. "The laws will be made clearer and there will be penalties imposed for anyone who denies the vote," he declared. "The Criminal Code is under the control of the present Dominion Government but such amendments and revisions will be made when we are in a position to exert sufficient force upon the Dominion Government to make them effective." He said that the amendments to the Criminal Code would make interference with the vote a crime, punishable by imprisonment without the option of a fine.

Australian Soldiers Vote

"The fact that Australian soldiers and airmen are getting a secret ballot for their use in the forthcoming Australian election disproves Mr. Nixon's argument that it was impossible to distribute similar ballots to Canadians in any theatre of war," said Mr. Drew. "Democracy breaks down when the vote is denied." He called for a showing of hands of those of his audience who had received back proxies from overseas. Three men raised their hand. "Thirty-six hours away from the opening of the ballot boxes," continued Col. Drew, pointing to the raised hands, "and only three people have received proxy forms from overseas. But, he said, "there are still thirty-six hours left and I urge everyone of you to make this a read crusade to stir up other people, make them see what is being done to their rights."

Forests Long Term Assets

Col. Drew entered into a discussion on the forest resources of the province stating that they were one of the greatest long term assets the province possessed. "Millions of people would find employment," he said. Two million men could be brought into the province of Ontario where they would find profitable work and, considering an average of four to a family, this would mean an increase in population to eight million."

Col. Drew referred to the eight timber contracts let out by the Liberal government to eight companies: "These eight companies," said Cal. Drew, "were friends of the government and they were granted the control of 15,231,000 acres of the finest timber land in Ontario without the formality of public bid or tender called for by the laws of the province. These companies," continued Col. Drew, "were to build mills on the lands allotted to them but, to date, not one single mill has been built. I give you my personal pledge," promised Col. Drew, "to cancel every one of these eight contracts and return the valuable land to the rightful owners, the people of the Province of Ontario, and set up a commission to deal with these fifteen millions of timber acres."

"But", said Col. Drew, "that is not the end of the story. Those eight companies not only did nothing to fulfil any part of their contracts but, in the case of one, the real offender of the lot, the Pulpwood Supply Company by name, their 'Government gift timber' being located in the Long Lac district, were unable to move their logs so the Government built them a waterway at the public cost of $1,200,000. Get this", emphasized Col. Drew, "not only did the Government build this waterway for the Pulpwood Supply Company, but when we examined the files there wasn't a single scratch of a pen on paper to show why any of those people got those areas. They just decided that these people had a right to these areas of timber".

Greatest Housing Scheme

"We were on record in the Legislature as proposing to create employment in the Province of Ontario for returning men and women long before Mr. Jolliffe was ever heard of", said Col. Drew entering into a discussion of the C.C.F. platform. "This is no new statement on our part. The building of houses creates employment not only for htose directly employed on the actual construction of the houses but the manufacturer of beds, refrigerators, radios, telephones and other household equipment, and this is carried even farther, to the distributor and retailer of these products. Insurance, produce, meats and other foods, banking and all business connected with through a housing program. And", the livelihood of a family benefits said the Colonel, "I promise you the greatest housing scheme ever seen in the Province of Ontario. And, it will not take one cent of public money to start this building plan".

He assailed the associates of Mr. Jolliffe as anti-British and revolutionary, quoting from a radio speech by the C.C.F., M.P., from British Columbia: "'If we cannot attain our ends by peaceful ends we will obtain them by revolution'." He said that Mr. Jolliffe had not repudiated this statement by Mr. Winch, saying that Mr. Jolliffe was "really just a loud-speaker for the others. . .and not so loud at that". He went on to quote another statement from Mr. Winch who had said: 'This is not a reform party, it is a revolutionary militant party, and when we assume power it will be a revolutionary, militant government'. "Do not be deluded into believing what they tell you", said Col. Drew. "Be warned now before it is too late that when the C.C.F. Party takes over industries, if they ever do, they are not going to permit small local elections within a plant to select the man who is going to run the plant. . . .they will put in one of the local members of the Party".

Wingham Rink Wins Corbin Gold Cup in Best Tournament Ever Staged by Belleville Club

Riggs and Ritchie Trophies Won by Peterborough Rinks in Well-Played Games

SPLENDID WEATHER

In its first competition, the Corbin Gold Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the annual men's rinks tournament sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club here on Civic holiday, went to far-off Wingham, Ont., when Alex Crawford's strong quartette of lawn bowlers captured the top honors of the biggest lawn bowling event to be held in Eastern Canada. Second and winners of the Riggs Trophy was the J. D. Fitzpatrick rink of Peterborough, as another Peterborough rink captured third honors and the Ritchie Cup when Chief Geo. Gimblett's quartette was successful.

Ideal weather favoured the staging of the annual Belleville Lawn Bowling Club's men's rinks when 200 bowlers from all parts of Eastern Canada took part from E. Montreal to Wingham in Western Ontario, where the coveted Corbin Gold Trophy will rest for the next 12 months. Rinks were on hand from Montreal, Ottawa, Cornwall, Kingston, Peterboro', Toronto, Oshawa and intermediate points to make the occasion a memorable one and the greatest tournament of lawn bowling competition ever staged in this part of the country.

Besides the keen competition throughout the entire day's program, the praise and laurels afforded the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club and its energetic officers by the visiting bowling clubs was perhaps the paramount feature of the day.

Words of Congratulations

"I can truthfully say this has been one of the finest bowling tournaments I have ever attended. Your hospitality has been unsurpassed. Your program was a credit to your officers and I might add the success of your efforts will spread far and wide in the annals of lawn bowling in Eastern Canada when the competing rinks return to their home districts and spread the news of this outstanding tournament," stated Alex Crawford, skip of the champion Wingham rink, who has bowled from Florida in the south to all parts of Canada in his 60-odd years on the greens. Similar words of congratulations and hopes of returning to Belleville for future tournaments were expressed by Chief Gimblett, of Peterboro', Billie Whitty, Stirling's grand veteran of bowling, Ed Berry of Ottawa, R. E. Edney, of Kingston, Alex Gray, of Montreal and a host of other visiting "kitty klickers," many of whom were making their initial visit to Belleville for lawn bowling competition.

Present for the tournament was W. B. "Bill" Brown, of Montreal Westmont Bowling Club, the oldest bowler in the tournament, who informed President Cliff Argue, of the host club he had bowled against a Belleville team at Niagara-on-the-Lake over a half a century ago.

Band Entertains

During the evening's tournament the large gallery and contesting bowlers were entertained by the Belleville Municipal Band, under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson. The presence of Belleville's No. 1 musical organization and the renditions of martial and popular music added that much-needed touch to the tournament to mark it "perfection."

Prior to the opening of the annual Belleville Lawn Bowling Club's men's rinks tournament, the visiting contestants were welcomed by Mayor Harry Rollins and President H. C. "Cliff" Argue.

"Today in such recreational and friendly competitions as this we have something to be thankful for. This type of pastime and the right to congregate like we are today is what free and democratic people are fighting for," stated His Worship, Mayor Rollins.

Welcomed by Donor of Cup

Although outside competing rinks may not have appreciated the significance of the Corbin Gold Trophy, those closer to the home club welcomed L. E. McLean, donor of the handsome trophy that will be competed for annually in Belleville for men's rinks competition. "Our firm, the Corbin Lock Manufacturing Company, was glad to present this trophy for annual competition by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club in an effort to promote goodwill and competition in lawn bowling worthy of Belleville and Eastern Ontario. We feel that such gatherings and friendly competitions are just as essential today as in peacetime, if it is possible to attend, but more particularly, our firm is paramountly interested in the creation of a tournament that will take the name of Belleville into every lawn bowling club in Eastern Canada," stated L. E. McLean, one of the prime factors in the success of the program.

To single out any individual member of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club for honors in the preparation for this gala greens tournament might be unfair, but visitors and home club members alike were high in their praises for President "Cliff" Argue, who conducted the tournament as chairman and directed all play during the day, that lasted from 10.30 a.m. until shortly before one o'clock Tuesday morning. However, when prizes were ultimately presented President Argue personally thanked the visiting clubs for making the first annual Corbin Gold Trophy, Belleville Lawn Bowling Club men's rinks tournament the marked success it enjoys along the length and breadth of Eastern Canada today. To President Argue went many laurels with Mr. McLean's continued efforts along with those of Ab Wonnacott, Harold Cross, Ernie Vanner, Harvey Stewart, Games Chairman Elgin Ford, J. B. Boyce and Secretary Mark Vanner in the assurance of the success of the greatest lawn bowling venture ever attempted locally. Of course there were many others too numerous to mention, but they all lent their shoulders to the wheel to put Belleville well to the fore as a host club in the annals of lawn bowling in this Dominion.

Fifty Rinks Compete

Fifty rinks, comprising 200 bowlers, competed in the tournament, the largest ever held in Eastern Ontario. At the conclusion of the play only two of Belleville's home club rinks emerged in the prize-winning class. Ab Wonnacott's Belleville team was sixth in three games won, while George Watkin's local rink took honors for one high game of scoring. The prize to the team travelling the longest distance to compete in the tournament went to Alex Gray's rink from East Montreal.

Three Games High:

Corbin Trophy and four chests of silver, presented by the Corbin Lock Company, won by Omar Haselgrove, Art Wilson, Mel Donahue and Alex Crawford (skip) of Wingham with a score of 39 plus 40. Presentation made by L. E. McLean.

Riggs Trophy and four occasional chairs, donated by the Stewart Warner Alemite Company, won by A. Mandor, N. Kilingbeck, R. Hopkins and J. D. Fitzpatrick (skip) of Peterborough with a score of 39 plus 28.

Ritchie Cup and four sets of dishes donated by the Reliance Aircraft Company, won by C. Williamson, A. Archibald, Judge Smoke and George Gimblett (skip) of Peterborough. Presentation by J. A. Lizotte.

Fourth High—Four sets of silver tea service donated by United Moulded Products and presented by Mayor Rollins to T. W. Solmes, Dr. A. E. Carleton, Harry Tompkins and W. J. Whitty (skip) of Stirling.

Fifth High—Four Grenfell jackets donated by Deacons Ltd., and won by A. D. Bennett, Les Diamond, J. Archer and W. S. Wiggins (skip) of Campbellford.

Sixth High—Pairs of silver candle sticks donated by Stephens-Adamson Ltd., and won by the Belleville rink of A. E. Wonnacott (skip), J. Bean, Wally Embury and George Pauley.

In two games high Fred Kinnear's rink of Kingston was successful in winning the four electric lamps donated by the Belleville Sargent Company and presented by M. J. Vanner. The Belleville rink of Chas. McGuire, Harold Cross, H. Hanton and George Watkin (skip) took the one game high score honors and silver relish dishes presented by Ed Bernstein of the Mead Johnson Company.

President H. C. Argue, L. E. McLean and officers and members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club extend to the merchants, industrial plants, and the city council and all of those who helped in any way to make the tournament a success their deep gratitude and appreciation, which was doubly voiced by the visiting rinks.

Air-Borne Mouse Tires Bird of Prey

Ottawa, Aug. 3 —(CP)—Ottawa's first air-borne field mouse hit town last week, brought by a tired bird which set it down on a Bank Street sidewalk before continuing its flight. No sooner on terra firma than the "paramouse" staggered away, a bit air-dizzy, to the safety of an open drug store door. Pedestrians frightened the bird away before it could recapture its prey.

HURON CO. JAIL EMPTY

Goderich, Ont., Aug. 3 —(CP)— Governor Reynolds of Huron County jail here ran up the white flag of purity last Friday, signifying the institution's freedom from prisoners. No housing problem there.

PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE HASTINGS WEST

BELLEVILLE, ONT., JULY 27, 1943.

To The Electors of Hastings West:

For the first time in the history of our Province a Prime Minister who claims to be a farmer has brought on a general election in the busiest and most important season of the year. Now, when every hour counts in the harvesting of the crops and urban residents are being urged to render assistance to the farmer, Mr. Nixon through his action in bringing on an election on August 4th., withdraws from the food front, hundreds of hours and days of work of people who will have to give their time in the election instead of helping in the harvest. This, at a time when butter and meat are rationed and our Food Controller, Donald Gordon declaring: "THE PRODUCTION OF FOOD RANKS IN IMPORTANCE WITH GUNS AND TANKS AND PLANES." If it was necessary to hold an election why could it not have been delayed until after the crops were harvested, say October or November? Is this act of Mr. Nixon's is to be interpreted as indicating the measure of his interest for the farmer and the food-front? However he has called the election AND WE MUST meet the challenge.

It is evident to everyone that it will be possible for a candidate in the few days remaining before election day, to contact only a small portion of the Electorate. Everyone is busy and the transportation problem is acute owing to fuel restrictions, etc. Therefore I am taking this means of respectfully soliciting your co-operation and help.

I stand shoulder to shoulder with our leader, George Drew and his progressive business-like and up-to-date 22-Point Program, the finest and most constructive Program ever submitted to the Electorate.

If elected I will endeavour to serve you to the best of my ability.

Again I solicit your help and co-operation and thank you most sincerely for the help, co-operation and trust you have given me in the past.

SINCERELY,

DOES wartime living make it harder for you to keep your living expenses in line with your income? Are you looking for ways to make your dollars do more for you?

No tiresome bookkeeping

"The Budget Calendar" can help you. This is a totally new kind of budget book. It shows how to make a spending plan that will fit your pay cheque and your needs—a plan that will help you get more of the things you want and need with the money you have to spend. There's no tiresome bookkeeping, no fixed pattern that you must always stick to. Yet the method—if you use it—will help you solve the money problems that puzzle so many families today.

Do you have a simple way to take into account every expense that will have to come out of your pay cheques? Is it hard for you to decide what you should try to get along without and how much you should put aside every pay day for future expenses? "The Budget Calendar" will tell you how.

Budget plan sent free

This practical plan has already simplified budgeting for thousands of families. We published it originally as a service to our customers. But today Canadians everywhere are looking for ways to stretch their dollars. We believe many of them will find this better budget plan helpful. So we are making "The Budget Calendar" available to all who request it. You are welcome to write for a free copy.

New Shocks for Hitler

The Allies bring new blows to bear on the enemy. Now the Americans dealt an irresparable blow at Hitler's gasoline supply, when the Rumanian wells were blasted over the weekend with the result that Hitler's high octane gasoline supply will, it is expected, be reduced to one third. In a war which has as its chief fuel gasoline, this is very serious.

These attacks were made by low-flying planes which inevitably struck their targets with bombs and incendaries.

From now to the end of the war there will be surprise heaped upon surprise for warlike Germans and their Hitler, they sought to conquer by surprises and they are now getting their pay. There can be no let up in the hammerlike shocks dealt at Hitlerism.

Wartime Transportation

War has provided ways of transportation even if gas and rubber are scarce. In England, according to the Manchester Guardian, the Duke of Norfolk tours the country on a bicycle in his ministerial capacity. The Guardian notes that a curious collection might be made of vehicles which have played their part in affairs. The elder Pitt toured the country in a one-horse shay after Walpole turned him out of his place. There were the jaunting cars in which Parnell and others canvassed Ireland. There was Queen Anne's one-horse vehicle in which, on Swift's authority, she drove like Jehu. There were the four-horsed coaches in which so many have toured their constituencies on polling day. There was the wagonette in which Keir Hardy arrived at Westminster to begin his parliamentary duties.

Like the Duke of Norfolk, many are finding the bicycle fits in well with the needs of the time for war workers, for boys and girls and for many others. That is evident everywhere in Canada.

Today there are 9,000 District Nurses of Britain who have been referred to as "angels on bicycles." They have taken on their shoulders in wartime much of what was formerly the duty of the doctors. They are friends and counsellors in the homes they visit. They worked day and night through the blitzes in constant danger which they faced to attend the injured and comfort the bereaved.

A Warm Summer

The summer of 1943 will likely be known as a hot summer. It is true it had not such waves of intense heat as swept across this continent some years ago in the last week of May and in the early part of July.

The spring of 1943 was late in warming up but with the coming of summer, despite some moderate spells there has been a large share of warm weather, while at the same time there have been quite frequent rains. Nights have been particularly warm.

When spring was tardy there were forecasts that this would be a warm summer and so it has proven with the possibilities that the season will continue along the same pattern as up to the present time.

No Shelter for War Criminals

There will not be a place where the war criminals can rest their heads safe from the pursuit of justice. The free nations have warned the neutral peoples and governments that no war criminals must be given asylum or shelter for merely surrendering office and getting rid of their responsibilities in that way. President Roosevelt was the first to speak and Britain and Russia have backed up the warning.

This is what Mussolini has found come to his doorstep to haunt him until he is tried before a proper court for the crimes which have been or will be laid to his account.

Adolf Hitler, who has defied every law of morality and raised treachery, murder, deceit, revenge and associated evils to the rank of "duties" for a thoroughgoing Nazi, is also to face a tribunal.

The world at large does not look upon the offences of these men as pardonable. The United Nations are determined to bring before the court of civilization these monsters who made war on peaceful nations for their aggrandizement, lust, envy, greed and pomp.

The most of the world is lined up with the Allies by a long way. And there remain but few neutrals.

In justice to the Czechs, who first felt the awful power of the Huns and were made the victims of the grossest inhumanities and cruelties practised systematically, in justice to the Poles, millions of whom have been slain in mass slaughters under German oppression, in justice to the Yugoslavs, to the Greeks, to the Russians, to the Norwegians whom Hitler struck without remorse because they stood in the way that he wanted, to the people of Holland, who were slaughtered in wanton murders as in Rotterdam, to the Belgians, to the French who have been dominated by the Germans, to the Ethiopians whom Mussolini's plan desecrated that he might steal their land even if he had to wipe out many of their race, to the people of British cities who were bombed as a step of Nazi terrorism, in the streets, in the shops, in the churches and the schoolhouses and in the fields — for all these, the war criminals must be tried and judged.

These are the races who will provide the witnesses which will testify. So terrible have been the atrocities that it might be said even the dead will bear witness against the inhumanity of the Huns and of the Fascists in Ethiopia.

The great tribunals to try the war offenders will be the most impressive tribunals of their kind in all history. Aggressors hitherto have "got away" from the just penalty of their crimes. But this time the records are ready to face the war criminals at the proper time and place.

In the class of the monsters who have been guilty of war atrocities today the world demands that those who defy the law of nations shall be punished for their crimes. It cannot be claimed in their defence that similiar offences have never before been called a crime for which they could be brought to judgment.

The arch criminals of this war are the murderers and those guilty of cruelties, the starvation of peoples, the murders of hostages and so on.

They must learn and their peoples must learn that international law will take a hand in their punishment and not let them just go because they quit like Mussolini when things were going very bad, when at heart he would have desired to carry on in his crimes if he had been "getting away" with them.

They and those who have followed them must be made to know that there is an international code of life which they have flouted and dishonored by their crimes. By that international criminal code the villains and criminals must be tried.

KINSHIP

Oh, if you had a sailor boy on duty far at sea,
Or one who flies the heavens in the cause of liberty,
Or a soldier in a fox hole on some island far away,
Do you think you could forget him for one minute of the day?

There are men with younger brothers who with Eisenhower are,
There are boys in the Aleutians, and I think it fair to say
By their loved ones they're remembered every minute of the day.

Well, if you've no boy on duty as a sailor far at sea,
And no one who rides the heavens in the cause of liberty,
Just remember there are mothers, wives and sisters, sweethearts, too,
Who have loved ones who are fighting at some battle post for you.

Never think it doesn't matter! They are your sons and they're mine.
It's for us they all are fighting on some far-flung battle line.
It's our warfare they are waging, it's for us they face the fray,
And we never should forget them for one minute of the day.

The lighters of the town gas lamps might have seen last night, that though the moon might be in its first quarter, the clouds obscured whatever light it might have been prepared to shed had the night been clear. Consequently they should have lighted the lamps, but they didn't; and people had to grope their way home through the darkness as best they might. We submit that the company might instruct their employees to light the lamps on nights when the moon ought to give light, but does not.

The flies are getting thicker and more persistent.

Father Wylie, of the Brockville Recorder is about to dispose of his old and leading county journal to Mr. Isaac Watson, late of the Globe. Mr. Wylie has conducted the Recorder for a quarter of a century. When he retires on whose head will fall the honorable title of "Father of the Press of Ontario."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Table Salts Prevents Heat Strokes

In an effort to have their employees take salt during hot weather because the body loses so much salt in perspiration, many employers put tablets of salt (15 grains) beside the drinking taps of water coolers. Thus an employee taking a drink of water several times a day would take one or two teaspoons of salt which is sufficient to make up for salt lost by the tissues during hot, close, or humid weather.

Where men would not take salt, the experiment of putting salt in the drinking water did not meet with success which is a serious matter as every tissue in the body needs salt to properly carry on its work.

In the Medical Journal of Australia, Dr. J. M. Flattery reports his studies of two years of an illness in navy men, following exposure to high atmospheric temperature, attributed to lack of salt in the body through excessive sweating in the hot, moist, windless climate of the tropics, showing that even at rest, and not counting the men working in the engine and boiler room, every persons has periods of profuse and continuous sweating. The types of illness met with were heat exhaustion, stomach and intestine illness, and heat cramp.

Table salt (sodium chloride) to be of any use must be taken in full doses regularly. The arrangement was that every officer and man on the ship should take a half teaspoon of salt in water twice a day. No ill effects of heat occurred when the routine was faithfully carried out. When salt was given to patients already affected by the heat, almost immediate results from the salt treatment occurred and their symptoms were relieved.

"The taking of a half teaspoon of salt in water twice a day could be instituted for all ships serving in the tropics, for ships during their passage through tropical areas (especially troopships) and also for all government employees living and stationed in tropical areas ashore".

While most of us do not work in close moist places, nearly everybody perspires freely during hot weather as this is Nature's method of ridding the body of heat. However as the perspiration carries much salt out of the body as it gets rid of body heat, it would be good sense during very hot weather to keep a few salt tablets or salt itself beside the wafer top, or carry the salt in purse or pocket. The salt, by holding water in the tissues, will prevent heat stroke.

282 Candidates Seek Election On Wednesday

(By The Canadian Press)

The Ontario election campaign neared its end today, with only one of the three major party leaders scheduled to speak tonight on the eve of the balloting.

E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. leader, will speak in Brantford to wind up the campaign. He spoke last night at St. Thomas. Lt. Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, is spending today and tonight in his constituency of Toronto High Park, having finished his speaking program last night at Kingston and Belleville.

Premier Nixon, Liberal Leader, completed his speaking campaign Saturday night in Peterborough and spent yesterday in his riding of Brant, which he has represented continuously since 1919. He remains in Brant today and does not plan to speak tonight.

There are three separate votes in tomorrow's election —civilian vote, direct soldier vote and proxy vote—although election night returns from riding returning officer will not segregate the totals.

Polls Open at 8.00 a.m.

Civilian polls will open at 8 a.m., and close at 7 p.m., Ontario servicemen stationed in the province will vote at polls in their military camps and camp returning officers will telegraph the result to the home ridings of the men after the votes are tallied.

The proxies, through which men and women in the armed forces serving outside Ontario may designate a friend or relative to cast their votes, will be used at civilian polls by the holder. They must be used where the soldier, sailor or airman lived before the enlistment.

Revising officers are holding final special sittings throughout the province today to validate late-arriving proxies from overseas.

282 Candidates

In all 282 candidates are seeking election in the 90 ridings. The Progressive Conservatives have 90 candidates in the fied, one for each constituency. Premier Nixon's Liberal government forces have 89 candidates, the one riding in which there is no Liberal being Elgin where Mitchell Hepburn, former Premier and former Liberal Leader, is seeking re-election as an independent Liberal.

The C.C.F. is contesting 86 seats, most in its history in the province. It had 37 candidates in 1934 and again in 1937. There are 17 other candidates—four Independent Liberals, three Socialist Labor, three Independents, two Independent Labor, two Independent Soldier, two Labor and one Independent C.C.F.

While Premier Nixon did not make a speech last night he said at his home at St. George near Brantford that he estimated the Liberals would win more than 55 seats in the election. He said his estimate was based on reports from all parts of the province. The Liberals won 63 seats in the 1937 election and held 59 seats at dissolution of the Legislature last June 29.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE

Lines of Retreat Cut

The lines of retreat for some German units were cut by the swift Russian pursuit and outflanking manoeuvres. Red Star reported one entire German regiment surrounded by the Red Army thrust thru' the defence line along an unidentified river north of Orel, severing its communications with the rear.

The enemy tried to fight its way out of the encirclement, thecmf out of the encirclement, the dispatch said, but the Russians trapped them in a ravine and nearly wiped out the regiment.

German defences northwest of Orel were reported being dismembered gradually by the Russian assaults. The Red army launched a series of simultaneous attacks against individual German bases and broke through junction points and mopped up the enemy defence zone in separate parts.

Red Star said the enemy suffered a serious defeat in that sector being driven out so quickly they left a large amount of material.

The Germans increased their pressure steadily southwest of Voroshilovgrad where they were attempting to regain the Donets Basin defence line.

Beat Off Attacks

In one sector the Russians reported they had repulsed seven assaults destroying 95 tanks of 114 employed by the Germans.

Moscow broadcasts announced the capture of 70 villages in fierce fighting near Orel in which the Red army was said to have slain 2,500 Germans and destroyed many Nal tanks.

A Berlin radio broadcast recorded by Reuters News Agency and several London morning newspapers indicated the Russian army had entered Orel itself. The broadcast said the Russians were "attacking with great violence, especially in the southern part of the town" of Orel, but claimed stout German resistance had enabled the Nazi command to "erect new defences which will stand up to all future Soviet attacks."

Looking Down Into German Cities

By Harold Nicolson, M.P., in the London Spectator.

The Air Ministry, with their accustomed ingenuity, organized last week an educational course for members of both Houses of Parliament. Having obtained the loan of one of the committee rooms, they installed therein an exhibition of photographs taken over the bombed areas in Germany.

It was unlike any photographic exhibition that I have ever seen. The room had been darkened, and around it glowed great panes of glass, illuminated from behind, and bearing on their surfaces fantastic shapes in superimposed patterns of red and blue. These colored windows shone out in the surrounding darkness, giving to the occasion a mystery, a sense of imminence, which recalled the camera obscura, the peep-shows the aquarium, the planetariums of former days. In a box upon the centre table were spectacles and lorgnettes fitted with one lens of red glass and another lens of blue.

Several shy and heroic officers of the R.A.F. hung about in the half-darkness instructing legislators in the use of the apparatus and in the information which the photographs disclosed. And it became a fact that, as one adjusted the lorgnette, waited a moment for the focus to impose itself, and gazed at the great sheets of glass, suddenly the pattern lost its red and blue color and there below one, as if seen from an airplane, were the telegraph poles, the newspaper kiosks and the tram lines of a German town. The trees in the avenues cast their shadows upon doorsteps; a vast crane in the docks at Wilhelmshaven rose up at one from the quay-side; one looked down into the depths of an exploded oil-storage tank as if looking into the recesses of a saucepan.

The word "stereoscopic" assumed a different meaning: one felt that one could tell the difference between a high building and a low building by passing one's fingers across that serrated surface. The spires of the churches felt as if they pricked.

I had examined that very morning a photograph which had been published in the newspapers showing the effect of our bombardment of Dusseldorf. It would seem that ordinary newsprint is not able to convey the sharp outline essential to any clear interpretation of aerial photography. I had, it is true, observed from the newspaper photograph that considerable damage had been caused. Yet what I had noticed was only the actual destruction occasioned by high explosive: the photograph had not disclosed the damage done by fire.

Yet as my stereoscopic vision fell upon the same scene as enlarged and presented by the Air Ministry it was evident that in street after street every house had been burnt to the ground. The outside walls remained standing, but the roof had collapsed and one could see down into the house to the mass of debris accumulated upon the ground floor. The streets and avenues had become mere rows of little empty boxes, as hollow as the orifices of a mouth-organ. Here was a factory with nothing left but the cement flooring; here another factory with the main shops twisted and guttered out of shape: here a dock with steamers lying on their ungainly sides; here a railway station which had slid almost as a whole into the Bahnhofplatz, and there great sheets of water where towns had stood before.

Looking at these amazing photographs one was not surprised that Dr. Goebbels should have abandoned all hope of minimizing this dreadful havoc and should have burst into the high ululation of Stalingrad. "It is worse than Warsaw", exclaimed one German broadcaster in an effective but most unguarded phrase. It was worse than anything that could be conceived. We gazed at the mild aviators who conducted us: "Did you do this? Or you? Or you?

I trust that this startling exhibition will in some form be opened to the public. It will, I think, convince them of three things. First, that the direct damage to munitions works and other military objectives is so devastating as to justify the important sacrifices it entails. Secondly, that the damage to civilian property is caused more by fire than by explosives, and that it is less terrible to drive munition workers from their homes than to kill them in their cellars. And thirdly, as I wrote a few weeks ago, that the lesson which is thereby being imposed upon the German people is more salutary and more durable than any educational processes which we could devise.

I do not think that any man who sees those photographs, who listens to the fear and fury of the German wireless, can doubt that this Battle of the Ruhr is, in fact, a second front, and that the dislocation it has caused ,and will still cause must hamper ,and perhaps cripple, the hopes of any major offensive in the East. Nor do I believe that any German who hereafter may visit the Ruhr are will easily forgive the Nazi leader either for having plunged them so wantonly into war or for having so tragically misconceived the planning and strategy of aerial warfare.

Even the simplest German must know today that some gross miscalculation was made. And when they recall the boast of Hermann Goering that a single bomb on Germany would be viewed by him as a major defeat, they must clench their teeth in rage. The men of Bomber Command have to face strain and peril greater than anything endured before; they have at least the satisfaction of knowing, as those of the Somme never knew, that their courage achieves results which may well prove decisive.

One of the glass panes at the exhibition covered an area of Berlin. There was the Prager Platz and there the Motzstrasse running eastward towards the Nollendorfplatz. If I followed a street to the north I should reach the Gedachtniskirche and see the Cafe des Westens where Rupert Brooke wrote his famous verses or the Romansiches Cafe which in my time was the centre of Berlin's Bohemian life.

Gazing down upon those blocks of buildings, I recalled how in each flat, owing to Schinkel's misguided notions of town planning, there would be a Berliner Zimmer, opening upon the courtyard —a feature as invariable in all Berlin flats as is in London the double drawing room. Heavy and dark were those Berlin dining rooms, with the Herrenzimmer and the salon opening at one end and the bedroom and offices at the other. How often in those grim dining rooms had I discussed with Germans the origins of the First German War, the mistakes which they and we had made. How often had they said to me that their greatest mistake was not to seize the Channel ports in 1914; that our greatest mistake was not to press home the first attack upon the Dardanelles.

How often had they said to me. "Did you ever realize in London how devastating was the effect on us of your blockade?" How often had I said to them, "Did you realize in Berlin that we never expected to achieve victory before July, 1919?" How often had they assured me that their second greatest error was their over-estimate of the effect of the U-boat campaign; how often had they described the dismay which fell upon them when they learnt that large American armies had in fact arrived in France. More terrible than any of these miscalculations are the fantastic errors with which Herr Hitler has now faced them. In many a Berliner Zimmer today there must be mutterings of despair.

DID NOT RETRIEVE CLOTHES

Chatham, July 31 —(CP)— Houdini may have extracted himself from impossible situations in his day, but two Chatham boys ran him a close second this week. They were caught swimming in a prohibited section of the Thames River here by city police, and fled without so much as stopping to retrieve their clothes. Police took the clothes along and the pair of youngsters turned up to claim them shortly after at the police station—fully clad.

WINSTON CHURCHILL—WHO HAS LED US THROUGH DARK DAYS.

The C.C.F. Would Get Rid of Churchill

Clarence Gillis, C.C.F. member of Parliament for Cape Breton South, a leading C.C.F. spokesman and first lieutenant of the C.C.F. leader in the House of Commons, said at Hamilton in March of this year:

> "The people will have to get rid of the Churchills to attain their ideals."

On April 6th when challenged in Parliament, he said: "I have no intention of denying it." His leader, Mr. Coldwell, did not repudiate Mr. Gillis' statement. Neither has Mr. Jolliffe, the Ontario C.C.F. leader.

And what are the "ideals" of the C.C.F., to attain which, they would throw even Churchill overboard? Regimentation forever, is the answer. They'd take over our free way of life, make farm, factory and store mere state-owned machines, wipe out free business, subordinate the individual. In favour of fantastic Socialism, they destroy all that free Government and free institutions have built since Confederation.

The C.C.F. declared in Parliament at the outbreak of war that we should send no fighting men Overseas — they thought Canada could be craven enough to try to retain freedom without fighting for it.

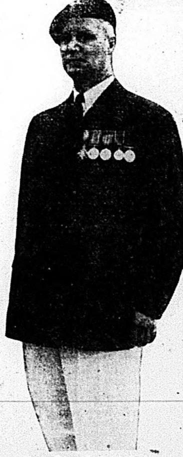
On March 24, 1938, Miss Agnes Macphail said in the House of Commons:

"In my opinion our British connection is our gravest danger. . . . There is a possibility . . . that when trouble breaks out in Europe . . . it will carry us into a conflict which after all has very little to do with North America. . . . It will be more difficult than it was the last time to inflame the youth of Canada to go again to fight in Europe."



George Drew, who has faith in our Future and in our British connection.

WEDDINGS

WEESE—TREVERTON

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday, July 28th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton, 6th Thurlow, when their only daughter, Olive Annie, was united in marriage to Clare Douglas Weese, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Weese, of Melrose. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Trumpour. Miss Annie Clare, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length dress of heavenly blue sheer and satin and shoulder-length veil falling from a halo of satin flowers. She carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses and baby breath. Miss Keitha Weese, sister of the groom, her only attendant, was gowned in pink sheer and was carrying a bouquet similar to the bride. The groom was attended by Mr. Earle W. Treverton, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a dainty lunch was served by the Misses Willhemine Huffman, Helen Bradden and Hilda Treverton, after which the happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Peterboro and points north. The bride travelled in a two-piece ensemble of lace and rose crepe with white accessories. On their return they will reside near Melrose.

Obituary

LATE MRS. ADELAIDE FALL

Frankford, Aug. 3.—The funeral of the late Mrs. Adelaide Fall was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Downs on Friday, July 30th., with Rev. G. H. Bache, pastor of the Free Methodist Church at Frankford, conducting the services. Interment was made in Zion cemetery.

The late Mrs. Fall passed away at the home of her daughter, after an illness of about eight months duration. She was born in Murray Township almost eighty years ago and except for the past eight months spent her entire life in that community. She was a member of the Free Methodist Church. Left to mourn besides one daughter, Mrs. J. Downs, are one daughter-in-law, Mrs. Clare Pearson, six grandchildren, Mrs. Kenneth Horsley, Mrs. Ernest Green, Mrs. Geo Kemp, Corliss, Marina and Jimmy Downs and nine great-grandchildren.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Dan Parks, John Downs, Geo. Downs, Wm. Downs, Norris Roberts, Geo. Chard.

LATE GERALD P. FITZGERALD

The funeral of Gerald P. Fitzgerald, a former resident of Belleville who died in Toronto on Thursday last, took place from the Canadian National Railways Station here about 4.45 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, July 31st., to St. James' Cemetery where interment took place. The committal prayers were said by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G.

INFANT STEWART

On Saturday, July 31st., the three-weeks-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Stewart, 100 Cedar Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital. The parents will receive the sympathy of friends in their bereavement.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, August 1st., from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, to St. Charles' Cemetery at Read, Tyendinaga Township, where interment took place.

MRS. NORAH M. (BELL) CHISHOLM
(Wellington.)

Many friends in Belleville will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Norah Madeline Chisholm, widow of W. D. Chisholm, barrister, and youngest daughter of the late John Bell, K.C., of Belleville, which occurred at her home in Wellington, Prince Edward County, on Sunday, August first.

The late Mrs. Chisholm spent the greater part of her life in Belleville, where her late father was the Chief Solicitor for the Grand Trunk Railway for many years. For some year Mrs. Chisholm made her home in Wellington.

Surviving her is one sister, Mrs. W. J. Gibson, Belleville.

JOHN DOUGLAS
(Ivanhoe.)

John Douglas died at his home at Ivanhoe on Saturday, July 31st., as the result of accidental burns and shock, which he sustained on June 16th., last.

The late Mr. Douglas, who was in his 84th year was born in Huntingdon Township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas, and died on the farm where he was born and where he lived all his life. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church and was well esteemed in the community.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Rose Carroll; four daughter, Mrs. William McAllister, Toronto; Mrs. David Thompson, Thomasburg; Mrs. Burton Calvert, Thomasburg, and Mrs. Donald Sharpe, Hoard's Station; one son, Mr. Clarence Douglas at home; two brothers, Mr. William Douglas of Sulphide and Mr. James Douglas of Hoquam, Washington.

The funeral took place this Tuesday afternoon.

JOHN W. KEMP
(Codrington)

Mr. John W. Kemp, well known and highly respected farmer, passed away at his home near Codrington on Saturday, July 24th., in his 79th year.

Deceased, who was born in Cramhea, had resided in this district all his life and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Kemp. His wife, the former Miss Alice Lawson, predeceased him twenty-seven years ago. He was of a kind and genial disposition and a good neighbor and will be greatly missed.

Ten months ago, Mr. Kemp received internal injuries, owing to a milk can pinning him beneath it when he fell from a stand to the ground. He never recovered from the accident and was confined to his bed most of the time. On Thursday previous to his death he suddenly became worse, not recovering consciousness.

In religion Mr. Kemp was a member of Codrington United Church and when age and health permitted, he took an active part in church work, being a superintendent of the Sunday School and an elder of the church.

Many friends were present at the funeral which took place on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30, July 27th., 1943, from the family home to Codrington United Church where an impressive service was conducted by Rev. W. T. R. Delve, pastor of the church. Many floral offerings paid silent tribute to the esteem in which the deceased was held throughout the entire community.

Surviving are, one daughter, Mrs. J. Clifford McGraw (Ruby) Trenton R. R. 3; one son, Raymond Kemp, on the homestead; one sister-in-law, Mrs. James Kemp, Colborne; one brother-in-law, Mr. Lewis Lawson, Brighton; one grandson, baby McGraw. There are besides, numerous nieces, nephews and cousins. A twin sister (Ruth) of Mrs. McGraw, died at birth twenty-seven years ago.

Interment took place at McPhail's Cemetery and the pall-bearers were Messrs. Allan Loomis, Grant Goodfellow, Frank Plue, Will Lattimar, Lloyd Ames and Walter Raycraft.

MRS. LAURA AKIN

Tweed, Aug. 3.—Mrs. Laura Akin of 20 Fairleigh Crescent, Toronto, died suddenly from a heart attack, Sunday, about 12.30 near the home of Mr. Jas. Trudeau, about four miles north of Tweed.

Mrs. Akin has been a housekeeper for Mr. J. L. Grant and his eleven-year-old daughter for the past two years at the same address in Toronto.

They came to Tweed, Saturday evening to visit around where Mr. Grant spent part of his early life. After they had their lunch Mr. Grant and daughter went to the river to get some water and when they returned they found her dead.

Dr. M. G. Dales, coroner, was summoned and he decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Her body was brought to Mr. Geo. Frost's undertaking parlor, where funeral arrangements will be made.

LATE MRS. GRACE CRANSTON

The funeral of Mrs. Grace (Morgan) Cranston, widow of John Thomas Cranston took place from her late residence, 61 St. Charles Street, on Saturday afternoon, July 31st, and the service in the home and at the graveside in Stirling Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. C. Bell Harding, rector of the Anglican Church in Stirling.

LATE MRS. ALMIRA McKNIGHT

On Saturday afternoon, July 31, the funeral of Mrs. Almira McKnight, formerly of Belleville, who died at St. Vital, Manitoba, in her 86th year, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, to Christ Church where the Burial Office was conducted by the Rev. Canon W. B. Heeney, a former rector of the Church, and an old friend of the deceased. The Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church, assisted in the service.

Interment took place in Belleville Cemetery and the committal prayers were said by the Rev. Canon Heeney.

The bearers were Messrs. A. Lott, H. Lott, R. Andrews, J. Whiting, F. Fairman and M. Howard.

History and Aim of C.C.F. Party Defined at Meeting for D.W. Bews

The history of the C. C. F. party, its aim and program, were set directly before a fair-sized crowd of party enthusiasts at the city hall Monday evening as Mr. Angus McInnis, Federal C. C. F. member for Vancouver West, spoke in the interests of Mr. Douglas Bews, candidate for West Hastings.

Mr. McInnes confined his remarks entirely to the program of the C. C. F. indicating that he would not indulge in personalities nor denounce the opposition parties' program. He regarded it as a good sign of the growth of the party that the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives had given up reasoned discussion of the C. C. F. and had resorted to an effort to frighten the electors by wild and untrue claims respecting the C. C. F. program.

Not Ashamed of Socialism

"The wild claims that the C. C. F. will take away the people's farms, their homes and confiscate their insurance policies, are altogether untrue," he stated. "The C. C. F. is not ashamed of what socialism is or what it means. Governments of New Zealand and Australia have policies akin to that of the C. C. F. which policy was that of democratic socialism."

Stating that the C. C. F. party had evolved out of Canadian conditions the speaker referred back to events leading up to 1932 when Labor and Farmer parties met in convention at Calgary to form the C. C. F. party. "The party today has a clear and definite program, while the policies of the two old parties have not changed," he said.

Mr. McInnes stated the C. C. F. believed the country was immensely rich in resources and its people were industrial and intelligent. These resources should be utilized for the welfare of the people instead of being developed by the monopolies.

Full-Time Employment

Touching on the post-war rehabilitation problem, the speaker indicated that unless the answer to the problem of why fulltime employment can be found only during wartime, the answer to the rehabilitation problem had not been solved. There are now 750,000 in the armed forces and another million working in war industry, all of whom have been taken out of the sphere of commercial production. These were producing much material but were not producing wealth.

"To understand this problem we must understand how Canadian war production was brought up to its present miraculous level," he said. "It certainly wasn't done by free enterprise."

Failure of the government to award the necessary war contracts under the Defence Supply Purchasing Act which limited profits to five per cent was recounted by the speaker who stated the cost plus basis had to be instituted.

"When production became government controlled, Canada got miracles in war production—and the people were fed better, and lived better than ever before."

Attack Col. Drew's Stand

"In spite of this all Col. Drew had to offer toward the postwar rehabilitation program is the return to private and free enterprize," stated McInnis.

Co-operative Movements

In view of present conditions there was enormous scope in Canada for the development of co-operative movements, "and what's more this is the most democratic movement in the country today."

In reference to trade unionism the speaker claimed that unions were not enough to protect the rights of labor. Political means must be used. There was stout denial that the C.I.O. was financing the C.C.F. party, while it was claimed the people of the country were too well educated in the school of hard knocks to be frightened by such propaganda.

"The boys who worked in the unemployment camps during the depression at 20 cents per day haven't forgotten and this is the reason they are turning to the only party demanding that they be given their rights."

Living Conditions

In closing the speaker stressed that the war will not be won until the peace is won, and the peace will not be won until poverty is banished in Canada. He claimed that C.C.F. members would support any legislation to improve the conditions of the working people. The standard of living can only be increased by increased production and better distribution of that production.

The electors were warned that their job did not cease on election night but afterwards will have the responsibility of informing themselves of the needs of their country. "Unless we remove the causes that produced Hitler, the war hasn't been won," stated Mr. McInnes. "So don't sit back after the election. Your work has then just begun."

Douglas W. Bews, candidate for the West Hastings riding spoke briefly to the meeting in introduction of the guest speaker. He deplored the propaganda put out by the two old parties stating that his training as a teacher had emphasized the necessity of truth. "If the propaganda against the C.C.F. party was true I would not care to be associated with the party," he said.

The ridiculousness of the propaganda attacking the C.C.F. party was proven by the fact that party members also own their own homes and pay heavy insurance. It was absurd to think the C.C.F. favors cancelling of insurance and taking over homes and farms, he said.

Mr. Bill Mathews acted as chairman for the evening and introduced the candidate, while musical entertainment was provided by "Danny Boy" Smith.

Marmora and District

Marmora (Special)—The monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee was held on Monday afternoon in the Electric Shop with R. A. Elliott presiding. Five suggestions were reported as being received in the past month and one of these was allotted an award. The star went to the Engineering Division. W. L. Rigg brought in the report of the Inspection Committee and Norman Kilpatrick was appointed floating member for August. The monthly statement of the Benevolent Relief Funds was presented by C. H. Buskard. Other reports were that of the Health and Investigation Committee by J. A. Rice and that of the Publicity Committee by J. H. Hemphill.

"Owing to sentimentality
Blueberry muffins appeal to me.
It isn't the flavor I like at all,
It's only the summers they recall,
Summers of adolescent ease
Gingham dresses and scrubby knees.
The muffins repelled me, even then
But holidays at the age of ten
Are very pleasant to munch on now
So pass me another anyhow."

You may or may not agree with Margaret Fishback's sentiments concerning blueberry muffins, but there's certainly something about blueberries, even when they're bought in a city store, that brings memories of rocks and water and sun and summer holidays.

If you pick your own blueberries, these desserts from the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture will have an extra-special flavor, but they will be popular with the family even if the berries are bought.

Blueberry and Rhubarb Upside Down Cake

2 tablespoons mild-flavored fat
¼ cup sugar
1 cup blueberries
1½ cups cut rhubarb

Pick over and wash blueberries. Wash and cut rhubarb. Cover rhubarb with boiling water, let stand five minutes, drain. Melt fat in a baking dish, add half the sugar. Add blueberries, and rhubarb mixed with remaining sugar.

Topping

1½ cups pastry flour or
1-3 cups all-purpose flour
¼ cup sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
¼ cup milk
3 tablespoons melted fat

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Beat eggs, add milk and shortening. Add to dry ingredients, stirring only until mixed. Pour batter over the fruit. Bake in a hot oven, 400F, for 25 minutes. Turn out onto a serving dish and serve hot with top milk. Six servings.

Blueberry Crisp

4 cups blueberries
¾ cup sugar
2 teaspoons lemon or rhubarb juice
2 tablespoons butter or mild flavored fat
¼ cup flour
¼ cup brown sugar
¾ cup quick-cooking oats

Wash blueberries, place in a greased baking dish, add sugar and sprinkle with juice. Combine fat, flour, brown sugar and quick-cooking oats and spread the mixture over the top of the blueberries. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375F, until berries are soft and top is golden brown, about 40 minutes. Serve hot. Six servings.

Blueberry Crumb Cake

¼ cup mild-flavored fat
¼ cup sugar
1 cup pastry flour or
⅞ cup all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
Dash of salt
1-3 cup milk
¼ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups blueberries

Crumb Topping

¼ cup sugar
1-3 cup flour
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon mild flavored fat

Cream fat, add sugar and cream together until light. Add beaten egg. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add to mixture alternately with milk. Add vanilla and pour into a lightly greased, 8 inch square cake pan. Spread washed blueberries on top. Sprinkle with crumb topping and bake in a moderate oven, 350F for 45 minutes. Serve hot either plain or with top milk or cream. Six servings.

Blueberry Rhubarb Sauce

1½ cups rhubarb, cut in 1 inch pieces
1½ cups blueberries
½ cup water
½ cup sugar

Pour boiling water over rhubarb, let stand 1 minutes, drain. Mix rhubarb and blueberries, add water, bring to boiling point and simmer gently until rhubarb is tender, about 8 minutes. Remove from heat and add sugar. Chill and serve with cookies or use as a sauce with blanc mange. May also be served hot with plain cottage pudding.

Stone in Ureter May Evidence Itself by a Sharp Pain in the Lower Back

Stones in the ureter do not occur in children, or in very old people. However, they may develop in persons of almost any other age.

When this condition develops, the first symptom usually is pain. As a general rule, the pain is located in the lower part of the back and perhaps downward into the groin. The pain which develops is severe. In fact a drug such as morphine is usually required to give relief. Sickness to the stomach and vomiting also are present.

A large number of patients with stone in the ureter have been studied by Dr. Herman L. Kretschmer of Chicago. He found that other symptoms present with stone in the ureter consist of pain in the back, frequent emptying of the bladder, chills and fever.

When these symptoms are present, careful examination, using the X-ray is advisable. However, the stones do not show up in all cases in the X-ray plate. Another method of diagnosing is to use the crystoscope, an instrument made of a tube with lights and mirrors which can be passed into the bladder and the bladder thus examined directly. In many cases the stone, by cystoscopic examination, will be seen protruding from the ureter into the bladder. In other cases, the opening from the ureter into the bladder is swollen and red.

Another method of diagnosis is called intravenous urography. This consists of injecting a substance into a vein, the substance then being excreted through the kidneys, making the kidney and the ureter visible in the X-ray plate. If a stone is present in the ureter, it will often be seen that the ureter is dilated or stretched, and the pelvis of the kidney, the part where the urine collects and before it empties into the bladder, is also enlarged. Such a stone must be removed.

In treating ureteral stone in many cases it may be best to give sedatives, plenty of water to drink, and then wait, since the stone may pass into the bladder by itself. If the stone does not pass by itself it may be possible by using a cystoscope to inject ointment into the ureter and stretch it, thus allowing the stone to pass of itself. If this treatment does not bring relief, operation and removal of the stone may be required. Of course, in very old patients, it may be well to put off the operation, if possible. If the stone is located high up in the ureter, if the symptoms have been present for a long time or if the stone is large and blocking the flow of urine completely, the operation must be carried out at once in practically all cases.

Soldier Jilted While Overseas. By His Girl Called Better Off Without One So Disloyal

Those girls whose affections cool toward soldiers and sailors when separations are prolonged by the necessities of war, perhaps in favor of 2As or 4Fs, are condemned by members of their own sex. This is made plain in communications that have come to me since I published several letters from service men fighting overseas who had been jilted by a girl they left behind.

However, one of many correspondents on this subject writes:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"A couple of weeks ago I read a letter in your column written by M. S., who had been jilted by his girl after he went overseas. I know just how that man feels, but really, as you pointed out, he's better off. For a girl who can't remain loyal to the man she's promised to marry, who is facing death fighting, isn't worth being unhappy over.

"I know her type only too well. She'll promise anything before a man goes away and then, as the weeks roll on and she finds that, as an engaged girl she's left out of a good deal of fun and the boys don't scrap to take her out, she passes it along the line, usually through a girl friend, that her engagement to Tom or Jack has been broken definitely, and she's free as air.

"But it's terribly hard on the boy overseas waiting in life and death suspense for the only flash of hope that comes to him in the combat zone—the mail. And then when there is no letter from his girl or worse, case of M. S. who wrote to you, she writes that she has married another man, no wonder he hopes an enemy bullet will end it all for him.

"If she had waited until he came home and they were married, very probably she would have walked out on him at the first flare of bad luck. You wonder why I, a happily married woman, should write to you about this case. We had a similar one in our own family. My sister, after breaking two engagements with two men, finally married one who promsied to give her everything she wanted.

"At the time of their marriage, he was well off, but when through some bad-investments he lost what he had, she walked out on him leaving two children, whom I've cared for ever since.

"The man she eloped with got tired of her, and she has become a confirmed invalid and a bitter care to the rest of us. Loyalty is the finest quality a woman can bring to her marriage. If she hasn't that, a man, whether he's a soldier or a minister, a millionaire or a mountebank, is blessed by the gods in getting rid of her.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Parents' Puzzle About What To Do At Wedding Of Their Soldier Son

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Breakfast at the Officers' Club at my son's camp will follow his church wedding. Since there will be quite a number of officers and their wives attending the wedding, my husband and I are especially anxious to do everything we are expected to do, correctly.

1. One thing especially bothers us: we have been told that the groom's parents are expected to go from table to table to speak to the guests. It this correct? If so, what should we say? 2. If we are called on for a toast, what would be an appropriate one?

B. E.

1. No, you and your husband would not be expected to go from table to table to greet the guests. Before the breakfast there will probably be some kind of reception and then you and perhaps your husband, too, will be invited to be in the receiving-line and the guests will be introduced to you. Since you are the woman guest of honor at the wedding, and your husband is the man guest of honor, the guests will expect to come up to speak with you both later.

2. Generally only the best man is "expected" to propose a toast to the bride and bridegroom. But if your husband (he, not you, would propose the toast) is called on, or wishes to propose a toast (and of course he may if he wishes to), he may say only the shortest and always-right toast, "To the bride and bridegroom!" Or he might say something like this: "To Joan, our son's lovely bride and our new daughter. . .and to her and our John. Our love to them, our blessings, and our prayers for their happiness. . .always. May we be with them at some not-far-distant anniversary of this blessed day!"

Correct Wedding Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At a formal church wedding and reception, the bride's mother wore a light-colored chiffon evening dress, and the bridegroom's mother wore a black evening dress. The bride's mother said that the black dress was incorrect. Is she right about this?

Caroline

Yes, it was not in keeping with a wedding for the bridegroom's mother to wear a black dress. . . she should have worn a shade not too vivid or not too dark.

But the bride's mother was at fault too, for it was her job to have talked over with the groom's mother her (the bride's mother's) plans for her costume and to have guided her, gently and subtly, and helped her in suggesting that "they wear shades that would be in delightful harmony with each other. If this taken-for-granted conference is brought about before the wedding, there need be no need for the bride's mother to be disappointed and critical after the wedding.

ERNEST YOUNG HOOKS 15-POUNDER OFF GULL ISLAND

The 'lunge season is on in the Bay of Quinte. On Saturday, Ernest Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Young, fishing with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Young, hooked a fifteen pounder in the upper reaches of the Bay off Gull Island. The party were trolling at the time with Erneat in charge of the line, when the big fellow struck. He was asked if he needed assistance but declined and after a snappy tussle the fish was landed in the boat. It is reported that fishing has been exceptionally good in the bay during the past week, some fine catches of bass being reported. Pike are plentiful this year and the odd pickerel is also picked up.

Weekly Tips For Meat Rationing

As a topping for meat pies it's a better bet than pastry for the conservation-conscious, because biscuit dough requires so much less fat.

If there isn't enough meat for this, put it through the food chopper, season well and moisten with left-over gravy, tomatoes or chili sauce.

Roll biscuit dough into a rectangle ¼ inch thick, spread with the meat mixture, roll up like a jelly roll and bake in a hot oven. Serve with extra gravy and plenty of vegetables and the family will never notice that the meat part of the meal is a bit skimpy.

Meat turnovers are delicious but take a little more meat than a roly-poly. Roll biscuit dough ¼ inch thick and cut in 6 inch rounds or squares. Place a spoonful of meat mixture on the dough and fold over making half-moons or triangles. Press edges together and prick the top. Bake and serve like roly-poly.

Dumplings are closely related to biscuit dough but contain less fat or none at all. Feathery light, they make a delicious and filling addition to a stew that may be more vegetable than animal. The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggests Tomato Dumplings with beef stew, the addition of finely chopped parsley to dumplings for veal stew and chives when the stew is of lamb. Tomato dumplings are made by substituting tomato juice for the milk or water used in plain dumplings.

The Marry-Go-Round

Women—And Other Women

Love is what makes a girl want to scratch a man's eyes out, when he lets them linger too long on another girl.

When a woman gets old, she turns to reform-work, bridge and charity—but not until she has tried every brand of henna and experimented with every sort of beauty-cream and rejuvenating treatment.

Every man has some pet peeve about women. With some, it's an antipathy to bright red fingernails; others have a phobia against crooked stocking seams; but with most of them it's just a natural aversion to too much intelligence.

Love-control is a girl's ability to give a man all her heart, and to keep her head and hold onto her common sense, at the same time.

It takes a bride quite a while to learn that when a man promises to "take a new path", it merely means that he is going to make a little detour until the storm blows over.

The tight, high hair-do may lend a girl lots more style and dignity—but it also lends her about fifteen more years. Ever notice it?

When a man is in love, there is a certain look in his eyes which sheds a glamour over his most painful platitudes and makes his most casual remark sound brilliant and significant.

Women are what men fall in love with—when they can't help it; and marry, when they are off their guard.

Like French perfumes, all women are sweet, until a man gets tired of them. Then he discovers that they are "all alike", except that some are a little more cloying than others.

"Women", says a philosophical doughboy, "are the only real reason 'Why We Behave Like Human Beings.' "

8 PURE-BRED CALVES LOST

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 3 —(CP)— Fire believed caused by faulty wiring and spurred by a strong wind Monday destroyed a large barn and its contents, including eight pure-bred calves, on the farm of Peter McDonald near here, resulting in an estimated loss of more than $8,000.

STEPHENS' SLUMP PUTS BROWNS IN SEVENTH PLACE

Week Ago Team Was Riding High in First Division

SENATORS SECOND

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sports Writer

If Messrs. William (I used to play for Yale) Cox and Bucky Harris will step into the laundry closet or some such sanctuary to continue their debate on just who is the "all American jerk," the meeting will take up the rise and fall of the Brownies of St. Louis. A couple of weeks ago, they zoomed into the American League's first division and were bouncing along as merrily as a guy who's just had his gas ration raised and is going home to a steak dinner.

Then the bubble busted—and Luke (laughing boy) Sewell suddenly found out there's nothing to laugh about. Or can you see something funny in seventh place—because that's exactly where the Brownies are after having dropped their fifth straight decision. This one was a 4-3 shiner pinned on and Washington Senators last them by southpaw Milt Haefner night.

Milt's six-hit win put the Washingtons in a virtual second place tie with Chicago White Sox in the American League, since James Joseph Dykes' Windy City warriors had a lot of the wind taken out of them in Philadelphia. There the Athletics put on a two-run rally in the eighth to take a 5-3 verdict, which left the Nats only one percentage point out of the second slot.

Bucs Closer to Pirates

In the only other big league game Frankie Gustine singled home a ninth-inning marker to give Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 win over Boston Braves and move the Bucs up to 10 1-2 games away from St. Louis Cardinals in the National League parade.

The Brownies' five game losing streak isn't even the half of it. As a matter of fact, they've blown 12 out of 16 since they hit fourth place on July 17.

The chief reason the Brownies have come apart at the seams, is that Vern Stephens' bat has become a bouquet of sweet peas for susie, for all the good it's done lately. In two weeks, hits average has skidded from .336 right down to .302. And in that 16-game flopola, only three elbowers have managed to go the full nine innings.

But mostly it's not getting on the scoreboard often enough, because in their slide, the Browns have been shut out twice, lost three games by one run and another trio by two tallies.

DEACON LASSIES STAY IN HUNT FOR PLAY-OFF

Defeat Bristol Gals 8 to 4 Behind P. Schrieder's Four-Hit Mound Effort

CORNEAL HOMERS

Playing inspired ball behind the four-hit hurling of Pauline Schrieder, the up-and-at-em Deacons advanced one step nearer the playoffs in the local girls softball league last evening when at the Armouries lawn they out-hit and out-smarted the Bristol girls to hang up a nifty 8-4 decision.

Deacons have one more postponed game with Stewart Warner girls to play and if they can eke out a win will be in the league playoffs. They have won their last four starts.

A five-run batting spree set off by Joyce Woodhouse in the second inning was all that the Deacon girls needed to win over the top-ranking Bristol girls last evening. The winners made their hits count with their only extra base hits, a double by Jean Green and a homer by Jean Corneal coming with runners on the base paths.

Record Time

Played in the record time of only 45 minutes, some of the niftiest fielding of the season was seen at last evening's game as infielders on both teams came to their pitchers' support to cut baserunners off at the initial sack. Bristol failed to get a hit after their three-run splurge in the third, while Deacons were held scoreless from third until the top of the seventh when Jean Corneal homered following Cec Sword's one base blow.

Jean Corneal was the big noise for the winners offensively connecting for a round trip and two singles in four trips to the plate, while "Stewie" Stewart got two singles. For the losers Glad Waite conked out a couple of doubles while the other hits were registered by Benn and Carter.

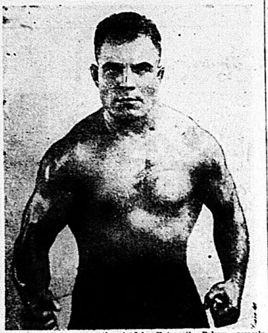
OPPONENT FOR MORGAN



One of the better wrestlers is John Katan, the Palermo assassin, who meets the popular "Toar" Morgan, the Tennessee ex-Marine, at the Hume Arena, Wednesday night in a bout of significance to both men. Morgan has never tasted the bitter pill of defeat in five bouts staged at the local palace de sport, but then he has never clashed with a wrestler of the type of Katan, who will go to no ends to defeat the ex-Marine. Although it is election night there'll be more excitement in the Hume Arena for this bout and also election returns will be given over the Arena public address system, thus assuring a perfect night of entertainment all around. Supporting this important card sees Al Dunlop meeting Doc Felice, and Joe Maich tangling with Pat Flannagan in the opener.

Canadian Contestants Score Heavily in Overseas Meet

(By The Canadian Press)

Track and field athletics obviously have been taken over by the armed forces, both in Canada and the British Isles, for the duration, giving opportunity to high performers of the past and present, with military meets at frequent intervals.

Canadian contestants scored heavily in the miniature Olympiad for the Allied troops in Britain on the August bank holiday when more than 20,000 people witnessed the competitions and the presentation of prizes by the Duke of Gloucester. Lieut. Larry O'Connor of Toronto and Cobourg, members of Canada's team at the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin and also a point-winner of the British Empire games in Australia, captured the 120-yard hurdles in 15:3 seconds. A comparative unknown came to the fore when Lieut. J. D. Crashley of Oakville, Ont., took the hop, step and jump with a mark of 43 feet one inch.

A Westerner, Sgt. S. Bartolussi, Powell River, B.C., was second to C. B. Holmes, the British sprinter, in both the Century and 220-yard dashes but later trimmed his English rival in the 440-yard relay to win this feature for Canada.

Eleven three-year-olds have been declared in for the Hambletonian test, a $5,000 feature to be staged on the kite track at Old Orchard Beach Wednesday as a preliminary to the $50,000 Hambletonian Classic at Empire track, New York, Aug. 11. The entries are topped by Volo Song, Phonograph and Hester Hanover.

The seventh annual 54-hole invitation golfing marathon of the Sudbury Golf Club concluded yesterday with Art Riley, playing his own course, holding the winning card of 216 for his second victory in three years. Johnny Foupore of Sudbury Ioyl-Wylde was the runner-up only one behind his rival

The veteran jockey, 31-year-old Bobby Merritt of Newark, N.J., won the favorable decision of Justice Carroll Walter in the New York Supreme Court yesterday against the State Racing Commission and the Jockey Club, the Court ruling being that he was entitled to a riding license—with the proviso "unless the refusal can be justified". Merritt said he had been unable to secure any explanation for the rejection.

The Civic holiday meeting of the Goderich Trotting and Pacing Association brought out a crowd of 5,000 which saw Miller Brooks, owned by J. I. Saint of Wallaceburg, win the $600 Free-For-All feature two out of three heats. The Count, from J. W. Brown's stable, New Liskeard, took the $500 Whiteley stake in three straight.

After taking a tumble in the second heat of the 2:18 pace and trot in the harness card yesterday at Kingston, Ont., Princess Henley, owned by C. Hutchison of Kingston and driven by Burn McKane, came back to win the third and deciding dash in 2:14. Signal Hanover, from the Massey Stable at Alexandria Bay, stepped to victory in the Free-For-All.

Meeting for the second time on Civic Holiday, Galt Terrier Pups took the lead in the semi-final playoffs, two out o three games, in the Inter County Baseball Junior series by defeating Preston Riversides 10-2 at Galt, following a 4-0 victory at Preston. The fourth game is scheduled for Wednesday at Galt.

JIMMY RIPPLE GOES TO MAJORS FROM THE LEAFS

Connie Mack Sends Out-6fielder Jim Zyack Down for Seasoning

TORONTO SPLITS

Jim Ripple, who swings a bat with either hand, is back in the major leagues and Jim Tyack, 31-year-old rookie with Philadelphia Athletics takes over a berth in the Toronto outfield.

Tyack, who probably will play left field for the International loop leaders, batted .255 for the American leaguers in 52 games but stroked out a robust .309 for Little Rock of the Southern Association last year while helping the travellers to the championship.

Standing six feet two inches tall and weighing 190 pounds, he drove in 71 runs, cracked out 31 doubles, 19 triples and 12 homers in the southern to earn the chance with the Athletics.

Ripple said farewell to the International League yesterday by hitting a pair of singles as the Leafs divided a twin bill with Syracuse Chiefs. Syracuse took the first, 5-4, in 10 innings while Herb Crompton's homer with two on in the second brought them a 6-4 verdict in the nightcap.

Works in Two Games

Nick Strincevich hurled the first five innings of the opener for the Leafs before being lifted for a pinch hitter and then came back in the final inning of the nightcap, when the chiefs belabored Tom Ananicz for a trio of tallies.

Rochester took a 10-inning contest from Jersey City, 7-5, when Rookie Doug White connected for a grand slam homer in the first extra frame; Newark stopped Montreal, 3-2, and Buffalo shaded Baltimore, 5-4.

White's homer in the 10th was his second of the night and he had previously slapped a single. He drove in six of the Red Birds' seven runs. Earle Naylor got the other one.

Although Buffalo made five errors, Floyd Giebbell's stinginess in the pinches brought the Bison a triumph over Baltimore with the tying and winning runs crossing the plate in the first of the ninth when Hahn homered with one mate on base.

LESSON NO. 132

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

They used to be so happy. Their life was one sweet song. But now they both are yappy. They do not get along. To play together, really, they do not give a dang. Since he is strong for Ely and she believes in Sam.

You may like one bidding system. Your partner may prefer another. But any two good bidding systems will work together in harmony. It is only a matter of which is easier to learn.

No system is any good if its asks you to bid when you have not the values you promise. And you should not raise unless you have more tricks than you previously consumed.

You have this hand:

♠K Q 3
♥A K Q 9 5
♦9 6 3
♣J 2

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. Your hand contains six tricks: An ace, two kings, two queens, and a short card in clubs.

An opening bid of one consumes five tricks. So, you have one trick that may be used for a raise in the future, if necessary. Let's see if it is necessary.

Suppose your partner responds with a bid of one no-trump. That is not a forcing signal. It permits you to pass unless you have unshown values that you can reveal truthfully.

Your heart suit is rebiddable. You may bid it twice even if your partner has not assisted it. But to rebid it you must say two hearts, a raise over partner's one-no-trump.

That raise would admit that you have an unused trick. Have you such a trick? Yes. You have the sixth trick that has not yet been consumed in any previous bidding of yours.

That's how you know your correct second round bid is two hearts. And that's how your partner learns your heart suit is rebiddable. And that's how he learns you have six tricks.

When the bids are truly made, partners need not be afraid. There is really nothing to it when you know the way to do it.

LESSON NO. 133

Elva Tyme, the cute kid, is always in a daze. Every time she makes a bid, she thinks it is a raise.

Every bid in bridge is not a raise. A raise in an increase in the last partnership contract number. While every raise must be a bid, some bids do not raise.

Each raise shows an unconsumed trick. That is, it shows a trick that has not yet been disclosed in previous bids. Or a trick that partner has not expected in your hand.

You have this hand:

♠A K 9 5
♥J 4 2
♣9 6

Your opening bid with that hand is one spade. With two biddable suits of the same length, first bid the higher ranking suit.

An opening bid of one shows five tricks. Your hand has exactly five tricks and no more. You have no unconsumed tricks. So, you must not raise the partnership last number in any later bids.

Your lack of tricks for a raise does not mean you are barred from later bids. You may still have one or more bids if you can make them without increasing the last partnership number.

Suppose partner responds at once with a bid of two clubs. That is a takeout to a new suit; a forcing-for-one round signal. You are forced to bid again.

All bids follow the order of T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. To pick out your next bid, you first look for a takeout to a new suit. You have one in diamonds.

Your second round bid is a takeout to two diamonds. That is not an increase in the last partnership number (two clubs). So, it is no raise. It does not show nor consume another trick.

In this manner, partner must not count on you for more than five tricks; the number you originally promised by your opening bid of one.

Bids that are true are good for you.

Tournament Briefs

While singling out the praises for the excellent tournament sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club, the members of the ladies Bowling Club should be the first to be congratulated for their excellent arrangements in serving the visiting bowlers with light lunches, soft drinks and smokes. They worked from early morning until the wee small hours with no complaints and were most solicitous for the welfare and comfort of the visitors within the gates. Their efforts were highly appreciated by the visiting bowlers, many of whom did not leave the grounds from the time they arrived in the city until the prizes were distributed at the end of the tourney.

Praise should also be extended to the Belleville Club for the opening of their spacious and beautiful club rooms to the visitors. The members of the club, who are not members of the Bowling Club, made a concentrated effort to entertain the bowlers and everywhere one could hear the praises sung of the Belleville Club. The reception committee was really on the job and the visiting bowlers left the Quinte City with a high regard for its hospitality.

Some excellent bowling was witnessed during the day's play. Against the field that swung into action sharp on time, it was some stunt to win three games and the six rinks, that accomplished that feat, deserve words of praise. It was gratifying to note, that rinks from Stirling and Campbellford, where material for bowling is not too plentiful, were in the six three-game winner class and Walter Wiggins of Campbellford and "Bill" Whitty of Stirling skipped their rinks. They knocked out some good rinks on their way through the tournament, rinks that were "loaded" to take home the major prizes, one of these being the Hogarth rink from St. Matthews of Toronto.

The winning, Wingham rink, skipped by Alex Crawford, came a long way for the tourney and had the time of their lives. They never "tightened" up when the going got tough and were fortunate in having two large scores that practically "cinched" the Corbin Gold Cup for them. The skip of the rink, who has bowled all over the American continent, and who in fact bowls the year round, stated it was the best tournament that he had ever attended. The hospitality was grand, the arrangements excellent and the competition was certainly most keen.

"Bill" Whitty of Stirling and his rink fought the gamest fight of the entire tournament. Every game was a battle but in their last game, which they needed to get into the prize list, they were pitted against St. Matthews of Toronto. In the first three ends the rink was down eight and it looked all over but the boys rallied. Dr. Carleton and Tommy Solmes started to roll them in and "Hap" Tompkins and "Bill" did the rest on the tailend of the rink. Whitty made at least three sensational shots in the game, probably his last bowl being the best of the entire game.

Peterborough did not go home empty handed, J.D. Fitzpatrick and Fire Chief George Gimblett winning the Riggs and Ritchie trophies respectively. Both had uphill fights to get into the "silverware" class and both skips were loud in their praise of the excellent tournament provided.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Milwaukee —(AP— The Chicago Cubs required an extra inning to dispose of the Milwaukee Brewers 7-6 in an exhibition tilt at Milwaukee yesterday after the American Association team exploded a three-run rally in the ninth to tie up the proceedings.

Columbus—(AP)— Veteran Jack Walker, 195, socked his way to a 10-round win over Johnny Denson, 23-year-old 200-pounder of Indianapolis here last night. The gameness of the hoosier was outweighed by the heavy-hitting of Walker who is rated a contender for the duration heavyweight title.

Welland—(CP)—In the Niagara Senior Baseball loop, Welland last night unloosed a 17-hit attack to win 12-1 from Crowland Union Jacks, the safeties including home-run clouts by Chase and Goberis. In the other half of the league schedule at Port Colborne, St. Catharines and the local Victorias wound up with a 3-all tie in nine innings, the duel being called on account of darkness.

Galt—(CP)—Galt Terriers trimmed Ingersoll 9-2 in the holiday fixture of the Inter County Senior Baseball Association, the visitors contributing to their own loss through six errors of which two were charged against third baseman A. Thornton. The game was also featured by eight stolen bases.

Hamilton—(CP)—In the "black out" League, composed of negro ball players, a doubleheader here yesterday was divided, the Memphis Red Sox defeating the Cleveland Buckeyes 10-7 in the opener and the Bucks coming back with a 7-4 verdict in the closer.

AT THE BELLE

"Edge of Darkness"

"Edge of Darkness", William Wood's popular novel of the same name is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

The Warner Bros' film, directed by Lewis Milestone, stars Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan, and has a brilliant supporting cast headed by Walter Huston, Nancy Colman, Judith Anderson and Ruth Gordon.

The story depicts the efforts of a tiny Norwegian fishing village to overthrow the Nazi yoke.

Two Popular Films Return

Coming next to the Belle Theatre for a special return engagement by popular demand, and on the the program are two of the most popular films ever exhibited, namely "Blossoms in the Dust", produced in beautiful Rainbow and Technicolor starring lovely Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon. Here is a picture that will give you ninety minutes of real enjoyment-come share the colorful romance of a colorful woman.

"The Great Waltz" a Masterpiece

Academy Award-Winner Luise Rainer, Fernana Gravet, Miliza Korjus, the singing sensation of screen. Radio and the Concert stage are co-starred in the glorious romantic and memorable musical masterpiece, "The Great Waltz", announced as the added feature attraction on the same program, featuring Hugh Herbert and Lionel Atwill.

With "Blossoms in the Dust" and "The Great Waltz", presented together on one program the Belle management is offering probably the biggest show value ever offered in Belleville, and it's equal may never be seen again.

AT THE McCARTHY

What's Buzzin Cousin?

A most unusual and definitely superior musical film opened at the McCarthy theatre yesterday. It's unusual, because it has something we rarely find in a production of this kind—a story with a well-rounded and interesting plot. It's superior, because the players are just about tops in their particular fields, and they perform with zest and gay abandon against a background rich in colorful atmosphere.

Whirlwind Ann Miller, quite the loveliest and zippiest tap dancer of this generation, is featured in company with Rochester, that droll fellow, and Freddy Martin with his rhythmic swing band. Handsome John Hubbard as the band's singer, plays the romantic lead opposite Miss Miller, thus completing a perfect foursome embracing dancing, music, laughter and love.

The picture opens with Freddy Martin and His Orchestra going on a trailer vacation. Rochester goes along as handy man. When they run out of gas in a ghost town and have to stay overnight in the long deserted palace Hotel of the town, the fun starts.

Comes the dawn and with it four lovelies, headed by Ann Miller, playing the role of Ann Crawford. Ann had inherited practically all of the town, rounded up her girl friends, who include Leslie Brooks, Jeff Donnell and Carol Hughes, to help her pay the debts on the property, formed a company with them arrive jauntily to stake their claim and take over. When they find it is a ghost town, and that the Palace Hotel is a brokendown, deserted place they weep bitter tears. But to the rescue come the boys, particularly the band's singer, Jimmie Ross, (John Hubbard) who falls in love with Ann on sight.

They fix up the place and try to open it as a night spot, but customers stay away in droves. Then Rochester finds a gold nugget while digging in his victory garden and people pour into town from all directions. The Palace Hotel is jumping every night. Merriment and melody go on at a dizzy pace. Of course, it jams things up a bit when Rochester's nugget turns out to be his own gold inlay. However, everything comes through fine, even a nasty mix-up with mobsters.

There are plenty of new tunes you'll be singing. They're definitely hit material. All in all, everything in the picture is tops and Charles Barton did a fine job of directing this smash musical hit.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Hit Parade of 1943"

A glittering panorama of song, music, and fun is presented currently at the Capitol Theatre in "The Hit Parade of 1943", a Republic picture.

With Susan Hayward and John Carroll heading the cast, the story moves at a rapid and gay pace from one engaging situation to another, leaving a highly satisfying reaction with yesterdays preview audience.

The picture is studded with star names from the entertainment world. Freddy Martin and his band and Count Basie and his orchestra provide musical highlights, along with such other names as Ray McKinley and his Orchestra, The Golden Gate Quartette, the Three Cheers, the Music Maids and Pops and Louie.

Miss Hayward and John Carroll start out as natural enemies in the film. Carroll has stolen one of her songs and is plugging it as his own, and she is determined to teach him a stiff lesson. However, the little man with the bow and arrow enters the scene and makes a complete change in Susan's plans.

"The Glass Key"

They did it before in Paramount's "This Gun For Hire" and they did it again last night at the Capitol Theatre in the Dashiell Hammett murder-mystery, "The Glass Key". "They" are those two highly charged, romantic movie personalities—Veronica Lake and Alan Ladd—who created a sensation in their first appearance together in "This Gun For Hire". It was obvious from audience reaction last night that they have duplicated their earlier triumph.

There is a third star in "The Glass Key" who fits perfectly into the dramatic picture. He is Brian Donlevy, who recently scored another great hit in the widely acclaimed "Wake Island". His characterization in the Dashiell Hammett film as the hard-boiled, slightly shady political boss, is pleasantly reminiscent of his portrayal of "The Great McGinty".

The Universal News completes the bill.

BATTLE OF MUNDA

Medium artillery blazed away at the Salamaua airdrome, destroying grounded planes, demolishing a 60-foot section of the adjacent Francisco River bridge, and dropping shells directly on anti-aircraft batteries. Heavy bombers dropped 84 tons of explosives on the town itself.

Fourteen fighters, escorting bombers hunting barges along the southern coast of the Huon Peninsula, pounced upon an equal number of enemy fighters. Eleven Zeros were shot down, one more was listed as a probable. Two escaped.

Army and navy planes joined in a heavy blow at the Buin-Caisi-Kahili triangle. A large freighter-transport was set on fire, many gounded planes were damaged, eight barges sunk and a tanker hit.

A night reconnaissance plane set fire to a Japanese destroyer off New Britain. Australian-manned planes destroyed and damaged anti-aircraft positions at Gasmata, New Britain, and attacked barges and jetties along the coast.

Seven Canadian Planes Missing

Of the 30 missing planes last night seven were Canadian, the R.C.A.F., announced in a communique, which also said that R.C.A.F. Mosquitos on intruder operations penetrated deep into Holland and Northwestern Germany, attacking airfields and targets at Sylt and Cuxhaven.

The Air Ministry in its communique said that in addition to the raid on Hamburg, other bombers blasted objectives in the Ruhr Valley, and that Beaufighters and Mosquitos from the Fighter Command flew deep into Holland and Northwest Germany. Two Fighter Command planes were reported missing.

Royal Australian Air Force Hampdens of the Coastal Command, operating off the Coast of Norway, torpedoed an enemy supply ship, the communique said.

Falling off during the weekend, the aerial offensive began to pick up in tempo again yesterday when R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. planes carried out a series of raids along the coast of Europe.

Double-scorer was Sqdn. Ldr. G. W. Northcott of Minnedosa, Man., who knocked down two Messerschmitt 109's over Texel, The Netherlands. Flt. Lt. J. A. Rowe of Toronto got another while a fourth was shared between Wing Cmdr. L. V. Chadburn of Aurora, Ont., and two other unidenified pilots.

Canadian Spitfires also helped provide an escort for United States medium bombers attacking airfields at Merville and St. Omer in Northern France.

A Heap of Rubble.

Reports from neutral sources during the weekend described Hamburg as a heap of rubble as the result of the almost continuous pounding to which it has been subjected.

Stockholm dispatches said that orders for the evacuation of the remaining civilian population — which once totalled more than 1,000,000—had been issued after the Thursday night raid and declared the city was virtually deserted.

Before the massed raids started Hamburg had accounted for about one-third of the German submarine output.

The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Aftonbladet said Sunday that the devastation in Hamburg had caused more consternation in Berlin than almost any other event of the war.

Swedish correspondents in the German capital also reported that as a result of the Hamburg raids German authorities were speeding the evacuation from Berlin of all civilians not engaged in essential occupation in anticipation that the city might be next on the Allied blitz list.

The raiders were said to have encountered heavy weather last night and strong anti-aircraft defences.

PRIME MINISTER

Chiefly German Resistance

"This is the more certain because the Italian army clearly has no more desire than the Italian people to continue the war as a tool of Germany," he added. "On the mainland, as in Sicily, whatever resistance the Allies meet will be chiefly German resistance.

"The occupation of Italy, when it is completed, will bring great strategic advantages to the Allied cause. It will bring southern Germany and all of enemy-occupied Central Europe within easy bombing range. The aerial assault on Nazi power can then proceed, at one and the same time, from the south as well as the west and the east.

"The occupation of Italy will also open a way to the isolation and virtual encirclement of the Axis forces in the Balkans.

"Finally, the occupation of Italy will open to the Allied forces another avenue for the eventual liberation of France."

Mr. King said the Allies are ready to treat with any Italian authority which is not Fascist and which will cease aiding the Axis cause, once the military forces under its control unconditionally surrender. He added:-

"The alternative which faces Italy is war with steadily-increasing fury, war from the air, from the sea, and on her own soil until all resistance—Italian and German alike—is destroyed, and the whole country occupied by the Allied forces."

Authority May Collapse

Mr. King said that failing unconditional surrender at an early date it is "not impossible that all organized authority may collapse in Italy and that the country may be reduced to a condition of anarchy."

The tragic situation facing the Italians, said Mr. King, is a "striking warning of the terrible consequences which may come to any people who surrender their freedom to a dictatorship." the fall of Mussolini may be for Hitler, too, an "ominous forecast of his eventual fate."

Discussing the Sicilian campaign, Mr. King noted that Allied progress has slowed up in the past week, principally because of "greatly-stiffened" German resistance. But he said it is "perfectly clear" that the complete military conquest and occupation of the island is "only a matter of a comparatively short time."

In the Silician campaign, with the 1st Canadian Division in the forefront of the assault, the Canadian people are seeing the fruits of their planning, organization and co-operation. At the appointed time, the entire Canadian army will be in action.

Fighting with Canadian-made weapons, the Canadian troops are supported overhead by Canadian airmen. Some of their landing craft were manned by Canadian sailors, and their lines of supply were protected by Canadian Naval and airmen. And backing them at home is the "industrial, financial and moral strength of a United Canada."

Briefs From Around Around the World

Aurora, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—G. G. McGear, Liberal M.P. for Vancouver-Burrard, said last night the Progressive Conservative platform would "wreck the finances of this province" and throw Ontario's war effort into "chaos and disruption."

Napanee, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—Service on the westbound C.N.R. line east of here was resumed yesterday when workmen cleared the wreckage of the rear-end collision of two freight trains in which Ronald Sturgess of Toronto was injured Sunday.

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (CP)—Arthur MacNamara, Selective Service Director, said last night labor shortage in high priority groups amounts to about 30,000 workers, with Montreal and Toronto showing equal shortages of 7,000 each.

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (CP)—F. A. McGregor, Prices Board enforcement officer, last night said there were 1,717 prosecutions for alleged violations of board rulings from January to June, 1943—an increase of 659 over the previous half-year.

Ottawa, Aug. 3 (CP)—Army historians yesterday found that Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, of Kingston, Ont., O.C. of the 1st Canadian Division in Sicily at 39 is not the youngest general to take Canadian troops into action—Gen. Sir Arthur Currie was.

New York, Aug. 3 (AP))—Order appeared restored in Harlem last night after an earlier outbreak of rioting resulted in the deaths of five negroes, injuries to 543 persons, 500 arrests and proeprty damage estimated at $5,000,000.

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)— The State Department said last night arrangements were being made for another exchange of American and Japanese Nationals, this time at Mormugso, Portugese India.

Buenos Aires, Aug. 3 (AP)—The pro-Axis newspaper "Bandera Argentine" has been suspended for 10 days because of "insulting comment against the chief of state of a friendly nation" the government said last night.

Cleveland, Aug. 3 (AP)—Seven war workers were killed and eight others injured late yesterday in an explosion at the Ferro Enamel Corp.'s east side plant.

Little Benny's Note Book

My Cousin Artie stayed at my house all night last night, we were on the floor looking at the comics together, and ma said to pop, I've always maintained there's such a thing as being really sykick, and Madame Rosa, that tealeaf reader at the Zipper Tea Room, really has the gift. She told me things about myself this afternoon that nobody could possibly know, although I suppose a doubting Thomas like you wont believe a word of it, ma said.

If she told you you're going to serve your skeptical husband liver and onions tomorrow for dinner, and it comes to pass, I'll believe every sillable of it, pop said, and ma said, Now dont be fantastic, we had liver and onions yesterday and just for that you're not going to find out what she really did tell me, not even if you use wild horses.

Giving me an idea, and I said to Artie, Hay, do you want me to tell you all about yourself? Have you got any tea leaves? I said, and Artie said, Not with me. I've got lines in my hand, can you read them? he said.

Sure, I said, and I looked at the inside of his hand, saying, Good night look at this hair line. Every one of your hairs is only attached to your head by one end, I said, and pop started to laugh like anything, saying, That's rich, Madame Rosa herself in person and no tea leaf.

Very funny indeed, pardon me if I dont seem to share in your general mirth, ma said, and I said to Artie, Here's a funny line, it shows you can just change your mind about right hand but you cant even rub out a single word with your right foot.

Making pop laugh even harder, and ma said, Now William if you feel as merry and harty as all that, you en just change your mind about not going out to play bridge tonight.

The result being pop quick told me to either change the subject or go to bed.

This morning at breakfast ma said to pop, If you have any good suggestion for tonight's dinner I'd be glad to hear it, as long as it falls within the limits of meat rationing and providing the butcher happens to have it in stock by some odd chance.

I know one thing I wont suggest, and that's liver and onions, pop said. It's strange how there can be a certain thing that it seems you simply cant live without, and then after a long stretch of, time goes by without your having it, you simply forget all about it. That's a way it is with me and liver and onions. I thought I'd of perished miserably if I wasn't confronted with a platter of liver and onions at short stated intervals, but now after all this time I've practically lost my taste for it, he said.

All what time, for land sakes? ma said. I had liver and onions for you not 4 days ago, or 5 at the extreme utmost. A long stretch of time indeed, such a statement. Of course one solution might be to have chicken or fish and save that many meat points for a future emergency. How does that strike you, William? she said, and pop said, It strikes me with a rather mild impact. The interesting point is liver and onions dont strike me at all. It's been the best part of a week now, according to your own figuring, since I've had liver and onions, and I suppose the best part of a week to a liver and onions addict is the same thing as the best part of a lifetime to an average person. I imagine I could go on without it forever now and never miss it. Strange I'd never of believed it, he said.

Oh well, liver weighs so light a pound will be ample, that's one thing in your favor, it's economical from the standpoint of ration points, so very well then, ma said, and pop said, Maybe it's not too late to recover my taste for it.

Such a man, ma said.

Meaning pop.

5th Compulsory Employment TRANSFER ORDER

Notice is now given that men employed in a further list of civilian employments must report for interview not later than August 9th, 1943, to an Employment and Selective Service Office.

This refers to men who are in age and marital classes already designated under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, and also to men who are 16 to 18 years old (both ages inclusive).

A. Objective:

This Fifth Order makes available for essential employments the services of men in age and marital classes designated as callable for Military Training under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations and also all men from 16 to 18 years of age (both ages inclusive) who are presently employed in the less essential employments now specified.

B. EMPLOYMENTS COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

Men, of the specified categories, are covered if now employed in any of the following:

1. Any occupation in the following lines of manufacturing:
   - (a) Candy, confectionery, soft drinks, flavouring extracts, syrups, and "essential" oils.
   - (b) Tobacco, tobacco pipes, and cigarette holders.
   - (c) Hats and caps, artificial leather, padding and upholstery filling for general use.
   - (d) Public building furniture, office and store fixtures; window shades; Venetian blinds; wall paper; rubber flooring; children's vehicles; lamp shades.
   - (e) Monuments and tombstones; cut-stone and stone products; ornamental metal work; signs and advertising displays.
   - (f) Pianos, organs and musical instrument parts and materials, games, toys and dolls.
   - (g) Pens, mechanical pencils and pen points; artists' materials; jewellery cases and instrument cases.
   - (h) Soda fountain and beer dispensing equipment; vending amusement and other coin-operated machines; household and service industry machines; store machines and devices; beauty and barber equipment; vacuum cleaners.
2. Any occupation in the following activities:
   - (a) Art, authors, museums; library operations, photography; lapidary work.
   - (b) Costume renting; manufacture of wigs, toupees, braids and switches.
   - (c) Fur dressing and dyeing; fur storage.

C. AGE AND MARITAL CLASSES OF MEN COVERED BY THIS ORDER:

(a) Every man born in any year from 1917 to 1927 (inclusive) who has reached 16 years of age.

(b) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, at July 15th, 1940, was: (i) unmarried; or (ii) divorced or judicially separated; or (iii) a widower without child or children.

(c) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who has, since July 15, 1940, become a widower without child or children now living.

(d) Every man born from 1902 to 1916 (inclusive) who, since July 15, 1940, has been divorced or judicially separated.

Note: Attention is called to the inclusion in this Order of young men 16, 17 and 18 years old.

D. Procedure to be Followed:

All men as defined above must report to an Employment and Selective Service Office not later than August 9th, 1943. Men resident outside a city or town having an Employment and Selective Service Office, who are too far removed to call personally, may write to the nearest office in the first instance, and await further directions.

E. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEES:

When directed to accept employment, subsequent to the interview referred to, men described in Paragraphs B and C above are required by the Regulations to follow the direction given.

F. OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYERS:

It will be illegal for an employer to retain in his employ after August 9th, 1943, any men referred to in Paragraph C above, at any of the employments set forth in Paragraph B above, unless a special permit has been obtained from a National Selective Service Officer, permitting such action.

G. Appeals:

A man may enter appeal with a Court of Referees within 7 days of receiving direction to transfer to employment.

H. Penalties in Case of Employers:

Penalties are provided for any employer who retains in, or takes into, his employ after August 9th, 1943, any man covered by the Order, except under special permit. Penalties are also provided for failure on the part of any man affected to register under this Order, or to follow a direction to employment: in addition to other penalties, refusal to comply renders a man liable to compulsory labour service.

I. Special Request to Employers:

Each Employer with three or more men covered by this Order in his employ is requested to co-operate by getting in touch with the Employment and Selective Service Office, to arrange a time for the interviews of his employees.

J. Authority:

This Order is issued under National Selective Service Civilian Regulations.

K. Previous Orders:

Employments listed in Paragraph B above, to be reviewed under this Fifth Order, are additional to the employments listed in the First, Second, Third and Fourth Order, previously published.

Any employer or employee in doubt in regard to the application of the first four Compulsory Employment Transfer Orders, should communicate with the nearest Employment and Selective Service Office.

Ontario Goes FORWARD With the CCF!

NOT BACK TO THIS!

ONLY FOUR AND A HALF YEARS AGO—JANUARY 9th, 1939
Hungry, unemployed men lining up at a Toronto relief office for meal tickets — a scene which was duplicated in dozens of Ontario centres.

Reports from all parts of the province show that the people of Ontario have swung solidly behind the CCF.

They see in the CCF a party in tune with the new times. The CCF program means ACTION . . . action for a stronger war effort now . . . and action NOW for security and full employment when the war is over.

The opponents of that program have made desperate efforts to confuse the issue. Every trick of misrepresentation, distortion and deliberate falsehood has been utilized in a frantic effort to stop the CCF advance.

But the people of Ontario are not fooled. Ontario knows how much depends on the result of the vote tomorrow. WE SHALL NOT RETURN TO BREAD LINES AND SOUP KITCHENS AFTER THIS WAR. The CCF alone presents a people's program that will prevent such a tragedy. The CCF alone will form a peoples government in Ontario.

THE CCF IS LEADING FORWARD WITH THE CCF!

Rehabilitation Plans Necessary Now, Says C.C.F. Speaker at Madoc

C.C.F. rehabilitation plans for the soldiers now fighting overseas are more advantageous to the servicemen than the program provided either by the Liberals or the Progressive Conservatives, D. Metcalfe of Saskatchewan, stated at a C.C.F. rally held in Madoc, Saturday evening.

Speaking in the interests of Mr. J. A. McAninch, C.C.F. candidate for East Hastings, Mr. Metcalfe indicated that the party plans for a program which would see that no soldier would ever be in want. The Liberals make no such promise, he said, indicating their program merely called for every effort being made at the close of hostilities to provide full-time employment for the soldiers. Rehabilitation plans should be made now, not at the close of hostilities, he said.

Claims C.C.F. Sound Party

The speaker referred to the rapid growth of the C.C.F. party from its inauguration back in 1932. He claimed the C.C.F. was a sound party with sound principles, providing a new approach to the country's problems and for a better standard of living. Its leaders had designated their lives to progress.

As opposed to the C.C.F. program the speaker asserted that the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives were seeking to deceive the electors for another four years. The two old parties were now preaching social security in face of the fact they had done nothing during the past 24 years.

"It's about time an administration which was built on forgotten promises was dusted from office," he said. "Premier Nixon is appealing to the people on the record of his government, having taken $27,000,000 in taxes with which nothing was done. I say take the Liberal slogan literally and keep Nixon at the wheel—at the wheel of his own tractor and on his own farm.

Post-war Plans

The two old parties were accused of favoring the combines and monopolies under which system two packing companies controlled 86 per cent of the packing interests and four machine companies controlled the entire farm machinery industry on the continent. He predicted that if the two old parties continue to uphold free enterprise their political futures would founder.

Despite the fact that they were producing at a loss, farmers were being called upon for greater production. A price floor was urged for the post-war period, while co-operative or municipal control of the packing plants and other monopolies was needed.

That a wide-reaching health program was needed in the province was indicated by the fact that 46 per cent of the men called up for compulsory military training had been turned down because of low physical category, he said.

Referring to "socialism" the speaker stated the two old parties were accusing the C. C. F. of designing to take away the people's farms and their homes. "Col. Drew must have a very poor conception of the people's intelligence if he expects them to believe that," he said. "That is not true nor never will be true."

Statements of Col. Drew in 1938 when he returned from a tour of Europe were related by the speakers who quoted Mr. Drew as saying that Germany wanted to be friendly with Britain and advocated establishment of friendly relations. He had also stated the strength of the Russian army was but a myth.

"As history has proven, Col. Drew didn't know what he was talking about in 1938, and he still doesn't know what he is talking about in his accusations of the C. C. F. party."

Socialism

Socialism was claimed to be the only possible way to give a measure of confidence to the people. Reference was made to the health insurance program inaugurated by socialism in Russia and in New Zealand.

The present educational system in the province was asserted as not providing equal opportunities for children. "Our children are our most cherished asset," concluded the speaker, "we must see that equal opportunities are provided for every child on the basis of his ability, not on his father's bankroll."

Mr. J. A. McAninch, candidate, declared that contempt prior to investigation was barring the people from learning about the principles of the C. C. F. party. The two old parties were joining hands to blind the people against the C. C. F., he declared.

Says Policy Never Changed

The present party system of government was scored by the speaker who claimed that Ontario often had a change of government but never a change of policy. "The only thing that has been changed following provincial elections is the party hangers-on," he said. The C. C. F. stands for abolition of party government and the establishment of security.

The speaker claimed that the present system of government did not give the people democracy, but gave them dictatorship. There had not been a by-election in Ontario since the Liberals lost the by-election of East Hastings. Hepburn had then declared he would never hold another by-election — and he never did.

Pleads for Record, Not Party

He declared that members to Queen's Park should be elected by their individual records, not through party; and that cabinet ministers should be chosen according to their qualifications regardless of party.

The C. C. F. stand on the restrictions of free enterprise was championed by the speaker who claimed all the resources of the province belonged to the people and should be controlled by the province. "The C. C. F.," he concluded, "is not another political party, but is a movement urging the elimination of the monopolies and combines."

Says C.C.F. Based on Golden Rule

Chairman for the evening, Mr. Archibald, told his listeners that the C. C. F. party has an ideal based on the Golden Rule — to give every person in the province a fair chance. The party is a democratic movement with the various clubs, and not the member, to decide the policy, while it stood for getting the soldiers a better deal than they got following the last Great War.

"The C. C. F. doesn't believe a depression is necessary following this war. It believes that if money can be provided for war needs, we can also provide for the soldiers in our rehabilitation programs." Mr. Archibald introduced the two speakers of the evening.

Pop was smoking to himself waiting for ma to tell him it was time to get started to go to Mr. and Mrs. Hews's house to play bridge, and he said High ho, man is only a pawn of fate and a plaything of chance.

Now William it's all settled and agreed to that we're going out for a little bridge, so please dont start indulging in a lot of silly wailing and bemoaning, ma said, and pop said, Nothing is further from my intentions, I'm taking the whole thing with my usual fatalistic calm and philosophical resignation. I realize all too clearly how useless it is to fight the inevitable. That's why I say we humans are only rudderless corks on the aimless waves of life's sea, he said.

We're nothing of the kind and we'll have a few nice rubbers of bridge and everybody will enjoy it, ma said, and pop said, I'm not offering the slightest objection. I realize I'm in for it now and I know I haven't the ghost of a chance or the shadow of a show to escape, and that's what I mean when I point out that I'm meerly a tailless kite in the haphazard winds of a careless Destiny, he said.

You're no different from anybody else and I hope for land sakes you're going to try to concentrate tonight, ma said, and pop said, High ho, some men are remaining quietly in their homes tonight to ponder profoundly on both sides of the present world struggle, or perhaps to read an uplifting murder mistery, but you dont hear me complaining my dear, we're all helpless puppets obeying the strings of blind hazard. That's why I say life is a brick wall and only silly goats butt their protesting heads against it, he said.

Oh for land sakes come on, ma said.

By LT. J. E. DICKENS

Following feverish preparation and beneath a blazing sun, the District Officer Commanding, Brigadier Logie Armstrong, H. Q., M. D. 3, carried out a general inspection of the 1st Res. Bn. Argyll Light Infantry.

The Brigadier was accompanied by Colonel L. W. W. Slack, M. C., V. D., Camp Commandant and other Staff Officers. The inspecting party arrived in the Argyll lines at approximately 10.00 A. M. and tour was immediately carried out. All messes were inspected and suggestions made by the D. O. C. were soon put into effect.

One of the big events of camp was conceived on the baseball diamond last evening when the non-commissioned officers and men went to grips with the officers of the unit in a little game of softball. If it had not been for the combined efforts of Major Ack Ketcheson and Lieut. Eddie Shapiro, the officers may have ended up on the wrong end of the stick. Major Ketcheson amazingly caught anything and everything that landed in left field and Eddie Shapiro with the proverbial beginners luck could not miss a ball at first base.

Following ball game unit officers officers the ball game unit officers attended a lecture in the Headquarters building given by Lt. Col. J. H. Hogan, M. M. who is one of the Staff Officers here. The lecture was on "Appreciations" and 2 Lieut Nick Nicholson said it was one of the best he had ever received.

A team from the Argylls are scheduled to play a regular league fixture against the combined Signals and Ordnance groups stationed here at camp. We expect all personnel to be on hand to give the Argylls every support. Captain Les Shiels, unit sports officer is now able to select a team from the demonstration put on last night. A practice is being held this evening.

The Argyll Officers Mess was favoured with the presence of Capt. D. R. Dick, D. A. A. and Q. M. G., from Headquarters for supper Tuesday last. Present with him was 2 Lieut D. R. Kalbfleisch, Argyll Training Officer and 2 Lieut J. E. Dickens, who are now attached to Headquarters for the duration of this camp.

Unfortunately a drill alarm disturbed the quiet spaces of the Argyll Officers Mess last evening where a full-fledged game of cribbage was in progress, causing much consternation to the Adjutant Capt. Holmes who was making the comeback which had escaped him all evening.

Sgt. Geo. Ellarby has now taken his place in the cook house for the purpose of dealing with the Sergeants' Mess.

The drivers' school under the direction of S. S. M. Holmes from all appearances is gradually producing a group of driver instructors for the unit. Charlie Holmes reports the only trouble he is encountering seems to come from the officers who are taking the course. The officers included are, 2 Lieuts, Willis Jackson, Bob Boyce, H. Gibson, Taylor Franklin and W. K. Broadworth.

This evening Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan E. D., will attend a mess dinner in honour of the D. O. C. in the Headquarters Mess, to which all unit commanders have been invited. It is expected the results of today's inspection will be brought up by Brigadier Armstrong.

Major B. C. Sisler has been on hand all day, supervising all training in the unit. Unfortunately Major Sisler is obliged to return to Belleville for business reasons this Sunday and the Argylls will be very sorry to lose their 2nd in command.

This morning unit officers were given some instruction and pistol practice down on the ranges by 2 Lieut. Kalbfleisch, who has certainly been doing a swell job in looking out for the interests of the Argylls at camp re training. All officers have been given a chance at the range which has been certainly appreciated.

FO. J. Mackenzie Now Presumed Dead by R.C.A.F.

Reported as missing following an R.A.F. raid over Hamburg last February, Flying Officer John (Jim) Mackenzie, of Belleville, is now for official reasons presumed dead, according to word received from R.C.A.F. headquarters by his wife and parents.

Born in Newboro 27 years ago, the late FO. Mackenzie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Mackenzie, Ridley Avenue, city, and was educated at Queen Mary School, the Belleville Collegiate and at O.B.C. In 1937 he married Doris Wallbridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wallbridge, Huffs' Island. His wife and three children, Ida, 4, Anne, 2½ and Jane, 1 year old, live on Ridley Avenue.

Prior to his enlistment in the R. C. A. F. in January, 1941, FO. Mackenzie worked with his father and brother at the J. S. Mackenzie & Co. feed store at South Front Street. He trained at Manning Pool, Toronto, and at Rockcliffe, Prince Albert and Dafoe, Sask., before taking a navigator's course at Rivers, Manitoba. He went overseas in July, 1942.

A veteran of more than 20 raids over enemy territory, FO. Mackenzie took part in the first R.A.F. raid on Genoa, Italy and also took part in the 1,000 plane raid on Cologne, Germany. His plane was shot down while taking part in a raid on Hamburg last February 3rd, and was later reported by the German Red Cross as having been killed in action.

WOMEN'S PAY
ARMY — NAVY — AIR FORCE INCREASED

UNDER a new regulation now in force, the basic rates of pay for women in the Armed Forces have been increased by 15% to 30%. You now start at $1.05 a day. Pay then increases, subject to good conduct and efficiency.

Trades pay has been substantially increased and now equals men's. This is now 25¢, 50¢ or 75¢ a day additional to your basic pay, depending on your efficiency and trade.

Dependents of enlisted women (fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers) are entitled to the same allowances as dependents of service men.

ENLISTED WIVES OF SERVICE MEN WILL NOW RETAIN THEIR DEPENDENTS' ALLOWANCES

This means that the enlisted wife of a service man is now in the same position as if she were in a civilian job, with certain limitations.

Women are urgently needed in the Armed Forces. These new rates of pay and other allowances now make it possible for women previously held back by financial reasons, to do their duty by enlisting.

YOUR PAY IS A CLEAR SURPLUS

because you are provided with board and room, and complete clothing and equipment; as well as medical and dental care.

If you are between the ages of 18 and 45, single, or married without dependent children, and physically fit, you are eligible.

When Elinor McLean pushed back her chair and prepared to arise from the breakfast table Toby said, "Not to the telephone, Mother. We don't want anyone except our families to know of our marriage intentions until after the wedding. We'll have it announced in the Sunday paper. The announcements will go out Saturday afternoon. We don't want anyone to know about it until we've gone."

"But darling, isn't that irregular?"

"Maybe but that's the way we want it."

"My wedding isn't for fun. Mine isn't going to be a drinking party for anybody and I don't want people shaking my hand and patting me on the back and asking a lot of damfool questions. Sorry. Maybe Meegan will give you a better show. You can talk about it all you care to when it's over."

Elinor McLean looked from one to the other anxiously. "You sound as if you're ashamed of her. Is there anything you're keeping from me?"

"On the contrary," Toby said. "We want it simple because there's a war going on and because we don't want people staring at us and because I haven't any money. I'll have to get enough from you to see me through until I can pay it back. I don't want a big debt."

"You know I'll let you have the money, dear. Why, soon you'll be making so much money it will be simply wonderful!" She laughed her light, innocent laughter. "Well, at least I may call . . . What is her name again? How stupid of me. But it isn't an easy name to remember, you know . . . Really, I'm quite bewildered! To come down to breakfast as usual and before you know it to be calling my future daughter-in-law . . . I always thought I'd know the girl you were going to marry, know her as I've known Sue and Adele and Clare since she was a child."

"Oh, of course. You want to speak to her, don't you, Meegan?"

"I certainly do."

"That's over . . . telling her."

"She took it very well."

He nodded.

Meegan said, "I'd like to see Erica today."

"I'll bring her up this afternoon. She said something about going to New York next week to buy clothes. She'll probably want to talk about it. I don't think she's ever been to New York."

When their mother returned to the dining room she was wiping her eyes with a lace bordered handkerchief and smiling. "She is sweet, Toby. So reserved and gentle. But I don't know how I'm going to pretend to my friends that nothing has happened in our family. Doesn't it seem a pity that we must wash dishes and dust on such an important day? Oh, Erica is waiting to speak to you, Meegan."

A moment later Meegan said, "Good morning, Erica. I'm happy for Toby and you. Happier, I believe, for Toby."

Erica's voice was quiet. "Thank you. It's real, too. I thought last night when I woke up this morning it wouldn't be real."

"Toby is going to bring you up this afternoon. We'll talk more then. Now I know he wants to talk to you . . ."

When she went back to the dining room her mother was in the kitchen and Toby was sitting at the table alone, his eyes brooding, his cigarette was burning dangerously near his fingers. And looking at him she felt again the distrust and fear that had been slowly gathering in her dispelling optimism. Is it for love, Toby? If not for love, then for what? Have you stopped feeling with your head and begun to think with it? Where is Clare in this new order you've planned for yourself? Even your desire for secrecy was carefully thought out. You don't want Clare to know of the deed until it is done.

When she said, "Erica is waiting to speak to you," Toby gave a slight tremor of surprise.

"Okay." And when he went out to speak to Erica he closed the door so Meegan should not hear what he said.

* * *

During the two weeks preceding Toby and Erica's wedding Meegan felt herself swept along on a wave of optimism she knew to be superficial. Nevertheless she welcomed a mind almost wholly occupied with her usual chores and those added by preparations for the wedding. She welcomed Erica who came shyly with Helen, the latter's attempts to subdue her appearance rather successful. With Erica, Meegan felt no false notes, for the earthiness and honesty and utter lack if falseness in the girl dispelled them. Somehow Erica with her clear dark eyes and quiet movements seemed to walk more firmly than anyone she knew. With Toby Erica was not demonstrative. The fluent use of endearments was not for her. It was only in the way she looked at him with a lucid understanding of him mixed with her love that one could see how much, how proudly, how fearlessly she loved him.

Nor was Toby demonstrative with her. Sweet and attentive and amusing he was but Meegan had not seen him touch her. It seemed to her when they were together that Toby was studying Erica with humility and tenderness. But his brooding look remained as well as his withdrawn, remote attitude.

Plans for the wedding, for the honeymoon in New England at a lodge where he had stopped several times with his father he discussed openly with Meegan and his mother. On these subjects he was not in the least evasive. Nor was he about the job he would take upon his and Erica's return to the city. He and Erica had driven to town one day, returning with the news that they had rented a furnished apartment.

One holds as memories of people dear not important events connected with them. It seemed to Meegan that she would always remember Toby and Erica stepping from the car that hot afternoon with the news that they had found a home. Erica's tense, tight little face had one of its moments of radiance. She had said, "And there's a chair in needlepoint in the living room and the curtains are handsome . . ." Important facts to Erica who had said such a short while ago that she did not belong anywhere. Toby had smiled upon her dark head, Toby who had always lived with needlepoint chairs and handmade curtains.

"Can you cook?" he asked. "I forgot to ask that. Wouldn't it be awful to marry a girl and then discover that she couldn't cook?"

"I've been cooking ever since I was high enough to reach the stove," Erica said.

"Good," Toby said. "Maybe you can teach mother a few tricks. Meegan could stand better meals."

Engrossed in a purely social activity and with a reasonable excuse to buy new clothes Elinor McLean was at her best. Nor could Meegan, knowing how pitifully small was their capital, dissaude her from a trip to town to buy new clothes for herself and Meegan. The best for Toby, of course, regardless of cost. For his wedding expenses and honeymoon she depleted her reserve to a minimum alarming to Meegan who stood helplessly beside her, wondering how her mother could so blithely add her signature to the checks. She knew how difficult it was for her mother to keep the facts of the wedding a secret. Toby said there was really no need to send out announcements. "Just put mother on the telephone," he said one morning. But the announcements were being made . . . and one would be sent to Clare . . .

Clare called no more and Toby was going to marry Erica and Toby had a job. When the summer ended, would the cloud under which she, Meegan, lived go with it? Would she return to a life that had been her normal existence since her father had died . . . the apartment in town, her job at the hospital, dates with young men on weekend leave and some kind of active participation in the national defence program? Would nothing happen to punctuate the suspense that had been gathering since Clare had come back? Nothing . . . nothing at all? Then the fire that Clare's hands had begun would be snuffed out . . But since could no more believe that than one believes that the second act is the end of a play and it is time to go home. That was why, she thought, she wished that Erica had been married immediately. She had a queer feeling that Erica was in danger.

In her room dressing for the occasion Meegan moved quickly, thinking of breakfast earlier with Toby and her mother and their going over the final details. The ceremony was scheduled for eleven o'clock and there would be only the small families in the church with Helen and Roy acting, respectively, as matron of honor and best man. From the church they would go, inconspicuously, they hoped, to Roy and Helen's house from which Toby and Erica would leave by motor for their honeymoon.

There was a good chance that a quiet wedding would pass unnoticed today. For on this Labor Day weekend, perhaps the gayest weekend of the season, the islanders would be in a persistent pursuit of pleasure and sports. The houses would be filled with guests and there would be continuous parties at the club house and in the various yachts anchored in the picturesque inlet. Two invitations to cocktail parties Meegan had been forced to ignore, knowing that the announcement of Toby's marriage would later serve as an explanation for her absence. The mothers of the children she had called, too, saying briefly that she would not be able to take the children to the beach that morning. Later they, too, would know why.

A few minutes ago she had heard her mother go downstairs and now she heard Toby moving about his room. She wondered what he was thinking as she pulled the new dark frock over her head. Of what did one thing on one's wedding day? When you were a little girl, you always wondered how you would look on your wedding day, not what you thought and felt. Odd that the devious paths of Toby's life had been so charted as to bring him an August marriage to a girl unlike any he had known before, a girl who had thought a short while ago that she belonged nowhere, a girl as unlike Clare as day is unlike night. So it was not a girl with whom he had grown up or a girl he had met on a cruise or on a weekend in New York. It was Erica with her dark eyes and flowing dark hair and tense little face.

She thought, I'm hurrying because I want Erica and Toby to be safe. And when they've gone off in the car, I'll know they are safe. I'm afraid of Clare's silence. I don't like it. I'm afraid of her. She's so silent and she's never been silent before. But when Erica and Toby are married and gone, I won't be afraid any more. And mother and I will close the house in two weeks and go back to town and I won't see Clare again. We won't meet this winter. I'll never see Clare again and I'll never see Fayne again and this is our last summer on the island.

She was fixing her hair when the telephone on her night table range. Later she would have cause to think that the reason the telephone on the second floor was in her room was because as a child with a broken leg she had been able both to lie in bed and talk to her friends while her leg mended and it had been her father's idea for the telephone to be installed there. The telephone in the first floor hall, of course, was the one most used by the family. And later she was also to think that it was because her mother had stepped outside into the garden for a moment that she had not taken the call downstairs.

The War Today— Final Phase of Armageddon Seen As Events in Europe Rush Towards Show-down

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Fast moving crises on all fronts combine to give the impression of a Europe which is rushing headlong for the show-down—not that the end necessarily is imminent but that the final phase of Armageddon is close at hand.

Italian Marshal Badoglio's delay in dealing with the Allied demand for surrender is reported to have given Hitler the opportunity to establish a line of perhaps 250,000 German troops right across northern Italy as a buttress against an Allied drive from the south. The Nazis also are said to have occupied the port of Trieste at the head of the Adriatic, thus closing one important gateway to the Balkans.

It isn't clear whether Badoglio connived at this, or whether he was forced into it unwillingly by threats of reprisals against the Italian population by the Nazi war lord. However, that's muddy water over the dam. Of more immediate concern is the fact that the Allies have a large problem on their hands, assuming that the reports of German troop movements are accurate.

Hitler's Move Defensive

The Fuehrer's move is, of course, purely defensive. He expects the United Nations to overrun the lower two-thirds of the Italian peninsula. However, that no longer is useful to him and he probably doesn't intend to offer much opposition until the enemy reches his first line of defence, which —Madrid reports may be anchored at the naval base of La Spezia on the west cost and run eastward to the Adriatic. That would be about 200 miles north of Rome.

Hitler's main line will be 100 miles farther north, taking advantage of the strategic fortifications along the River Po. Here he will dispute the Allied rights of way to France, Germany or the Balkans.

Scheme of Desperation

With the concentration of power, and a vast shortening of his now interminable communications, he will battle to force a stalemate. The all highest's plan is a scheme of desperation. This is emphasized today as the Anglo-American forces race for the coup de grace in Sicily, as the amazing Russians continue their slaughter of Nazis in the fierce Orel offensive, and as the Allied bombers deal crushing blows to great German cities while fear spread throughout the Reich.

Foreign Secretary Eden yesterday handed Hitler a grim reminder of the Nazi position by quoting the Fuehrer's own words of Jan. 30, 1939:—

"As regards National Socialist Germany, she is well aware of the fate that will befall her if ever an International force, whatever its motives, succeeds in overwhelming Fascist Italy.

Bombs Forcing Hitler to Knees

But in Germany the fate of Italy has been pushed into the background by the terrors of the round-the-clock bombing to which the Reich is being subjected. Daily it becomes more apparent that this rain of death and destruction is playing a major role—perhaps the major role—in forcing Hitler to his knees. We have now reached the point of speculation as to how long he can endure the ordeal without collapse.

POLICE COURT

In a comparatively brief session of police court this morning which was conducted by Assistant Chief Arthur Harman in the absence of Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson, ten cases of drunkenness were disposed of in almost record time. Court was conducted before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd.

Fred Gregory and Elizabeth Archibell, both of Trenton, were committed to the county jail for 14 days after each failed to pay $10 and costs on a drunk charge, while two were assessed $50 and costs on a second offense drunk charge. Six others were assessed the conventional $10 and costs.

ALL IN READINESS FOR ROTARY CARNIVAL

With the locale of their carnival finally decided upon members of the local Rotary Club are working faithfully to make this year's Rotary Karnival one of the most successful ever staged in the city. Main attraction will be the Queen City Shows, consisting of a full repertoire of rides, games and the ever popular bingo.

The Queen City Amusement Company, with its record of good clean shows, will arrive in the city on Friday of this week and will take up its stand near the C.P.R. Station until August 14th.

Carnival committee members report high interest in sayes of tickets for for the dollar-covered doll, now on display at Charles Symons store on Front Street. The doll will be drawn for during the carnival.

Residents are assured of loads of good clean fun and amusement during their visits to the Rotary Carnival starting Friday. And don't forget the proceeds are for the Rotary Club's Crippled Children's Fund!

FRANKFORD WOMAN WINS $150 PRIZE

Who says that there isn't any Santa Claus? There must be one, at least that is the impression that Miss P. M. Glover, Box 36, Frankford, Ontario, has following notification from Montreal that she has been the winner of $150 as second prize in a picture puzzle newspaper contest. The pictures were run in the Family Herald and Weekly Star, well-known farm magazine, with the results having been recently announced.

Obituary

THOS. WM. LEONARD

Thought to have been stricken with a heart attack as he was walking down town, Thomas William Leonard, 11 Brown Street, died suddenly on Front Street sidewalk this morning a short distance from the Graham Cold Storage.

Resident of Belleville for many years, Mr. Leonard was a veteran of the First Great War and following his return from overseas had worked for some period as a printer in the Job Department of The Ontario Intelligencer. He leaves no relatives.

The funeral announcement will be made at a later date.

REV. CANON HEENEY ASSISTS IN SERVICE

The Rev. Canon W. B. Heeney, who was Rector of Christ Church here forty years ago and is now living retired in Ottawa, spent part of Sunday in Belleville, and assisted the Rev. G. G. Wright, Rector of Christ Church, in conducting the Choral Eucharist in the Church of St. Thomas on Sunday at 11 o'clock. He delivered the sermon and old friends were pleased to see and hear him again.

Canon Heeney came to Belleville to conduct the committal rites in the Belleville Cemetery on Saturday for the late Mrs. Almira McKnight, a former resident of Belleville and an old parishioner of his when he lived in Winnipeg.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 3 —(CP)— The Toronto stock market was heavy in the early hours today, especially the Industrials and Gold. These groups were down about a point at noon. Western Oils weakened .23 and the Base Metals held firm. Volume totalled 394,000 shares for the first three hours.

Prices were down for the Senior Oils, Utilities, and Miscellaneous issues. Brazilian weakened 3/8, Hiram Walkers dropped a point and fractions were lost by C.P.R., Ford A, International Petrolium, Canada Steamships and Gypsum.

Most of the Golds of the medium-price and junior groups were down. Losses of 5 to 10 cents appeared for San Antonio, Wright-Hargreaves, Upper Canada, Malartic Gold Fields, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Chesterville, East Malartic, Madsen and others. Sudbury Basin and Steep Rock were slightly lower Base Metals.

Home Oils, Calgary and Edmonton and Foothills recorded losses of 2 to 5 cents and other Western Oils were steady.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 3. (AP)—Stocks bounced around erratically today but a fair number of leaders held doggedly to a recovery course.

Buyers and sellers seemed to be having a tug-of-war in such pivotal groups as steels, rubbers and rails. The market appeared to stabilize a bit around midday and near the fourth hour gains of fractions to around a point outnumbered losses by a considerable margin.

Dome Mines was the only gainer among Canadian issues, advancing 3-, while Canadian Pacific and Distiller Seagram dropped 1-8 and 1-2 respectively.

Unchanged were Hiram Walker, Lake Shore and Canada 4s.

Such stocks as American Can, Westinghouse and Dupont, which fell hard yesterday as the market extended its mid-summer slump, were well supported. Motors and merchandising shares were modestly improved.

HOGS

Liveweight: Chatham $12.

Dressedweight: Barrie and Hamilton $16.75 delivered, Stratford and London $16.50 delivered, Chatham $16.10 plus transportation, Hull $16.40 plus transportation.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP) — Cattle trade was slow at about steady prices up to mid-season on the livestock market here today. Veal calves were firm, lambs were 25 cents lower, sheep were weak and no price was established for hogs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 3,300, calves 1,400, hogs 1,100, sheep and lambs 1,200.

Prices in the trade were:

Cattle: Weighty steers, $11.50-$12.85 with a few loads of prime heavies, $13.50, butcher steers and heifers mostly $11-$12.35, butcher cows, $8-$10, canners downward to $6, bulls weak $8.50-$10.25, fed yearlings $12.50-$13.50, stock calves $12.75-$13.50, ordinary stockers downward to $10.

Choice vealers, $14-$15.50 with other grades downward to $10. Grass calves $9-$9.50.

Sheep $5-$9.50.

Hogs closed previously at $16.75-$16.90 dressed weight at yards or plants.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Aug. 3—(CP) — Prices on bulls lower, all other classes unchanged on the livestock markets today. Receipts: cattle 76, sheep and lambs 55, hogs 356, calves 466.

'Firsts' in Air Mail Were 25 Years Ago

The first air mail ever to reach Ottawa was flown here from Toronto on August 16, 1918, by Lieut. T. Longman in four hours' flying time. About two months earlier the first mail ever carried by air in Canada had been flown from Montreal to Toronto. This Summer, therefore, marks the silver jubilee of air mail in Canada, and its beginnings are told below.

(By FRANK H. ELLIS in "Canadian Aviation")

Now is a good time to bring to mind details of a historical event which heralded the beginning of the vast air mail system in operation throughout Canada today.

When flying training was in full swing at the various Royal Air Force airdromes in Eastern Canada during the First Great War, an officer conceived an idea which he hoped might enable him to spend a weekend at his home in Montreal. It did.

The suggestion was that he be allowed to fly a machine from Toronto to Montreal and give a bit of an exhibition by rolling and looping up and down a few of the main thoroughfares, as an added impetus to recruiting. Brig. General C. G. Hoare, C.M.G., general officer commanding the R.A.F. in Canada, to whom the idea was broached, thought it reasonable enough, and gave it his O.K. The machine used was one of the regular Curtiss training planes, a J.N. 4, No. 230, belonging to No. 83 Canadian Training Squadron of the 43rd. Wing Leaside, Toronto.

Early on Friday morning, June 20, 1918, the plane left Leaside, piloted by Capt. Brian A. Peck, with Cpl. Mathers in the passenger seat. A landing was made at the airdrome of the 42nd. Wing, at Deseronto, to take on more fuel. Flying had been washed out at that point owing to low clouds and a gutsy south wind. This didn't daunt Peck, but he was forced to fly crabwise the rest of the way to Montreal, with the nose of the machine pointing in the general direction of New York.

There were no airports at Montreal in those days, and a landing was made on the Bois Franc polo grounds, exactly at noon where, by previous arrangement with the O.C. of Military District No. 4, a guard was posted over the machine, and the airmen went their way to enjoy the adroitly earned weekend.

• •

Owing to a continuous rainfall, no flights over the city were possible, and their intention to fly back to Toronto on Sunday was forcibly altered for the same reason. No thoughts had entered the airmen's heads as to carrying mail on their return journey, but Geo. Lighthall and Edmund Greenwood, president and treasurer, respectively, of the Montreal branch of the Aerial League of the British Empire, considered the opportunity a good one to inaugurate the carrying of air mail in Canada.

Mr. Greenwood had heard that an air mail flight was in the process of being launched in the United States and bethought himself of the idea of having one in Canada. It is believed that the flight which resulted was the first air mail flown on this continent in which official cachets were used on letters.

Putting their thoughts into effect these two Aerial League members got busy, discussing the matter with L. J. Gaboury, Chief Post Office Superintendent for Eastern Canada, who in turn received official permission to sponsor the flight from R. F. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster General of Canada. He authorized Mr. Gaboury to go ahead with arrangements, which included the official sanction of the triangular cachet design used.

The airmen were weatherbound until Tuesday, June 24, when at last, at 10.30 in the morning they were able to get away on their return flight.

Stores Officer Marriot, at Leaside, was on the threshold of a matrimonial plunge and he made certain the affair would be celebrated in a successful manner, Peck had been delegated to return with an adequate supply of suitably labelled conviviality. So, with Mathers in the passenger seat, sitting on a case of Old Mull, clutching the mail sack containing 120 letters on his lap, Peck set off from Montreal on what was to become an epic flight in Canadian postal history.

With a full load of fuel, Mathers and the marriage offering, the Curtiss showed no inclination to lift, and the pilot had to duck her under the telegraph wires on the south side of the nearby C.N.R. tracks, then was forced to follow along the right-of-way itself, only a few feet above the tracks, until reaching a bridge, where he was able to pull her up just enough to clear it, and a mass of wires, swinging over the river which the bridge spanned, and almost going down into the water in doing so.

Fortunately train schedules didn't coincide with the time Peck made use of the space along that section of track. Canada's first air mail flight would have come to a very messy end if they had, and before it had scarce begun.

With only a few feet to spare above the water, the pilot egged her along the river and the Lake of Two Mountains for about five miles before a 40-foot altitude enabled him to turn overland and head in the direction of Toronto.

A strong west wind was blowing, with low clouds and heavy rain squalls. Near Brockville, a plugged feed line caused some real anxiety. Peering through the rain Peck was searching for a suitable landing place when the trouble suddenly cleared, and they were able to fly on to Kingston, landing there almost out of fuel. All that was procurable there being only ordinary car gas, they put in only half a tankful, and flew on to Deseronto, where the hit-and-miss stuff was drained out, and a supply of real aviation gas was taken on.

From there on the flight was uneventful, except for further heavy rain squalls. On arrival at Leaside, Captain Peck requisitioned a car and delivered the mail to the General Post Office in Toronto in person. After the bag was emptied by the Postmaster, the official cachet and cancellations were stamped on the sack and it has remained in the possession of Captain Peck as one of his prized souvenirs at his home, which is still in Montreal.

Mr. Lighthall and Mr. Greenwood also reside in Montreal at this date. The latter is a philatelist of well known authority and he has told me that single specimens of the cancelled envelopes flown on that first Canadian air mail flight have brought as much as $200. One cover was presented to the late King George the Fifth by the late Lord Athelstan.

• •

During August, 1918, additional air mail flights were carried out between Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal by pilots of the R.A.F. The first return air-mail flight between two Canadian cities was from Toronto to Ottawa and back, and took place on August 27, in a Curtiss machine piloted by Lieutenant Dunstan. During the operations of the R.A.F. in Canada during the last war, several of our largest cities donated money for the purchase of aircraft for use in the training of airmen in Canada, and the machine which bore the name of "Winnipeg" was the one used to make the first city-to-city and return, air-mail flight.

This brief account would hardly be complete without the mention of one or two other air-mail flights connected with the Dominion and of historical nature.

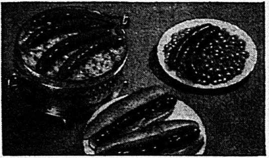
The first air mail of International source was flown from Seattle to Vancouver, B.C., on February 28, 1919.

In 1920, Eddie Hubbard became the first International Air Mail pilot to be appointed to fly a regular route on this continent, that between Seattle, Wash., and Victoria, B.C., the service being inaugurated on October 15th., 1920. He successfully flew that route daily in the best and the worst weather the Pacific coast has to offer, until he lost his life years later during a fog-bound flight.

May, 1919, saw the first air mail get across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to the British Isles under dire difficulties. When Harry Hawker, with Lieutenant Commander Mackenzie-Grieve as navigator, took off from near St. John's in the early afternoon of May 18, in a Sopwith biplane, the "Atlantic," they carried with them a sack of official mail. Their gallant attempt to be the first to span the wide Atlantic, which ended fourteen hours later in the heavy mid-ocean swells, when they were forced to put their craft down owing to a plugged strainer in the engine's cooling system, their rescue at sea by Captain Dunn and the crew of the Danish ship "Mary", and their subsequent arrival to a tumultuous welcome in London, is epic air history.

The shattered 'plane was salvaged by the American ship, S.S. Lake Charlotteville and taken to Falmouth. The mail sack, still intact, was found fastened tightly to the wreckage and, although water soaked, all letters were eventually delivered to their respective addresses. Single copies of those envelopes are valued at several hundred dollars each today.

Finally, the first mail to be flown over the Canadian Rockies must not be overlooked. That event also was in 1919. The B.C. branch of the Aerial League sponsored the flight, which was actually projected by the late John Nelson, managing director of the Vancouver World, acting in co-operation with the Lethbridge Herald, the Calgary Herald and the town of Golden, B.C.



WEEKLY WARTIME NUTRITION HINTS

Tricks with Franks

Delicious at any time; the 'Frank' is an easy to prepare; economical and nutritionally valuable hot-weather treat

Good as they are steamed, spread with mustard and eaten in a long bun, 'Franks' are much too versatile to serve only in that way! Actually, they are one of the most economical of meat dishes because they lend themselves so readily to meat "extenders"; such as macaroni, spaghetti, rice, noodles, beans and so on. Take it from me, dinner size 'Franks' topping a casserole of Macaroni au Gratin, a piping hot bowl of Spaghetti Creole, or a plate of baked beans, are dishes that everyone applauds.

Or here is a menu for a summer evening meal which is easy to prepare, (soaking and simmering can be done in advance), easy on the budget, nutritionally tops and bound-to-be-popular:—

Lentil Soup with 'Franks'
Leaf Lettuce and Watercress Salad
Brookfield Cheese and Canada Approved Bread
Fruit Punch or Iced Tea
(if your ration permits)

LENTIL SOUP WITH FRANKS

½lb. 'Franks'
1 cup dried lentils
6 cups water
1½ tsp. salt
¼ cup diced fat
¼ cup sliced onion
½ cup diced celery
2 cups milk

Soak lentils overnight. Drain, add water and salt. Pan fry diced fat, onion and celery. Add to lentils, cover and simmer till lentils are soft, then put through sieve. Add milk and more salt to taste. Add 'Franks' cut in ½-inch slices.

Simmer over low heat for about ten minutes. Navy beans, black or lima beans may be used in place of the lentils.

The Useful Hen

(By ALAN W. GREENWOOD)
(B.B.C. Overseas Service)

When you've found a leg of chicken on your dinner plate that made you think of a dog's rubber bone you've probably said, "My word, this hen is ancient," but how many of us realise how ancient the hen really is? She is found far back in human history. As early as 1400 B.C. we find it mentioned in a Chinese Encyclopedia compiled at that time.

What was the hen used for in olden times. It may have been first domesticated to provide flesh and eggs for humans to eat, but I doubt it. The scanty information we have suggests that it was popular for a very different reason. It produced gladiators for the sport of cock fighting.

However, in the fifth century, B.C., a famous Greek discovered that the hen could be very useful in quite another way. This was Hippocrates, who is sometimes called the "father of medicine." Since his time many other famous scientists have found the hen a most suitable animal on which to carry out their studies of various problems directly, or indirectly, affecting human welfare.

• •

Hippocrates used hens' eggs to teach his students embryology, the science of pre-natal growth. He told them to examine incubating eggs each day, from the second day of incubation right to the time of hatching. "You will find in the eggs," he said, "everything that is present in a man—in so far as a bird can resemble a man."

To this very day, students being trained in embryology are expected to make a close study of the development of the chick.

Now the name of Pasteur, with his great medical discoveries, is known far and wide throughout the world. In 1882 this great scientist offered to show how he could make farm livestock resistant to anthrax, a most virulent disease. His dramatic experiment was successful, and firmly established the importance of inoculation as a method of fighting disease.

But how did he make this wonderful discovery? Not on the anthrax germ itself, but, strange as it may seem, by studying the bacillus responsible for outbreaks of fowl cholera. Working with aged cultures of this organism he found that it could be attenuated, that is to say, weakened. In this state it did not cause birds to succumb to the disease but produced only mild symptoms of it and actually enabled them to develop a resistance against it.

And, like Hippocrates, what he found in the fowl, he tried out on larger animals, and it worked.

• •

If we turn to the science of nutrition, here too we'll see that the hen refuses to be kept out. All of us know something about deficiency disease. We are told often enough of the ill-health that awaits us if we don't get sufficient vitamins. Well one of the deficiency disease is beri-beri. It was once very prevalent in Java. The medical officer of a prison there, Dr. Eijkman, noticed that the fowls, fed on the garbage from the prison hospital, contracted a paralysis very similar to that afflicting his patients. He decided there must be some connection between the two conditions and began experimenting on the fowls. The main diet of the prisoners was rice so he fed rice to the fowls. To some he fed the polished rice that was used for human consumption. To others he fed unpolished rice, with the outer layer still on it. And out of that simple experiment came the answer to one of the greatest scourges of the East. For the hens fed on polished rice contracted beri-beri, and those fed on unpolished rice did not.

The result had an even wider significance than this, for it was the first time in history that a disease of dietary origin had been induced experimentally.

The hen goes on serving mankind in really modern times. Here are a few of the strange ways in which science is using her.

The juice of chicken embryos is used for growing isolated pieces of body tissues and cells where the growth and behaviour can be observed and studied. This branch of science is proving a very important method of attacking many problems, including perhaps the most dreaded of human diseases, cancer.

• •

Then again many bacteria or viruses which produce diseases in humans cannot be grown apart from living cells and so these organisms are often studied by growing them on the developing fowl embryo, the incubating chicken being very susceptible to many diseases such as influenza, which do not affect the grown bird. As eggs are cheap, and easily available, (in peace time at least), and the embryo is sealed from cross-infection by the shell, they have been called "the ideal laboratory animal." Much of the early work in this subject was carried out by Dr. Burnet of Melbourne. Using this method the course of these diseases can easily be followed, new outbreaks identified, and vaccines prepared for preventing their occurrence in man and animals.

And there is a more directly practical outcome of studying fowls. One of the newest of biological sciences, genetics, investigates how inheritance works. It began with the research work of Gregor Mendel.

Mendel was a monk who studied the flowers in his monastery garden. He kept careful records of what happened when he crossed two plants with flowers of different colors, or of different shape. He discovered that they always behaved in a certain definite way. In 1865 he published his observations in the journal of a rather obscure natural history society in Czechoslovakia. And there they remained, buried and forgotten, until 35 years later three well known botanists, working independently, arrived at similar conclusions. Mendel's writings were brought to light again, and only then was it realized that he had discovered the fundamental laws which govern heredity.

But another part of this story concerns fowls. William Bateson, an Englishman, began experimental studies on heredity in poultry in 1898, and it is safe to say, that if Mendel's writings had not been rediscovered, the natural laws would have been worked out by Bateson on his own. What he was able to show, however, by his work on fowls was that Mendelism applied to animals just as it did to plants.

And here is the tale of another important discovery. It turned up, as such things sometimes do, when the scientist was looking for something quite different. Professor Punnett, who worked with Bateson, was investigating the inheritance of body size in fowls. He was using Gold Hamburgh and Silver Sebright bantams. When the Hamburg cock was mated with Sebright hens all the female chicks had down of a golden color, and all the males silver. That is to say all the male chicks looked like their mother, and all the hen chicks looked like their father. This is known as sex-linked inheritance, or sometimes as criss-cross inheritance. (Incidentally you find this type of inheritance in haemophilia—a condition where the blood refuses to clot and the slightest wound may mean bleeding to death.)

This discovery remained one of purely academic interest to the Professor until he was going through some correspondence at the Food Production Department during the last war. Something he read there made him realise the commercial importance of being able to sex chicks at hatching. So he brought his observations to the notice of poultry breeders. It was some years before his suggestions caught on, but today the production of sex linked chickens runs into millions, and has become a very important branch of the poultry industry. Since the cock does not influence the laying of eggs by the hen in any way, you will realise that, except to the breeder of stock, it is a great wastage to obtain only half of the chicks from a setting of eggs as pullets, and the other half cockerels of little or no potential value.

The chicks produced in this way are, of course, crossbreds. The hens do indeed breed true for their golden color, but they cannot be used for further sex-linkage because the cross does not work the other way. (Chicks from a gold hen and silver cock would all be silver.)

• •

Recently, however, Professor Punnett, and his colleague Mr. Pease, have turned their attention to the possibility of detecting the sex of pure-bred chicks at hatching. Already their efforts are showing signs of fruition, and two new breeds, the Cambar and the Legbar, derived from the Campine and the Brown Leghorn, are fairly well established, and more new breeds of this kind are being made.

(But it is not only with regard to her own inheritance that the hen is providing us with new knowledge. For instance, such big questions as to whether cancer is inherited, are now being investigated by the study of similar tumors in the fowl, and much helpful information has already been collected.)

So you see, the uses of the hen extend far beyond those usually associated with her. Time and again she has rendered assistance in the fields of medicine and science, and she has paid her way on many roads besides that leading to the breakfast table.

Suffered Nine Years From Gas Indigestion; "Nerves"

Had Gassy Pains, Bloating, Acid Stomach After Every Meal. Got Dizzy Spells; Back Hurt; Felt Tired, Rundown. Says Syntona Gave First Real Relief.

"I have suffered for the last nine years from a badly disordered stomach and tried almost everything I heard of, but I got no real relief until I began taking Syntona a few weeks ago," said Mrs. Lillian Price, 48 Mars avenue, Hamilton, Ont., in a recent report.

"Even the lightest foods disagreed with me. I had so much gas that it would bloat my stomach and crowd up in my chest, making me feel short of breath. I would have bad attacks of heartburn, followed by belching up of hot, sour liquids. There was a dull, aching pain across my back, and I often got light-headed, dizzy spells. Although I always felt tired, fatigued and rundown, I couldn't get sound sleep at night, because my nerves were all on edge.

"It was through a friend that I first heard about Syntona and she persuaded me to try it. From the very first bottle it seemed to help me, so I kept on taking it. Then my food stopped souring. I began to have a better appetite to enjoy my meals. The heartburn grew less and less and I got rid of the bloated, full, heavy feeling in my stomach. The dizzy spells haven't troubled me lately and the pain has left my back. Also, my nerves are relaxed, allowing me to get restful sleep at night. As a result I am refreshed when I get up mornings and feel so much better in every way that even my work seems easier.

"I am very happy to be able to say this about Syntona and I recommend it to other people who suffer as I did."

MRS. LILLIAN PRICE

Syntona is made from the pure liquid extracts of 12 of nature's finest herbs and roots. It acts on the stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels—aids in the elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

MT. ETNA LINE ROCKS UNDER BOMBARDMENT
REPORT ITALIANS WITHDRAWING FROM GREECE

Land, Sea and Air Forces Pour Fire On Fixed Defences

Gains of Several Miles Made By Combined Forces of The Allies

NEW GAPS OPENED

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa Aug. 4 — (AP) — The Mount Etna line trembled under one of the greatest concentrations of fire in the war today as huge formations of Allied bombers and fighter-bombers joined with British and American warships and hundreds of batteries of field artillery in hammering the Axis' fixed defences.

The full fury of the tremendous air, sea and land bombardment was unleashed in support of the big push of the land troops which, an Allied communique announced, marked up an advance of six miles in the Americans' northern sector and a gain of "several miles" in the Anglo-Canadian central zone flanking Mount Etna.

Drive Wedge in Line

"Very satisfactory progress has been made," especially in the Central sector where Canadian and British troops were swinging a wedge aimed at the western face of Mt. Etna, the communique said. "Our troops have pushed forward in some cases several miles."

The American 7th Army, strengthened for the final punch by rested veterans of North Africa who took over from some of the weary advance guard in Sicily, captured Caronia, four miles east of San Stefano and 18 miles west of Cape Orlando on the north coast.

The capture of Catenanuova, 22 miles west of Catania and about three miles southwest of previously-captured Centuripe in the Central sector, was announced. The communique also confirmed the previously-reported fall of Agira to the northwest. Both Catenanuova and Agira fell to Canadians while British troops took Centuripe.

Naples was hit the second successive night in the reopened air offensive against the mainland, with railways and communications as the particular target.

British destroyers blazed away at the east Sicilian coast, ranking with high explosives the coastal road at Taormina north of Catania, and at Cape Molini, 17 miles south of Taormina and just north of Catania.

American heavy cruisers, disclosed to be in action in Sicilian waters for the first time, along with destroyers, pumped shells into the coastal road and Axis defences built into the high ground west of Cape Orlando, about 543 miles west of Messina and just ahead of the American advance.

Light Naval Forces laid down a tightening blockade of the Axis garrison, maintaining a steady patrol even in the narrow Messina strait where they fought two sharp engagements with enemy motor torpedo boats, one off Cape Armi on the Italian toe and the other near Taormina. One of the enemy boats was damaged.

Demoralizing Air Attacks

Not only bombers but several types of fighters and fighter-bombers ranged unopposed over the German and Italian ground forces, dropping high explosives at point-blank range and ripping Axis infantry with cannon shells and machine-gun bullets.

A front line witness said "the roar in the sky is deafening. It's a regular traffic jam up there."

Aderno, at the western base of Mount Etna, and the gun positions and roads in that area were the focal point of the aerial-wrought destruction, and 80 enemy trucks were reported destroyed and 100 damaged.

The crews said the Naples anti-aircraft gunners held their fire until the last moment and then let loose simultaneously, but the fire failed to divert the bomber fleet and a tornado of explosives left the target "looking like a flattened Christmas tree," said one airman.

BERLIN WRITERS IN DIFFICULTY

Said to Have Been Brought Before Nazis for Filing Stories for Swedish Press

Stockholm, Aug. 4—(AP)—Berlin correspondents of Swedish newspapers who reported the Germans were speeding evacuation of all non-essential civilians from Berlin in anticipation that the capital would follow Hamburg on the Allied blitz list, were reported in trouble with Nazi authorities today.

It was learned that Gunnar Pihl, Berlin representative of the Svenska-Dagbladet and the Stockholm Social Democrat, had been placed under house arrest after filing his dispatch, which the Germans apparently interpreted as containing military information. He was later released and a decision on the question of his expulsion from the Reich was said to have been postponed.

Ivar Vesterlund, Berlin correspondent of the Dagens Nyheter, who filed a similar story to his newspaper, apparently had his communications privileges rescinded, because he has been out of touch with his Stockholm office for the past two days.

Nazis Compelled To Bring Planes From Other Fronts

By HAROLD V. BOYLE
(Associated Press Correspondent)

With the American 7th Army Near Troina, Sicily, Aug. 2 —(Delayed) — (AP)— Germany's hard-pressed military machine has been compelled to withdraw fighter bombers from other fronts to prevent the retreat of its harassed ground forces, from turning into a rout.

The Axis can now only use a landing strip on the island of Sicily itself and it has to bring planes down from the north and operate from airfields in the heel of the Italian boot — such as Bari and Cretonia," a military spokesman said.

The reinforcement of Axis troops through Cap Dorlando and Messina has ceased, the spokesman said. This remaining force — representing the remnants of four fighting German divisions — is supplemented by the "rag tail bobtail" elements of Italian divisions.

Savagely striking at concentrations of Allied 155-mm and 105-mm field guns, the newly arrived ME-109's and FW-190's tried three times yesterday to knock out or cripple the heavy artillery which has been making each day 24 hours of hell for the thin lines of the Germans trying by every means to hold their hill positions.

It is these guns whose tormenting thunder has the worst effect on cracking morale of the Nazi troops.

Morning and evening waves of four Messerschmitts slipped in and away without loss or serious damage in diving, bombing and strafing attacks. Their aim was bad in both cases.

Allied Nations 'Masters of Strategy, Tactics, Performance'—MacDonald

Ottawa, Aug. 4 (CP) — Malcolm MacDonald, British High Commissioner, said at a press conference today the campaign in Sicily had established that the United Nations have "definitely got the initiative" in the war.

1. The United Nations have the initiative and can decide when and where the fighting is to be done.

2. The United Nations have become "masters of strategy, tactics and performance.

3. "When and where we choose to attack we can do so with a weight of armament that is superior to the enemy's."

Together these facts would be decisive in the end and would mean that the war would be carried on henceforth according to Allied design.

"But it will not be easy," Mr. MacDonald warned. "Events in Italy indicate that the Axis will fight bitterly and uncompromisingly to the end."

ITALY OFFERED NO PEACE TERMS SAYS MR .EDEN

Allies Continue to Demand Unconditional Surrender Secretary Tells House Members

INFLICT NEW BLOWS

London, Aug. 4 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden reiterated in the House of Commons today that the Allies had offered Italy no peace terms when asked how it happened that Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had spoken of "honorable conditions of peace" in his recent broadcast to the Italian people.

Declaring that the Allies continue to demand unconditional surrender, Mr. Eden said shortly:-

"I do not want to argue this matter now, but I can understand circumstances in which unconditional surrender might not be dishonorable to those who made it."

Mr. Eden's statement gave the lie to German broadcasts yesterday which quoted a Geneva dispatch as saying that President Roosevelt had advanced a seven-point armistice proposal to Italy.

It came amid indication of growing Italian resistance to unconditional surrender demands which strengthened the conviction that an all-out Allied invasion of Italy was the only course left open to the Allies to knock her out of the war.

While Mr. Eden told the House of Commons last night that the Allies would be "only too ready" to adopt a "reasonable attitude" toward Italy in return for aid against Germany, his statement raised no hopes that an immediate peace is in prospect.

On the contrary, there was a growing belief that new, heavy blows must be inflicted—perhaps a lightning land drive into the Italian mainland itself even while the battle of Sicily is in full swing—to take Italy out of the war before Germany consolidates her position in the peninsula.

Mr. Eden's offer to accept surrender from any qualified Italian spokesmen regardless of former affiliations came in a surprise debate in Commons. He said:-

"We are as a war cabinet anxious to see Italy accept the unconditional surrender she was offered and anxious to see facilities given to her so that we can turn the war even more vigorously on to Germany.

"If we accepted unconditional surrender from anyone I would not regard myself as thereby recognizing them in the least. I would be extremely pleased to accept unconditional surrender from Hitler tomorrow."

German broadcasts were backing what apparently was Premier Badoglio's program—that the war must go on—to the limit, despite indications that Mussolini's successor does not speak for the great masses of the Italian people.

As time worked for German ends, Istanbul-relayed reports, unconfirmed from other sources, that the Nazis had seized three Italian ships carrying Italian troops to Italy when they appeared in Suda Bay, seeking fuel. There were no details as to where the vessels had come from, but Badoglio had been reported summoning Italian garrisons back from the Balkans and Russia.

VOTES AT 100 YEARS

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP)—Mrs. Catharine Pretchett, who is 100 years old, today cast her vote in the Ontario general election walking to the poll from her home where she lives alone. She was accompanied by James De St. Remy, the Liberal candidate and an old friend.

Capture or Destruction Major Portion of Italy's Fleet May Come Soon

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 4 — (AP) — There is growing opinion in naval circles here that the Allies can count with reasonable certainty on capturing or destroying the major portion of Italy's hapless fleet, possibly soon.

This would be more than bad news for Tokyo's admirals. The Mediterranean and the Pacific are not separated for all practical purposes in the global war.

The final crushing of Italy, if it entails the surrender of the Axis Mediterranean Naval Force, will facilitate greatly the organization of amphibious forces for an assault on Burma this fall. Once Allied operations in the Mediterranean are secure from the threat of enemy attack, Royal Navy warships could be shifted to the Burma threatre immediately.

At present the Italians should be able to muster about half a dozen battleships, somewhat less than a dozen cruisers, a maximum of 100 destroyers of which about half are corvette types, and some 70 submarines.

Based At Spezia, Taranto

The vessels were mostly based on Spezia and Taranto when the present Allied offensive against Italy began. Spezia is on the northwest Italian coast, opposite Corsica, and Taranto is in the instep of the boot.

There have been reports from neutral countries that the Naval units at Taranto were moved into the Adriatic. If, that is true, the Germans might have a chance of gaining control of them should Italy surrender.

On the other hand there is little likelihood that the units based on Spezia would fall under German domination with Allied naval and airpower in the Tyrrhenian Sea as it is.

Thus the Allies can count with reasonable certainty on capturing or destroying at least the major portion of Italian Naval Forces in the near future.

BADOGLIO REGIME SEEN AS MILITARY DICTATORSHIP

DISORDERS PUT DOWN

Madrid, Aug. 4. (AP)—Premier Pietro Badoglio's regime has slowly but firmly imposed upon Italy a military dictatorship of the toughest type and the prospects of an Italian surrender now are extremely thin, according to Italians who left Rome only last Sunday.

While the Italian people in general are anxious for peace, these new arrivals in Spain declared, the peace movement lacks capable leadership and Badoglio shows every sign of doing his best to keep it so.

The travellers painted this picture of the situation in Italy at the time of their departure:—

Officers of the Italian army as a whole are pleased by the change-over from Mussolini to Badoglio and Italy has gained in efficiency as a war machine despite the loss in morale which may have been occasioned by several days of disorders in many places — notably Milan and the Bari area.

These disorders were put down by the application of the "big stick" method, and the popular enthusiasm for peace has cooled off under the stringent methods employed by the new government.

Part of the present calm in Italy under the blanket of military dictatorship is due to the failure of the Allies to clean up Sicily last week Badoglio's press and German propaganda agents are making the most of continued resistance in Sicily to whip up Italian fighting spirit.

The Germans have displayed considerable shrewdness in handling Italy since Mussolini's downfall. While German troops were moved into Northern Italy, occupying Trieste and Fiume and positions as close as possible to Milan, they apparently were under strict instructions to avoid trouble with Italian forces. While some clashes occurred, the Germans in each case withdrew and waited until the Italians cooled off.

Queen Elizabeth 43 Years Old

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—The bells of St. Paul's Cathedral pealed a salute to Queen Elizabeth today as she celebrated her 43rd birthday quietly in the country with the King and the two Princesses.

It was the first time since the start of the war that the Cathedral bells had been rung to celebrate a Royal birthday.

ITALIAN PRIESTS IN PALESTINE FREE OF ALL RESTRICTIONS

Jerusalem, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Italian priests in Palestine, who were interned when Italy entered the war and later were released under supervision, now have been freed of all restrictions.

ONTARIO VOTERS MARCH TO POLLS TO CHOOSE GOV'T

Province's First Wartime Election in Main Has Been Quiet Affair

PROXY VOTE USED

Toronto, Aug. 4. (CP)—Ontario voters went to the polls today in the most inclement weather in some sections for the province's first wartime election. Indications were that the record vote of the 1937 election would not be duplicated unless conditions improved Rain fell in some sections of the province, while in others it wasn't a factor in the light voting.

Only two sections of the province reported that early morning voting was heavy. In the highly industrialized Hamilton area men and women coming off the night shift in war plants lined up at the polls as they came off work. Voting also was heavy at Timmins in Cochrane south riding.

However in the 17 Toronto and York County ridings early voting was light and the same situation prevailed in Galt in Waterloo South, Brockville in Leeds, St. Thomas in Elgin, Stratford in Perth, North Bay in Nipissing, in Niagara Falls, Sault Ste. Marie and the four Windsor district ridings.

Guelph reported that the urban vote was slow in coming out in Wellington South while in the rural riding of Wellington North farmers who were unable to work in their fields took advantage of the opportunity to get to the polls.

St. Catharines reported the early vote was light.

In Welland riding, voting was slow in urban polls with about 10 per cent of the electors casting their ballots in the first three hours after the polls opened at eight a.m. London reported that 12 per cent of the eligible voters had cast their ballots in the first two and a half hours while a heavy afternoon vote was anticipated in the rural Middlesex ridings. Chatham reported light voting in Kent East and Kent West.

The election will decide whether Premier Nixon's Liberal administration will remain in power or whether a government headed by Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, or E. B. Jolliffe, C C.F. leader, will assume power.

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP)—Ontario voters went to the polls today to decide whether Premier Harry C. Nixon's Liberal administration should remain in power or whether a government headed by Progressive Conservative Leader George A. Drew or C.C.F. Leader E. B. Jolliffe should lead the province for the next four years.

A million and a half voters may mark their ballots for the 282 candidates in the 90 constituencies of Canada's most populous province. Servicemen and women outside the province vote by proxy in Ontario's first war-time election and those in Ontario camps cast their ballots at special polls.

FALL OF GERMAN OREL STRONGHOLD SEEMS INEVITABLE

Smashing Red Army Offensive Carries Troops Within Five Miles of City

HEAVY NAZI LOSSES

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 4—(AP)—The fall of the German stronghold of Orel appeared inevitable today as a smashing Red Army offensive carried to within five miles of the city.

The German retreat westward from points north and south of Orel proceeded steadily and it seemed only a question of time before Orel itself would be abandoned, eliminating the entire enemy salient on the Central front.

The Russian column advancing on the city from the southeast had reached the towns of Pilatovka and Stish, five miles from Orel, the closets approach. Other troops were at Domnino, seven miles to the east, the Russians said.

The Germans were attempting to halt the advance and disengaged their troops by mining the highway approaches and blowing up bridges, but the Russians remained in close pursuit, dispatches said.

Frantic counter-attacks, into which the desperate Germans threw their full strength of manpower and mechanized forces in an effort to stave off encirclement, have failed to halt the Russian advance, a Soviet Communique said.

Soviet columns driving in from the south occupied the towns of Stish and Pilatovka, while a spearhead advancing from the east captured the railroad station of Domnino, seven miles from Orel, the War Bulletin declared.

The sector north and northwest of Orel, where the Red Army is cutting in to pocket the German forces, was the scene of particularly heavy fighting as the Germans aimed sharp blows at the attacking forces only to be forced back with losses estimated in the communique at 2,000 dead.

Heavy German losses also were reported in the area south of Orel where the Nazis counter-attacked vainly at a cost of about 1,500 men, the War Bulletin said.

Germans Lose Equipment

In the course of the German retreat, the Russians said, large stocks of war material are falling into the hands of the Red Army.

In addition to the successes achieved at Orel, the Russians reported a notable victory in the Donets Basin, where they said the Nazis had been compelled by serious losses to halt their attacks southwest of Voroshilovgrad after five days of furious fighting.

180 Enemy Planes Destroyed

Considerable aerial activity was reported all along the front yesterday, resulting, the Russians said, in the destruction of 180 enemy planes.

Canadian Gunners Given High Praise On Accuracy by Infantrymen

By ROSS MUNRO
(Can. Press War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Sicily, July 31—(Delayed)—(CP Cable)—Capturing important hills north and east of Catenanuova, Canadian and British infantry are fighting together to broaden the bridgehead over the dried bed of the Dittaino River while around Regalbuto another Canadian and British force is pinching off the town.

(Regalbuto fell to the Canadians and British on Aug. 2, Munro reported in a later dispatch.)

The Germans are fighting desperately to prevent a break-through in this sector but are being gradually forced out of position as the 8th Army puts on the pressure. Canadian and British artillery fire here is becoming a nightly tempest with shells flashing and roaring over the whole front. There are numerous artillery actions during the day, too, and the Allies' air blitz is being stepped up.

When Regalbuto collapses Canadian and British troops will be in an excellent position to press northwards, cutting into the German forces and necessitating an enemy withdrawal in the northern sector, where the Americans are going ahead strongly. It would also imperil the Germans holding the bulge around Catania.

Between the Canadian front line and Mount Etna lies some terrible country. In the wild, jagged foothills to Etna there are the towns of Centuripe and Aderno. Capture of these places would really crowd the enemy and cut all the north and south roads west of Mount Etna. It would shatter the Germans' Etna line from the west.

(Centuripe fell to the British on Monday, after this dispatch was written, and Canadians and British are reported threatening Aderno after the capture of Regalbuto.)

Troops Move Toward Albania For Evacuation

Germany May Be Forced to Abandon Greece, Bulgaria And Yugoslavia

LEAVE MONTENEGRO

Istanbul, Aug. 3 (Delayed)—(AP)—Movement of Italian troops out of Greece toward Albania has reached the proportions of a general withdrawal, reports from the Balkans indicated today.

Italians leaving Greece apparently were being concentrated in Albania for evacuation across the Adriatic to Italy. Other Italian units reported to be leaving Montenegro were heading north in the direction of Trieste and Fiume.

It was believed that no Italian troops remained in Greece south of Corinth.

One unconfirmed report said two Italian divisions withdrawing from Montenegro capitulated when attacked by Serbian guerillas. They were freed and promised safe passage when they agreed to leave all their arms, ammunition and military transport with the guerillas, this report said.

These advices suggested the possibility that Italian withdrawals from the Balkans might so weaken the Germans that they would be forced to abandon any idea of defending Greece, Bulgaria and southern and central Yugoslavia.

Pledges Exchanged To Work Together

Algiers, Aug. 4 (AP)—Pledges to work together for the liberation of France were exchanged by Generals Henri Giraud and Charles De Gaulle following an agreement whereby the latter placed his fighting French troops under Gen. Giraud's command, it was announced last night.

Gen. Giraud first addressed Gen. De Gaulle, thanking him for his order of the day July 31 in which he surrendered his command and directed his followers to "march against the enemy" under "a glorious leader," General Giraud.

"Little by little," Gen. Giraud wrote, "I am sure by loyalty and sincerity that divergences will be reduced . . .and we shall find ourselves what we have never ceased to be—soldiers of France."

Meanwhile, with the unification of the army an accomplished fact, there was growing French impatience at the reluctance of the United States to recognize the French committee of National Liberation as the provisional French government.

TRIPLE BOMB LOADS

Cairo, Aug. 4 (AP)—United States air force headquarters announced today that American bombers operating from the Middle East had nearly tripled their bomb load delivery on Axis targets during July over the previous month.

Telephone 3,000 For Election Results

The Ontario Intelligencer has made special arrangements to provide the public with election results. Six telephone lines into the office have been installed. Phone 3000 for all inquiries after 7:30.

In addition to the telephone service, a public address system has been installed to be operated from The Ontario Intelligencer Office. The ballot results of the election will thus be broadcast to the street in front of the office over the loud speaker system.

COST-OF-LIVING INDEX MAKES SLIGHT GAIN

NO ADJUSTMENT

Ottawa, Aug. 4 (CP) — The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the cost-of-living index advanced from 118.5 per cent on June 1 to 118.8 per cent on July 2. The increase was insufficient to cause adjustment of cost-of-living bonuses which now remain unchanged for the next three-month period.

The wartime increase in the index reached 17.9 per cent at July 2, one-tenth of a percentage point short of the 18 per cent that would have resulted in an upward adjustment of the bonus.

"The food index rose from 130.9 in June to 131.8 for July," the report said. The total increase in the food index since February has amounted to 5.1 points.

"Prices for eggs, lamb and potatoes showed the largest advance in July and there were fractional increases in other meats. Butter and oranges were moderately lower. Two other group indexes advanced in July, fuel and lighting from 113 to 113.4 and clothing from 120.4 to 120.5. Other groups remained unchanged, rents at 111.5 home furnishings and services at 117.8 and miscellaneous items at 108.2."

The bureau reported that since February the index has risen steadily with the total increases amounting to 1.9 points. The index now stands on a par with December, 1942 and is .9 points above the July 1942, index upon which the last cost of living bonus was authorized.

Under the government's wage stabilization policy cost of living bonuses are adjusted each quarter, but only if there has been a change of one full percentage point in the index since the last adjustment.

The next revision of the bonus was due Aug. 15 had there been a change of one full point as compared with the index of Aug. 15, 1942, when the last adjustment was necessary.

POLICE BLOTTER

All was comparatively quiet in police circles over the night, this holding true for both city and provincial police headquarters. George McNalley, 188 Dufferin Street reported the theft of his bicycle from the McCarthy theatre lot, while Thoffie Condie, Victoria Avenue, reported the loss of her wallet containing approximately $15. The wallet was reported to be lost on Victoria Avenue.

A young girl in a local restaurant last night reported to police that an airman had made insulting remarks to her while she was sitting at a table. She reported the matter to the police who apprehended the airman, he later admitting the incident and making an apology to the girl.

Lt. L. Maraskas Led Troops, Tanks Into Leonforte

Lieut. Louis Maraskas, well-known Belleville boy, led the Canadian infantry and tanks into Leonforte at the west of the Catania plains as the Allies pushed their way across central Sicily during the current engagement, it has been revealed in a news report from a correspondent with the Canadians on the Sicilian battle front.

According to the news report the Belleville boy and his company went into the centre ahead of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry on July 22nd., and ambushed three German tanks on the main street. The turret was blown off one of the Nazi land battleships and the others were forced to retire.

Earlier in the day tanks and infantry had a furious 2-hour battle outside Nissoria, the engagement being reported by Lieut. Orville Roberts of Hamilton, as the scrappiest action the Canadian tank men had had to date.

Son of Mrs. Maraskas, 133 Charles Street, and the late Michael Maraskas, Lieut. Maraskas was born in Belleville and educated in the public school and Belleville Collegiate. During his school days he took great interest in athletics, being a member of the collegiate rugby team, while he was also prominent as a runner on collegiate track teams.

At the outbreak of war he enlisted with the local Argyll Light Infantry, later taking an officer's training course at Brockville, completing his training at Camp Borden. He went overseas in February, 1942. He is a brother of Miss Joanne Maraskas, while two brothers, Theodore and Peter, are in the United States.

Obituary

LATE JOHN DOUGLAS
(Ivanhoe)

The funeral of John Douglas took place on Tuesday afternoon, August 3rd., from his home near Ivanhoe to the Presbyterian Church at Fuller where service was conducted by the Rev. J. W. MacDonald of the Roslin Presbyterian Church.

Interment took place in White Lake cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Chester Adams, John Geen, Benjamin Brough, Roy Mitts, Sylvanius Mitts and Harry Radcliffe.

WILLIAM JAMES McGARVEY
(Marmora)

Marmora, (Special.) The passing of William James McGarvey at his home in Marmora Village about 3.30 p.m., on Tuesday, was learned with deep regret by a wide circle of friends. Deceased who had attained his seventy-seventh birthday on June 16th had only been ill for about two weeks and the thought that he would recover was in the minds of many. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McGarvey and was born at Shanick, Marmora Township, his parents being pioneer settlers there. His early years were spent at farming. Later he moved to the village and was employed in turn at the former St. James' oHtel and also at the Royal Hotel as hostler and later indoor duties. His pleasant manners made him a favorite with all. Devotion to members of his own family did not deter him from exercising a practical interest in the welfare of others. He was always ready to express sympathy and help where possible in times of need. He was a member of St. Paul's Anglican Church, a Conservative in politics and before the lodge became dormant was an officer of Marmora Loyal True Blue Lodge No. 177. He was unmarried.

Left to mourn his passing are one brother, David and one sister, Mrs. Allan McGarvey, both of Marmora.

ONTARIO VOTERS

The relatively quiet five-week campaign reached its height during last weekend and tapered off until only one of the leaders—Mr. Jolliffe—spoke last night. Mr. Nixon spent the last day of the campaign on his farm near Brantford and Mr. Drew was in his riding of Toronto High Park.

Nixon Member Since 1919

Since Premier Nixon announced dissolution of the legislature on June 30, the 52-year-old Liberal leader has campaigned for re-election on the government's nine-year record and its plan for post-war reconstruction. A member of the legislature for Brant since 1919 and a member of three cabinets, he was elected leader at a party convention last April following his resignation from the government in protest against Gordon D. Conant succeeding Mitchell F. Hepburn as premier.

Mr. Drew, a 49-year-old Toronto barrister and author, laid before the electors a 22-point program for the war and post-war years, including a new plan for the province to assume half the cost of taxation now borne by real estate.

Mr. Jolliffe, a 34-year-old Toronto barrister and former newspaperman, presented a 15-point program calling for the socialization of monopolies and educational and social reforms.

Election Sidelights

Campaign headquarters personnel for West Hastings were practically unanimous at the noon hour today in reporting that up until midday only slightly more than casual interest being taken by voters in going to the polls. At most of the polling booths in the city the morning vote was comparatively light although there was expectancy of greater interest being taken during the afternoon.

First contacted by the Ontario Intelligencer in an effort to gain a few election sidelights, were officials at the C. C. F. club rooms on Bridge Street who reported but a light vote during the morning. "Pretty quiet so far, with not too many having gotten out of voe," they stated. Officials here expected a heavier vote during the afternoon when factory and others workers took time off to cast their ballots.

It was a quite a different stroy at the Progressive Conservative campaign rooms, however. Party workers at this headquarters reported spending a comparatively busy morning drawing voters to the polls, while committee room workers stated they had been busy answering telephone calls with request for transportation from places of residence to the voting booths.

Showers which continued at intervals throughout the morning were expected by campaign headquarters officials to result in a heavier country vote than was at tremely busy season. Many were of first anicipated because of the exthe opinion that many farmers would not take the time from their harvesting operations to go to the polls if he weather happened to be fine.

Liberal headquarters also reported a comparatively light vote during thee morning hours, but expected that through reason of the half holiday, many of the sales clerks and merchants in the city and district towns and villages would utilize the time to cast their ballots .Only about 50 per cent. of the expected number of voters had cast their ballots up to the noon hour, it was reported by the liberals.

All campaign headquarters were unanimous in the expression of things being quiet and reported nothing of an unusual nature in Belleville. In Trenton, however, things appeared to be a bit different as it was reported that some over-zealous voter had sought to carry his party campaigning directly into the polling booth. In one of the Trenton polls it was reported a hand bill "Vote Liberal," was discovered inside a particular booth.

CANADIAN

With British artillery blanketing the German areas with shells, on the night of July 30 the infantry made good gains. The Nazi replied with feeble shell fire of their own in the Agira area. British troops under Canadian command took high ground south of Regalbuto. Ontario troops also are operating with the Tommies in this district.

This morning (July 31) the Germans counter-attacked against a British battalion but were hurled back. There is evidence the Germans are trying to pull out of Regalbuto. On the heels of the Canadian capture of Catenanuova, British infantry joined with the Canadians in exploiting the victory and, with British artillery in support, the Dittaino River bridgehead was extended three miles to the north and east.

Operating under British command temporarily, the Carleton and Yorks from New Brunswick attacked north of Catenanuova with a British battalion. They won ground to their objectives three miles from the town.

Simultaneously other British infantry, with the west Nova Scotia regiment in support, pushed northeast for 2 1-2 miles in the direction of Centuripe. In the fighting here during the past two days the Canadians and British have taken more than 100 German prisoners.

Engineers Have Tough Task.

The bridgehead over the Dittaino, which flows southeast along the general line of the 8th Army front to empty into the sea to the south of Catania was achieved by artillery and infantry assault, but Royal Canadian Engineers played as an important a role as anybody else.

It was the task of the Sappers to get a roadway over the driedout river bed after the Germans had blown up the only bridge on the road leading to Catenanuova.

They started work two nights ago (July 29) and when daylight came they kept to the job although the Germans got the range of the gulch where they were working and sent mortar bombs bursting around it and machine-gun bullets kicking up dust and chipped rocks.

There was even some shellfire on these Sappers, who were under command of Capt. Ian Pritchard of Kingston, Ont.

The enemy tried with everything available to stop the Sappers from getting the roadway through for they knew that without a road the Canadians could not get vehicles and guns up to the troops around Catenanuova. The Sappers had a terrible time working away under this rain of steel but they did not give up.

In mid-afternoon I met Pritchard on the road. He looked exhausted. He was beginning to think they could not get the road through. But with superhuman effort they succeeded and by 7 o'clock last night guns, vehicles, Bren-carriers and tanks were going over it through the gulch which had been such a barrier. I saw Pritchard again this morning at headquarters. He looked back on this success as just part of his job and I had to get the story from another officer.

Large Scale Firing

Front line infantrymen praise the Canadian gunnery everytime I see them. You hear men watching artillery barrages saying, "My God, I'm glad I am not in the Germans' boots."

At artillery headquarters I talked to Capt. L. F. Van Gorder of St. Catharines, and Lieut. W. R. McIntyre of Moose Jaw, Sask. They said the Canadian and British Gunners in their heaviest barrages have been covering a 1,000-yard front, dropping shells every 15 feet. This barrage has moved forward sometimes for five miles with this concentration of shells. Most of the firing has been on a large scale.

The officers said that even British desert gunners who fired at El Alamein, Mareth and Medjez el Bab in the African campaign lauded this joint effort of Canadian and British artillery.

Our gunners are not firing at extreme ranges either. They are generally quite close to the front, and in some cases have been under mortar and machine-gun fire. On big barrages and concentrations everyone works on the guns. Batmen, cooks and drivers pass ammunition.

A platoon of Seaforths detailed to guard one battery position got enthusiastic and even passed ammunition.

In addition to artillery, Canadian light anti-aircraft regiments have been moving along with the advance all the way from the beach. Along every road you see Bofors guns on slopes or on terraced hills with crews waiting by the guns for enemy planes. In the past few days they have had several opportunities to fire when Messerschmitts jumped in and out.

Canadian anti-tank gunners move with the leading troops as well. So far there has not been much enemy tank opposition, at least in places where the six-pounders could fire, but the gunners are living in hopes. Meanwhile they take on pill boxes when they spot them.

LAND, SEA AND AIR

Suicidal Resistance

The gains were scored in the face of a suicidal resistance in which the Germans lavishly poured in men in an effort to hold off the push in the central sector particularly.

The fact that only patrol activity was reported directly south of Catania seemed to indicate that the main assault on that city was coming in an enveloping movement from the west, and the Germans were determined to prevent it.

(A German radio broadcast today said from three to four Allied divisions were making the push against German ridge positions in that sector).

The area around Agira on the western edge of the Catania plain was the scene of the fiercest resistance and it was officially disclosed that the place changed hands "many times" before Canadian troops finally secured the position.

To the southeast, around Catenanuova, the British manhandled the first big German counter-attack with tanks in more than a week, knocking out a 60-ton Tiger tank and two smaller ones and cutting the accompanying infantry assault to pieces.

Then the British 78th and 51st infantry divisions advanced over ground strewn with enemy dead.

Pound Enemy Supply Line

The capture of Centuripe put British troops within five miles of the Aderno-Catania road. A terrific artillery barrage was taking a heavy toll of German supplies and reinforcements moving along the vital artery.

The situation in the American sector around Troina was reported to be "fluid" with the Allied line ill-defined because of the mountainous terrain, but infantry was known to be pushing ahead steadily from that captured highway hub.

(The German radio in a broadcast asserted 199 Allied planes were shot down in the Mediterranean theatre from the beginning of the Sicilian invasion to July 31, and that 309 Allied tanks had been destroyed.)

Japan Holding 10,166 Australians

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 4 —(CP Cable)—Francis Forde, Australia's Army Minister, announced today that Japan has reported through the International Red Cross at Geneva to the commonwealth that she holds prisoner 10,166 Australian soldiers, including 898 officers and 9,368 other ranks.

The Japanese radio had reported another 3,321 Australians as prisoners of war but as these have not been confirmed, the men are still listed as missing.

Those still reported missing and of whom no news at all had been received number 9,995, including 234 officers and 9,761 other ranks.

CAR SMASHED AT R.R. CROSSING, DRIVER ESCAPES

No Superficial Wounds and No Fractures Found

Trenton, Aug. 4 (Special)—Joseph Creighton, age about 36, narrowly escaped death Sunday afternoon at 6 p.m. when the car which he was driving was struck by a C.N.R. train on the Front Street crossing. The train was in charge of Conductor R. A. Clarke, Trenton, Engineer William Spring, Belleville and Fireman R. E. MacDonald of Belleville.

As Creighton approached the crossing he apparently failed to see the train or hear the whistle blowing and drove directly in front of the engine. The engine caught the rear wheel of the car on the right side and threw the car across the street against a telephone pole. So terrific was the impact that both axles were broken and the body of the car a complete wreck. Dr. Byrne was called by police, also an ambulance which took Creighton to his home after he was examined by the doctor.

Fortunatel, there did not appear to be any serious wounds and no fractures.

The train was loaded with livestock and other freight. Following the crash the train was brought to a speedy stop by the emergency brake applied by the enginer. So quickly was the train stopped that only the engine and two cars had passed over the crossing.

Mr. Creighton is a married man and lives in the north end of Trenton.

Mrs. E. Godfrey and daughter Barbara are visiting Wing Commander and Mrs. Cairns at their home Dundas Street East.

Miss Ann Bach has returned to her home in Toronto after spending several weeks with Chief Constable and Mrs. Bain.

Trenton Market

With buyers numerous and fruits and vegetables plentiful the local market was an unusually busy place on Saturday morning. A wide range of vegetables took in almost every variety grown in these parts. New potatoes were of excellent quality and sold at 57 cents per peck, corn held out at 40c a dozen and was quickly sold. Tomatoes sold as low as 10c per berry box toward the latter part of the morning, twice that amount being asked in the early hours by some vendors. Beets, carrots and onions sold at the usual 5c bunch, but one cannot help thinking the bunches are considerably smaller than other summers. Cabbage 10c up, Swiss chard 10c per bunch, for large bunches, 5c for small, peas unshelled 10c per box or 25c pint shelled, cucumbers 5c each for fair sized ones, several varieties of beans at 5c per box. Eggs held the usual 45 and 47c for Grade "A", chickens mostly 40c per pound.

Very few apples offered but raspberries, red at 30c, blue 25c and huckleberries 35 per quart or $1.75 per six quart basket.

Numerous Thefts

Thefts reported at the local police station during the past few days cover a considerable variety of articles. A cornet "Boosey model, class "A" in a large black case and valued at $95.00 was reported stolen from the Salvation Army hall. An automobile rug valued at $8.50 was taken from the verandah of the home of Miss Dorothy Berry, 267 Dundas Street West. Some fighting conscious person took a bayonet from a local cafe where a soldier had put it down with a rifle while he was having some refreshments. The rifle was intact but the bayonet missing. A lady's hand bag containing a man's wallet, a sum of money and an airforce pass was taken from a parked car on one of the main streets. A bicycle valued at $25.00 with handle bars turned up, the property of Russel Gibson, 25 McCann Street was taken from in front of a local billiard parlor, while another bike valued at $45.00 black with gold stripes and electric headlight was recovered here after it had been stolen from Oakville.

Severely Shaken up

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Moore of 244 Montrose Avenue, Toronto, received a severe shaking up when the car in which they were driving east on Dundas Street on Sunday afternoon was struck from the rear by a 1938 Chrysler sedan owned and driven by Hugh John Miller of Clairmont, Ont. Mr. Moore, who was driving, had stopped for the traffic signal at the corner of Dufferin Avenue and Dundas Street and as Mr. Miller approached failed to observe that the car ahead had stopped and crashed into the rear. The Moore car was pushed forward a considerable distance and Mr. Moore was thrown against the steering wheel while Mrs. Moore was also thrown forward. Dr. Byrne attended and after a short time they were able to continue on their journey. Neither Mr. Miller nor any of the four passengers in his car were injured.

FIRST PHOTO OF ANTI-WAR RIOTING IN MILAN

A huge throng of war-sick Italians here stage a demonstration in Domo Square in Milan, Italy, where, according to the German radio, a group of fighting Fascists, led by Vito Mussolini, nephew of the ex-Duce, have attempted to quell what Berlin terms "Communist" demonstrators. The famous Milan cathedral is in this square. Rioting has broken out in other Italian cities. This photo was radioed from Switzerland to England and then radioed to the United States. — (International Soundphoto.)

Burrs

Burrs.—On Wednesday evening an ice-cream social was held at Burr's United Church with a record crowd in attendance. The supply of ice-cream was depleted by the repeated requests for second, third and even fourth servings long before the evening's close. The program was excellent with Miss Gold, a guest at Wellington, contributing several delightful vocal numbers and Mrs. .. Morden, elocutionist, Belleville, was heard with much pleasure when she gave two well chosen readings followed by an encore entitled, "Main Street" by Joyce Kilmer. The Misses Tiller, Toronto, and Miss Pauline Burr were also heard in musical selections. The National Anthem concluded the program. Rev. P. Tiller pastor, was chairman. The evening's proceeds were $70.

Master John McIntyre, Melville, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. Harns on Thursday.

Fingerprints Of De Marigny Are Found Court Told

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug 4. (AP)—James O. Barker, Miami police expert, testified today that a fingerprint of Alfred De Marigny was found on a screen in the bedroom where his multi-millionaire father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, was bludgeoned and left to die on a blazing bed.

He told also of "considerable hair burns" on the hands and arms of the 35-year-old former Count, who is being given a preliminary hearing on a murder charge.

The paper-covered screen, which partly surrounded the bed where Oakes' body was found the morning of July 8, was introduced in evidence.

Located Fingerprints

"We located fingerprints on the screen", related Barker, one of the two American experts summoned by the Duke of Windsor to help solve the crime.

"Nearly all of them were illegible, but one proved to be conclusively an impression of the right little finger of Alfred De Marigny".

There was no testimony before the luncheon recess to indicate why the prosecution would place significance on the finding of De Marigny's fingerprint in his father-in-law's bedroom.

Previous testimony at a preliminary hearing for De Marigny, charged with murder, had established that Sir Harry's body and bed had been sprayed with an insecticide and a fire started.

"Anyone in the room at the time of the fire would have had burns on his hair", related Barker, one of two American experts called in by the Duke of Windsor, governor of The Bahama sto help solve the crime.

He said an examination first was made on Harold G. Christie, close friend and business associate of Oakes, a guest of Sir Harry's home at the time of the slaying.

"There were no burned hairs or tissues on Mr. Christie", Barker continued.

Volunteered Examination

"Mr. De Marigny volunteered to undergo a microscopic examination. He removed his shirt. We examined through a microscope the back of his fingers, his hands and forearms, and found on both hands and both arms a considerable quantity of hair burns.

"His hairs had been curled and some destroyed by the heat.

"Examination also showed burned hairs in his mustache, beard, eyebrows and on his head, although to a lesser degree than on his hands".

Barker, first witness at a resumption of the preliminary hearing after a recess of one week, said de Marginy was told that the burns were spotted, and was asked whether he had any explanation for them.

Tells Where he Got Burns

He said that the 35-year-old former Count later said:—

Barker said he went to De Marigny's home to examine the latter's clothing.

"He said the dining room was lighted by candles", Barker continued. "He displayed four hurricane lamps, and stated 'I must have gotten the burns while lighting them".

All for the Cause

One of the finest forms of inter-Allied co-operation is shown in the decision of the United States to turn over to Great Britain between one hundred and fifty and two hundred ships. According to the words of Mr. Churchill there was no financial arrangement and the matter would be dealt with by the usual method that the things were used to common advantage. Canada too as she is building more ships than she can man is turning them over to Britain for a nominal sum, usually a dollar a year, the boats to be returned at the close of the war. In the meantime, that is for the duration, the ships will perform service for all the nations in the great group of Allied Powers.

Britain has a surplus of seamen, and the United States and Canada have more ships than they can man, so what is more natural than for these ships to go about their mission manned by Britons?

It is this spirit that is helping to expedite the war and making victory certain. There is mutual trust and desire to do the utmost for victory.

Convoy After Convoy

Steadily over the seas pass the Allied convoys whose history will make one of the most fascinating stories of the war when told. In Tuesday's news was an Admiralty communique telling how British warships and planes had fought for three days a winning battle against a flock of enemy U-boats, twenty-five to thirty in number, which sought to attack ships in the convoy the British forces were shepherding through the waters where the lurking Huns were. The end was the loss of two or possibly three of the enemy undersea craft and the complete frustration of the U-boats by naval and air forces.

How many convoys have passed over the ocean and to the various theatres of action and how great has been the success of the Allies in protecting those ships!

The last dramatic fight was a complete defeat of the enemy.

How wisely has Britain stressed the ocean lines of travel. They are the great connecting ties. Hitler had the experience of the last war and had over twenty years to plan to meet the inevitable convoys that must cross the oceans and seas to feed and arm Britain and the Allies. Yet with this experience and that knowledge that U-boat menace failure would be tantamount to admission of defeat he has never had any chance to conquer the convoys and their safeguards, the British and the Empire navies and the dauntless hearts of sailors of the navy and the merchant marine. These are invincible by reason of the spirit of the people who use their great powers at sea gently and yet courageously and because as the poet says of Britain, "Her march is on the mountain waves, her home is on the deep." It is part of British nature and all the imitation attempts by the Germans to make a great navy do not threaten this great bulwark of the world's liberty, the British Navy, assisted by the navies of the United States and France, and the other powers like Holland and Norway.

Exit One Aggressor

One of Hitler's supports collapses. He tried to use Italy for the use of the Germans and for Germany alone. Now he has lost his model, Mussolini, whom he once called "one of the greatest of men."

Hitler was set on allowing most of Italy to fall, according to commentators and observers in order to prepare a defence along the northern part and it is said Mussolini was favorably impressed but when he tried to urge the Fascist Grand Council it was this that doomed him.

It was typically German for Hitler to propose the abandonment of southern and central Italy. Germany throughout the ages has caused grief to Italy and once again the Italians find the Germans acting up to their time-honored methods of all for self and none for Italy.

Yet Hitler in early days was so much obligated to Mussolini that on innumerable occasions he has spoken of the debt he owed to Il Duce's platform of Fascism. Once he called him a figure of "great secular greatness."

No more Brenner Pass meetings with the pompous and clownish Italian Duce who has ceased to be Il Duce and dictator. No more parleys in armored trains. The days of the gloating of the twain over the world they expected to have in their grasp are gone. Hitler must go the last road to Armageddon alone. Mussolini has not been heard of since he resigned. The onetime master, who taught him in the art of international brigandage, being in durance, Hitler is left to go to Tojo if he wants to consort with anybody and of course with that vile company of Nazis who are dyed with the stains of the war which they helped him to bring upon the earth.

Snakes From Hairs?

The old formula for producing a hair-snake or hair-worm was simple enough. First you plucked a long hair from the tail of some convenient horse, and then dropped it in a rain-barrel or watering-trough. You waited a few days before searching. Sometimes, perhaps, you were rewarded with a wriggling knotted hair-snake. Interest in this old belief, led us to enquire at the Royal Ontario Museum about these queer hair-like creatures. Here we found out that the hair-worm is a type of parasite roundworm, up to 5 or 6 inches long, and very slender. The facts of its life history are almost as strange as the fable. The female lays long strings of eggs in lakes or ponds. The larvae, the first stage of the hair-snake to hatch out of the eggs, bore their way into some aquatic insect. The next step is not well-known, but the latest stage occurs in terrestrial beetles, grasshoppers and crickets. From these insects the adult hair-worm emerges and drops into, or is actually conveyed to, rain-barrel, horse-trough, or lake.

Happy Ecuador

(The Printed Word)

The Republic of Ecuador, on the word of a friend who has lived in several South American countries, is as pleasant a place to dwell in as can be found in the Western Hemisphere. Living costs are low, the inhabitants are friendly, cultured people, and the climate is pleasant, in spite of the country's latitude.

A few years ago, the government came close to having a revolution, the cause being a new law doubling the income tax. The difficulty was smoothed over and, at last accounts, internal affairs were peaceful.

The seriousness of the fiscal measure may be judged from the fact that the old income tax was two dollars for each thousand dollars of income.

Speed on the Roads

(Calgary Herald)

Jack Rabbits, under the stimulus of being chased by an automobile, have been clocked at 45 miles per hour. Under the same conditions a young buck deer reached 49 miles. Pronghorn antelope have frequently been measured in full flight from automobiles and airplanes at a top speed of 60 miles an hour. Thus the antelope is a mile away by the time that the rattlesnake has just started. However, the rattler relies on poison rather than speed to save himself.

A "SCORCHER" RETURNS

Time was — fully fifty years ago—
As proud as any lad could be,
That thrill of thrills was mine to know—
My father bought a bike for me.
Soon every riding trick I knew,
Which brought the plaudits from the stands.
What others did I learned to do,
Including "riding without hands."

I never saw a daring feat
But what I claimed it for my own.
A leap, and I was on the seat.
Soon as a "scorcher" I was known.
Then many a neighbor shook his head
As I went racing down the road.
"That boy will break his neck," they said.
"He pays no heed to safety's code."

Today a bicycle I ride
To save the gas, but skill has flown
And vanished is the old-time pride.
The daring boy has cautious grown.
The lad of many a reckless feat
Has slipped forever out of sight,
An oldster on that safety's seat
Is hanging on with all his might.

'Tis strange how ugly knees appear
When time has stripped away their grace;
How much there is for age to fear
Which youth with laughter used to face.
The boy who "scorched" in Ninety-three
Now slowly rides his bike, and he
Is hanging on with all his might.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

20 YEARS AGO

August 4th, 1923

The Rev. Father Lally, of Kingston, who was ordained three weeks ago, officiated at services in St. Michael's Church here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Skinner have returned to Toronto after visiting relatives here.

Dr. and Mrs. Coughlin have returned home from Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams and son, Donald Street, are spending a vacation at Mountain Grove.

In honor of the Hon. J. R. Cooke, M.P.P. for North Hastings and Minister of Hydro in the Ferguson Cabinet in the Ontario Legislature, a picnic was held in the Agricultural Park at Stirling and a great throng of people from all parts of the county and elsewhere was present. Mr. Cooke is the first cabinet minister in the Ontario Legislature from Hastings County since Confederation. Mr. C. B. McGuire, Reeve of Stirling, presided at the platform meeting and speeches were made by Mr. McGuire, Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., Mr. W. E. Tummon, ex-Reeve of Huntingdon Township, Hon. Charles McCrae, Minister of Mines in the Ontario Legislature, Major Bedford, M.P.P. for East Northumberland, Mr. George Kingston, of Toronto, Mr. W. H. Ireland, M.P.P. for West Hastings, Mr. H. F. Ketcheson, Mr. J. F. Hill, M.P.P. for East Hastings and Mr. T. H. Thompson, M.P., for North Hastings. In the evening a public dance was held. The picnic was most enjoyable and manifested in a great way the popularity of the Hon. Mr. Cooke and the high esteem in which he is held.

If the members of the Public Works committee would take a walk in some of the back streets they would, by the time they had taken a few falls on the crazy old sidewalks, see the necessity of putting down without delay some granolithic walks. The council could not afford a public bath because the sidewalks needed repairing, but the walks in question are not being looked after with any unseemly haste. The worst critics of our City Fathers must admit that they do not rush into such matters without due deliberation.

Some Cases of Epilepsy May Be Caused by Allergy

Despite the fact that the cause of epilepsy has not been discovered, the methods of treatment now keep most epileptics free of severe attacks. The methods used are to get rid of any infection present, increase the amount of fat in the diet and decrease the starch foods, cut down on all liquids, and a daily dose of bromides, or phenobarbital and sodium dilantin.

That allergy enters into the cause of epilepsy has been suggested by various research physicians because of the similarity or relationship of various conditions present. In "Medicine", Mexico, Dr. E. Buentello V., discusses the recent findings of these physicians. Three conditions present are (a) disturbance of water balance, (b) too much water in brain, and (c) change in the structure of the brain cells.

Swelling of the brain-too much water present—is caused by spasm of bloodvessels. We are all familiar with the allergic symptoms present—swelling of tissues of eyes and face caused by spasms of the vessels—in hay fever, eating of various foods or emotional disturbances.

To further show the relationship or similarity of allergy and epilepsy, Dr. Buentello points out three outstanding facts. 1—Infections—teeth, tonsils, sinuses and others—produce spasm of muscles, nerves and bloodvessels. 2. When the substance causing allergic symptoms is given in small doses directly into a portion of the nervous tissues, the individual is more easily affected. Experiments show that allergy can cause changes in the blood supply of the brain surface. All these three conditions are found also in epilepsy.

The presence of epilepsy and allergic condtions such as hives, asthma, and itching of the skin, in certain families and the nervousness and epileptic-like temperament in patients with hives and asthma should make physicians and others more keenly alert to the relationship of these two ailments.

The thought then is that in the treatment of epilepsy it should not be sufficient just to enable the epileptic to live fairly free of attacks but that the possibility of allergy being the cause or partial cause of hives, asthma, hay fever, be remembered. This would mean that just as tests are made for the cause of hives, asthme, hay fever, and eczema, so should tests be made to find if allergy to some substance or substances is causing the attacks of epilepsy.

Germans' Escape Corridor Narrowed To Thirteen Miles

New York, Aug. 4—(AP)— BBC, quoting a Reuters News Agency dispatch from Moscow, declared today that the Germans' escape corridor west of Orel has been narrowed to 13 miles, threatening the Nazis with another disaster perhaps equal to that suffered at Stalingrad.

The broadcast, recorded by CBS, said that the Germans "are in full and hasty retreat toward Orel, with the three main Russian armies driving forward after them."

The German High Command communique dismissed the Orel fighting with the assertion that violent Russian tank attacks southwest of that city had been "repulsed everywhere" but told of heavy fighting on the Mius River front on the southern end of the line near Kuibyshevo.

Famed Speed Pilot Dies in Britain

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—Air Commodore A. H. Orlebar, 46, Deputy Chief of combined operations and one of Britain's most famed speed pilots, died last night. He had been unable to attend to his duties for some time because of illness.

Orlebar was appointed last March to put additional air power into commando attacks on Axis-held Europe.

He twice captained successful British Schneider Cup teams—in 1929 and 1931—and set a world speed mark of 357.7 M.P.H. in 1929.

It was from Britain's record-breaking Schneider Cup racers of those years that the present spitfire fighting planes in part were evolved.

The London Gazette only last night announced Orlebar had relinquished the rank of Air Vice Marsal and reverted to that of air commodore.

LONDON LETTER

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 4 (CP)—Reaction to the Sicilian campaign seems to show that the British people have achieved an objectivity toward the war that cannot be interpreted as lack of interest, but allows them to relegate each campaign into its proper niche in relation to the whole.

After the first weekend enthusiasm over the Sicilian invasion, when Britons were concerned regarding the extent and success of the landings, it took only a few days before Russian war news and home-based air attacks on the continent came back into major spots in the newspapers, news broadcasts and street talk.

Once it was known definitely that the Sicilian landings had been made easily and with little loss, the steady advance across the island meant just another map to watch in the daily press. They were interested in the non-belligerent attitude of most Sicilian civilians and in the fact that Italian soldiers were surrendering in large groups. But they appeared to have expected it. There was no crowing.

• •

The fact that there was the second front for which mass meetings had been held, members of parliament and Lords had cried, and people in the pubs and on the streets had solemnly decided was a requisite to victory drew practically no comment. They seemed to have known it would come eventually and when it came, most of them thought it was none too soon. It was here, and they let it go at that.

Listening to Britons talk about the war, this divided attention is plain.

There were the few optimists and pessimists, as usual.

There was the Canadian army lieutenant colonel who said on a Monday that the Sicilian campaign would be finished by Saturday. It wasn't of course. And there are the radical newspapers and magazines who foresee all kinds of dire consequences resulting from the Allied administration of occupied land, but it seems doubtful these prophesies will be shown true even in degree.

The British troops, the 8th Army, had the toughest fighting of them all in Sicily. Still a three-mile advance by the Russians near Orel, or an attack by American bombers on Rome, seems to mean just as much to the public. Britons seem to have developed the faculty of treating the war as a whole, not as several pieces.

Britons either have developed an impenetrable attitude of waiting for the entire war to end, waiting until Italy proper, France or Germany itself falls or they have become so numbed intellectually by four years of war that each new campaign is merely a phase they know will pass, giving place to another and another, almost indefinitely.

SEVEN KILLED IN WRECK

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 4 (AP)— SSeven men were killed and 12 injured—all reorted to be military personnel—in a Milwaukee railroad train wreck at Warden in Central Washington at 1 a.m. today, M. A. GREAT AMERICAN DESERT

Until the notion was partially exploded by the Lewis and Clark expedition, it was generally believed in the United States that the part of North America lying between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains comprised a vast desert comparable in barrenness to the Sahara in northern Africa.

Daniel Webster is supposed to have been the first to apply to this region the name "The Great American Desert."

Until the Lewis and Clark expedition little was known of the American continent west of the Alleghenies and virtually nothing west of the Mississippi.

The belief in "The Great American Desert" persisted until John C. Fremont began to make his explorations about a century ago.

The trans-Mississippi region at that time was a "wilderness," but it was far from being one vast desert.

A wilderness is a pathless, unreclaimed but not necessarily unreclaimable tract of land, while a desert is a wilderness that is relatively uninhabitable because of its barrenness.

As explorers, traders and settlers pushed westward toward the Pacific the area of The Great American Desert was gradually reduced.

"These plains (beneath the Rocky Mountains) are often of a desolate sterility — mere sandy wastes, destitute of trees or herbage, scorched by the ardent and reflected rays of the summer sun, and swept in winter by chilling blasts from the snow-clad mountains. Which is a great part of that vast region extending north and south along the mountains several hundred miles in width, which, resembling the arid steppes of Tartary, has been appropriately termed the Great American Desert."

The term "Great American Desert" still survives as the popular name for a large arid or semi-arid region in Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada and California. But this region is by no means a continuous sandy and barren waste, virtually without plant or animal life, in the sense people 150 years ago imagined the Great American Desert to be.

A few years ago the Commissioner of Reclamation, John C. Page, declared that the western third of the United States, in round figures about 600,000,000 acres, "is semi-arid or arid."

British Honduras Described to Club By Gilbert Scott

Following immediately upon the long weekend and this time unmarred by the noontime rain, the Belleville Kiwanis Club met at luncheon Tuesday noon in the Quinte Hotel, where they were beguilded by an illuminating talk on life in the British Honduras jungle by Mr. Gilbert B. Scott, Assistant Manager of the Consolidated Optical Company of Belleville. He reviewed the original settlement of British Honduras by the pirate Wallace, who through a ruse was successful in destroying the whole Spanish fleet sent out from Spain to rid the colony of these buccaneers who stole the mahogany the Spaniards cut and transported it to England for sale.

Mr. Scott said that life in the jungle was peculiar and sometimes pleasant but never like it is portrayed in the movies with handsome men lying around in beautiful surroundings with beautiful girls. The pests, mosquitoes and other insects kill any chance of romance, says Mr. Scott. Life is quite primitive and disease is rampant with no effort made on the part of any government to give medical care to the natives. He told of an experience of burying a small girl in the middle of a tropical storm and spoke of the deterioration of foods in the high humidity. The potato situation in Belleville is nothing compared to that in the South, said Mr. Scott. The majority of potatoes we had were brought in from New Orleans and were so soggy they would squash in your hands. We were constantly longing for Northern food. Tropical fruits were plentiful, of course, said Mr. Scott. Bananas sold for ten cents for two stems, lemons and oranges for twenty cents per bag and grapefruit, the large sizes, which could not be shipped, were given away.

Mr. Scott's talk was different to those usually heard at these luncheons and the Kiwanians were greatly interested. Other topics discussed were the coming Street Carnival, the proposed "Miss War Worker" contests and the two major drawings, the Hope Chest and model sailing schooner.

Mrs. G. Soule and children are holidaying at Oshawa.

A social evening was held at the home of Mrs. L. Bellanger on Aug. 2nd. Euchre and rummy were played. Winners were Mrs. Willis, Mrs. R. Tracey, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Styles, consolation, Mrs. Meeks. In rummy, Mrs. Willis was the lucky winner for the special prize. Proceeds for the evening went toward the war purpose fund of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion. Thanks and appreciation are extended to Mrs. Bellanger for her kind hospitality and the use of her home.

The biggest crowd of the season was reported in attendance at the Bay of Quinte Country Club house on Tuesday evening when the girls of the Belleville Hospitality Club entertained the Air Force personnel from the district airports. Guests of honor at the function were fifteen W.D.'s from Trenton station. In charge of the girls and refreshments was Mrs. Fred Deacon, Jr. The "Melody Makers" Orchestra from Trenton airport furnished delightful music in rhythmic movements of both soft and swing. The spot prizes were won by Sgt. Heading, W.D., from New Westminister, B.C. and Sgt. Murphy, from London, Eng.; Miss Jean Vickers and Sgt. Watson, of Barrie, Ont. A game of consequences was received with warm enthusiasm by the merrymakers and afforded a great deal of merriment. Refreshments, served by a number of girls of the club, concluded the evening's fun.

KELLOGG'S ASTHMA RELIEF FOR ASTHMA & HAYFEVER

WEDDINGS

DONIHEE—KYLE

The marriage was solemnized in the rectory of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel on Monday morning, August 2nd at ten o'clock of Ruth Elizabeth Kyle, daughter of Mrs. William Kyle and the late Mr. Kyle, to Tilden Anthony Donihee, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Donihee, of Cornwall, the Rev. Father C. E. Baker officiating.

The bride was attired in an exquisite pink crepe two-piece suit with navy accessories and carried a Colonial bouquet of Irene roses, sweet peas and bachelor buttons. She was attended by her sister, Mary Kyle, wearing a charming gold crepe two-piece suit with brown accessories and carrying a Colonial bouquet of Duisberg roses, sweet peas and bachelor buttons.

Mr. Kenneth Soden acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a navy and white crepe ensemble with white accessories and corsage of Bettertime roses. She was assisted by Mrs. MacTier, of St. Louis, sister of the groom, attired in black with matching accessories and corsage of pink Delight roses.

For the wedding trip to Montreal and points east, the bride donned a navy and white two-piece suit and navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

CROUTER—CURLETTE

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at 6 p.m., Saturday, July 31, when Kathryn Angela, daughter of Mr. W. H. Curlette and the late Mrs. Curlette, became the bride of Raymond M. Crouter, son of Mrs. Duncan and the late Mr. Francis Crouter, the Rev. Eastman, of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church officiating.

The bride was becomingly attired in a striking two-piece street ensemble of Romance blue triple sheer over taffeta with white accessories. Mrs. Francis LaMorre, of Trenton, wearing a Windsor Rose triple sheer dress with white accessories, attended the bride. Both the bride and bridesmaid wore sailor hats with fluted rims and twin corsages of mauve and white sweet peas and baby breath. Mr. Francis LaMorre supported the groom.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served at the New Queen's Hotel, the young couple leaving shortly after on their honeymoon.

PINE GROVE W. I.

The members of Pine Grove W. I. met at the home of Mrs. J. Marshall, Oak Hill Lake, July 29, with an attendance of twelve members and ten visitors.

In the absence of fthe president, the second vice-president, Mrs. F. Campbell, was the presiding officer and opened the meeting. Minutes were read and approved.

An invitation to meet with Unionvale was read and it was decided that the secretary write a letter of thanks regretting that the Pine Grove W.I. would be unable to attend. Two members paid fees. The convener, Mrs. H. Coulter, took charge. The topic was "War Activities" and Mrs. Coulter chose as her topic "You are Needed Now," stressing on what is being done by the Central Fund. Contributions to the jam making enterprise and mobile kitchen were dealt with. A reading, "What the Institute Can Do," was given by Mrs. F. Finkle. Gena Vanderwater gave a reading, "Ma's Tools." There was a duet by Wilma and Wanda Lough, accompanied on the harpiscord by Gena Vanderwater. There was readings given by Mrs. Bonter and Mrs. W. Rodgers. The meeting closed with the Mizpah after which lunch was served and an enjoyable hour spent.

When a Mother's Wounded Soldier Son Comes Home on Furlough

She was all a-twitter, for her darling boy who had been away for more than a year, was coming home on furlough. He'd been wounded.

In all her life she'd never been so nervous, trying to remember what she musn't say or do; today was different from other days. There was the wound that would make him permanently lame. He didn't want anything said about that, he had written her.

Then, booming up the stairs in a deeper bass than she remembered: "Hi! Mom, O, Mom." And she dashed down to see someone who looked almost like a stranger. Deep lines in the face that even the tan of the homeward voyage couldn't conceal. But he crushed her in the bear-hug he hadn't forgotten. She gulped back her tears and said:

But he didn't look just the same, and he, as well as she, knew she was fibbing. The whole house—the sitting room, the hall, the dining room beyond—looked smaller to the boy who had been overseas, who had his baptism of fire, been thru' things he didn't want to talk about, even to her.

She wanted to ask him if he didn't want to lie down, rest his leg, but she knew she musn't. She noticed his hair had grown the least bit thin on top, but she mustn't indulge in foolish reminiscences like the memory of the lovely curls he had when he was a baby.

The "Major" relieved the tension and both were themselves again — their old selves. "Major," the Irish terrier, grown a little old, rushed in with whoops and yelps of joy. The dog was all over the young soldier, disregarding rules of discipline—actually licking the boy's face.

Long drawn-out yelps of joy broken by barks of pure happiness — the depths the boy and his mother had been through were over. She hadn't said or done any of the things her heart had overflowed with longing to say and do. She'd held back her tears; hadn't been sentimental; hadn't asked about his wound; hadn't told him what an adorable baby he'd been.

The dog had put them both on the old home front. "Mom" said: "Jack, I'll leave you with 'Major' while I put lunch on the table. I've made a a cherry pie—the old tree still bears cherries—and I hope you still like cherry pie."

The soldier had relaxed. He had stretched out, with his lame leg on a chair. "Sure thing — you're great, Mom, to remember that cherry pie."

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Announcements Should Never be Sent to Those Who Are Invited to Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I've had to plan my wedding so hurriedly that it was impossible to have engraved invitations, or to write many notes of invitation. But a number of friends I have asked verbally, and while some were sure they could come, others could not be sure—a sort of come if you can situation. So I won't know in advance just whom not to send announcements to. Should I address announcements to all of these friends?

2. Are the names written on the inside envelopes of the announcements, or are the inside envelopes left blank?

3. Should more than one announcement be sent to a family of, say, three or four members?

—M.H.

1. Announcements are not mailed to those invited to the wedding. The basic idea of an announcement is that for some reason you weren't invited to the wedding and that instead of being invited, you're on the list of acquaintances who are being sent the news, formally, that the marriage has taken place.

2. No, the inside envelopes are not left blank. On the inside envelopes are written only the name: Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Smith, or Miss Emily Jones, or Mr. Anthony Brown.

3. The most "elegant" form is to address one announcement to "Mr and Mrs.", and a separate announcement to each member of the family. But if your announcements-budget doesn't permit this, the daughters may be addressed as "The Misses Smith", and the sons as "The Messrs. Smith", on separate envelopes, or if necessary all on the same envelope:

Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Smith
The Misses Smith
The Messrs. Smith

But please don't address the envelope to "Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Smith and family" .. this is never correct.

Father's Dress for Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance, who is in the Navy, and his best man and ushers, will wear their blue uniforms at our afternoon wedding in church. I am going to wear a white gown (without train) and veil. I know that my father, who is going to give me in marriage, should wear formal day attire, but don't you think this will look out of place with the service uniforms? Would perhaps summer attire be more appropriate?

— M. S.

I agree with you that informal attire for your father is more in keeping with the uniforms of the other men in the wedding party. He may properly wear a dark blue business suit, or for a summer wedding, a white linen or Palm Beach cloth suit, or a dark coat (preferably dark blue), with white or dark-gray flannel trousers.

COURTESY TIP

Those curiosity gremlins are everlastingly on their mischief-making job these days trying to make you ask a Service man questions your common sense should warn you you shouldn't ask. Don't let the gremlins win the battle with your curiosity, for their success may cause limitless danger, terrible loss of life. It's your patriotic business not to ask questions of a soldier or sailor about his business for his business is now war-business, to be held in the strictest of secrecy.

FO. Ward Stiles Honored With Gifts By Community Friends

On the evening of July 23rd., approximately seventy-five friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bleecker, Fourth Concession, Sidney Township, in honor of Flying Officer ward Stiles, who is spending his leave at their home.

During the evening Mr. George Pollard of Stirling, acted as chairman. An excellent program was given consisting of readings and musical numbers. On behalf of the community an address was read by Mrs. Bert Bush and Mrs. Will Bush presented F.O. Stiles with a gold identification bracelet and a handsomely leather-bound writing portfolio. F.O. Stiles graciously expressed his appreciation for the tokens of friendship. The address was signed by Mr. Ross Nicolson and Mr. Will Bush.

F.O. Stiles is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Stiles of Stirling. In 1931 he graduated from Toronto University and until he entered the R.C.A.F. in January 1942, he was employed as an electrical engineer with the Hydro. After enlisting in the R.C.A.F. he attended the Aeronautical School of Engineering in Montreal and became a Pilot Officer. For the past year he has been posted at Mountain View and has been promoted to Flying Officer.

During his absence Mrs. Stiles and son, David, are making their home with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bleecker, Sidney Township.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, July 23 (CP) — Hints for housewives busy during the summer months, furnished by home economists:

CANNING CURRANTS — Lucky the housewife whose garden boasts a few currant bushes, or who is able to buy either red or black currants, says Laura Pepper, chief of the Agricultural Department's consumer section. She suggests that black currant juice should be put up because of its excellence as a source of Vitamin "C", or that the fruit be canned with or without sugar. .. To make the juice, wash and stem the currants. Measure into preserving kettle, crush, and add two cups water to three cups currants. Bring to boil and boil five minutes. Strain through a jelly bag, pour into sterilized sealers, partially seal and process in hot water bath at simmering temperature for 30 minutes. Remove from water bath and complete seal.

VALUABLE VITAMIN — Most garden fruits supply vitamin "C" abundantly at this time of year, but right now currants are at the top of the list, and Marion Harlow of nutrition services reminds homemakers that 1-3 cup of this tangy fruit, crushed and sweetened just before a serving, yields as much vitamin "C" as you'll get from a medium-sized orange.

LUNCH BOXES — Here's a suggestion for a lunch box for war workers: ice-cold tomato juice; tomato juice and milk, half and half, or fruit juice for the thermos bottle these hot days. Crisp radishes and onions from the Victory Garden add tang and vitamins—and for the next three months there'll be a good variety of fresh fruits that are easy to pack and carry.

DOBBIN'S CONTRIBUTION — Farmers' wives can "do their bit" for victory by seeing that combings from horses' manes and tails are saved in separate bags. The shock pads in army tanks in Sicily, cushions in army vehicles in Russia and mattresses on ships bound for Australia all are made from the horse's mane. Guns are kept cleaner and machines in munitions plants run more smoothly because of the brushes made from a horse's tail . . . Sufficient horsehair for these uses, the Prices Board says, is obtained only when the conscientious Canadian farmer saves the combings.

FISH "IN THE ROUND" — Deboning holds no terrors for those housewives who at one time or another have purchased unfilleted fish. The Prices Board learned recently that seafood for Canadian tables could be supplied in much larger quantities if consumers would accept it unboned . . . Shortage of experienced help in coastal fish plants slowed up processing and made it impossible to handle as large a catch as the fishermen could otherwise bring ashore. With greater demand for "fish in the round" (unfilleted), production could be increased. By buying such fish the housewife is not only helping the supply but also her own pocketbook, since between 15 and 25 cents is saved on every pound of unfilleted fish.

SIRLOIN OR STEW — Ration coupon value charts play no favorites. Sunday's sirloin or Monday's stew—it adds up to the same amount of meat, no matter which one the cook decides upon. A ration coupon entitles the holder to three-quarters of a pound of sirloin or three-quarters of a pound of boneless stewing beef, the only difference being in the price. Sirloin rubs shoulders with stewing beef only by virtue of the edible meet contained in each.

The Marry-Go-Round

What every one of us needs in marriage is somebody to keep our inferiority complex down to zero and our self-confidence up to par. Most people who break their marriage ties are merely starving for a little applause.

Hint to the departing lover. No girl ever forgets a man who has once told her that she has beautiful eyes!

No matter how crushed a man may be by one girl's coldness, it is astonishing, how quickly a warm, flattering smile from another girl will restore his spirits, bolster up his vanity and put his heart back in working condition.

A girl often falls in love with a man because she feels sorry for him. But she should remember that, while a woman's love sometimes begins in pity, that's where a man's love usually ends.

Women may wear uniforms and do men's work in war factories; but man will always be the dominant sex, until Nature gives woman a cast-iron stomach, a flexible heart and shock-proof conscience.

During courtship we feed each other flattery in large portions; after marriage, we just dole it out grudgingly, as though the doctor had cut it off our diet list. What a pity! That's when we need it.

Why is it that the girl who does not take a man seriously is always his ideal of a paragon of common sense?

If you can't be sure that the emotion you feel for a girl is love, Sailor, you may be sure that it isn't. Love is as unmistakable as a toothache or a black eye.

Nothing is appreciated so much as a little appreciation. The rarest and most surprising thing that you can give anybody in this world is a little gratitude!

Macphail's Spending Spree To Give Brooklyn Fans Winner Over and Bums Going Down

Team Fighting to Stay Out of Second Division for Lack of Talent

SENATORS SECOND

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

There's no doubt Lieut.-Col. Larry Macphail is a busy man these days down there in the war department, but he must take time out every once in a while to have a chuckle over what the Dodgers are doing. Or, rather, what they're not doing, at the moment.

And it becomes more and more obvious that it was laughing Larry's system of building which made a pennant winner, or a reasonable facsimile thereof out of the Bums.

And now that laughing Larry's B.B.P. (Brooklyn Building Program) is out, the Flatbush follies show distinct signs of coming apart at the seams. The Dodgers are nose-diving along on a losing streak that reached seven games last night when they were handcuffed around 7-4 by the Cardinals as Mort Cooper chalked up his 15th win.

Laughing Larry operated on the system that you have to spend money to put together a winner, and the Brooklyn Club paid off a lot of its I.O.U.'s. But in spite of this, Macphail's free and easy way of getting rid of money in exchange for expensive playing talent didn't sit too well with the stockholders. And last summer, he was practically invited to hand over the keys to the safe.

Saving is Not Helping

Branch the reverend Rickey was brought in, and his methods of saving a buck here and two bits there just aren't getting Brooklyn anywhere near front and centre in the National League. He's already sliced pitchers Bobo Newsom and Johnny Allen, who won 14 and lost five between them this summer, off the payroll.

And pitching, especially, is what the Bums need "mostest of the bestest." Last night Max Macon lasted just long enough to stake the Cards to a five-run first inning. That stretched St. Louis' National League lead to 11 full games over Pittsburgh Pirates, who dropped a 6-1 decision to Boston, because Nate Andrews was very warm for August and served up a five-hitter.

Over in the American League, Washington Senators, still doing it with mirrors, belted the sagging St. Louis Browns twice, 7-4 and 3-0 and moved back to second place. Milo Candini got back into the winner's circle, with a four-hitter in the night's nightcap.

Blanked in Opener

The pace-setting Yankees had a three-hitter thrown at them by Virgil (Fire) Trucks and Roy Henshaw, and were blanked 4-0 by Detroit in the opener of a twin bill. But they came back with a 16-hit spree, including homers Nos. 16 and 17 by Charley Keller, to take the nightcap, 12-4.

The New York Giants lasted for a 5-3 verdict over Cincinnati Reds in a tussle that saw pitcher Elmer Riddle's record string of error-less fielding come to an end after 102 games over a four-year stretch. In Boston, Ken Keltner got word his wife had presented him with a seven-pound son. By way of celebration he presented Cleveland Indians with a pair of homers that paved the way for an 11-9 win over the Red Sox. Both Chicago and Philadelphia teams were idle.

MR. PICOBAC TAKES OFF HIS HAT

Mr. Picobac came in from hoeing potatoes in his Victory garden dripping with perspiration.

"Mother," said he, mopping his brow, "I take off my hat."

"I don't see any hat," smiled Mrs. Picobac.

"I'm thinking of all those boys and girls who left their homes and schools to help the farmers," said Mr. Picobac. "They deserve the thanks of the country."

"Especially this weather," agreed Mrs. Picobac heartily. "God bless them."

From his hip pocket Mr. Picobac extracted a pouch of the most popular pipe tobacco in all Canada, with the evident intention of relaxing from war-work long enough to inaugurate a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke.

"Canada's future will be in safe hands," declared he confidently. "Canada's youth is good stuff."

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLES EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Frankie Eddolls' decision to give up lacrosse in order to spare his injured knee for hockey was smart. Eddolls is one of Canada's outstanding puck prospects but a trick knee has ended many careers in sport and Frankie was wise to recognize that his future lies in hockey. When he joined the R.C.A.F. the former Montreal and Oshawa junior star was just entering on a major league puck career. After the war he'll return to the N.H.L. unless that bad knee catches up with him. Athletes sidelined by trick knees in their prime are too numerous to mention. One such was Jack Cranston, Regina hockey and football star. He helped Regina Pats win western junior grid titles in 1925 and '26. In 1925 he was a great defenceman with Pats' national junior hockey champions. From that team Johnny Gottselig, Ken Doraty, Frank Ingram, Syl Acaster, Ike Morrison and Stan Fuller moved into professional company. Cranston's bad knee forced him out of sport the next year although some experts regarded him as possibly the best prospect of the lot.

Predictions, Unlimited:

Dave Dryburgh of the Regina Leader-Post predicts the N.H.L. and Canadian Amateur Hockey chiefs will adopt the proposed two-zone rules for next winter because "anything new in the way of rules is likely to detract attention from manpower weaknesses." The rule would permit a defending team to pass outside to centre ice instead of the nearest blueline as at present. The expected result would be fewer ganging plays.

Incidentally:

Coach Hugh O'Leary of the Port Arthur Bearcats says it is unlikely there will be senior hockey at the lakehead next winter or, if any, it will be confined to the services.... Jack Taggart, a spare man with Winnipeg Rangers Canadian junior puck champions last winter, has moved to Oshawa Generals for the next campaign....Sport fans in Moncton, N.B., are chuckling over the attempt Martin (Blimp) Levy made to get into the army. The 625-pound wrestler started a reducing diet and dropped 150 pounds. Then he consulted a doctor who told him that in two years he would be lean enough to undergo an operation. Blimp returned to his eating.

Leafs Shutout in First Game 2-0, But Win Second by 8-5

NEWARK BEATEN

(By The Associated Press)

Now that all his crops have been harvested, Russ Derry, home run hitting outfielder of last season with Newark in the International League, has been given permission by his draft board to complete the season with the Bears.

Derry had been "frozen" to his farm.

The farmer-athlete clouted 22 homers in 1942 and Manager Bill Meyer is eager to have the left-handed hitting gardener back in the lineup because the Bears' hitting has not been up to par.

Al Sherer, of Montreal, had a no-hitter for six innings as he checked the second-place Bears yesterday but Dick Korte spoiled his bid by opening the seventh with a home run. Ed Levy got a single in the same frame but Montreal won, 2-1.

The nightcap was entirely different, Newark bashing out eight blows—including a pair of homers by Levy and Frank Silvanic—in building its 7-1 victory.

The first-place Toronto Maple Leafs also were forced to split a twin bill, their third double attraction in three days. Nick Carter hurled Syracuse to a 2-0 decision in the opener but a three-run outburst in the first frame and a bevy of four tallies in the fourth gave Toronto the nightcap, 8-5.

Buffalo had easy going while trimming Baltimore, 6-1, and Rochester took its second straight from Jersey City, 8-2.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Toronto.— (CP) — Among the league-leading Leafs, Frank Colman, who hails from London, Ont., and Lee Gamble, formerly Birmingham, both fairly new to the club's roster, are the leading hitsmiths. Colman has collected 11 safeties in 28 times up for .393 while Gamble is hitting .301.

Jacksonville, Fla. (AP) — Once rated the world's ninth heavyweight contender, Bud Scott, 184, of Tampa, slugged Jim Bowden, 188, to the floor in the fourth stanza of a scheduled 10-round go. Bowden is a worker in the local shipyards.

Chicago, (CP)—With the Chicago Cubs for 10 years, hurling them to the National League Pennant in 1938, Bill Lee has been traded to the Phillies for Catcher Thomas Livingston. So far this season, he had won only three out of ten starts.

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—It's good to be able to tell cricket fans that the game's No. 1 box office attraction, Dennis Compton, is in rare form, despite a recent operation for varicose veins.

He played for Army against the R. A. F. at Lords and treated a crowd of 21,000 to a display of all his best strokes, good for 83 hits, and ran nearly all the 159 runs scored in his two hours' stay at the wicket.

Compton played with his legs padded with cotton wool and adhesive tape but it didn't seem to slow him up appreciably. His team declared at 294 for six wickets and when stumps were drawn the R. A. F. had lost seven wickets for 189.

Sydney Wooderson raced a mile in 4:17.4 at London's White City track and won his race handily. Two hours later he was running again but he was 15 miles away and travelling a three-quarter mile stretch in 3:12 after a fast dash by automobile and train from White City.

A sales agency for Eire greyhounds, formed with the sanction of the Irish Coursing Club, hopes to extend the export trade to Canada, the United States and France. Its first objective will be an attempt to improve Irish-bred stock. Then it will go after the export business.

There's talk about in Britain that steeplechasing, banned last winter for the first time since the war began, may be revived during the coming season. It is dependent on the transport situation, the ban having been made effective as a means of cutting down pleasure travel at a time when the nation's railways were concentrated on movement of troops and supplies for the invasion forces.

Age didn't mean much in the war's longest horse race at Windsor when the oldest horse entered, eight-year-old Bo-Tree pounded home a head in the lead in the two mile 4 1-2 furlong Windsor Stakes. Bo-Tree paid off at 11-2. On this program little Tommy Carey rode three winners to set himself three behind Gordon Richards, Britain's champion jockey. Gordon had 30 wins.

A Western Canada armored reconnaissance regiment swept to the championship of a Canadian Armored Division tabloid sport meet by a margin of 21 points over the second-place armored regiment team made up mostly of Montreal athletes.

Compiling a total of 147 points in various running and jumping competitions, the winning team included Tprs. W. R. Smith of Clandeboye, Man.; A. Dutka of Commerce, Sask.; and J. Main of Carstairs, Alta.; Cpl. F. B. Mean of Edmonton and D. A. Griffin of Nelson, B. C. Runners-up included Gdsm. C. H. Watson of Cornwall, Ont., and Gdsm J. Jones, C. England, T. Grandille, J. Mooney, R. O. Vantassil, all of Montreal.

Virgil Trucks and Roy Henshaw, Tigers, and Charley Keller, Yankees—Trucks and Henshaw combined on three-hit shutout to take doubleheader opener 4-0; Keller clouted two homers and single, driving in five runs, in 12-4 nightcap.

Nate Andrews, Braves — Handcuffed Pirates with five hits for 6-1 win.

Johnny Rucker, Giants— drove in two runs with pair of singles in 5-3 decision over Reds.

Stan Spence and Milo Candini, Senators — Spence collected four hits, knocked in three runs, in 7-4 opener victory over Browns; Candini tossed four-hitter for 3-0 Whitewash triumph in nightcap.

Walker Cooper, Cardinals—drove in two runs and scored one in 7-4 victory over Dodgers.

U.S. Navy Refuses Request To Allow Pep to Meet Callura

By the Canadian Press

Jackie Callura of Hamilton, recognised featherweight champion of the world, came between cross-fire last night in rulings from two entirely different quarters — the National Boxing Association on the one hand and the U. S. Navy on the other.

The N. B. A. announced that, for the duration, its civilian champions would have to fight logical contenders at least once every three months—or else. Callura, along with Manuel Ortiz, bantamweight titleholder, and Little Dado, flyweight king, were specifically named as affected by the ruling. Association crown-wearers in the Armed Forces were excluded because their titles are "frozen"—they included Sgt. Joe Louis, light heavyweight Gus Lesnevich, middleweight Tony Zale and welterweight Freddie Cochrane.

The ink of this edict had barely dried when word came out of Hartford, Conn., that the U. S. Navy had refused the request of President Abe Greene of the N. B. A for permission to Willie Pep, now in the U. S. Naval Forces, to meet Callura in a title bout to clean up the featherweight situation. Pep is recognized by the N. Y. commission as the champ and Callura gets the nod most elsewhere. So Hamilton Jackie has got to fight—and, in the same evening, he discovers he can't fight on account of a big Navy.

One of the first of American-born hockeyists to attain a high name in National Hockey League circles, Frankie Brimsek, starry goalkeeper of the Boston Bruins, has joined the U. S. Armed Forces. Brimsek, who hails from Eveleth, Minn., was yesterday inducted into the U. S. Coast Guard at Curtis Bay, Md.

Pitcher Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds yesterday made the first error of his Major League career, dating back to 1939 when, after 101 games, made a fumble and a poor throw to second in the third innings of the title with the Giants at Cincinnati. The previous record of errorless ball was 88 games chalked up by Ted Lyons with the White Sox from Aug. 11, 1934, to June 12, 1938.

Kingston Ponies have been drawn to play Hamilton co-ops while London Army will clash with Halifax Navy in the first round of the National Baseball Congress tournament to be played at Hamilton Thursday night. The semi-finals Friday at Hamilton will include Toronto Tip Tops and Montreal R. C. A. F.

Out of action for seven months because of leg trouble, Alsab, owned by Mrs. Albert Sabath of Chicago, will make his bid for a comeback this Saturday in the $10,000 Chicago handicap, a six-furlong sprint, at Washington Park.

Carter Hanover, son of the great volo, won the pacing event in straight heats in Tuesday's harness card at old Orchard Beach, Me., before rain broke up the meeting. Yankee Maid and Red Tower each won a dash in the $5,000 stake for two-year-olds and these two horses alone will fight it out for the deciding heat today under the rules.

Former world's Middleweight Boxing Champion, Fred Apostoli of San Francisco has earned brackets as a gun crew captain aboard a U. S. warship in the South West Pacific for the past 11 months and is being touted as the successor to Sgt. Barney Ross of the Marines for the unofficial award of "man of the year in boxing."

Because he did not "scram" when ordered to leave the dugout by Umpire Lou Jorda in Monday night's Boston-Pittsburgh game, Pitcher Rip Sewell of the Pirates was fined $50 yesterday by President Ford C. Frick of the National League. When Sewell squawked about the fine before yesterday's game at Pittsburgh, he was ordered out again.

Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Maybe you don't know about Yarborough; Lord Yarborough to you. His ludship was some sort of a sugar daddy. He paid for holding hands. But he was no sucker. Not that baby. And he was a good sport.

He could have hung out a shingle that said: "I'll listen to any bridge hand for a buck and a half; or three for five. Tales of woe, including crying towel, two bits, extra."

But that would not have made our benign nobleman noble. So he broadcast a pip. He announced: "I'll bet 1000 to one that you are unable to deal yourself a hand with no card higher than a nine."

People thought he was a sap. But he was crazy like a fox. If every player took him up, he would have cleaned up by now. At a penny a hand, he could have made more than the Bank of England.

He was banking on the law of averages and had about a two to one edge. The chances are about one in 1,800 times. To be exact, only once in 1,827 deals could you get a hand with not an honor in it.

Lord Yarborough lived many generations ago. That was when they played whist, the granddaddy of bridge. But we still call a hand a yarborough if it has no card as high as a ten.

Some call a bust a yarborough. They are mistaken. A bust is a trickless hand that may have one or more honors. A yarborough is a bust hand without an honor card in it.

Listening to the wails of some players, you might think most of their hands were yarboroughs. What they are hollering about are the bust hands. The key to the yarborough crying room is usually idle.

I have played a lot of bridge in my day. The lowest hand I ever held contained no card higher than a seven. I have never seen a hand dealt with no card higher than a six. Have you?

It can happen, of course, that a hand may be dealt with no card higher than a five. But I never expect to see it. The chances against it are 635,013,599,599 to one.

Don't start counting the different combinations you can get from one pack of bridge cards. It would take you several million years, three hours, sixteen minutes. With no time out for lunch.

Take a look at these two hands:

WEST
♠ 6 5 3 2
♥ 7 3
♦ 8 6 5
♣ 9 8 6 4

EAST
♠ 8 7 4
♥ 9 5 4
♣ 10 5 3 2

The west hand is a yarborough. It contains no card higher than a nine. The east hand is a bust; not a yarborough. It contains at least one card higher than a nine even though it has no tricks.

There is such a thing as one player getting a run of poor hands for quite a stretch. And some players are unusually lucky in holding good hands for a long time.

We get some hands we like, I guess. And some that drive us nertz. But all in all, you must confess we get our just deserts.

LESSON NO. 135

A bridge player living near Umpqua kept partners of his up a stumpqua. Whenever he bid, he guessed what he did. That guy was a terrible chumpqua.

Don't guess what your correct bid should be. That's unnecessary. Two simple rules tell you exactly what to do. With them, your bid is always right.

One of the two rules is: All bids follow the order of preference in T-A-N takeout, assist, no-trump. The other is: Each raise consumes another trick.

You have this hand:

♠ Q 3
♥ A K Q 9 5
♣ 8 6 5

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. Among other things, your hand contains six tricks; Two aces, a king, two queens, and a short card in spades. And your heart suit is rebiddable.

An opening bid of one consumes only five tricks. So you have one unconsumed trick. To show that unused trick, you may raise once in a later round of bidding, if necessary.

Suppose your partner responds with one spade. Following T-A-N, you first look for a takeout. You have no takeout to a new suit. But you have a takeout to your rebiddable heart suit.

Your second round bid in this spot is two hearts. Over partner's bid of one spade, your two heart bid is a raise of one. That consumes your sixth trick.

Instead of one spade, suppose partner had responded with two clubs or two diamonds. In that case, your heart suit bid would be correct even if you had only five tricks. Because that would not be a raise.

Suppose you had only five tricks and that rebiddable heart suit. Over one spade, do I mean you should refrain from bidding two hearts? Of course, sure. Certainly. Absolutely. Positively.

With only five tricks, don't say you have six.

In father's day Jack London was the most exciting author and his stories still crop up on the screens. Now a Hollywood studio will make a film about the life of Jack London. . . . Hollywood films are very popular in Soviet Russia, the current favorites being "In Old Chicago," "The Three Musketeers" and "The Great Waltz." . . . Movie shows in public parks are planned by the Recreation for War Workers Conference. . . . Those National Film Board shorts, which we see as the Canada Carries On series, were shown in 96 territories throughout the world last year. Special films are made here for showing in Mexico and South America so that Latin Americans will learn about Canada.

You may have seen Peter van Eyck as the young Nazi officer in "The Moon Is Down" and "Five Graves to Cairo." Van Eyck comes from a long line of German officers but was disgraced when he insisted on becoming a musician. He came to the United States in 1932 and worked a bit as a songwriter and in musical comedy. His wife is Ruth Ford and when she got a Hollywood contract he followed her. Things didn't turn out so well, so after the baby came he took a job as a truck driver. Now things are going well. A couple of weeks ago he became an American citizen. Right now he's an air raid warden and takes care of a good-sized victory garden. . . . Only Turkish actor in films is Turhan Bey, seen in "White Savage" and "Arabian Nights." His father was a Turk, his mother a Czech. He was born in Vienna.

In Kansas a lady, on being refused admittance to a movie house because of her dog, snarled these words at the manager: "Don't apologize. I wouldn't be surprised if my dog's social standing is higher than yours!" . . . In North Bay they just celebrated the 35th anniversary of the Royal Theatre, which was founded as an opera house by well-off miners. In those days the roads were mud but the citizens decided that man does not live by bread alone and kicked in part of their poke. Admission cost five dollars. . . . It's also the 20th anniversary of Hollywood's famed Brown Derby restaurant, where the waitresses wear short starched skirts that reach out like parasols and the tourists, at lunch time, are herded off to one side until film folk are all seated. It's okay with the tourists, there for peeping purposes.

Metal being mighty hard to get today, treasure chests of coins, when shown in Technicolor, are usually gilded bottle tops. . . . Eleanor Powell, whose films are terrific attractions in England, is a realist when it comes to romance. She's engaged to Quebec-born Sergeant Glenn Ford of the U.S. Marine Corps. Eleanor saw Ford somewhere and, smitten right off, engineered an introduction. . . . RKO studios successfully screen-tested Thelma Edelfsen, then offered her a juicy contract. But Thelma, a rivet inspector in a plane plant, told them nothing doing until the war was won. "I'd feel like a quitter," she said.

AT THE BELLE

Academy Award winner Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon are now on the Belle Theatre screen in "Blossoms in the Dust," predicted in Technicolor. M.G.M.'s "The Great Waltz," a spectacular romantic musical gem, is the added feature attraction.

Picton and District

Ivan Johnson Has Been Wounded in Sicily

Picton, (Special.)—Acting Lance Corporal Ivan Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, the Outlet, has been wounded in Sicily, but a second telegram advises that he is progressing.

The first message, received Saturday from the Director of Records, Ottawa, read: "Sincerely regret to inform you, Acting Lance Corporal George Ivan Johnson, officially reported wounded in action. Date not known. Reported on 21st July 1943. Dangerously ill as result of penetrating wound of skull".

The second message received Monday, read: "Pleased to inform you C6401 A/L/Cpl. G. Ivan Johnson now officially reported progressing favorably. Moved from dangerously ill list to seriously ill list. Twenty-second July, 1943. Further information follows when received".

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have another son, Arthur, with Hastings and Prince Edward Rgt. overseas. A letter from him was received last week, coming by the new trans-Atlantic air service operated by the T.C.A. It was stated he was still in England. Another brother, Carman, is with 32 Provost Corps, and has completed his training in Canada.

To Resume Shipments Soon.

High water conditions in the Bay of Quinte have made shipping from Picton harbor impossible since June 1st. As a result of improvements made at the C.S.L. warehouse, it will be possible for the company to receive freight after 15th and to resume shipping.

During the high water period, the floor of the warehouse, including the office, has been flooded. This has been overcome by building a new floor of re-inforced concrete, which is now sixteen inches above water level. The Richardson Construction Co., Toronto, is proceeding with the work which will be completed about August 12. This will eliminate all danger of flooding in future. Freighters will be loaded by special platforms over the flooded dock.

Another feature is the installation of electric conveyers to handle freight. These will speed up loading by 75 per cent, and help overcome the problem of manpower.

70 Proxies Received

Only seventy proxies were returned in Prince Edward County. The courts closed Tuesday. There were at least 900 eligible active service voters.

U.S. Infantrymen Hack Their Way To Edge of Drome

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 4. (AP)—United States infantrymen have hacked their way out of the jungle through nests of fierce-fighting Japanese to the eastern edge of the Munda air strip but the main enemy defence line and much battling still lie ahead. The air strip runs east and west.

A spokesman for Allied headquarters, in announcing today the slowly continuing envelopment of that key enemy base on New Georgia Island and in the Central Solomons, emphasized that the Japanese resistance is stiffening rather than crumbling despite the poundings the defenders have taken for more than a month.

The Japanese are dug in, manning machine guns in coral caves and log bunkers, from Kekele village on the waterfront to the foot of Bibolo Hill, in that sector where the American stand nearest their objective.

The whole jungle battle line continues to inch ahead, today's communique reporting the occupation of the northeastern slopes of Bibolo Hill.

Another core of Japanese resistance on New Georgia at Bairoko Harbor, 12 miles north Munda, was given a pounding by heavy and medium bombers.

The big news from the western hinge of the Pacific offensive, where Australian and American jungle fighters are within artillery shelling distance of Salamaua, New Guinea, was the aerial destruction within the past ten days of nearly 200 Japanese barges.

Today's communique said that the barges included many of the large troop-carrying type and the loss of life must have been considerable.

Moans and Groans Sweet Music To Ears of Dykes

Chicago, Aug. 4. (AP) —If it's company that misery loves, Luke Appling, that veteran of aches and pains, now has it in none other than Wally Moses, his Chicago White Sox teammate.

The moans and groans of these two American League campaigners are becoming sweet music to Manager Jimmy Dykes although he peeks at the records occasionally—just to assure himself his eyes and ears aren't playing him tricks.

That the 34-year-old Appling, for all his self pronounced ailments, has taken over the league leadership in batting with .331;

That Moses, going on 32 and in his ninth year in the majors, has suddenly become the big league's base-stealing sensation, with a total of 33.

Moses, troubled recently by aching legs, told Dykes before Sunday's double header at Philadelphia, "my leg hurts, Jim, and I'm not feeling very good. Guess I won't try running today".

AT THE McCARTHY

"Crime Doctor"

Columbia's "Crime Doctor", the mystery thriller starring Warner Baxter which opens next at the McCarthy theatre is the first picture to be based on Max Marcin's popular radio drama series. For over three years now "Crime Doctor", as an air show, has an eager listening audience of millions every Sunday night at 8.30.

Produced by Ralph Cohn and directed by Michael Gordon, "Crime Doctor" establishes Warner Baxter in the title role as Dr. Ordway, the amazing man who becomes a brilliant psychiatrist, while he is a victim of amnesia. Lovely Margaret Lindsay plays opposite Baxter in the role of a social worker who is of inestimable value to Dr. Ordway in his work of rehabilitating criminals and with whom he falls in love eventually. The supporting cast includes John Litel, Ray Collins, Harold Huger, Don Costello and Leon Ames.

The physical aspects of the picture were produced with particular attention to detail and authenticity. A hospital, a hotel and a penitentiary provide the backgrounds for the most dramatic portions of the film and these backgrounds were built on the Columbia studio lot in realistic fashion each institution, apparently, being completely equipped for full and competent operation.

The story elements received just as lavish care. Experts in the fields of criminology, medicine, psychiatry, social work and prison management were engaged so that the dialogue and acting would be in perfect harmony with the plot idea.

In addition, Warner Baxter spent some time before production consulting some of the country's leading neuropsychiatrists now on duty at the Letterman General Hospital in San Francisco.

As he portrays a victim of amnesia, he wanted to assure himself of a thoroughly believable interpretation.

And Margaret Lindsay was equally conscientious in preparing for her role. She spent two weeks' with members of American Red Cross, during which time she learned to participate in actual case work.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Meanest Man In The World"

When they say he's "The Meanest Man in the World," they seem to forget that he absolutely refused to:

Throw a rock through an orphan asylum; trip a blind man; spread roofing nails across the emergency driveway of a hospital; drop a slug in a church collection box; and tie two cats together by their tails.

Yet, they label him "The Meanest Man in the World" in the hilarious comedy opening next at the Capitol theatre, just because he happens to evict an elderly lady from her tenement flat; steal peanuts from pigeons; and snatch an irresistible lollypop from a child.

What's wrong with people? Don't they know a man has to be hard to get ahead in this world? Well, anyway, Jack Benny does. That's why he's so uproarious in the title role of the comedy co-starring Priscilla Lane, and featuring Rochester, Edmund Gwenn, Anne Revere and Helene Reynolds.

"Texas to Bataan"

There's new and novel entertainment for the crowds who follow the thrilling adventures of The Range Busters when they see the newest of these Monogram action features, "Texas to Battan," which is booked as the added hit at the Capitol theatre.

Introducing a new member of the trio of Range Busters, producer Geo. W. Weeks has secured Dave Sharpe, one of the best of movieland's hard-ridin' hard-fightin' action stars.

In their new adventure the Range Busters safely deliver a boatload of horses to the U. S. Cavalry in the Philippines, and it is this portion of the plot which brings elements of novelty and surprise to set this story head and shoulders above the conventional type of western story plot.

AT THE BELLE

"Blossoms in the Dust"

The greatest double-feature show ever in Belleville, starts at the Belle Theatre, today, where Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon are co-starred in "Blossoms in the Dust", a Metro Goldwyn Mayer Feature attraction produced in Rainbow Technicolor. Here is a picture that'll give you ninety minutes of real enjoyment. Come share the colorful romance of a colorful woman.

"The Great Waltz" Outstanding

The truly great musical treasure of the screen, Metro Goldwyn Mayer's, "The Great Waltz", starring Academy Award Winner Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Militza Korjus, the singing sensation, are appearing in the second feature attraction on the same program. The Belleville favorite Woo-Hoo Hughie Herbert, and Lionel Atwill are seen in prominent roles in the picture.

With such an excellent program of screen entertainment arranged for Belleville and vicinity screen fans, no doubt the Belle Theatre will be favored with large patronage.

CHAPTER 26

Crossing the room to her night table she thought, it isn't Clare. It's too late for Clare, too late for her to do or say anything now. In an hour Erica and Toby will be married. It's probably Adele wanting to know why I haven't called her.

But it was Clare who asked with a voice as sharp as jagged ice, "Is Toby there?"

"Yes, Clare, he is. But he's—he's getting dressed. May I have him call you?" In a little more than an hour Erica and Toby would be on their way. In a little more than an hour. . .

"I want to speak to him now. You know perfectly well he won't call me back when he's being married at eleven o'clock this morning. I want to speak to him now."

Her mother, Meegan thought. Her mother who had never been able to keep pleasant news had told someone and someone had told Clare.

"I'll call him."

But when she looked up, Toby was standing in the room. He was dressed for his wedding in a new blue suit.

Frowning, he asked, "Clare?"

She nodded. "Shall I leave, Toby?"

"Thanks."

She stepped out and walked down the hall, making no attempt to eavesdrop, her optimism dropping from her with each step, anger replacing it. And because her anger would not permit her to stand motionless looking down at the placid water she walked down the hall again and met Toby as he came out of her room. His face told her nothing.

"I'm out of cigarettes," he said. "I'm going down to the club to get some. Won't be a minute. You look very elegant."

She nodded. He was going to see Clare. An hour before his wedding he was going to see Clare. . .

He walked past her. Then he turned and said, "I wish you'd stop in and see Clare some time in the next few days."

"Why?"

"Oh, you might find out a few things for yourself, that's all. I wish you would. I'd appreciate it."

He turned and left her and she went into her room and finished her dressing and waited for him to come back. She would not have been at all surprised if he never came back, she thought. The next moment she wondered if he came back and married Erica, if she, Meegan could force herself to call on Clare.

She went downstairs seeing that her mother, pretty and young looking in a beige costume, her face becomingly tinted, had casually picked up her knitting.

"Toby didn't have any cigarettes," Elinor McLean said. "I suppose he was nervous. But I do hope he won't be delayed. Dreadful if he kept her waiting at the church. Your dress is lovely, darling. And practical. You'll be able to wear it all winter. I could have mine dyed. I heard of a man who is splendid at that. Oh, dear, I'm nervous, too. I hope I won't cry. Toby would despise me if I did. I knew this day would come. Your father and I used to talk about it when he thought I was too possessive. And Erica is a sweet girl with so much common sense. Her family is odd but I suppose I think that because I've always known the same people. I suppose I'm horribly out-of-date but I won't make any apologies to anyone because Erica didn't have a proper debut. The times are changing so. Oh, I do wish he would come."

Meegan walked to the window and parted the curtains. She felt as one does following a bad fright or a costly mistake or a long illness . . weak and trembling. The road was clear. No sign of a car.

Her mother said, "I think that as soon as we get back to town we should put the house in the hands of an agent again. Of course we'll always visit down here. I can always stay with my friends and you with yours or at the club. I was talking to Fred the other evening and he said he thought this was quite a good time to put the house on the market. If and when we get actively into the war, he said, people will be so involved in that and higher taxes they won't want to take on the responsibility of a country house. I've reconciled myself to parting with it. Temporarily of course. I'm sure that in a few years either you or Toby will buy it back for me and we'll all be together again for the summers."

Her mother asked, "Isn't that a car coming now?"

"Probably he saw someone and stopped to talk."

Meegan thought, you saw someone and stopped to talk and said that Toby was being married today. Oh, why did you?

Her mother said, "It's amazing how much one accomplishes in knitting just by picking it up a few minutes at a time. I shall be able to do a great deal of it this winter. I really must join one of the organizations and do some work. And if we sell the house we'll put the money in defence bonds. I remember in the last war we bought so many bonds. Your father wouldn't want me to do less in this one. Oh, dear, I've made a mistake, I'll have to rip this out. . . Talking too much and nervous. Aren't you nervous, dear?"

"Yes, a little. A little."

"I do wish he'd come. You should have gone for his cigarettes. Toby has so little sense about time. I wonder how Erica will look. I suppose she was being sensible again when she decided to wear a street costume. I hope you'll be married in the conventional white, dear. My wedding dress. it's like new. . .I won't rip this out now, I'm too nervous. We'll have two weeks of rest before we go back to town and I think you should give up your little job with the children and just rest and play. You've been so faithful about the recreation of those children."

If Toby did not come back, Meegan thought, she could see herself walking down to the church and seeing Erica and telling her that Toby had left and had not come back and was never coming back. She could see Erica's slight body stiffen as understanding came quickly to her, understanding and hate and hurt. There had been so much hate this summer in people capable of generous love. She could see Helen's open face marked with surprise and Roy's quiet embarrassment. To Dr. Childs, the clergyman beloved by all, a big, handsome, silver-haired man, Toby's failure to come back would be as a blight upon his church. Then they would be quiet with the maddening quietness of people who have been shocked and hurt beyond speech, and once more Erica would belong nowhere.

Receives Airmail Letter From N. Africa

Frankford, Aug. 4 (Special)—On Friday, July 30th Mrs. Jack Ireland, of Frankford received an airmail letter from her husband from North Africa. The letter written on the 13th told of how some members of the regiment were chosen for active service overseas. At the time of writing h was only a few hundred miles from what is now the scene of the invasion in Sicily.

He said that the natives speak French and that franc notes are used instead of the pounds used in England. A thousand franc note measuring about a foot long by eight inches wide is worth about $5.00 in our money.

Pte. Ireland is the first Frankford man known to be in the Mediterranean action.

MEDAL AWARDED POSTHUMOUSLY

Hamilton, Aug. 3 (CP) — Governors of the Royal Canadian Humane Association today announced the gold medal of the association has been awarded posthumously to Anthony Benetti, 46 year old quarry worker of Waterdown, Ont.

Mr. Benetti drowned June 4 in an attempt to save three small Waterdown girls from drowning.

Arrangements are being made to present the medal to Mrs. Benetti and her two small children.

SERIOUSLY INURED IN PLANE CRASH

Montreal, Aug. 3—(CP— PO. W M. Wentworth, Montreal, and Sgt. M. T. Lauzon, Niagara Falls, Ont., (1050 Ontario St.) were seriously injured four miles from Stanley, N. S. last night when a plane they were testing for night flying crashed, R. C. A. F., officials said here today.

Officials said the aircraft went into a spin at 1,000 feet and crashed four miles from No. 17 E. F. T. S. where the airmen were based.

SAY FRENCHMEN TOOK WEAPONS

Berne, Aug. 3 (AP))—Fifteen Frenchmen attacked Italian frontier guards at Novel, a dispatch to the Lausanne Tribune said today. After killing one guard they seized guns, grenades and munitions and disappeared into the mountains at Sant Gingolph.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet with a hopeful expression this morning, saying to pop, William I watched you come up the street last evening in that terrible old hat of yours, and I was wondering what the naybors were thinking.

They were probably admiring its classic drape, pop said, and ma said, If you mean its gassly flop, I agree with you. If you were a great artist or a famous musician, people might take the will for the deed and excuse you as an eccentric caracter acting the part, but it's utterly rediculous for a successful business man to flaunt an unsuccessful looking think like that on his head and I want you to stop in at Bird and Linnets this very day and buy yourself a nice hat, she said.

I guess you're right, I suppose a new hat really is indicated, pop said, Well naturally for land sakes.

Sooner or later, even in the best regulated families, the time comes for a new hat, pop said, and ma said, Well it's a relief to hear you say so in so many words.

So why dont you drop in some place and treat yourself to a nice little hat or a stunning big hat or a conservative medium size hat? pop said, and ma said, Why William that's strange, I mean you echo my very thoughts, in a way. I mean I did have a new hat for myself far back in my mind, but after all it hasn't exactly been a blue moon since my last new hat, so do you mean you really wouldn't consider it an extravagance, William? she said.

I'd consider it a natural and normal phenomenon, my dear, pop said.

And he folded his paper and went and put on his old brown hat and left for his office looking like somebody feeling great.

Belleville, District Members of Forces Arrive Overseas

Quite a number of Belleville and Belleville district members of the Canadian armed forces have arrived safely overseas with recent contingents, it has been announced by Canadian Army Headquarters at Ottawa. The arrivals overseas from the Belleville district were for the most part personnel for hospital units, including nursing sisters and medical corps personnel.

Outstanding among overseas arrivals from the Belleville district was Honorary Captain John D. Houston, who has been stationed as chaplain with a General Hospital Unit of the R.C.A.M.C. Captain Houston was formerly minister at Tabernacle United Church but was granted leave of absence to enlist with the Canadian Armed forces.

Lieut. D. M. W. Wilson, of Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Wilson, 187 Foster Ave., has been posted overseas as paymaster of the hospital unit, while three nursing sisters from the district are with the unit. These are Hazel Elizabeth Genereaux, of Queensboro; Ruth Frances Peck, a native of Winnipeg, who was educated at Belleville High School. Her home address is Carrying Place and Nursing Sister Alice Potter, of Belleville.

Also on the staff of the unit which arrived overseas was Sgt. Douglas Windsor, who prior to his enlistment in 1941 was bookkeeper and customs clerk in this city. A graduate of Ontario Business College, he formerly worked as a clerk at the local A. & P. store and was also a member of the 34th Battery.

In another hospital unit to arrive overseas were Private R. R. Alexander, of Picton; Sapper E. J. MacDonald, of Belleville, Private George Murphy, of Tamworth and Corporal Gerald Shoniker, of Trenton.

District personnel of the C. W. A. S.'s was also included in the overseas draft in the person of Private Mary Fergusson, of Belleville.

$11,400 Building Permits Issued During July

A total of twenty building permits representing construction value of $11,400 were issued during July from the city engineer's office by Charles Mott, it was revealed this morning when building statistics for the month were noted. Woman Voter Demanded Car For One Block Trip

To a rabid voter, be he Liberal, Conservative or C.C.F., distance means little or nothing when election day comes along. In years gone by voters have been known to travel to the polls by horse and buggy, some have mounted horses, others have availed themselves of the son's or daughter's bicycle, then, following the invention of the automobile and this easy means of transportation to and from the polls, men and women who had never in their lives cast a vote, sallied forth and marked their "X's" on thousands of ballots never before sullied by scratch of pencil.

Increase of population and modern conveniences have boosted up the total registered vote, but the height of ease and comfort was brought to light early this morning when the telephone rang in one of the Committee Rooms and a lady peremptorily demanded to know whether her vote was wanted. Assured that hers, as well as every vote was definitely wanted, she then ordered a carriage to convey her to the place of voting. The Party Committee Room thus conditionally guaranteed at least one vote despatched a car to the lady's residence and the journey was started to exercise her democratic franchise and continued along the street to the first corner where the driver was instructed to turn to the right and stop at the third house. The chauffeur was still in a daze when the lady, having done her duty, returned to the waiting car and smilingly said she was ready to be taken home. "Make Every Vote Count" has been the slogan of each party for the last three weeks or more . . . Let's hope this one does.

Hitler's Health Reported Poor

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—A Reuters news agency dispatch from Stockholm quoted the unconfirmed report of the Berne correspondent of Nya Dagligt Allehanda today that Hitler's health is giving cause for anxiety in Germany.

The correspondent wrote to the Swedish newspaper that Heinrich Himmler, head of German police, "asked Hitler's physicians to give a true report, which was 'very bad;' the fuehrer often appears apathetic and depressed."

The correspondent added that "in Germany discussions about an eventual successor already have begun."

Duce's Henchmen Shedding Fascist Faith in a Hurry

(By DON WHITEHEAD)
Associated Press War Correspondent.

Nicosia, Sicily, Aug. 1. (Delayed) (AP)— Mussolini's erstwhile henchmen are shedding their Fascist faith in a hurry these days.

The men and women, who once were party stalwarts have found they do not care for Fascism since the arrival of the Allies—or, at least, they profess as much.

There was an interesting little ceremony in Nicosia today when 23 known Fascist leaders trooped into a large room to hear a talk by an American army official. Their eyes shifted in unison with every move the speaker made and most of them were nodding their heads in agreement before he finished his sentences.

He told them they were known Fascist leaders and as such were suspects.

"We have come here to liberate Italy and Sicily from the Fascists", he told them, adding that they were being put under technical arrest and surveillance and that if any of them were found engaged in Fascist activities they would be dealt with summarily.

When the official finished speaking a paunchy, white-haired man stepped forward and said passionately: "For the most part we were forced to be Fascists to earn a living. We are not of the real Fascist element".

He swore "by all that is holy and sacred" that those present would be strong for the principles of liberty and do all they could to wreck Fascism.

His speech brought cheers, and the meeting broke up with everyone shaking hands with everyone else.

Adm. de Courten And Gen. Sandalli New Chiefs of Staff

New York, Aug. 4 —(AP)—Rear Admiral Raffaele de Courten and Gen. Renato Sandalli, navy and air ministers, respectively, in the government of Marshal Pietro Badoglio, have also been given the duties of chief of the naval staff and chief of the staff of the air force, the Stefani News Agency said today.

The announcement was broadcast by the Rome radio and recorded by the Associated Press.

Set 2 Nazi Ships Afire From Height Of Only 20 Feet

London, Aug. 4 —(CP)—R.A.F. intruder planes carried out their usual forays over the continent Tuesday night but Britain's heavy bombers took a rest after having been in almost continuous action for the past two weeks against Hamburg and other objectives in Germany.

The sound of large numbers of planes over the Channel during the night had led to a belief that the bombers were again out.

The Air Ministry News Service announced that Typhoons set a supply ship and one of seven escorting vessels ablaze in a low-level attack on an enemy convoy off LeHavre, France, yesterday. One plane was lost in the attack which was carried out at a height of only 20 feet.

20,000 Aircraft Workers Affected

Montreal, Aug. 4 (CP)—A strike affecting 20,000 aircraft workers in Montreal entered its second day today without any indication being given as to when the workers seeking back payment of a full cost-of-living bonus, will return to work.

The workers, members of Aircraft Lodge 712, International Association of Machinists (AF.L.), were notified by the Federal Labor Department last night that discussion with Union officials, seeking settlement of the bonus question, will not be resumed until the strikers return to work.

The strikers, employees of Canadian Vickers Aircraft, Fairchild Aircraft and Noorduyn Aircraft, demand that a cost-of-living bonus of $2.75 a week, awarded effective March 23, 1943, be retroactive to June 30, 1942.

Robert Haddow and J. A. Laplante, representing the workers, conferred with the National Labor Board yesterday. The Board is believed to have restated that it had no authority to make the bonus retroactive.

150-170 Proxies Certified In West Hastings

Somewhere between 150 and 170 proxies will have been certified in the West Hastings riding by the time booths are scheduled to close this evening it was estimated today by Judge C. A. Cameron, chairman of the Electoral Board. The board for certifying proxies sat throughout the day to accommodate any which may have arrived too late for former sittings.

Of the above number of estimated proxies received from Ontario soldiers now serving outside the province, about 70 were from the city of Belleville, it was stated, with the balance being certified at various board sittings throughout the ridings on Tuesday. These were being received and checked by Judge Cameron today. Of the 70 from Belleville a few of the proxy holders were from outside the city, they having come to Belleville to have the proxies certified.

Lord Tweedsmuir Slightly Wounded

Toronto, Aug. 4 —(CP)— Major Lord Tweedsmuir, son of the late governor-general of Canada, has been slightly wounded, says Frederick Griffin, Toronto Star war correspondent, in a dispatch from somewhere in North Africa.

Griffin reports however that he will soon "be back in action with his Eastern Ontario regiment, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP) — Sizable gains were posted by industrials and base metals this afternoon on Toronto Exchange. Golds were lower.

Slightly better prices ruled for foods, steels and miscellaneous issues. Canada Packers, English Electric A and International Metals firmed a point or more. Imperial Oil gained 3-8 and Fanny Farmer 1-2.

In base metals, Noranda and Pend Oreille firmed slightly and Steep Rock was down a cent. Eldorado was active and higher by 15 cents.

Home and Calgary - Edmonton firmed a few cents and the cheaper western oils, including Vermilata, British-Dominion, Pacalta and United, were down narrowly.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—Extending the recovery of the previous session, stock market leaders today picked up additional gains of fractions to around one point with a few moving up 1 to 2 or more.

After an improved opening some sections of the list wavered briefly in the first hour on a slight bulge in selling, but offerings generally were well absorbed and near the fourth hour the list was steady at its advanced levels.

Volume was less than in recent days of active selling. Analysts suggested the market had undergone a healthy corrective in the last weeks steep decline, but some thought there was danger of a secondary reaction.

Bonds and commodities showed narrow changes.

Among Canadian issues Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore were up 1-4 while Hiram Walker dropped 1-4. Dome Mines was unchanged.

tory were American Telephone,

Among stocks in higher territ-American Can. Dow Chemical, Montgomery Ward, U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Goodyear, Western Union, Texas Co., Chesapeake & Ohio and Northern Pacific.

Germany Is Lost Moans Nazi Captive to Yanks

By HAROLD V. BOYLE

With the American 7th Army on Bloody Ridge, Sicily, July 30 (Delayed) (AP).—It is a rare thing to see a German cry.

But there was no doubt about it—the young Nazi soldier was blubbering like a spanked child. He stood weeping under an olive tree, and the hands he held out were red and blistered.

He got the blisters digging graves for slain German soldiers under the supervision of a group of American soldiers who captured the ridge yesterday, killing some 150 Nazis on a rocky summit in a bloody battle that gave the hill its sanguinary nickname.

"Germany is lost," moaned the German youth, who, although only 18 years old, had been in the army two years. "What have people there to live for? They work hard, and all of them have no pleasure left in life. And we lose battle after battle. It is hopeless. Mussolini and Hitler—they are to blame. They are to blame for all our troubles."

Tears and weariness, rage and despair trickled down his cheeks. Although he himself cursed Hitler, his attitude could not be taken as an indication of any general feeling of revolt.

In the pockets of a number of dead German soldiers were postcard portraits of Der Fuehrer. Despite his youth, the Nazi gravedigger had seen extensive action, and, like other prisoners taken on "Bloody Ridge", spoke with horror of the intensity of the two-day bombardment by American artillery.

"He told us it was three times worse than Stalingrad," said Cpl. Vernie Collins of Wagoner, Alta. "Several prisoners said the same thing. They took an awful pasting from the artillery before we polished them off with rifles, grenades and machine guns."

Besides all his other woes, the young prisoner expressed anger toward his Italian allies.

"Some of their troops began turning their guns on us just before giving up themselves, and they tried to hinder our Governments," he said.

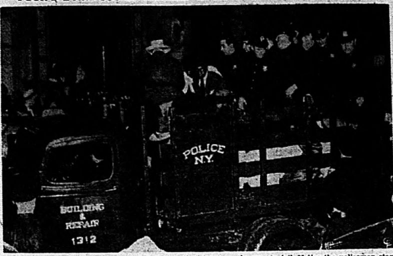
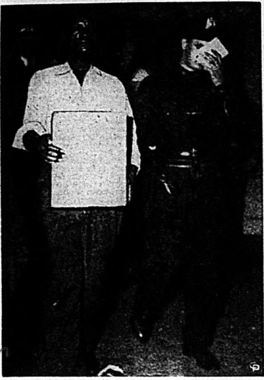
FOUR DIE AND SCORES INJURED IN SERIOUS RIOTING IN HARLEM



At least 363 Harlemites were arrested during the rioting that started in Harlem when a white policeman shot a Negro soldier. This is a loaded police truck on the way to jail. Notice the policemen standing in the rear. The Negroes under arrest are forced to sit in the forepart of the truck.



The toll was four dead and, 105 injured as rioting broke out in Harlem, New York, as the result of the shooting of a Negro soldier by a white policeman. This Harlemite was arrested as a looter during the height of the rioting. Armed forces are now patrolling the district.

Judge Annuls Forced Marriage

Los Angeles, Aug. 4. (AP)—Attractive, brunette Josephine Singleton Robertson, 26, yesterday was granted an annulment of her four-months marriage to a Seattle drug store manager, Myles Robertson, 43, whom she accused of forcing her into the union at gunpoint and holding her prisoner for ten days.

Judge Roy V. Rhoades, in granting dissolution of the marriage, said her story approximated an Arabian Nights' tale.

She said she went to Seattle last spring and obtained work in a drug store where Robertson told her she looked like the reincarnation of his wife, who had died 11 years before.

"He came to my room one morning with a gun and told me he would blow my head off if I didn't marry him at once", she told Judge Rhoades. "On Feb. 26 he went to the marriage licence bureau and I could feel the gun he had in his pocket at my side. When we returned to my room he held me a captive until five days later when we were married by a justice of the peace."

She said she was imprisoned five days more and that Robertson threw a bottle of ink in her face "so you won't ever be able to see another man".

Mrs. Robertson said she escaped when her husband became intoxicated.

British Liberals Drawing Together

(By SYDNEY GRUSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 4. (CP)—The Liberals of Britain, split into divided political camps since 1931, seemingly are drawing together again.

The leaders of the movement to cement Liberal strength under one banner are Ernest Brown and Sir Archibald Sinclair, respectively heads of the Liberal Nationals and straight Liberals who walked opposite paths in the party's stormy days of 1931 and 1932.

Now they are together again in the Coalition Government, Brown as Minister of Health and Sir Archibald as Air Secretary. And apparently with the hope of infusing a measure of the strength the party enjoyed in Britain's political affairs many years ago, Brown has held out the olive branch and Sir Archibald has taken hold of it.

To a public offer from Brown to talk over the possibilities of reunion, the Air Secretary replied at the recent Liberal party conference that "I gather that if there is agreement upon policy, Mr. Brown and his friends are willing in future to work closely together with you and me". And, he added, "I shall be very glad to talk things over with Mr. Brown".

Wrens Stealing Sailors' Thunder

An Eastern Canadian Port, Aug. 4. (CP)—There was a time when salty sailors thrilled their girl-friends with canoe rides, but it's a different story nowadays— the tables are turned.

The Wrens are stealing the sailors' thunder, says the Navy in a press release today, for it's a familiar sight along the waterfront these warm summer evenings to see winsome Wrens paddling their way along with the sailor boy-friend resting his head on the soft cushion and dangling his burly arms over the side.

The girls like it. But, what's more, so do the boys.

"It's great fun and I go every chance I get", says Switchboard Operator Gwen Parsons of Port Arthur. "I'm really not much of a paddler, though".

The War Today—
Allied Air Raids on Germany And Occupied Territory May Be Factor Precipitating Victory

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The way things now look in the European laboratory of war, the Allied bombing of Germany and occupied territory may be the agent which will precipitate victory.

This isn't to say that victory depends solely on air-power, for many elements are contributing to the Axis downfall which surely and steadily is approaching. Still, the aerial bombardment is having a terrific and perhaps decisive effect on the Germans.

Dispatches to Swiss and Swedish newspapers from their correspondents give a composite picture of a Germany which is enduring such terrors that "nobody knows how long the population will be able to endure it." The undreamed of striking-power being shown by the Allied air navies has convinced the Reich that a new phase of the war has been opened.

Effect Like 1918 Allied Naval Blockade

One Stockholm dispatch describes the bombing as having an effect similar to that of the Allied naval blockade in 1918, when the morale of the German people cracked because of hunger and other privations. That's an interesting statement, especially since the Fatherland of the First Great War collapsed without enduring the horrors of bombardment. The weight of trouble which caused the people to quit in 1918 isn't a speck on the moon to what they shortly will be getting from the cumulative effect of Allied bombing.

The bombardment serves the double purpose of destroying war resources and of so disrupting communications as to put many parts of the country on short rations.

Historic Experiment

It's only so far back as May 19 that Mr. Churchill announced to a joint session of the Senate and House in Washington that the Allies were about to undertake the historic experiment of trying to bomb Germany and Italy into impotency. That's less than three months ago—a short time to show big results in such a vast undertaking, which must depend on cumulative destruction.

Since then Allied bombers have blazed the trail for a Sicilian invasion which is forging to success. If Marshal Badoglio persists in his suicidal resistance, it's not unlikely that bombing will force the collapse of the Italian mainland even before the Allies invade it.

Boche Has Started to Yell

We have only now arrived at the time when we might expect a yell from the Boche if the experiment was going well. We finally have drawn that yell and resistance by the Nazi airforce has decreased as our devastation has multiplied.

The Allied bombing operations have been aimed at military strangulation but obviously the civilian population has had to suffer. The wholesale assault on the great port of Hamburg has made Germany realize the awfulness of the steadily growing power which has been unleashed.

One Danish consular official is quoted in Copenhagen as estimating that 200,000 people have been killed in Hamburg. It would be well to accept that figure with reserve, but the police of the ruined city are said to place the killed, wounded and missing at 30,500.

The continued assault on Hamburg has given rise to the idea that the Allies are bent on total destruction of the city, and that other metropolitan centres of military importance will follow.

ONTARIO ELECTION RESULTS IN STALEMATE
8TH ARMY CAPTURES CATANIA AND PATERNO

Pro. Conservatives Lead Parties, Drew Likely Premier

Liberals Defeated And C.C.F. Second Strongest Party Elected Wednesday

MAY BE COALITION

Party Standing

Toronto, Aug. 5. (CP)—Standing at 11 a.m., E.D.T. today in the Ontario general election:

Progressive Conservative	38
C.C.F.	34
Liberal	14
Labor	2
Independent Liberal	1
Total	90

Toronto, Aug. 5 (CP) — The Liberal administration which has ruled Ontario under three premiers since 1934 was defeated at the polls in yesterday's statemate election and today the expectation is that Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, will be called to the premiership.

The Liberals under Hon. Harry C. Nixon, 52-year-old St. George farmer were soundly trounced. In 1937, last election year, they returned 63 members; this time only 14. Seven of the 11 cabinet ministers were defeated.

While no party won a majority of the 90 seats, the Progressive Conservatives under Col. Drew had 38 sure seats and one possible — the largest single party group.

And the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, led by Edward B. Jolliffe, 34-year-old Toronto lawyer and former Rhodes Scholar, took 33 seats and was leading in one doubtful riding.

The other three seats went to former Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, running as an Independent Liberal, and to two Labor candidates.

The three leaders of the major parties won personal election to the 21st Ontario legislature since Confederation, Col. Drew to his second term, Mr. Jolliffe to his first; and Mr. Nixon to his seventh.

Picture Not Clear

Today it was generally accepted that Col. Drew will be asked by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews to form a government. From that point the political picture was not clear.

Mr. Jolliffe said in a post-election statement that "the C.C.F. cannot and will not collaborate with either of the old parties." A three-way coalition of Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and C.C.F. thus was ruled out. Some observers considered a coalition of members of the two old-line parties—or, at least, of all Progressive Conservatives and some Liberals—was a probability.

Others recalled that although the 1921 Dominion general election left the Liberals one short of a majority in the House, Prime Minister Mackenzie King was able to form a government which held office for four years. Then, for a few months after the 1925 election, Mr. King continued as Prime Minister, although there were considerably more Conservative members than Liberal at that time.

Solid C.C.F. in North

The standing after the 1937 Ontario election was: Liberals 63, Conservatives 23, Liberal-Progressive two, Independent Liberal one and United Farmer one. By dissolution last June 29 the standing had changed, with 59 Liberals, 19 Progressive Conservatives, two Liberal-Progressives and 10 seats vacant.

Particular significance seemed to be attached —therefore to the showing of the C.C.F., in its first major test in eastern Canada. It ran candidates in all but four seats and was able to elect candidates in more than one-third of the constituencies compared with one member elected in 1934 and none in 1937.

An almost solid block C.C.F. members was elected in Northern Ontario and the party took eight of the 17 seats in Toronto district, "Tory Toronto" until 1934 when the Liberals took eight ridings.

No Coalition Says Jolliffe

Toronto, Aug. 5 (CP) — E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, said late last night after 33 C.C.F. members were elected to the 90-members legislature that "the tremendous vote polled for the C.C.F. program is encouraging to C.C.F. supporters not only in Ontario but throughout Canada and indicates very clearly the shape of things to come."

"No party had obtained a clear majority, which is to be regretted," he said. "The C.C.F. has repeatedly pointed out that there is no important difference between the old parties and that the issues could be much better decided by the electors if there were a clear choice between Liberal-Conservative policies and those of the C.C.F."

Mr. Jolliffe added that "the C.C.F. cannot and will not collaborate with either of the old parties," thus ruling out a coalition of Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and C.C.F.

DORIOT AIDE ASSASSINATED

London, Aug. 5—(CP)— The Paris radio announced the assassination of Jean Moncurie, secretary of Jacques Doriot's Fascist French Popular Party, by three unidentified men.

The broadcast, recorded by Reuters News Agency, did not say when the assassination took place or give any details.

Doriot, his henchmen and various headquarters have been the object of frequent attacks by French patriots in the past. The political leader's secretary was killed in Paris last August by members of the French underground.

EIGHT CABINET POSSIBILITIES IF DREW PREMIER

2 EX-MINISTERS

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—Speculation at Queen's Park today centred on several names as possible cabinet choices in the likely event that Lt.-Col. George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, is called on to form a government as the leader of the largest group in the 21st Ontario Legislature.

Two are former cabinet ministers —George H. Challies of Grenville-Dundas, a former provincial secretary and Thomas Kennedy, of Peel, a former Minister of Agriculture.

The name of Mr. Challies is mentioned as a possible successor to Hon. W. L. Houck, Minister Without Portfolio in the Liberal Government and Vice-Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

Mr. Kennedy is suggested as a possible Minister of Agriculture while T. R. Dent, prominent dairy farmer and Holstein breeder who defeated Agriculture Minister Dewan in Oxford, and A. H. Acres, of Carleton are also mentioned for this portfolio.

G. H. Doucett of Lanark has been mentioned as a possible Minister of Highways, Dana Porter, of Toronto St. George as Minister of Labor, W. J. Stewart of Toronto Parkdale as Minister of Education while the name of Leslie Blackwell of Toronto Eglinton is also suggested for a portfolio.

Say Swedes Cancel Pact With Germans On Troop Transit

New York, Aug. 5. (AP)—The National Broadcasting Company quoted a dispatch today from its Stockholm correspondent, David Anderson, as saying that Sweden had cancelled an agreement with Berlin permitting German troop transit through that country.

Associated Press dispatches from Stockholm earlier in the week had reported that action of this sort appeared imminent.

Sweden has permitted the transit of German troops on leave from and to Norway, provided they carry no arms.

Appendectomy Performed on Ship While Nazi U-Boat Hovers Nearby

A British Port, Aug. 5 (CP)—The third successful sea-going appendectomy performed by a medical officer of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve has been chalked up by Surgeon-Lt. B. A. Campbell, R.C.N.V.R., of Strathroy, Ont, the Royal Canadian Navy announced today in press release

Now "doing well," the patient was Able Seaman A. H. King of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, and the operation was performed in the day-cabin—it still reeks of ether—of a Royal Navy destroyer Captain with a Nazi U-boat just close enough to make things uncomfortable.

The job involved more than the mere removal of a perky appendix. Both patient and anaethetist had to be transferred in mid-Atlantic to Surgeon-Lt. Campbell's ship but this went off smoothly with a combination of fair weather and adequate small boat work.

Just before the operation started, a report came in that a Uboat had been sighted nearby and attacked, with inconclusive results by one of the R.C.A.F.'s long-range aircraft. Naval escorts were detached to hunt for raider, while Surgeon-Lt. Campbell went to work with scalpel and suture, using the captain's dining-table as an operating table.

The destroyer then abandoned her zig-zag, reduced speed and settled on a course designed to cut the ship's motion to a minimum but which made her a slightly better target for any U-boat close enough to launch a "fish."

"Keep her as steady as you can," said the officer of the watch to the man at the wheel. "The doctor's doing a carving job down aft."

"It would have been tough in any circumstances," said Surgeon-Lt. Campbell, launching into incomprehensible technicalities to prove his statement. "I wouldn't have done it if I'd thought it safe to leave it until we got to port. These jobs aren't any fun at sea."

The Surgeon-Lt. Campbell, 29, is the son of Rev. A. C. Campbell of St. Mary's, Ont. He was educated at Western University and joined the navy in December, 1940. He has a two-weeks old daughter, Mary Lou.

REDS MOP UP STREETS OF OREL AFTER ITS FALL

Enemy Offers Stiff Resistance to Cover Retreat Through Corridor in West

24-DAY BATTLE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Red Army battled its way through the streets of Orel today, completing the occupation of the first great city to be wrested from the Germans in the summer campaign.

The Germans offered stubborn resistance, throwing tanks into bitter street fighting but the action appeared to be only a rear-guard defence rather than a serious effort to challenge the Russians for possession of the key fortified city.

Red Army infantry storming down from the hills east of Orel swept across the Oka River and were reported mopping up the enemy's rear-guards block by block.

Frontline dispatches said the Germans still were offering bitter resistance northwest and southwest of Orel in an effort to cover the retreat of the main body of their troops through the bottleneck to the west.

Bomb Enemy Lines

Soviet bombers, however, were reported blasting at the enemy's support lines and main bases behind the Orel salient, concentrating on the communications centre of Bryansk.

(The Berlin radio announced last night that Nazi forces had evacuated Orel. Describing the retreat as an "evacuation according to plan," the announcement said German forces had taken up previously-prepared positions behind the city after destroying everything of value.)

The Russians announcement that the city's inner defences had cracked after 24 days of savage fighting during which Soviet armored units, infantry and cavalry stormed them from three directions, listed vast stores and ammunition and guns as captured.

2,500 Germans Killed

More than 2,500 Germans were killed and 18 enemy tanks were knocked out as the Germans fought bitterly and even counter-attacked in desperate attempts to check the Red Army masses pouring into the city's streets, a Soviet communique said.

Orel was the hinge and key defence position of the long south-central German line extending to the sea of Azov, and its recapture will reopen vital railway lines linking the Ukraine with Moscow.

The Orel-Belgorod sector was used by the Germans as the springboard for their 1943 offensive, generally considered to be Hitler's final, desperate effort to crash through south of Moscow.

In London it was generally believed that Orel's fall would have an immediate and far-reaching effect on German morale, which has already suffered this summer from Allied victories in Sicily, the Italian crisis, and intensified Allied aerial attacks on German industrial cities.

Germany had never admitted to the homeland that the first 1943 offensive on the western front had been launched by the Nazis themselves.

British Smash Nazi Line on East Sicilian Coast

German Withdrawal Of Non-Essential Personnel Going on For Several Days

DEFENCES BLASTED

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 5 (AP)—British 8th Army troops seized Catania early today and swept around the base of Mount Etna to the northwest capturing Paterno, 10 miles away, to crumble the German line on the east coast of Sicily, headquarters announced.

Catania fell to the 8th Army at 8:30 a.m. (2:30 a.m., E.D.T.) today, after a bitter defence since July 15 and the British forces pounded ahead in a lightning advance around the base of Mount Etna.

The heart of the German defence appeared to be broken.

Paterno is 10 miles northwest of Catania, and it was assumed that Misterbianco, three miles northwest of Catania, also had been engulfed.

German withdrawal of non-essential personnel from Sicily has been in progress for the last five or six days, it was learned authoritatively.

The German defence road around Mount Etna was blasted apart by the British successes today and the next German line was expected to run from Taormina across the northeastern tip of the island to the sea coast on the northeast behind San Fratello, which already is menaced by United States Seventh Army troops.

The whole German left flank based on the heights of Mount Etna was in grave danger from the British success achieved after terrific and incessant combat since the giant Allied offensive on the entire Sicilian front began on Sunday.

Pressed back from the western edge of the Catania Plain and smothered under a furious, massed artillery barrage that continued day and night, the German line around bomb and fire-scarred Catania broke early today.

Catania was taken despite strong enemy resistance, a special communique said.

The Allied advance continued all along the front, headquarters said, as British, Canadian and United States troops drove the Germans back toward their last escape Port of Messina, 55 miles north of Catania, and tremendous aerial and sea blows were hammered home in support of the great drive.

Rain Shells on Taormina

British ships rained shells upon the Taormina road and railway midway between Catania and Messina yesterday, giving that exposed communication centre what was believed to be its heaviest bombardment yet.

American cruisers and destroyers ranging the northeast coast continued their day and night shelling of German positions ahead of the America 7th Army troops swinging rapidly along the coast beyond San Stefano.

From the air, Allied bombers and fighters swept over enemy communication centres and supply lines to disrupt the German defence. Heavy bombers again smashed at docks and submarine bases at Naples in the fourth raid in four days and the "target was well covered by bombs", an air communique reported.

The Battle of Catania ended and the Battle of Messina began, for all along the enemy's mountainous bridgehead British, Canadian and American forces plunged forward for new gains.

The enemy's line of retreat from Catania is a three-mile-wide corridor between the mountains and the sea and in that harsh, rugged strip there are a number of points where he might attempt a stand.

Catania's capture in effect turned the German flank on the East Coast and British troops surged ahead on the slopes of Mt. Etna facing the sea.

The enemy frantically planted mines and blew up bridges in attempting to stem the inexorable Allied advance.

To wipe out the Germans' grip on Catania, the 8th Army first had to break enemy control of Etna's Heights northwest of this second most important port in Sicily.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Canadian and British "left hook" hurled across the Dittaino River and smashing through Regalbuto, Centuripe and other points this week paved the way for the Catania triumph.

The epic siege of Catania began July 15 when a quick British onrush up the East Coast reached the Primsola Bridge seven miles south of the city. A daredevil assault the preceding night by British parachute troops had prevented the enemy from demolishing this vital span.

The Germans rushed at least six parachute troop battalions to the sector for use as first-line infantry and diverted a considerable portion of their armor and artillery to hold off Gen. Montgomery. But cannily and skilfully, Gen. Montgomery explored the Catania Plains for weaker points for 15 days while the general Allied offensive was prepared.

Election Night Crowds Remain Quiet And Orderly As Returns Come In

As the Polls in the city closed early Wednesday night, interested voters and non-voters alike wended their way from their homes to Front Street and the three Party Committee Rooms to hear the results of the election and watch the mounting or receding totals of votes cast for their candidate. Hundreds gathered in front of The Ontario Intelligencer and on the steps of the City Hall to hear the outcome which was broadcast over a battery of amplifiers which hummed to the tune of a steadily increasing flow of returns for both local and provincial standings.

Compared with the 1937 election last night's crowd on Front Street was silent. Not until the returns were well along were any demonstrations noticeable and then only from scattered small groups and, considering that the cheers rose loudest following an announcement of a further C. C. F. victory, it is safe to surmise these exultant enthusiasts were cohorts of this named party. Rising above these demonstrations were the cheers, booes and cat-calls coming from the Hume Arena where a wrestling bout was in progress and the fans were much more interested in the outcome of the fights and thrilled more appreciatively to the moans and groans than they were in who won in the more dignified fight going on all over the province.

C.C.F. Adherents Exultant

Several visits by a staff reporter were made to the three Committee Rooms to observe the reaction to the announcements; the reported victory of Agnes Macphail over her Progressive-Conservative opponent

Possibility Of Federal Election This Year Remote

Ottawa, Aug. 5 (CP)—Wednesday's crushing defeat of the Liberal party in the Ontario general elections was believed in political circles here to have removed any possibility of a Dominion election this year—if any such possibility existed.

There has been no surface indication that Prime Minister Mackenzie King was even thinking of an election this year, although in some quarters, particularly in Quebec, such a possibility was raised a short time ago among politicians.

The present Dominion parliament was elected in March, 1940, and Mr. King could wait until the summer of 1945 before going to the country again, if he choose to do so.

The last Conservative administration under Hon. R. B. Bennett (now Viscount Bennett) remained in office for the full statutory term of five years.

Mr. King has an overwhelming majority in the House of Commons with 171 straight Liberals and the support of three Liberal Progressive and three Independent Liberals, in a House of 245 members.

A general election is expected to be held in Quebec this year and it is not believed here the results in Ontario would greatly influence the decision of Premier Godbout in that respect.

Que. By-elections Important

He would, perhaps, attach more significance to the two federal by-elections in Quebec, Stanstead and the Montreal Cartier, where voting takes place Aug. 9.

With two exceptions, the last one in 1897, Quebec legislatures have not remained in office more than four years. The present legislature was elected late in 1939 and has held four sessions.

The Liberal administration has a huge majority of the 86 seats in the Quebec legislature. The standing on Feb. 10 last was 62 Liberals, 17 Union Nationale and seven seats vacant.

Mr. King heard the news of the election returns last night without comment. A spokesman at his office said he did not expect the Prime Minister would make any statement immediately, and that it was not his custom to make statements to the press on provincial election results.

No other House of Commons leaders were in the Capital.

Obituary

LATE REV. W. D. HARRISON

In Bridge Street United Church on Wednesday afternoon, August 4th., an impressive service, which was attended by many friends, was conducted for the late Rev. William David Harrison, who died at his home, 177 William Street, on Sunday, August 1st. The Rev. Dr. A. J. William Myers, who is acting minister of the Church during the absence of the Rev. Dr. Semple, was in charge of the service in which the following took part: The Rev. Dr. George Easton, Peterborough, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference; the Rev. A. Poulter, Madoc, Secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference; the Rev. W. B. Tucker and the Rev. Dr. W. E. Smith, both of Toronto, old classmates of the late Mr. Harrison; Mr. E. L. Fraser of Trenton, an old friend of Mr. Harrison, represented the Laymen's Association of the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Interment took place at Belleville cemetery in the Robinson family plot, where the Rev. Robert Robinson and his wife, parents of Mrs. Harrison are buried. The committal service was conducted by the Rev. J. G. McKee of Trenton, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Myers.

The bearers were Messrs. C. B. McGuire, W. J. Morrison, J. Wilfred Holmes, C. W. Burr, Fred S. Deacon and F. R. Wotten.

THE LATE A. W. DICKENS

The funeral of Alfred Willoughby Dickens took place Wednesday afternoon, August 4th., from his late residence 249 John Street. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Meyers, acting minister of Bridge Street United Church, and the committal service at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. L. S. Wight.

The late Mr. Dickens is survived by his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Alice Maude Gibson; two brothers, Mr. Ed. F. Dickens, Belleville, and Mr. B. F. Dickens of Vancouver, B.C.

EUGENE (OWEN) J. McEVOY
(Madoc)

Death came suddenly to Eugene (Owen) Joseph McEvoy in Madoc village this Thursday morning. He was walking on the street when taken with a heart seizure and died immediately.

The late Mr. McEvoy was born in Huntingdon Township and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McEvoy. For seventeen years he was engaged as cheesemaker at the Zion Hill Cheese Factory and for the past six years he made his home in Madoc village, being employed as a cheese instructor. In the village and district he was well known and highly esteemed and his sudden death has brought much regret to his friends. In religion he was a member of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Madoc.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Tessie Mulrooney; two sons, Larry with the R.C.A.F. at Arnprior, and Gerrard of St. Catharines; two daughters, Mrs. E. M. MacDonald, Belleville, and Miss Geraldine, at home; two brothers, Patrick of Thurlow Township, and Larry of Edmonton; two sisters, Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, Edmonton, and Mrs. Michael Fitzgerald, Maynooth.

Public Warned Of Mexican Notes

Trenton, (Special.) — Merchants and other citizens are being warned by police to be on the watch for Mexican five pesos notes which resemble Canadian five dollar bills, and are being passed about the town. On the back of this bill there is a red seal which is not on the Canadian bill and can be easily detected. If strangers try to pass such notes the public is asked to get in touch with the police immediately.

GIVEN HUMANE AWARD

AC1 L. C. WATSON

Before a parade of hundreds of airmen and airwomen at R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton, this morning, Wing Commander J. G. Stephenson presented A.C.1 L. C. Watson with the Royal Canadian Humane Association Parchment Certificate, awarded for heroic action and presence of mind. Prompt action by A.C.1 Watson resulted in the rescue of a young lad who had fallen from a boat at Point Traverse.

While fishing last September, Lowell McGregor, son of Mrs. S. Hyatt, lost his balance when he attempted to reach an oar which had slipped from its oar-lock into the water. The water is deep at this point and he was alone in the boat.

The accident was witnessed by A.C.1 Watson, who secured a boat and reached the lad as he was sinking. With the aid of another airman A.C.1 J. E. Lennard, Watson succeeded in pulling the lad into the boat.

Artificial respiration was applied and the young lad soon recovered from his experience, suffering no ill effects.

In presenting the award, Wing Commander Stephenson informed the parade that but for A.C.1 Watson's timely action, a tragedy would have occurred.

Says Italy's King Refused to Give Up Duce to Hitler

Madrid, Aug. 5. (AP)—King Victor Emanuel of Italy, politely but firmly turned down a request by Hitler that Mussolini be handed over to the Germans for safekeeping following his fall from power, it was reported here today.

The King's refusal was given by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, who was sent to Rome by Hitler last week to find out why Mussolini was deposed, travellers from the Italian capital said.

Goering was reported to have told the King that Hitler feared Mussolini's life was in danger as long as he remained in Italy.

Nixon to Resign In Near Future

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—Premier Nixon will resign as Premier of Ontario as soon as possible, he said today before he left his home at St. George for Toronto.

"The defeat of the Liberal government makes that obvious," he said, adding that it was to be regretted that no Party had a clear majority. "The people have spoken and no one can quarrel with that, however," he stated.

The premier, after expressing his thanks and appreciation for his personal victory in Brant County remarked that he was sorry to see so many of his former colleagues in the cabinet go down to defeat.

He had no comment at present to make on the future administration for Ontario or whether there was possibility of a fusion government.

WILL ASSIST C. C. F.

Toronto, Aug. 5 —(CP)— J. B. Salsberg, one of the two Labor candidates elected in yesterday's Ontario election, said last night he would co-operate with the C. C. F. members of the province's 21st legislature.

Mr. Salsberg, who was elected in Toronto St. Andrew, added that he would support any measure "which will contribute to victory and post-war security regardless of the party label which the movers of such proposals may have."

District Progressive Conservative Candidates Win by Large Majorities

Holding true to former provincial election traditions in the Bay of Quinte district, Progressive Conservatives in all three immediate Belleville district ridings elected their respective candidates to Queen's Park as the result of Wednesday's voting which saw the former Liberal administration go down to decisive defeat.

R. D. Arnott, member of the Legislative Assembly during the Hepburn administration, was returned by a large majority in Hastings West, while Reeve Roscoe Robson of Thurlow township was the choice of the people in Hastings East, and another Progressive Conservative, Mr. James deC. Hepburn was elected in Prince Edward-Lennox.

As the result of the voting across the province no particular party will hold an over-all majority in the provincial house with the standing at mid-morning being Progressive Conservatives 38 seats; C. C. F. 34; Liberals 14; Labor 2; and Independent Liberals 1. One seat, Cochrane North, was still undecided.

P.-Con. Candidate in Lead

Progressive Conservative predominance in the voting was established in the Hastings West riding quickly following closing of the polling booths at seven o'clock with early city returns giving Mr. Arnott substantial majorities over his two opponents, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Liberal, and Mr. Douglas W. Bews, C. C. F. candidate.

Mr. Arnott made almost a clean sweep of city polls and with complete returns in had established a majority of slightly more than one thousands over Mr. Bews who ran as second choice of Belleville voters. Mr. Bews gained majorities at the advance Belleville poll and in Bleecker and Coleman wards, while the only rural sub-division to give the C. C. F. candidate a majority was Wollaston township which gave him 117 votes to Vanderwater's 112, with Arnott drawing 82.

In all rural polls and those in villages and towns of Hastings West Mr. Arnott received comparatively large majorities, with Col. Vanderwater running a fairly close second. As was expected, the general rural vote did not favor the C. C. F. candidate.

Sidney Goes Arnott

Col. Vanderwater ran best in his home township, Sidney, although here, too, Mr. Arnott was given a 200-vote majority over the Liberals. The count in Sidney was Arnott 730; Vanderwater 515 and Bews 231. In Col. Vanderwater's home poll, Turner's, he received a plurality of nine over his two opponents.

In Belleville Mr. Arnott received a majority of 1,018 votes over Mr. Bews, the count being 2,693 for Arnott; 1,675 for Bews and 1,512 for Vanderwater. In the Hastings West riding with returns complete Mr. Arnott received a majority of 2,371, or approximately one thousand greater than in the last provincial election when he defeated Dr. Bert Faulkner.

The count in Hastings West was Arnott 6,297; Vanderwater, 3,926, and Mr. Bews 2,984. The Hastings West vote was estimated at approximately 15 per cent below that recorded in the last provincial election in 1937.

Closer Fight in Hastings East

A much closer fight was seen over in Hastings East, where Mr. Robson was elected over Ed. Brown, Liberal of Madoc. With seven polls still to hear from Mr. Robson had been given a majority of approximately 1,200, receiving 4,388 votes, as compared to the 3,110 amassed by Mr. Brown. Mr. J. McAninch, C.C.F. candidate, polled 927 votes.

In Prince Edward County the Progressive Conservative candidate Mr. deC. Hepburn piled up an early lead and with the poll returns completed had been given a majority of approximately 2,000 over Mr. Pearsoll, Liberal. Votes polled were Mr. deC. Hepburn 5,863, Mr. Pearsoll 4,516 and Mrs. Charlotte Brown, C.C.F., 686.

Newspaper Office Hive of Activity On Election Night

Organized confusion was the keynote of the bedlam of ringing telephones and clicking teletype keys in the Editorial Offices of The Ontario Intelligencer on Wednesday night as a battery of seven telephones sprang to raucous life at a few minutes after seven and the official closing of the polls in Belleville. Early in the evening the offices were cleared of their usual accumulation of scattered paper and general newspaper office debris and the augmented editorial staff sat down to five hours of giving out information. It was some time before each telephone operator had learned to distinguish his or her instrument's tone, "hellos and yeses" drowned the sound of other voices and everyone was busy answering someone else's telephone. "Flash" Tice hurried in and out of the room, first to the teletype machine over which were coming fresh reports from the offices of The Canadian Press, then to the desk through which were coming the poll-by-poll count and back to his microphone where his voice blared through street amplifiers to the interested crowd on Front St.

A few friends present in the offices were interested spectators of the proceedings during the evening. Nothing out of the ordinary occurred and the number of unusual questions was small. By eleven o'clock the litter of paper and debris had been replaced on the floor and desks and the Editorial Room was back to its normal condition.

POLICE BLOTTER

Found in an intoxicated condition while in the company of three young men in a parked car on Pinnacle Street two Belleville girls were detained at the local police station early this morning. Driver of the car, also a local youth, was detained by the police as an open bottle of rye was discovered in the auto, according to police.

Mrs. Ethel Green, Great St. James Street, reported the theft of a purse containing $3 from her bedroom, indicating the person responsible had apparently gained entrance to the home by means of an open ground floor window. Investigation by police resulted in the purse being found in the hallway of the home—minus the $3.

Discovery of a green punt washed up on the shore of the Bay of Quinte at Rossmore was reported by George Ostrom, the matter being turned over to the provincial police. No drowning fatality was suspected by police, it being considered the boat merely drifted from its moorings.

With the advent of holidays police are being requested by many residents to keep an eye out for their residences during the period of their absence from the city—just another duty for the police department.

It's a bit late in the season, but the summer caps ordered by the police department for the various members of the personnel have arrived. The caps were ordered at the same time as the new uniforms but have been several weeks late in arriving.

U.S. Troops Fight at Close Grips With Japs

By C. YATES McDANIEL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 5 (AP)—United States infantrymen fought at close grips today with Japanese on the south fringe of the Munda airfield opposite its centre after breaking through a long, covered trench.

The battle for possession of the New Georgia Island air strip, which long since has ceased to serve Japanese planes but which in American hands would pose an aerial at enemy bases in the northern Solomons and on New Britain, was a slow-moving and violent one.

The jungle-fringed airdrome runs roughly east and west. The infantrymen now near its centre came in from the east along the coast. Across the strip from them and about a mile north of the airdrome, other Americans strove to rout the Japanese from the western slope of Bibolo Hill preparatory to moving against the field.

(A naval spokesman at headquarters of Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr.'s command in the South Pacific said that capture of Bibolo and Kokengolo Hills, two enemy strongpoints guarding the approach to Munda from the northwest, was expected momentarily. He added that a drive past these positions would put the American forces on the sea coast behind Japanese lines, thus pinning the defenders within a small area and cutting off all routes of escape.)

Frightened from Fox Holes

Along the coast on the western end of the field, many of the Japanese were frightened from their foxholes by fighter-escorted bombers which dropped 45 tons of high explosives Wednesday.

Other aircraft hit the enemy base on Shortland Island below Bougainville, destroying seven float planes, three barges and a small cargo ship.

The Japanese airforce, which lost 345 planes trying to stem the Solomons offensive during the first month, starting June 30, sent 18 Zeros against American positions on Rendova Island, below Munda. Thirteen were shot down.

On New Guinea, where the Allied objective is Salamaua, sharp fighting was reported in progress five miles south of that enemy air base.

ELECTION NIGHT

brought out cheers from the assembled C. C. F.'ers as did the general gains by the Party in the Provincial standings. Although they did not win the election, they considered the existing stalemate a definite victory for their party. At the Liberal Committee Room there was little to observe; through the stillness and quiet of the defeated Government adherents a singing voice could be heard, a vocalist performing in the music room of the Y. M. C. A. across the street and, discussing this impromptu entertainment with a passer-by received the facetious remark: "Maybe it's Nixon's swansong he's singing."

Conservative Rooms Crowded

The Conservative Committee Rooms hummed and buzzed and every once in awhile burst out with cheers as Richard Arnott's majority soared above his two opponents. It was impossible to gain entry to the room the crowd of well-wishers and others were so many. No one seemed to mind the pushing and crush and innumerable discussions were going on as to what the government would do in the event that no single party attained a majority. Speculation ran high, a new election was practically decided by everyone present but those who authentically represented the victorious candidate Pro and con arguments were heard about the formation of a coalition government and as many combinations as possible were set up.... in the doorway to the committee room.

The announcement that the Liberal government had been defeated brought forth lusty cheers from the crowd in front of the newspaper office. The word was passed along Front Street with the speed of light until, in front of the Bank of Commerce, it developed into an overwhelming majority for first, the C.C.F., and second, the Progressive-Conservative.

The crowd on Front Street remained until the final announcement of the night was made over the public address system and dispersed quietly.

The successful candidate, Mr Richard Arnott, was out of town during the counting of ballots making a visit to Trenton, Stirling and Frankford. He returned to the city after midnight and retired to his home exhausted with his day's activities.

DOBBIN'S COBBLER

RUSH of new business for blacksmiths like Fred Fiegel lately. "Been telling 'em for years to get a horse," chuckles Fred. "Maybe they'll believe me now." Nothing old-fashioned about Fred's breakfast, though. Kellogg's Corn Flakes is his favourite. "Taste mighty good," he says. "And they only take 30 seconds to get ready; leave no pots and pans for my wife to wash up after, either." You'll like Kellogg's Corn Flakes. Get some tomorrow. Two convenient sizes.

ARRAIGNED ON MURDER CHARGE AT HALIFAX

Halifax, Aug. 5. (CP)—AB. Arnt Thornsen, 32, of the Royal Norwegian Navy, was arraigned today on a charge of murdering Alf Toldnes. 34, also of the Royal Norwegian Navy, aboard an Allied warship in Halifax harbor.

The fatality occurred shortly after midnigut, Describing a quarrel between the two men, witnesses at the hearing said the accused struck Toldnes in the face as they mounted a companionway. Toldnes fell back eight feet, lost consciousness and died soon after, they testified.

AMERICAN SICILIAN CASUALTIES

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP)—American casualties in Sicily through July 22 totalled 6,741—501 killed, 3,870 wounded and 2,370 missing, War Secretary Henry Stimson reported today.

He said he did not have the figures on British and Canadian casualties for the same period, but they were "not a great deal higher." Casualties since July 22 were believed to be "relatively light."

Prisoners taken in Sicily total nearly 100,000 including several thousand Germans, he said.

Axis Continues To Reinforce Sicilian Forces

(By JOSEPH MORTON)
Associated Press War Correspondent

An Advanced Allied Air Base in Sicily, Aug. 3. (Delayed)— (AP)— Germany and Italy still are making a strong effort to reinforce their forces in Sicily, using gliders as well as small boats of all descriptions, fliers returning from missions reported today.

Vessels were kept well scattered, apparently in an effort to frustrate Allied planes seeking to smash them, they reported.

Pilots said they observed shipping all along the Strait of Messina and beached craft at six specified points.

Altogether, fliers said they counted 35 vessels.

Most vessels apparently stay close to protective anti-aircraft batteries along the shore during the day and make their trips at night. The channel is less than five miles wide at the point where they were concentrated.

Gliders were seen concentrated in a field.

Bomber Battles 3 Jap Destroyers Fights Off 10 Zeros

Somewhere in New Guinea, July 31—(Delayed)—(AP)—A four-engined heavy bomber on armed reconnaissance attacked three Japanese destroyers with bombs off Buca Island, north of St. George channel in the northern Solomons today, then fought off ten Zeros, possibly destroying three and returned to base.

Heavy anti-aircraft fire from the destroyers revented a successful bombing run. Zeros harassed the big bomber for a quarter of an hour before these were driven off.

18,000 TONS COAL ON FREIGHTER

Hamilton, Aug. 5 —(CP)— The S. S. Lemoyne, flagship of the Canada Steamship Line freighters carried the largest cargo of coal ever transported on the Great Lakes when she docked at the wharves of the Steel Company of Canada here today.

The Lemoyne had on board 18,004 tons of coal. She was loaded at Ashtabula.

Churchill Presides At Pacific Council

London, Aug 5 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill presided yesterday at a meeting of the Pacific War Council, it was announced today.

The announcement said that in addition to British ministers and service officers the meeting was attended by Prime Minister Pieter S. Gerbrandy of The Netherlands; Chinese Foreign Minister Dr. T. V. Soong; the Netherlands and Chinese Ambassadors to Great Britain, and Vice-Admiral C. E. L. Helfrick, commander of Netherlands naval forces in the southwest Pacific.

Knocked Out 100 Moving Locomotives Of Axis in July

London, Aug. 5—(CP)—R.A.F. and Canadian fighters and fighter bombers knocked out about 100 moving locomotives in attacks on Axis railway communications in occupied countries during July, the Air Ministry announced today.

The figure does not include trains damaged or destroyed in railway terminals. Pilots participating in the raids were under strict orders not to attack civilian passenger trains, the ministry added.

Naples Target Of U.S. Bombers

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 5 — (AP) — American bombers engulfed bomb-torn Naples in another flood of high explosives Wednesday in the fourth Allied raid against the southern Italian seaport in four days.

The four-engined bombers slashed at docks and submarine bases and left the target "well covered with bombs," headquarters said. One merchant ship was left ablaze.

The unescorted planes winged through heavy anti-aircraft fire and engaged 25 to 30 Axis fighters, destroying three of them.

(The Italian communique asserted that 159 persons were killed and 223 injured in the attack on the "central quarters of Naples" and that numerous buildings collapsed. The Italian claimed seven of the raiders were shot down.)

Other Allied planes supporting the great forward surge of armies in Sicily maintained heavy assaults during the day, blasting supply dumps, road communications and motor transport, destroying and damaging many vehicles, the Allied air communique said.

R. A. F. Wellington bombers struck at Marina Di Catanzaro and at Paola on both sides of the Italian toe, wrecking enemy rail lines, in raids Tuesday night. American medium bombers followed up by daylight yesterday blew up oil tanks and railway tracks of the Italian defence and supply system.

Five Interceptors Destroyed

The Americans fighting off 30 enemy interceptors shot down eight. Five enemy planes were destroyed Tuesday night.

R.A.F., South African and American medium bombers flayed enemy strongholds in northeastern Sicily. Twenty freight cars and 60 trucks were destroyed and 80 trucks damaged.

East-bound enemy road transports were knocked out by successive waves of Allied bombers and fighter-bombers which swept across the bridgehead from dawn to dark.

Wellingtons last night pounded the railroad yards and train sheds at Messina, and at Battipaglia on the mainland 42 miles south of Naples.

From all operations over Sicily and the Italian mainland, three Allied planes are missing. Headquarters said, and additional reports disclosed six Allied aircraft were missing from operations on Tuesday besides the two previously reported.

Canadian Wellingtons raided Paola's railway switching yards on the instep of the Italian boot 45 miles northwest of Marina di Catanzaro on Tuesday night and reported a hit on the steam engine repair shop and other railway facilities.

After the bombing, the Canadian pilots swooped down to machine-gun vehicles on the road.

UNPREPAREDNESS

Pretoria—(CP)—Just how unprepared South Africa was for war was recently revealed in figures passed for publication. When the Union went to war it had two high-speed bombers, 25 obsolete general purpose aircraft, 40 training aircraft, two antiquated tanks and two armored cars.

Precision Bombing Saves Catania

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 5. (AP) — Precision bombing smashed military targets inside Catania, but left the city itself virtually unscathed, an R.A.F. pilot reported today as British troops entered the vital objective.

All hangars were damaged at the airdrome and one administration building had received a direct hit from a heavy bomb. Some attempt at repairs had been started, then nullified when bombs blew holes in repaired sections.

The railway switching yards were pitted with craters from heavy bombs, and two large sheds were gutted. Three lines of railway tracks were torn and twisted from direct hits.

Some of the new port facilities which will be valuable for Allied shipping were almost untouched by high explosives.

Gen. Stratemeyer Will Meet Stillwell

New Delhi, India, Aug. 5—(CP)—Maj.-Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, until recently chief-of-staff of the United States Army Air Force, arrived today in this theatre of war. He will confer with Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell, chief-of-staff of Allied forces in China.

The new assignment of Gen. Stratemeyer, who, it had been announced previously, was on a secret mission of "extreme importance," is expected to be disclosed soon.

CONCEDE KEHOE ELECTED

Cochrane, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)—Election of John J. Kehoe, C.C.F., as member of the Provincial legislature for Cochrane North was conceded today with returns from 74 of the 103 polls giving him a majority of 392 votes over J. A. Habel, Liberal, who represented the riding in the last legislature. His election brought the number of seats won by the C.C.F. in yesterday's Ontario election to 34.

Kehoe's total was 3,085 compared with 2,693 for Habel and 759 for Michel Halle, the Progressive Conservative candidate.

Underground Patriots

The patriots of the various countries under Hitler domination work with the greatest secrecy. Now the average citizen in Canada and other Allied countries has to be careful not to let information be known which might be of advantage to the enemy if it came to his notice but the care the patriot who works in Europe underground takes must necessarily be of the most exacting kind.

The other day there were rules for secrecy broadcast to France from the underground leader at Algiers, Fernand Grenier, to all French patriots.

The leader warned that Hitler would try everything possible to break French resistance and that the patriots should everywhere answer the enemy by intensifying their vigilance and tightening their discipline.

He warned that eighty per cent of patriots' arrests are due to imprudence and that it was imperative that the underground fighters remedy this fault. Grenier said that "if I have been able to live and contribute to the struggle for two years, it is because I followed strictly the elementary rules of clandestinity."

These men and women who have gone through the tortures of enemy occupation for several years have given service that merits the praise of the entire united world. Thy have kept their nations alive by the underground and the fire of patriotic devotion is aglow as never before.

They see just ahead of them the traces of the early dawning of that great day when the song of freedom will sound from France and Norway eastward until the voice of the liberating armies and of uprisen peoples will have drowned the sounds of Hun guns, canons and bombs in the swelling triumph of liberty.

The patriots have waited patiently, sometimes finding it difficult to hold themselves in leash until the hour to strike when Hitler's proud power will be battered away, and the dingy world of Hitler's creation disappear in the light of restored and reborn freedom.

Russians in Orel

Hitler's offensive in Russia has not gone far before it was turned back with the characteristic Russian counter-offensive which has carried the Russians right into the city of Orel, the strategic hinge of the German central and southern front defences. The advancing Russians have swept forward on a front of four or five miles along the lines which almost encircle the city. The German garrison is fighting bitterly' being faced with the dilema of either surrender of destruction.

The outlook in Russia is cheering. The forces of the Soviet are exerting relentless pressure on the enemy front now forced to face the developments in Italy where they are obliged to establish defence lines towards the north of that country.

The steady progress in the Sicilian occupation also is stimulating to the Russian armies and has created a dampening of the spirits of the enemy, already greatly perturbed by the incsssant and devastating bombing by the British and American air forces.

The Earliest Tax System

Taxes are older than money. The people of the Nile Valley have been using stamped currency for a mere 2300 years but they have been heavily taxed by their governments for more than 5000 years. In the early days all payments were made in kind—the peasant's taxes were collected in grain and cattle, the craftsman's in the products of his art. Armies of clerks and collectors and thousands of storehouses were necessary for such a system.

In the Egyptian collection of the Royal Ontario Museum there is a 4000 years old painted wooden model showing men driving donkeys with panniers filled with grain. The panniers are inscribed with the hieroglyphs, "King's treasury." The various kinds of goods collected were equated and valued according to a general standard. From the 13th century before Christ until the introduction of currency (4th century B.C.) this standard was a given weight in gold, silver or hopper. In this way weights were the precursors of coins. Ancient Egyptian weights, showing the different standards used, are also displayed in the Museum.

Thriving on Soot

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

My chimney-sweep accepts soot philosophically. His ebon face is his proud trade mark. I suspect he has little use for the new school of clean sweeps who try to be black-coated workers — in white smocks. He is positively carboniferous in his attachment to soot. In fact, he thrives on the stuff.

Back from a holiday he declares: "You know, I never feel the same when I get to the seaside. Fresh air properly upsets me for the first few days."

"Seriously," says the sweep, the white of his eyes flashing in his black mask, "I miss the soot."

"Miss the soot . . ." I murmur.

"When I come back to the job," he gravely affirms, "it always takes me days to get over my holiday."

Moscow Gardens

(U.S.S.R. Bulletin)

There are a million vegetable gardeners in Moscow this year, compared with a little over 200,000 last year.

Although the harvest in 1942 was smaller than usual, vegetable plots on the outskirts of Moscow yielded 25,000 tons of potatoes and over 40,000 tons of vegetables. This year, it is expected, no less than 75,000 tons of potatoes and more than 36,000 tons of vegetables will be gathered from Moscow's garden plots, and 160,000 tons of potatoes and 81,000 tons of vegetables from subsidiary farms of various factories and other enterprises.

Each Sunday at five in the morning the streets of Moscow are crowded with citizens carrying spades, pitchforks, rakes and shovels, en route to the countryside to work in their gardens. The plots are provided by the city Soviet without charge. Muscovites have become enthusiastic gardeners, earnestly studying literature on the subject.

The Human Churchill

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

The thought must have crossed many minds wherever his words were heard, that the ever-human Winston Churchill is a man possessed of gifted foresight and stolid common sense, a leader who keeps his feet on the ground.

The secret of Churchill is to be found, we believe, in his calm, unemotional approach to the great questions before the United Nations and before his country. It is revealed in the determined way in which he carries on under all circumstances. This is not to say that Churchill is not a man of deep feeling. He is. But he does not expose his feeling to public gaze. He dresses his emotions in one of the finest vocabularies used by any public figure. Thereby he inspires and encourages those it is his task to lead through the greatest crisis in world history.

Water Color Line

The Bureau of Mines found that a red tank had an evaporation loss of 3.54 percent as compared with 1.4 percent for white over a period of four and one-half months, says Dun's Review. The hold of a white ship in the tropics will be at least 10 degrees cooler than the hold of a black ship.

Pockets, Buttons and Frills

(Oshawa Times-Gazette)

It has been suggested that the pockets in a man's suit which correspond to a lady's handbag as holdalls for various articles, are symbolic of the manner in which people are chained to the small details of existence.

From childhood, a boy will stuff small objects into his pockets, and stow away there anything from a piece of string to a dead frog. As he grows older, he uses his pockets for money and lead pencils, fountain pens, memoranda, knives, keys, nail files, chewing gum, all the small impedimenta of life. In the dictionary, a pocket is described as "a small bag inserted in a garment for carrying small articles." The word itself comes from the Middle English "poket" which was in turn the Anglicanized word for the French "pokete," and that stemmed from the Old Northern French word "poke," "poque" or "poche," which was originally of Teutonic origin. So that "pocket," and "pouch," and the miner's "poke" and the modern Waac's "pochette" are all variations of the old word.

A woman's purse has a name of prouder origin, being a combination of the old Latin "bursa" for a sac, or pouch, and the Anglo-Saxon "pusa," or bag. The Greeks had a word for it too, when they alluded to skin or leather pouches as a "byrse." Women are famous for their bulging purses. We have all heard the story of the hopeful tramp who followed an absent-minded lady for blocks and, after securing her handbag, found in it an assortment that netted 23 cents in change, two handkerchiefs, a comb, a compact, a memorandum book, 2 packages of gum, a brassiere, powder, rouge, lipstick and six letters. In any picture of Queen Elizabeth, even in ceremonial costume, note how she clings to her purse which is usually quite fat.

One wonders what men did in the days when they dressed in skintight breeches and flowing capes and fitted upper garments. Did they stuff surplus objects into their high boots? Or carry bags? Pockets must have been evolved in answer to a pressing need for a place to cache small objects.

Buttons on men's coat sleeves are a survival of the edict promulgated by Friedrich the Great of Prussia, who noted that his Imperial troops had a habit of wiping their noses on their coat sleeves and took steps to cure them of the custom. The buttons that appear on the back of certain long coats worn with uniforms originated from the days long gone, when men liked to stand in front of a fireplace and warm their posteriors. The buttons helped to keep the long flaps back in place.

The gorgeous lace frills that formerly decorated the fronts of butlers' chests in the Victorian era had a queer origin. Kitchens were far away from dining-halls in those spacious days, and often flights of stairs had to be traversed in order to bring the food to the table. The butler, portly and dignified, ascending long flights of steps, bearing the huge roast and its attendant gravy, often splashed the front of his coat. The frills of lace absorbed the gravy and could be twisted to conceal the ravages made by the liquid.

I have spoken before of the use of amphetamine sulfate (benzedrine sulfate) in the treatment of overweight; it reduces weight because it causes loss of appetite.

One of the early uses of benzedrine sulfate was to brighten the mind of students during university examinations which may explain why two physicians of Bellevue Hospital, New York, Drs. Lauretta Bender and Frances Cottington have had success by the use of benzedrine sulfate in the treatment of children with behavior and other nervous disorders. They state that benzedrine sulfate gives the child a feeling of well being and temporarily allows him to feel secure and loved. In this frame of mind he can face his difficulties, express his aggressive impulses without overwhelming fear of consequences, and obtain relief from inner tension and anxiety.

Now the use of benzedrine alone is not sufficient to bring about a cure just as cocaine by giving a feeling of well being will not bring about a cure for nervous or other conditions where forgetfulness of trouble is wanted. But by putting the child in a frame of mind where he is not anxious or afraid the physician can ask questions frankly and kindly and get normal or "unafraid' answers to his questions.

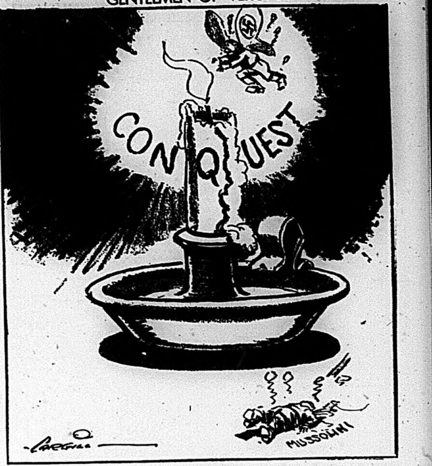
Benzedrine stimulates interest and drive in learning in the child with a learning disability, provided his learning disability has been caused by some early nervous experience such as fear or ridicule. Fear, depression, and sexual tension are often completely relieved during the use of benzedrine sulfate. Activity of mind and body has a definite aim rather than restlessness and purposeless activity.

These physicians found that benzedrine did not help cases where the mental symptoms were caused by any defect in the structure of the brain.

However, successful use of benzedrine sulfate in the behavior problems of children depends on a clear understanding of the causes of the child's problems, proper choice of children to receive the drug, and use of this drug only as a part of the treatment to bring about proper adjustment of the child to his surroundings.

The thought then is that benzedrine sulfate is not used just to "brighten up" the child but to remove tension and anxiety and so allow the physician to study him properly, learn the cause of his symptoms and apply the necessary treatment.

"GENTLEMEN OF VERONA"



Whitehall Notebook

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 5. (CP)—Some of the most heated political arguments going on around the lobbies of parliament these days concern a couple of journalists, one of whom, Tom Driberg, doubles as a member of parliament.

The other is Claude Cockburn, one of the most interesting figures among the political journalists. He is parliamentary correspondent of the Communist Daily Worker under the name of Frank Pitcairn, and over his own name writes a weekly news-letter called The Week.

Stories Suppressed

While Driberg's case is mainly a domestic one—a difference of policy with The Daily Express, for which he wrote a column for ten years under the name of William Hickey—Cockburn's has an international significance in that he went to Algiers with the sanction of the British Government but after his first cable he was not allowed by the American authorities there to file any cable, even, he says, to his wife.

His first cabled story was passed he was told, "as a favor", then a complete ban was put on.

"It is obvious that the real reason for trying to exclude diplomatic correspondent from North Africa is to turn out the lights on the political situation there," he said. "It has nothing to do with military security, but is purely a political move to prevent the British and American public being informed of the French political development in Algiers. The ban applied to all political correspondents".

No Interference Says Bracken

After a question was asked in parliament on the matter, Information Minister Brendan Bracken said in a written reply that his department never had attempted to interfere with regulations made by civilian authorities in Algiers with regard to civilians who are not accredited war correspondents.

It was disclosed in the question and answer that Cockburn had the approval of the Foreign Office, as well as the Ministry of Information, to make his trip.

Previously a group of correspondents was told to leave Algiers after original permits for a month's stay had lapsed.

Cockburn, before he formed his Communist affiliation, was Washington correspondent, of the Times of London (in his mid-twenties) and was considered to have a brilliant future ahead of him with that most conservative among the international press.

Driberg's severance of his connection with The Daily Express followed a speech he made in his constituency saying he understood Supply Minister Sir Andrew Duncan was considering favorably an offer of £25,000 a year to corelate the policies of the two biggest industrial organizations in Britain, the Federation of British Industries and the British Employers' Federation. This was denied officially by Sir Andrew.

Driberg's pen name of William Hickey, originally that of an 18th-century diarist, is the property of The Daily Express and will be conferred on subsequent writers of the column.

Lobby Notes

Field Marshal Viscount Wavell, the new Viceroy of India, has been elected vice-president of the Poetry Society, Inc. . . .M.P.'s were intrigued by the theft of a clock which had been screwed to a wooden partition almost directly above the Speaker's chair . . It was taken on a weekend, but to make the theft it would be necessary to pass through the well-guarded inner lobby . . . . War Secretary Sir James Crigg told members in reply to a question that the War Office had considered a change in the system which requires officers to make a heavy financial outlay on uniforms which seldom are used in battle areas, but had decided a change in present arrangements was not desirable.

COLONIAL COSTUME

The American government was established by men in knee pants.

At the time of the Revolution public and professional men, as well as all men of wealth and social pretensions, wore elaborate clothes of many colors.

Their coats were of every color of the rainbow. Often the cape and collar were of velvet and of different color from the rest of the coat.

Ruffled shirts, cocked hats and elaborate buckles on the shoes were the fashion.

It was common for men to wear their hair long, tied in a queue at the back and well powdered.

Periwigs for style rather than as a substitute for missing hair were never very common in Colonial America except among judges and other officials respresenting the crown.

Many people think that George Washington wore a wig, but all evidence indicates that he never wore a wig in his life. The same may be said of most all of the American leaders at the time of the Revolution.

A few judges, lawyers and doctors did wear wigs for style and continued to do so for some years after the federal government was established. It is said that Justice William Cushing, of Massachusetts one of the original members of the U. S. Supreme Court, was the last American judge to wear a full judicial wig of the English fashion. He abandoned his wig after a bunch of boys hooted at him in New York.

After the federal government was established judges copied the British practice of wearing black robes while sitting on the bench, a practice that survives only in the U. S. Supreme Court.

The French Revolution and the rise to political power of the Republicans under Thomas Jefferson had a tremendous effect on the style of men's clothes.

About 1800 coats of many colors, velvet capes, knee-breeches, ruffled shirts, shoe buckles, long hair and powdered queues began to go out of fashion in America.

The C.C.F. and Progressive Conservatives divided central Ontario fairly evenly between them — an area dominated by the Liberals in 1937; and they split 17 seats between them in Western Ontario—a section where neither Conservatives nor C.C.F. elected a single member in 1937.

Smallest Vote in 3 Elections

Yesterday's vote—the smallest in three elections — was somewhere around 1,200,000, compared with more than 1,500,000 in 1934 and 1937. The Progressive Conservatives, electing the largest number of candidates, received about 36 per cent. of the ballots cast; the C.C.F. got a fraction less than 32 per cent.; and the Liberals a fraction more than 30.

If the C.C.F. becomes the official Opposition in Ontario—a development seemingly in prospect—this will be the third province where that has happened. The party already forms the official Opposition to the coalition government of British Columbia and to the Liberal administration in Saskatchewan.

Along with the three party leaders, Mr. Hepburn, who resigned the government leadership last October to Hon. Gordon Conant, now Master of the Ontario Supreme Court, was re-elected in Elgin. His was the first victory to be conceded after vote-counting began.

Agnes Macphail, who 22 years ago became the first woman member of parliament under the United Farmer party label, repeated that feat yesterday when she became the first woman elected to the Ontario Legislature; but as a C.C.F. member.

Before the night was out another of the six women candidates also was known to be elected—Mrs. Rae Luckock, C.C.F., for Toronto Bracondale.

Most "name" candidates went by the board as the ballots were cast. Of the seven members of the Nixon cabinet defeated, four were beaten by C. C. F. candidates and three by Progressive Conservatives.

Besides Mr. Nixon, re-elected ministers were 39-year-old Hon. Farquhar Oliver, Minister of Public Works and Welfare and youngest member of the retiring cabinet who ran in Grey South; Hon. Robert Laurier, Minister of Mines who contested Ottawa East; and Hon. A. St. Clair Gordon, 48-year-old provincial treasurer and chairman of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, running in Kent West.

Some Who Failed

Health Minister Harold J. Kirby, 48, Toronto's only representative in the cabinet, defeated by Progressive Conservative Leslie Blackwell in Toronto Eglinton;

Agriculture Minister P. M. Dewan, 52, native of Eastern Ontario but a resident of Woodstock for many years, defeated by Progressive Conservative T. R. Dent in Western Ontario's Oxford.

Labor Minister Peter Heenan, 68, Irish-born locomotive engineer defeated by William Docker, C. C. F., in Kenora, Northern Ontario.

Highways Minister T. B. McQuesten, 61, prominent in Public Affairs in Hamilton for many years, defeated by C. C. F. candidate Fred W. Warren in Hamilton-Wentworth.

Lands Minister Norman Hipel, 53, former speaker of the legislature, defeated by Grieve Robinson, C. C. F., in Waterloo South, the riding where Mr. Hipel was born.

Attorney-General Defeated

Attorney-General Eric Cross, 39, Simcoe, Ont., who resigned from the Cabinet in 1940 and was called back to it when Mr. Nixon took over the Premiership last May, was defeated by Progressive Conservative Wallace W. Walsh in Haldimand-Norfolk.

Hon. William L. Houck, 50-year-old Minister Without Portfolio and Niagara Falls farmer who has bred some of the world's finest Holstein cattle, defeated by Cyril Overall, C.C.F., in Niagara Falls.

Lt.-Col. Colin Campbell, 42-year-old mining engineer now on active service who asked to be relieved of his post as Minister of Public Works after he went overseas, defeated in Sault Ste. Marie, by George Harvey, C.C.F.

Maj. David Croll, former Welfare Minister and ex-Mayor of Windsor, defeated in Windsor-Walkerville by W. C. Riggs, C.C.F.

Maj. James H Clark, Speaker of the Legislature who said in a Detroit Radio Forum address June 13 that 40 to 45 per cent. of Canadians would favor political union with the United States if a vote were held, defeated by George Bennett, C.C.F., in Windsor-Sandwich.

From the very outset Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. strength was plainly visible. With returns slower from Northern Ontario the full scope of the C.C.F. landslide there was not immediately apparent, however.

At 9.10 p.m., E.D.T., two hours and 10 minutes after the polls closed, The Canadian Press announced the defeat of the Liberal Government. Fourteen minutes later—on the basis of incomplete returns which showed no single party could expect to obtain a majority in the Legislature—CP announced the election had resulted in a stalemate.

Liberals Swept Out in Toronto

The Liberals were swept out of the 17 Toronto-area constituencies where they elected nine members in 1937. The C.C.F. took four seats from them, the Progressive Conservatives three, and Labor candidates two.

Northern Ontario became a C.C.F. stronghold. Whereas the Liberals elected 11 members there in the last voting, this time the C.C.F. took 10 seats and the Liberals only one. Early today the winner in the remaining northern seat—Cochrane North—was still in doubt.

Western Ontario, with 26 ridings, was predominantly Liberal after 1937, with 22 members elected by that party then, along with two Liberal-Progressives, an Independent Liberal and a United Farmer. Yesterday the C.C.F. and Progressive Conservatives took eight and nine respectively, with the Liberals cut to eight. Mr. Hepburn, an Independent Liberal, won Elgin, the other seat.

Eastern Ontario, where the Progressive Conservatives had numerical superiority in 1937 with 10 members to the Liberals' seven, showed two Progressive Conservative gains. That party elected 12 members and the Liberals five. Eastern Ontario was the only geographical section which returned no C.C.F. candidate.

Central Ontario, where the Liberals had 14 members and the Conservatives four after 1937, was split this time between the C.C.F. and Progressive Conservatives. The Liberals failed to gain a seat as the C.C.F. took seven and Progressive Conservatives 10. One seat, Muskoka-Ontario, was in doubt early today.

Campaign Relatively Quiet

The five-week campaign was relatively quiet, as was yesterday's voting.

Col. Drew, chosen leader of his party in 1938 and a member for Simcoe East in the last Legislature, campaigned on a 22-plank platform emphasizing a program for post-war rehabilitation and maintenance of British institutions.

While he has been for years a personal critic of the Federal Liberal administration of Prime Minister Mackenzie King his party is pledged to co-operation with the Dominion Government in the war effort. One of his promises was a reduction of taxation and increases in Mothers' Allowances and Old-Age Pensions.

"Our effort will be to carry the progressive program in which we believe," he said in a brief post-election statement.

"Above all, our effort will be directed toward making this province worthy of the young men and women who deserve the best that this country can offer them."

The C.C.F. under Mr. Jolliffe campaigned on a 15-point program calling for development of plans for employment for all after the war and social ownership and control of monopolies; enactment of "an effective trade union act" to guarantee the right of collective bargaining to labor; higher Mothers' Allowances and Old-Age Pensions; An extensive housing program; and lower coal, bread and Hydro prices.

Ran On Nine-Year Record

The Liberals ran on the nine-year record of Liberal Administration since 1934 under Mr. Hepburn, Mr. Conant and Mr. Nixon; and on a 15-point program for the war and post-war years. High in the list were the devotion of all provincial resources to the war effort and co-operation with the federal government in prosecution of the war.

The Liberals promised all possible help to farmers in obtaining prices which would guarantee a fair margin of profit; and the main liberal strength came in predominantly-rural ridings.

Ontario servicemen and servicewomen voted in their camps if they were in Ontario. If they were serving outside the province they voted by proxy—a procedure criticized particularly by Col. Drew on grounds the proxies were not getting back in time to relatives and friends delegated by the service personnel to cast their ballots.

While the service vote polled for each candidate was included in the totals announced last night by returning officers, the breakdown of service ballots for each candidate was not expected to be available for several days.

TRAINBUSTERS!

Trainbusters, both of them — these two Royal Canadian Air Force flyers are relentlessly carrying the war against enemy lines of communication and transport in the occupied countries. RIGHT Flying Officer D. M. "Bitsy" Grant, D.F.C., of Watrous, Sask., LEFT and Flying Officer J. A. Morten of Didsbury, Alberta, have both chalked up outstanding records with their daring sorties. Both flyers appear in action in the new R.C.A.F. film, "Trainbusters," just released across Canada. "Bitsy" Grant, whose outstanding record is nine trains in one day, has been overseas with the R.C.A.F. for the past two years. He was formerly prominent in athletics, attaining distinction as a tennis player at Calgary. Morten was a fireman in days of peace.—(R.C.A.F. Photo).

All the way down the Etna line to Catania, where the 8th Army edged closer to that east coast city, the Allies maintained their steady pressure against the enemy. Catenanuova, 22 miles west of Catania, fell to the Canadians after a stiff battle.

(In a delayed dispatch dated July 31 Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, said the West Nova Scotia Regiment stormed Catenanuova on the night of July 29-30, and quickly mopped it up, after the Royal 22nd Regiment of Quebec had led a difficult four-day advance toward the town.

(Also taking part in the fight for the town, said Munro, was the New Brunswick Regiment, the Carleton and Yorks.)

Bitterest Fighting

The bitterest fighting was reported in the central sector of the Etna line where the Canadian 1st Division and the famous 78th Division of the 8th Army were slogging toward the towns of Biancavilla and Aderno, which lie astride the western Mount Etna supply road.

(An unconfirmed CBS broadcast from Algiers today said the Canadians "when last heard from" were about five miles from Aderno.)

Agira, previously reported captured, was disclosed to have changed hands a number of times in fierce battles before the Canadians advancing westward finally blasted out the town's last defenders. A final German armored counter-attack was beaten back, and the Allied troops pushed ahead over rough terrain littered with German dead.

(The Berlin radio said that three to four divisions, including Americans, were being thrown into this thrust.)

Suicidal Nazi Defence, by Huns

The German Hermann Goering and the 15th Armored Divisions were reported putting up a suicidal defence action in that sector in an attempt to delay he flanking movement. Front line dispatches said the Germans were bitterly contesting every inch of the ground despite serious losses.

The fighting was raging in craggy, broken country ideally suited to defence action.

Enemy positions built on hilltops and cut into the rocks are first heavily pounded with artillery and mortars, and then the Allied infantry moves in to mop up the strongholds at bayonet point.

In the north, the American 7th Army, sweeping eastward toward Messina, pushed four miles beyond fallen San Stefano to occupy Caronia and its port, Caronia Marina.

Axis defenders along the coastal route were harassed by American destroyers which pumped shells into defence targets from the battle line to Cape Orlando, 18 miles to the east.

WOMEN PAY BIG PRICE FOR POOR "BLOOD MAKE UP"

You women who feel and look "washed out"—limp and droopy—may be paying the price of hemoglobin shortage in the blood.

The demands of monthly "periods" pregnancy, etc. all conspire to bring about this shortage of the vital red coloring matter in the red blood cells. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

They help increase hemoglobin where there is a shortage of it due to iron deficiency and help chase away that "leaden" feeling of tiredness so often due to this condition. Start your course of Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. Ask your druggist.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. DeLong announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Isabelle Florence, to LAC. James H. J. Daniels, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Daniels, Worcester, Mass., the marriage to take place quietly the latter part of August.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bradshaw, Front of Thurlow, announce the engagement of their only daughter, Phyllis Mabel, to Wilson James Cleary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph K. Cleary, St. Jules Marie, Quebec, the wedding to take place August 19th in Front Road United Church.

Mrs. Pearl Wolfe, of Napanee, spent several days in Belleville visiting friends and relatives.

Rev. H. O. Eastman and Mrs. Eastman, William St., left today for Collingwood, where they will spend a two weeks' vacation.

OS. Walter Turner, R.C.N.V.R., spent the weekend at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Turner, 65 Grier St., before proceeding to the East Coast where he will be stationed.

C. P. L. Ernie Crawford and Mrs. Edna Crawford, of Belleville, have been spending the past week at the farm of the latter's uncle, Mr. W. P. Jackman, 6th line Rawdon.

Miss Margaret Webber has returned to Montreal, having spent the past few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Kiser, College Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ross, of Peterboro, are spending a week's vacation with Mr. and Mrs. Jay Ross, College Hill.

Mrs. Maxwell R. Scott left today for St. John's, Que., to take a position at No. 9 A.O.S., R.C.A.F., where her husband, Sgt. Maxwell R. Scott, is stationed.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Ross have returned to their home on College Hill, after spending ten months at Cobourg.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Windsor, of Cannifton, received a cable from their son, Doug Windsor, informing them of his safe arrival overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Milne, of Detroit, Mich., are visiting at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. George A. Lee and Mr. Lee, Cedar St.

Mrs. Donald Jordan and children, Jackie and Donna, of Kingston, are spending two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Scott, Victoria Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cousins, of Collins' Bay, are visiting with their daughter, Mrs. Percy Alexander and Mr. Alexander, of Belleville.

Larry Mills, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Mills, 19 W. Moira St., who underwent an operation at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, on Monday last, is progressing favorably.

Over sixty girls attended the annual C.G.I.T. camp which was held at Moira Lake from July 19th to the 29th. Ranging in age from twelve to fifteen, the campers came from Belleville, Trenton, Madoc, Oshawa and other towns. The camp was fortunate in having as director Miss Elinor Harwood, of Chatham and as business manager, Miss Mary Lockhart, of Belleville. The ten days were both pleasant and profitable as the schedule included various activities and training in Bible study, handicraft, swimming and life-saving.

Miss Corinne Mantle, popular bride-to-be of this month, was feted Tuesday evening by many of her friends at a delightful miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Dougherty. Games were enjoyed by all and prizes were given. The bride then opened her lovely gifts, which were concealed in a huge cardboard wedding cake and graciously thanked everyone. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess.

Misses Miriam Drew and Mary Trualsch were co-hostesses at a charmingly arranged miscellaneous shower on Monday evening at the Bay of Quinte Country Club house in honor of Miss June Boyd, bride-elect of the month. Bridge was enjoyed during the evening. A large number of lovely gifts were strewn on a box gaily decorated in pink and white. Upon opening them, June expressed her appreciation and thanks to her many friends. A dainty luncheon was served at a tea table beautifully arranged with white lace cloth, pink and white gladioli and a miniature bride and groom.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

Mrs. Donald Fleming was hostess for the July meeting of the Ivanhoe W.M.S. Owing to the busy season there was a very small attendance. In the absence of both the president and vice-president, the meeting was conducted by Mrs. O. E. Wagar. Prayer was offered by the leader. The roll call and minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted. A splendid paper was read by Miss Aileen Fleming on "Church Conditions Today in Germany." The singing of a hymn and the Mizpah benediction closed the meeting. A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Fleming during the social hour which followed.

WEDDINGS

DAVIES—BAUDER

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, July 24, at 11 a.m., Kingston, when Miss Audrey Bauder, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David J. Bauder, of Hartington, was united in marriage to Sgt. Gordon Joseph Davies, R. C. O. C., son of Mrs. Olive Davies and the late Joseph A. Davies, of Belleville, Ont.

The bride was charmingly attired in street-length suit dress of pale blue, wearing white hat with shoulder-length veil and matching accessories. Her corsage was pink roses, bouvardia and maiden hair fern. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Phyllis Bauder, who wore blue silk street-length dress with matching accessories and a corsage of sweet peas, baby's breath and maiden hair fern. Mr. William Davies, brother of the groom, was best man.

BURKE—ALEXANDER

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in Chalmers Church, Kingston, at 6.30 Monday evening, Aug. 2, by Rev. Dr. George Brown, when Kathleen Beatrice, daughter of A. C. Alexander, Consecon and the late Mrs. Alexander, was united in marriage to John Ross, younger son of W. J. Burke and the late Mrs. Burke, of Kingston.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of medium blue lace and crepe, with navy accessories. Her corsage was of American Beauty roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Lorraine Burke, wore dusky rose sheer with brown and beige accessories. Her corsage was of Talisman roses. Mr. Martin Chepswick, of Kingston, was best man.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served to the bridal couple and their attendants at the Hotel La Salle.

Later the young couple left for a short honeymoon, the bride travelling in a red and white figured silk suit, with navy and white accessories. Upon their return they will reside at 347 Albert Street, Kingston.

The bride is a graduate of the Nurses' Training School at the Belleville General Hospital and for the past two years has been on the staff of the Ontario Hospital.

DRUMM—KAVANAGH

In the Church of St. Gregory the Great, Picton, Monday morning, August 2nd, at ten o'clock, Miss Loretta Anne Kavanagh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Kavanagh, Cherry Valley, became the bride of Mr. John Patrick Drumm, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Drumm, Grafton, Ont. Rev. J. A. Meehan celebrated Nuptial Mass with Rev. J. V. Ryan of Grafton in the sanctuary. Baskets of varied colored gladioli were on the altar. Mr. F. E. Walden played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length frock of rose crepe cut on princess lines with lace panels, matching hat with veil and white accessories. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and baby's breath. Her bridesmaid, Miss Irene Drumm, sister of the bridegroom, was in Romance blue silk jersey with matching hat and veil and white accessories. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath. Leading Seaman Norbert Kavanagh H.M.C.S., Chicoutimi, brother of the bride, was best man.

At the reception held at the home of the bride's parents, Cherry Valley, Mrs. Kavanagh received in a grey and white crepe dress with corsage of snapdragons. The bridegroom's mother assisted in receiving, wearing a twilight blue coat frock with corsage of summer flowers. A wedding breakfast was served and the assistants were Mrs. E. McNally, Mrs. Llewellyn Goodwin, Mrs. Milton Fennell, Mrs. Lyall Hicks and Miss Marguerite McNally.

For the wedding trip east, the bride donned a two-piece suit of navy blue and white check and white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Drumm will reside near Colborne.

CRAWFORD—DUNFORD

Lakefield United Church was the scene of a charming wedding on Saturday afternoon, August 1st, when Norine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Dunford, became the bride of Charles Crawford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Crawford.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white organdy gown with sweetheart neckline, a fitted bodice, buttoned down the back and a full skirt with small train. Her finger-tip veil was of scalloped net in coronet style and she carried a bouquet of red roses and sweet peas.

Muriel Dunford was her sister's bridesmaid. She wore a long pink sheer frock similar to the bride's with a veil of pink set in coronet style and caught up with pink roses.

The groomsman was Malcolm Wager, of Belleville. Elwood Northey and Harold Coons were the ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Douro, where Mrs. Dunford received in a gown of mauve figured sheer, corsage of roses and white accessories. The groom's mother, who also received, wore a two-piece navy suit, corsage of roses and white accessories.

The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea service.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip. For travelling the bride chose a pink silk jersey dress with white accessories. On their return they will live in Peterboro.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Finds Her Boss Reserved

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much interested in and attracted to my employer. He is single, 39, and I am 33. He is shy and has had very little time for social contacts. He does not know how to be casual or friendly with single girls and he is always on his guard for any friendly advances that might be made. I have avoided any contact with him, during business hours, but we had to attend a business dinner together, and since then he has been complimenting me and making small but friendly advances. He even asked me to go out, but never set the day.

My friends think it would be proper to ask him over for an evening. I live with my mother. Some others advise me to hint jokingly about the proposed date, but since he is my boss, I hesitate. He once commented to a friend of his, that he found me interesting and amusing. Am I right in thinking he will break the reserve, if he's interested in me? Or must I go after him?

"Nothing ventured, nothing gained" says the proverb. You'll have to proceed with caution lest you frighten this shy and also wary gentleman away. If some of your friends or his could manage to have both of you drop in for a pleasant informal meal, like Sunday Night supper, it would help things along.

Meanwhile, continue to be "interesting and amusing", as he claims to have found you. I could mention score of cases where the shy and reserved boss has led to the altar an employee who understood the gentle art of encouragement without showing her hand too plainly.

Suitable Gift For a Soldier

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a boy friend in the Army, who expects to go across in the near future and I want to send him a little gift. Can you suggest something that wouldn't be a nuisance, and some thing that he could use? He is very particular about his things, which makes it more difficult for me.

G.

In selecting a gift for a soldier that won't be a nuisance the safest thing is to consult his individual taste. Last week, I went to a famous leather shop and saw gifts for service men that weighed only a few ounces, and were delightful in their utility and compactness. In the large city from which your letter is written there are shops specialising in such things.

There are little frames that hold about a dozen snapshots which fold and fit into a case, and weigh practically nothing. A diary is a good present if a man has a flare for writing, and may be extremely valuable after the war. A fond mother was buying a tiny clothesline with bone clips, for drying socks, handkerchiefs, and small belongings, confiding in me her son liked to wash his own hankies.

There are of course all manner of "eats", candy, tiny jars of jams, relishes which make the Army rations more appetising. Bearing the boy friend's tastes in view, visit your leading shop and see what they have to offer for service men.

Young Wife Has Much to Forgive

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl 24 years old, married to a man of 24, and we have an eleven-months old son. My husband is in the Army, but before he left he struck me during an argument, and now he writes that he wants a divorce as he's in love with a girl he ran around with while I was in the hospital having our baby.

We lived with his mother for a while, but she never liked me, and she was the cause of all our fusses. I know we could get along if we had a chance to live by ourselves. I love my husband very much and don't want to give him a divorce.

At present I'm living fourteen miles out of town, working for an elderly couple, and have my baby with me. What shall I do?

B. P.

Lack of responsibility and the normal affection an adult man is supposed to have, is shown in this type of philandering. If you granted him a divorce, he'd probably pursue the same course of conduct with wife No. 2, when she was in the hospital having a baby. He's just not grown up. But as you still love him in spite of this, and his un-soldierly behaviour in striking you, don't grant him the divorce, if for no other reason than to keep him out of trouble.

Apparently you're working for your living as well as the baby's.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Her Family Wrongly Criticized Her Good Taste in Bridal Gift.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it really incorrect to send linen to a bride? I sent a beautiful set of pillow slips to a war-bride (groom about to go into the Army) because I know she plans to furnish only a bedroom. I chose this gift because I knew that the usual gifts would have to be stored.

The money I spent for this pair of pillow slips might well have purchased an elaborate silver tray, for they were of beautiful percale and beautifully monogrammed. Did I "do right" in trying to give a useful and practical gift?

My family were horrified when they learned of my choice of wedding gift. Mother said, "Bed linen. . . for a bride! NEVER. . . . this should not have been sent".

R. H.

I think you showed sound judgment and good taste. You gave a beautiful gift, a gift personalized with a lovely monogram, and certainly a gift suitable for these times and for the plans of this couple. I'm confident the bride approved highly of your practical point of view as well as of your beautiful present. War brides who are going to be on the go from camp to camp want what one war bride I know calls "tote-able" presents . . . and yours fills this wish!

Tuxedoes Not For Daytime

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At our August wedding in the rectory at 3.30 in the afternoon my fiance is wearing a tuxedo and so is his best man. I would like to have you tell me if my father has to wear a tuxedo also, or may he properly wear a dark blue suit? I thought that since we are being married in the rectory and having a simple wedding it would be O.K. Both mothers are wearing street-length dresses, and my fiance's father is wearing a business suit.

I. R.

The bridegroom, best man and your father may properly wear dark business suits at your informal wedding in the rectory. . .but it definitely is not proper for the bridegroom and best man to wear tuxedos at an afternoon wedding. Tuxedos are for evening wear, after six p.m.

With the freeing sense of relaxation we naturally have when we're on vacation, there's a tendency to let our manners relax too— to do and say things we wouldn't be capable of doing and saying during the other weeks of the year. When we are on vacation we're usually on our own. We've left behind our usual fortifications: home-background, family, close friends. There we are in new surroundings, meeting new people.

We have a brand-new chance to make a good impression. When we relax we will, consciously, or unconsciously, show our real manners, our real selves. If our code of conduct is usually in fine, healthy condition, our intuitions sound and sure, there will be no real difference between the manners we use when we're on our summer holidays and those we use in December when we're with friends whose judgment of us keeps our manners on tiptoe.

But if our manners aren't "jellied" into good manners; if we've parked them at home when we leave; if we think that our vacation-days are an open season for slackened manners, we're missing a wonderful opportunity to make and to hold friends of the kind we'll be happy and proud to have. Yes, the word is self-development.

Give your attractive qualities full scope to be appreciated . . .let them come out in the sun. But keep remembering that when you're meeting new people, your less attractive qualities also will inevitably stand out in bold relief. You may deplore the fact that the new people you're meeting are critical, but the worthwhile ones will be critical, for they have only your manners to judge you by. Don't give them an opportunity to classify you as "ill-bred", "unmannerly", "loud", 'crude", or—worst of all —"common".

Don't make the mistake of resolving to "be youself" unless that "self" is something you're going to be proud of.

Don't give yourself away at once by acknowledging an introduction by saying "Pleased to meet you" . . . it won't tax your strength to say the more correct "How do you do?"

Don't let your tongue get out of control. Say kind, graceful things that will please others. Passing along gossip, unkind remarks, won't make you popular.

Don't let your emotions go haywire. Because there will undoubtedly be few civilian men about, don't act hysterical about trying to get a date with one! And if there are servicemen about, don't think that a uniform is an introduction. And if you have any sense at all you won't go alone on dates with strangers . . . . the stranger may be a gentleman, or he may be a cad who will cost you a lifetime of unhappiness and repentence.

Tip On Popularity

You have to care about people to have them care about you. You just can't sit on the sidelines and wait for people to like you. People who are popular work at showing interest in people and in their interests. They show an understanding attitude toward them, constantly try to see their point of view. They bring them out by talking with them, by attentively and charmingly listening to them.

Anniversary Dance at I.T.S. Much Enjoyed

A record crowd of music and dance lovers thronged the gymnasium of the No. 5 I.T.S. on Wednesday evening to celebrate the second anniversary of the school and to express the school's jubilation because of the fact that they had received the Minister of Air's efficiency pennant for Initial Training Schools.

The dance hall, gaily decorated in multi hues of red, blue, white, pink and yellow, contributed a note of colour to the gala occasion and the girls' dresses in crisp cool cottons, dancing with escorts in summer uniforms, to the "hot and soft" strains of the 6 R. D. Orchestra, completed the festive picture.

A stage show, with Flt. Lieut. Green as master-of-ceremonies, was conducted and afforded a great deal of merriment. LAC. Harry "Duke" Ellsworth, of Montreal, with his cornet and LAC. Phoebe Enim, at the piano, delighted their audience with several swing numbers. A number of unique and realistic imitations received loud applause, LAC. Stocksworth as Winston Churchill; LAC. Dow as President Roosevelt; LAC. Haley as Joseph Stalin; WO2 Hindman as Hitler; Sgt. Rider as Hirohito and Sgt. Hamilton as Mussolini.

Group Captain A. J. Snetsinger, C.O., of the station, extended a welcome, on behalf of the school, to each and everyone of the visitors and guests. "This is your party, you chaps and these girls are your guests, so show them a good time." A great deal of credit for the success of this dance is attributed to the committee for the decoration of the drill hall, G. C. Snetsinger said. He stated further that D. I. G. had great praise for all the personnel of the station and he, himself, expressed his deep appreciation to the school for winning the pennant. In conclusion he thanked everyone for coming and said: "I am sure you have made the second anniversary of the school a most memorable one."

Fashion Flashes

FROM HERE it looks like a big satin season. Black satin sheath frocks with dulled accessories or dull fabrics with satin hats, bags or trimmings, seems to be the line-up. A nice hat is a black satin calot with an enormous self bow at one side.

The trend is in the direction of trim coats inspired by the lines of the officer's coat. Ready for Autumn showing is an officer's type coat in chartreuse of fine woollen with a wide collar and notched revers of nutria. Vertical pocket flaps, and a belt in back that crosses an inverted pleat.

There's a load of black around these summer nights. One pretty miss was admired in a short-skirted black crepe dress with saw-tooth edging on the square neckline, short sleeves and apron front. Pink and white tulips thrust through waistband at the side. Long black suede gloves.

Getting along into the autumn you'll be seeing a lot of those dressed-up after-dark wool frocks. A smart model, in black woollen, has a frilled jabot of black lace embroidered in jet and sequin, with matching frills at the hem of the long tight sleeve. A jet bugle bead sash loops up the skirt drape.

Turn in Your Hampers.—Shortage of wood and manpower make it imperative that no fruit baskets, hampers or crates be destroyed and, where possible, housewives are asked to turn in their used containers. Most stores, pedlars or dealers will pay prices up to three cents depending on the size and condition of the used article.

Same Price For Boots:—An increase in the price of leather footwear to the retailer will not result in consumers paying higher prices. Moreover, manufacturers will be able to purchase leather from the tanner at a discount of four per cent.

Have You Form R.C. 40?—Where a lease involves a change of tenant, change of rental, or change in services, equipment or accommodation supplied by the landlord, the landlord is required by law to file with the tenant and the rentals administration an application known as Form R.C. 40.

One Tube—20 Water Canteens: The recovered tin from one tube of tooth paste is sufficient to plate 20 water canteens or supply the tin ingredients in 20 rounds of shells. Since September 1942 until the end of June 205,681 pounds of tubes have been collected.

Orderly Ration Books.—Housewives can co-operate in the rationing scheme by destroying the coupons that have expired. Keeping the ration book in good order is one way of helping the retailer.

The Marry-Go-Round

Love On Toast

Matrimony is something like a popular movie theatre;; half the people in the world are rushing to get it, and the other half are struggling to get out of it.

The "meanest girl in the world" has been discovered. She is one who will encourage a sailor to lavish trinkets, flowers and expensive perfumes on her—and then use them as bait to catch a soldier or a marine.

A diplomat is a man who can make a girl believe that the reason he's late for a date is because he is so thrilled at the thought of seeing her that he forgot to look at the time.

Lots of the thrill of wearing a women's service uniform consists in thinking how much better your legs look in the short skirts than some other girl's.

When a man keeps looking at his watch, dear girl, it may be a sign that he has a brand new watch—but it is more likely to be a sign that he has a brand new heart-interest waiting somewhere.

Many a city man seems to imagine that planting a war-garden is a sort of cross between playing a round of golf and digging for fishing worms.

When a man reaches the point where he can kiss a girl with his eyes wide open, and miss nothing that is going on around him, his love is already in a coma and about ready for the last rites.

From their sudden and direct methods, you'd fancy that some modern lovers had learned all they know about love-making from their military training or their practice manoeuvres.

"Boundless love" is the kind that a man usually gives to the girl to whom he is not legally bound—at least, not yet.

IF BABY IS CROSS FIND OUT WHY

HEALTHY BABIES are not cross. Your baby should not be cross. If he is, then something in his little system is "out of order." Probably Baby's Own Tablets can promptly "put it right." Mrs. H——, of [illegible], tells her experience. She writes: "My little girl was irritable, feverish and sometimes sick at her stomach—what a relief it was, after giving her Baby's Own Tablets, to see how much better she was."

Sweet-tasting—easily crushed to a powder, if desired—absolutely free from harmful narcotics or opiates. Promptly effective in simple fevers, diarrhoea, colds, constipation, simple croup, colic, teething troubles and other minor ills.

Never be without a full box of Baby's Own Tablets. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

Water Important In Egg Production

In view of the large number of eggs required this season to fulfill the contract with Britain and to supply the domestic demand, the Dominion Department of Agriculture stresses the importance of water for poultry. Birds need an abundance of clean, fresh water before them at all times, especially at laying time — the early morning and afternoon. Lack of sufficient water means lowered egg production. A bird seeks a drink of water the first thing after leaving its nest, and birds will drink more water when it is kept fresh than when it is changed only once a day. Water should be renewed often and containers cleansed at least once daily. Egg quality also is lowered when birds are forced to drink dirty stagnant water.

Birds have no sweat glands. They depend on their lungs to throw off body moisture. Prolonged lack of water means parched lungs and suffering.

Lt. Peter Krug Is Recaptured

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 5.—(CP) —Lieut. Peter Krug, German prisoner of War who escaped Monday night from a prison camp near Gravenhurst, has been recaptured on the Canadian Pacific Railway Station at North Bay, it was announced today.

Krug, who has escaped several times from prison camps, was a witness last year in the case of Max Stephan of Detroit, who was charged with treason for befriending the Nazi bomber pilot after he escaped from a camp at Bowmanville, Ont., April 17, 1942.

In that escape Krug roamed 3,000 miles around the United States, visiting Chicago and New York as well as Detroit before being arrested in San Antonio, Texas.

Led to Conviction

Krug's testimony against Stephan led to the conviction of the Detroit restaurant owner who was sentenced to be hanged last July 2. After appeals which took the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, President Roosevelt commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

Tuesday police at Windsor investigated the possibility that Krug had again sought to enter the U.S. there. The investigation following the firing of a warning shot by T. Cody, special constable of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on guard duty at the Windsor-Detroit Ambassador Bridge, at a man wearing swimming trunks and a white shirt who failed to halt at his command.

Krug's escape from Gravenhurst Camp was discovered at a roll call after the prisoners had been swimming Monday afternoon.

Detective Describes to Court De Marigny's Hatred of Oakes

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 5 (AP) — A detective reported yesterday that Alfred de Marigny sat near the room where his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes was brutally slain and told of his hatred for the 68-year-old multi-millionaire baronet.

Testifying at a preliminary hearing for the 35-year-old de Marigny, who is charged with murder, Capt. E. W. Melchen of the Miami police quoted remarks he attributed to the prisoner in a long interview which occurred at Westbourne, the Oakes estate, the day after Sir Harry's burned and bludgeoned body was found July 8.

"He told me of his marriage to Sir Harry's eldest daughter, Nancy," Melchen declared. "He said Oakes was very bitter and hated him for marrying her.

"He told me of some heated arguments that he and Oakes had regarding operations performed or to be performed.

"'I hated him because he was a stupid old fool who couldn't be reasoned with,' de Marigny said."

Melchen said de Marigny was infuriated about a letter which he said Walter W. Foskett, Sir Harry's counsel at Palm Beach, had received from his former wife, Ruth de Marigny.

"'Foskett showed the letter to Nancy and to her mother,' Melchen quoted de Marigny. "'It was a filthy letter and not one that could be shown to a lady.'

"De Marigny said he believed that Foskett exhibited the letter in an effort to cause a breach between him and the Oakes family.

Melchen related de Marigny's account of a gift of $10,000 from Lady Oakes soon after the marriage.

"He said that he and Nancy felt like the money was a gift to a poor relation or to an orphan, and Nancy returned the money. He said also that Nancy hated Foskett for showing the letter," the detective went on.

"De Marigny said he had no interest in Nancy's finances and added that he could take care of her. He said he knew that Nancy would receive a full share of the estate, but that he had no interest in it."

Melchen testified that he asked de Marigny to go with him to a quiet place on the second floor of Westbourne where they could talk without interruption.

He declared that de Marigny had no opportunity then to touch a screen, which had stood near Sir Harry's bed and on which Capt. James O. Baker of the Miami police testified yesterday he found the print of the prisoner's right little finger.

Earlier, Melchen had quoted de Marigny as saying that he had not entered Westbourne for three years until he learned of the slaying.

Melchen was on the witness stand throughout today's session. He and Barker were summoned to Nassau July 8 by the Duke of Windsor, governor of The Bahamas, who asked that they bring over scientific equipment to help solve the murder.

Melchen gave for the first time de Marigny's account of his activities the night of the slaying. The accused man told of a dinner party at the house he shared with his life-long friend, the Marquis Georges de Viscelou Guimbeau. He drove to their homes, near Westbourne, two of the guests

"De Marigny related that he arrived home about 1.30 a.m. and retired immediately because he planned to go early that morning to his chicken farm", Melchen added.

"He said the marquis took a girl home at 2.45 and returned soon after 3. The marquis came to his bedroom and they talked, de Marigny said.

"De Marigny said he asked the marquis to take their cat upstairs because he was annoying him. He told of getting up early and going to the farm.

"He said he returned to town about 11 a.m., and learned then for the first time of the murder".

Introduced as evidence was a drawing of the murder scene which showed that a bloody towel was found in the room where Harold G. Christie, close friend and business associate of Sir Harry's, spent the night.

Barker testified yesterday that burned hairs were found on de Marigny's hands and arms, but that there was no sign of burns on Christie's body.

Cross-examining Melchen today, Defence Attorney Godfrey Higgs asked when Christie was examined for burns. The reply was the night of July 8.

Melchen declared that Harcourt Maura, Oakes' stable superintendent who had been discharged earlier, also was examined without result.

The detectives said a spray gun, which had been used to spray inflammable insecticide over Sir Harry's body, bed and room before a blaze started by the slayer, showed no fingerprints.

While the hearing was in progress today, 19-year-old Nancy was in a plane en route from Miami to New York. She said before leaving Nassau yesterday that she was making the trip in connection with the case. The pretty red-haired girl has maintained her faith in her husband's innocence.

From Melchen came testimony to indicate that Sir Harry put up a fight for his life, and tried to escape from his attacker even after he had been set afire.

"There was a newspaper under the right hip which was burned around the edges", Melchen said. "The unburned part under the body was wet through.

"There were several burned spots on the floor, and a large burned spot in front of the clothes cabinet, the door of which had been scorched and showed spots of liquid".

Melchen indicated that Sir Harry's body had been sprayed and a torch applied while he lay on the floor in front of the cabinet.

"The door to the hall was smoked on the hall side", Melchen continued. "A smudge on the hall wall indicated that a body had leaned against it, inclining toward the staircase railing.

This indicated, Melchen said that Sir Harry tried to get downstairs.

"There were several unidentifiable handprints on the wall near the door," he continued. "Others were on the wall beside the bed.

"The telephone book on the desk had reddish handprints, which looked like blood.

"A bloody hand towel was found in the bedroom adjoining Oakes', and there were several bloodspots in the bathroom.

Nancy Oakes in New York.

New York, Aug. 5 —(AP)— Nancy Oakes de Marigny, whose husband is charged at Nassau with the murder of her multi-millionaire father, Sir Harry Oakes, arrived here by plane from Miami today on a mission which she said was connected with her husband's defence.

The 19-year-old wife of Alfred de Marigny, 35, who was charged with bludgeoning his father-in-law to death in his Nassau home on July 7, told reporters at La Guardia Field:

"All I can say is that it (the trip) is in connection with the case. Naturally, he is innocent."

Clad in a black suit and white blouse, she said that her overnight stay in Miami yesterday also was in connection with the case, and added that while here "probably for a few days," she would stop with friends. She did not disclose where she would stay, or when she planned to return to Nassau.

She said that because she had to board the Miami-bound plane she heard only the first part of the preliminary hearing at Nassau yesterday where testimony was presented that a finger-print of de Marigny was found on a screen near the bed where Sir Harry was killed.

Major Leagues May Have Ten or More Twenty-Game Winning Pitchers This Year

Only Four Were Able to Make Grade One Year Ago

NATS HAVE FOUR

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Major Leagues may be able to boast of 10 or more 20 game winning pitchers this year compared to only four in 1942.

Where only Mort Cooper, Johnny Beazley, Ernie Bonham and Tex Hughson were able to make the grade a year ago, five twirlers already seem certain of reaching the coveted 20-game goal with 10 others having better than an even chance.

Topped, of course, by the veteran 35-year-old Rip Sewell, of Pittsburgh Pirates, the National League claims four of the five twirlers virtually certain of winning 20 games. Sewell has won 17 and lost two. Cooper, Cardinal ace, has a record of 15-6, Elmer Riddle, of Cincinnati, 14-5, and Hi Bithorn, of the Cubs, 13-8.

Spud Chandler, of New York Yankees, is the only American League pitcher within whistling distance of the charmed circle. He has won 13 and lost three. But Bonham, who won 21 for the Yankees last year, and Hughson, who was credited with 22 for Boston Red Sox in 1942, each have a chance to repeat. Big Ernie has won 10 and lost five for the Yanks; Hughson has chalked up 11 wins against seven setbacks.

Many in "Maybe" Class

In the "maybe" class may be placed Ray Starr of Cincinnati, 10-8; Claude Passeau, of the Cubs, 10-7; Oscar Judd, of the Red Sox, 10-6; Alex Carrasquel and Early Wynn, of Washington, 10-5 and 11-7, respectively; Jim Bagby and Al Smith, of Cleveland, 11-10 and 10-3, respectively; Dizzy Trout, of Detroit, 10-9 and Orval Grove, of the White Sox, 10-1.

Al Javery, of Boston Braves; Johnny Vander Meer, of the Reds; Virgil Trucks, of Detroit; and Buck Newsom, of the Browns, have an "outside" chance of hitting the 20-game mark. Each have won nine times.

Pittsburgh came up with four runs in the seventh inning to beat the Phillies, 6-2, in the only game played in both leagues yesterday.

Vince DiMaggio's 13th homer of the season, coming with one man on base, capped the uprising and gave Max Butcher his sixth win of the year.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 5. (AP)—Betcha never knew this—a collection of odd and unimportant items culled from Sports history.

Fifth Wheel.

Connie Mack's famous "$100,000" infield was composed of five men—stuffy McInnis, Eddie Collins, Jack Barry and Home Run Baker (the four you've heard about) and Danny Murphy, who cost Connie about $500. . . . Murphy arrived late for his first game with the A's on July 8, 1902, so Jud Castro played the first inning and got a hit. . . Then Murphy turned up and smacked six consecutive blows, so his late arrival cost him a chance to get his name into the record books with the all-time leaders.

Sounds Fishy.

When the first team of Finnish Athletes, including the Great Hannes Kohlemainen, came to the United States, Lawson Robertson escorted them on a trip to Canada. . . .Before entering a pullman car in the New York station, the Finns all removed their shoes. . . At lunch time someone brought out a suitcase big enough to hold a fiddle, extracted a wicked looking knife, a loaf of bread as long as the case, an equally large fish and sliced them down the middle for sandwiches. . By the time Paavo Nurmi followed their trail, the Finns had learned more about what can be done with an expense account.

Block Off the Old Chip.

George Chip, who bossed the Middleweight Division in 1913-14, probably was the only champion who lost his title while serving as a substitute. . . George's kid brother Joe had given an unknown named Al McCoy a licking but when a return bout was arranged in Brooklyn, Joe got hurt in training. . . The promoter thought it would be smart to get George to sub for his brother in a no decision affair. . . At the Bell, Chip swarmed all over McCoy; his first assault failed to put Al down and George stepped back to get his breath. . . As he relaxed a moment, a punch came from nowhere. The fight was all over in just 45 seconds and McCoy was the new champion.

Former Athletic Titlists Match Strides With Rookies

By the Canadian Press

In preparation for the Army track and field championship in Great Britain, a Canadian division ran off a sports program in which former athletic titlists matched strides with mere rookies of the cinder path. Typical clashes were the half and one-mile runs, the former being won by Lieut. C. A. Conway of Toronto, former Olympic runner, in 2:07 from Pte. A. J. Shartrand, Campberville, Man., who turned the tables on Conway in the mile with a 4:51.09 performance.

The star of the sprints was Cpl. W. H. Cox of Fort William whose times were 10.9 for the century and 24.4 in the 220-yard dash. Cox was also the anchor man for the 440-yard relay winners who included Pte. R. C. Gereau of Port Arthur, Pte. S. T. McNeil of Stavely Alta., and Gdsm. A. Drummond of Verdun, Que.

The divisional meet was featured by the presence of a large crowd, probably far in excess of the attendance for a pre-war meet in Canada. Prizes for the winners and runners-up were presented by Maj. F. F. Worthington.

Harness racing fans will have two additional weeks of their favored sport at Empire City track, New York where the sulky associations of New York State are holding a combined meeting, the added time being the weeks commencing Aug. 16 and Aug. 30.

Through injuries suffered in a fall from the balcony of an apartment building in Vancouver, Don Deacon, former player with Detroit Red Wings hockey club, is dead. J. Edward Eade, Acting Coroner, decided that death was accidental.

After firing and hiring managers and losing pitcher Si Johnson to U. S. Army in the bargain, President William Cox of the National Phillies started an ivory hunt. The club announced purchase of shortstop Ray Hamrick from the Nashville Club for a reported $25,000 and infielder Charlie Brewster.

The daily double payoff at Washington Park yesterday was $1,030 through the coupling of Stars At Night in the first dash and Maihigh in the second, both carrying the colors of W. W. Guernsey of Kansas City, O. Stars At Night paid $81.20 to win and Maihigh $28.80.

James V. Orlando, former Detroit Red Wings hockey player, yesterday gave notice of appeal at Detroit, through his lawyer, from the sentence of four years in prison and $2,000 fine after conviction in federal court for violating selective service regulations by giving false information.

John Stevens of St. Thomas entered golfing's Hall of Fame after efforts covering a period of 15 years when he holed his tee shot on the No. 2 hole of the St. Thomas Golf and Country Club. He used a No. 7 iron.

After winning 23 of his 25 fights in the past year, Al Costa, 146, of Woonsocket, R. I., decisioned George (Red) Doty, 145, Hartford, in 10 rounds.

London Army insured its hold on first place in the Inter-County Baseball race last night at the Forest City with a 3-2 win over Ingersoll Combines, breaking a 2-all deadlock in the ninth to take the decision. London had to use three twirlers, at that.

There will be no fall racing at Laurel, it was announced last night by President G. L. Stryker of Maryland State Fair, Inc., declaring that lifting the ban on pleasure driving would not afford the fans enough gas to drive to the track.

Toronto, Aug. 5. (CP)—Maybe there'll be a report before the week is out about a red, white and blue mare winning a race at Calgary's Victoria Park. If so it won't be because some reporter had the heeby-jeebies. Shortly after arrival at Victoria Park from Saskatoon, Edmunton Ball, five-year-old daughter of Barbican-Audrey Y, broke away from her handler and ran wild in a barn used to store hundreds of cans of paint of all colors. In her mad dash Edmunton Ball didn't miss any of it. Paint flew in every direction and the inside of the building now sports rainbow decorations. At last report, grooms were still trying to scrape paint from the mare. So begins the modern version of the bull in the china shop.

In Memory:—

Don Deacon, 30-year-old Regina athlete killed in an accident last weekend while serving with an army unit in Vancouver, might have been one of the National Hockey League's greatest stars had he been able to keep his weight down. That was the opinion of experts while Deacon served with the Detroit hockey chain. But Deacon failed to keep a ceiling on his avoirdupois which hovered between 190 and 200 pounds on a five-foot-nine frame. Even at that, in seven years of professional hockey with Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Indianapolis Don compiled a total of 122 goals, 159 assists for a total of 281 points, an average of 40 a season. His best year was 1938-39 with Pittsburgh when he scored 65 points. A year ago he enlisted and last season helped Calgary Army win the Alberta Senior Hockey title. A left-handed shot, Deacon played centre. After graduating from Regina Junior hockey ranks he played two seasons of Senior hockey with Prince Albert Mintos before turning professional.

Incidentally:—

And what's the wurrrld comin' too! The Scottish sports held at Antigonish, N.S., this year were staged at O'Brien Field. . . Johnny McCreedy, former Toronto Maple Leafs hockey star now on leave in Winnipeg, is posted to No. 12 Elementary Flying Training School, R.C.A.F., at Goderich, Ont., and hopes to be a pilot. . . Pat Griffin, Montreal oilers basketball ace who suffered an eye injury in the 1942 Canadian final with Victoria Dominoes, hopes he may be able to return to the game this year after missing one entire season. . .If the doctor turns thumbs down on his hopes to resume playing, Pat figures to do some coaching.

REIGN OF "TOAR" MORGAN ENDED IN LOCAL RING

John Katan Defeats Ex-Marine and Wins Bout With Champion

GOOD PRELIMS

Although two thousand fans howled in disapproval at the Hume Arena against John Katan, the Palermo assassin, villainous John not only put an end to the popular reign of "Toar" Morgan, but also won for himself a bout with the world's champion, "Wild Bill" Longson here next week.

Actually most everything went as Morgan and Katan battled to the last draw for a shot at the crown now held by Longson. The fans did not like the decisions of Referee Bert Maxwell and made their feelings well exemplified by attacking the night's official until police had to step in and escort Mr. Maxwell to his dressing room.

The popular Morgan won the first fall following a series of flying tackles and a press. Katan evened matters in the middle round by slamming Morgan to the canvas, but the patrons did not like Referee Maxwell's quick and rapid count for a fall and police were needed to escort Mr. Maxwell to his haven. Finally Katan used his superb power and flattened Morgan with a back-breaker and press to win himself a bout with the world champion, "Wild Bill" Longson at the local palace de sport next Wednesday.

Fighting inside and outside of the ring, Al Dunlop and Doc Felice hauled, pushed and pulled to a 30 minute draw in the opener with continued sustained action. When it came to entertainment, Pat Flanagan and Joe Maich put on the real show of the evening, applying the best season's show of agility and contortional efforts until Flannagan finally won with a drop kick and press.

KINGSTON PONIES PLAY IN TOURNEY

Tip Tops and Montreal Given Byes in the Finals

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—The final drive toward the Canadian amateur baseball championship gets underway here tonight when Halifax Navy meets London Army and Kingston Ponies play Hamilton Coops in a preliminary round to the semi-final of the National Baseball Congress tournament.

The winners of the preliminary round play in a semi-final double-header Friday night along with Toronto Tip-Tops and Montreal R.C.A.F., who were given byes into the semi-final.

Halifax Navy shows several Ontario names in its lineup, including Ernie Beland, formerly of Brantford, Eddy Parker of St. Catharines and Bud Heximer of Windsor and Niagara Falls. Parker is a pitcher, Heximer is a centre fielder and Beland a shortstop.

Pete White, London moundsman, is expected to give the Haligonians a good workout. White has been turning in good performances in the Inter-County League and has been largely instrumental in the London soldiers holding the top spot in the league. Doug Ralbraith, who played professional hockey with Hershey Bears, is London's second baseman.

Kingston Ponies, Central Ontario champions, are offering a mixture of veterans and youth as opposition to the Hamilton Coops. Joe Corkey and Bob Elliott are scheduled as the Ponies' catchers while Arnie Jarrell, Jake Edwards and How Wilson will form the Kingston pitching staff. The Ponies have a strong infield and outfield lined up against a formidable Hamilton club.

Toronto Tip-Tops owe much of their success to Stan Stenoff who pitched the Tailors to victory over Trenton R.C.A.F. and Army invaders last weekend in the Toronto district series. Other clubs competing in the championship series were elected by district officials.

GOOD PITCHING SEEN IN GAMES IN INT. LEAGUE

Polli of Jersey City a Standout With a Losing Club

TORONTO IDLE

By the Associated Press

Louis Americo (Crip) Polli is one of the real International League veterans and its his misfortune this year to toil for Jersey City Giants. The little Giants are at the bottom of the standing and they've been shut out oftener than any other team in the league, which is somewhat of a handicap for a pitcher.

But Louis Americo managed to mark up his 11th victory of the season yesterday, as compared to seven losses, when the Jerseys put on the day's only hitting show to beat the Rochester Red Wings 4-1. Crip yielded only five hits and three walks and whitewashed the Wings until the eighth, when his mates already has pounded Bill Trotter hard enough to win.

Good pitching was in order all down the line yesterday as Montreal's Bob Chipman started with three-hit tossing against Newark to take the first half of a afternoon doubleheader, 4-2. The nightcap went to Newark, 1-0, as Walt Dubiel and Lloyd Dietz both was making his first start for the Royals, came in the seventh and last inning for the only run as Don Savage doubled and scored on Joe Dwyer's single.

Rufe Gentry and Ed Klieman allowed three hits apiece as Buffalo whipped Baltimore, 1-9. Klieman, aiming at his 20th victory, gave up a walk and two singles in the third and that cost him the ball game as Gentry passed only the batsmen and fanned seven. Johnny Bero's basehit, bringing in Pat McNair from second, accounted for the lone run.

Donald (Scotty) MacGregor, new back for the professional Philadelphia Eagles' football team, is shown in action. Scotty came to the Eagles from the Iowa state penitentiary, where he just finished serving four years and 10 months in prison for a prank that a judge couldn't regard as funny. Not long out of high school, MacGregor and some companions went out on a party one night in Des Moines. They borrowed an automobile without bothering to ask the owner's permission, and Scotty went to jail. The Eagles management is grateful to that humorless judge, for they say it made a football player of MacGregor. He was the sparkplug of the prison team.

NEW MANAGER OF PHILLIES

Freddie Fitzsimmons is congratulated by William Cox, owner of the Philadelphia Phillies, as Fitzsimmons made his debut as manager of the Phillies. The Phillies won the first game managed by Fitzsimmons and broke the St. Louis Cardinals' winning streak at 11 games.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Kingston —(CP)— The entry of Kingston Ponies in the National Playoffs of the Canadian Baseball Congress, commencing at Hamilton tonight, marks the return of the team to organized ball since the old Central Ontario League was outlawed by the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association five years ago.

Detroit —(AP)— Owner-trainer Otto Johr was indefinitely suspended yesterday by Detroit Fairgrounds Association after a saliva test revealed the presence of caffeine on Prince Waygo following a track victory by the horse.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., —(AP) —Because of conditions, yesterday's card of harness racing at the Kite Track was called off and the features have been added to today's program to make up no less than 17 dashes.

Niagara Falls —(CP)— Stamford Park will be the scene of a meeting from Saturday, Aug. 21, to Labor Day, Sept. 6, with a total of $60,000 in purses, it was announced yesterday by P. G. Demetre, managing director, the opening feature to be a six-furlong handicap for three-year-olds and upwards.

Montreal, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Lachine R.C.A.F. forced a four-way tie in the Quebec Senior Lacrosse League standing last night when they sent Canadiens down to a decisive 11-4 defeat.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 136

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

I'm glad to get rid of E. Getzmena Fix. That partner will never be missed. He likes to keep raising without enough tricks whenever he makes an assist.

Each raise uses up another trick. Without an additional trick, a partner should not increase the number in the current contract of his pair.

You have this hand:

♠8 6 4 2
♥A K Q 5
♦9
♣A 8 4 3

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. You have six tricks: Two aces, a king, a queen, two short cards in diamonds. Your opening bid consumes five tricks. You have an unused trick.

Suppose partner responds with one spade. Your second round bid is two spades. You have adequate support for an assist in spades. You have an unused trick for the raise.

Suppose one of your small clubs was a small diamond. That would make you only one short card in diamonds. Your hand would then contain only five tricks.

With only five tricks, you would have no additional trick for a raise. In spite of your support for spades, you would not have enough tricks for a raise to two spades.

What should you do in a case like that? You dare not pass. Why? Because a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Partner's takeout to one spade forces you to bid again.

You will never select the wrong old if you stick to these two simple Horse Sense rules: Don't raise without enough tricks; follow T-A-N; takeout, first; assist, next; no-trump last.

You have no new suit takeout. Your heart suit is not rebiddable for an old suit takeout. You have not enough tricks for an assist raise. So, what's left? Only one no-trump.

An untrue word to the unwise is sufficient to create evil thereof.

LESSON NO. 137

Horse Sense is almost monotonously repetitious. Do you know why? All hands fit into the groove guided by T-A-N; take-out, first; assist, second; no-trump, last.

Don't raise the last partnership contract unless you have another trick. Follow the order in T-A-N. And you are strictly on the beam no matter what kind of a hand you have.

You have this hand:

♠9 6 5
♥Q 7
♦A K J 9
♣A 8 4 3

Your opening bid with that hand is one diamond. You have all the needed values for such a bid; five tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks, a biddable diamond suit.

But you have nothing more in any item. Not even in tricks. So any future bids you make must not increase partner's last bid. Because you have no unused trick for a raise.

Suppose your partner responds with a bid of one heart. That is a takeout to a new suit. And a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. So you are forced to bid again.

Following T-A-N-, you have no new biddable suit for a takeout. Nor is your diamond suit rebiddable for a takeout to that. Nor have you adequate support for an assist in hearts.

Thus, no suit bid is on tap. But you must not pass. Because your partner has forced you to bid. So you resort to the only kind of a bid that is left; no-trump.

Your second round bid is thus one no-trump. Notice that one no-trump is not a raise over partner's one heart bid. It does not consume any additional trick.

Suppose you had a biddable suit or a rebiddable diamond suit. Or suppose you had adequate support for hearts. You could not show either. You have no unused trick for a raise.

USE PLANES IN ROUNDUP

By HYE BOSSIN

You've heard of the pinup girls who decorate the walls of barracks but how about pinup boys? They're a fact. The girls in the services have male wallflowers, their favorites being Alan Ladd, Tyrone Power, John Payne, Jon Hall and Clark Gable—in that order. . . . Marlene Dietrich, who used to be a German star, now broadcasts against the Nazis in Spanish and Portuguese via short wave to South America. Marlene, whose heart interest is said to be Jean Gabin, the French star, is an accomplished violinist, the concert stage having been her early ambition. Her daughter was recently signed by one of the studios. . . . Ida Lupino will star in the remake of "Of Human Bondage," thus offering a direct comparison of her talents with those of Bette Davis, who starred in the original film.

• • •

Deanna Durbin, the Winnipeg-born star, has just finished "Hers to Hold," in which she stars with Joseph Cotten and it is reported to be the best film she ever made. This is due to Director Frank Ryan, who has some unorthodox ideas about film making.

Love, says Ryan, is never honestly portrayed in pictures. The screen "has plenty of yes-men. What it needs are more yes-women." The heroine loves the hero but won't tell him. That's dishonest. "It oughtn't be that way in real life," he says, "and it oughtn't be that way on the screen."

Ryan, a nationally-known cartoonist, came to Hollywood a few years ago to draw some pictures. He sold some comedy ideas to a studio and soon became a writer. Now he's an important director.

Errol Flynn, Hollywood's most-publicized star, has written a book about his life called "Charlie Bow-Tie Proceeds." . . . Little Jackie Jenkins, the five-year-old son of actress Doris Dudley who stars in "The Human Comedy," is the grandson of Bide Dudley, a famed critic, who saw the film 17 times. Asked if it was good he answered: "I don't know. I see it as a grandfather—not a critic." . . . A theatre manager noticed that a small boy was watching the show during a midweek matinee. "Shouldn't you be in school?" he asked the lad. "No, sir," was the answer, "I've got the measles!" . . . "For Whom the Bell Tolls" cost $3,000,000 to make—$1,000,000 for every hour it runs. . . . Gary Cooper is playing the role of Dr. Wassell in a film about the brave army doctor. The real Dr. Wassell is in the film also—as an extra.

AT THE BELLE

"Blossoms in Dust"

You may never have noticed it but actors' and actresses' lips form words on the screen before their voices come from the amplifier behind it!

Take for example Walter Pidgeon co-starred with Academy Award winner, Greer Garson in "Blossoms in the Dust," the Technicolor romantic drama now on the Belle theater screen.

If you see the picture you'll be able to catch him in the act. For the time that elapses between his forming of the words and their sounding in your ears amounts to only one-1,200,000th of a second!

The reason is this. Light and electricity travel at the same speed—180,000 miles a second. But on studio stages, where action is recorded by light, and sound by electricity, there's a difference in recording the two. Light is paced up by the camera, only a few feet away from the action and recorded immediately on the film. Sound on the other hand, is picked up immediately by microphones, but travels a quarter of a mile by wire from the mikes to the recording room.

It takes one-7,200,000th of a second for the electricity to travel the quarter of a mile of wire. Figure it out for yourself!

"Blossoms in the Dust" is a picture that will give you ninety minutes of real enjoyment. Come share the colorful romance of a colorful woman....enhanced by Rainbow Technicolor.

"The Great Waltz", Outstanding

AT THE McCARTHY

"Canadians In Sicily"

Flown across the Atlantic by Associated British Newsreel, the special reel on Canadian and Allied activity in Sicily is a honey. Nobody who sees these new films will have any illusions on the subject. These are plenty sensational. You probably wondered, after seeing previous films on the subject, why there was so much comment in the press about the boys being so seasick when it came time to land. These films at the McCarthy will show you. They have some swell scenes of the storm which hit the great convoys in the Mediterranean, and one sequence in particular showing one of the barage balloons getting out of control and bouncing off the surging waves is particularly good.

While previous newsreel pictures gave the impression that the landing was a compartively peaceful affair, and unopposed, these new films tell a very different story. they show you ships being blitzed by enemy planes, bursting into flame and even exploding when direct hits were made by enemy bombs. They also show you very live stuff taken from shipboard, showing bombs hitting the water very close. You can clearly see the spatter of the machine-gun bullets in the water as the enemy planes dived at the convoy.

Landing scenes on the beaches are more comprehensive and elaborate than any shown to date, with considerable footage given to scenes of the boys getting ashore, passing along supplies, and to various mechanized craft making their way in through the surf from the landing barges.

In earlier scenes there is an interesting sequence showing Maj.-Gen. Simonds attending divine service on shipboard with the Canadian troops while the convoy was en route to Sicily.

Just for the record, there are numerous close-ups of the happy faces of Italian prisoners (making the V for Victory sign with their fingers) which gives the lie to previous comments that it was forbidden to show the faces of prisoners. There's an amusing scene, too, of some Italians surrendering to a Canadian named Mussolini. So help me.

As usual, the photography is excellent and the sepia tinting adds to the effectiveness of the reel. The whole thing represents a triumph in quick action in getting these scenes of Canadian interest to Canadian screens.

Two new feature attractions are also being presented. "Crime Doctor" starring Warner Baxter, Margaret Lindsay and John Litel. 2nd feature hit "Thumbs up" with Brenda Joyce and Richard Fraser.

"Texas to Bataan"

Old time tunes and some of the present day hits are included in the selections offered by the Range Busters in "Texas to Bataan", newest Monogram western thriller, opening tonight at the Capitol as the added hit.

Fall of Catania and Orel Severe Losses for Hitler

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

A couple of stout spikes have been driven into the coffin of Hitlerism in the capture of two highly strategic cities—Orel on the flaming Russian front, and ancient Catania in the northeast corner of Sicily.

Both these cities were vital anchor points for the Nazis.

The heavily-fortified and strongly-held railway centre of Orel has for almost two years been the hinge for Hitler's great battle line between this point, not far south of Moscow, and the Sea of Azov.

Catania, crouching under the great volcano of Etna, has been the powerful position to which the Nazis and Italians hooked the left wing of the front which they threw across the last remaining tip of northeast Sicily in defence of Messina and access to the Italian mainland, only two miles across the Strait from that port.

These two operations are parts of offensives acting as a pair of mighty pincers on the German front in Russia. If the Russians have the reserve power with which to follow up their notable capture of Orel, it will endanger Hitler's entire right wing, and victory in Sicily brings the Allies nearer to possible invasion of the Balkans, which would further jeopardize that Nazi right wing.

In short, Hitler is being pushed steadily towards that day when he will have to pull back his entire vast line of more than 1,000 miles in Russia in order to reach new positions which will afford greater security.

While this is a historic moment for the Allies, we should remember that fierce fighting lies ahead in both theatres.

In Sicily the terrain within the remainingtriangle which the Axis forces are defending is rugged and hilly. It's well adapted to defence and has been strongly fortified. There are said to be close to 100,000 Nazi troops assigned to the desperate task of holding this "last ditch," something more than half of them being Germans.

Thus we have the makings of a great battle among the innumerable hilly strongholds, many of which probably will have to be taken at the point of the bayonet—assuming that the Axis forces don't fold up, and there's been no indication of this yet among the Germans. Ultimately the enemy must surrender or be annihilated, for there is no escape from this triangular trap fir the vast majority of the Axis troops.

It's too soon to assay the full import of the Red capture of Orel. The cracking of the major fortress represents one of the great victories of the war. Into it have gone the lives of many scores of thousands of fighting men of both Germany and Russia.

Result Satisfying Says Col. Drew

Toronto, Aug. 5. (CP)—Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Progressive Conservative Leader, last night expressed satisfaction at the "rebuke administered to the Nixon government's record" in yesterday's general election.

At a reception following announcement of the results, he said the C.C.F. undoubtedly "benefitted from the calling of an election at this time".

"The result is close", he added, "closer than we expected, perhaps. The result is personally very satisfying because we have held this (Toronto High Park) riding. The most important factor, apart from the government's defeat,was the very strong showing of the C.C.F."

A statement issued by Col. Drew, shortly after midnight when it became known his party had obtained the largest representation of any group in the election, said: "Our effort will be to carry into effect the progressive program in which we believe.

"Above all, our effort will be directed toward making this province worthy of the young men and women who deserve the best that this country can offer them".

Sir Harry Oakes Afire Before He Got Into Hall

(By E. V. W. JONES)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug 5.—(AP)—A Miami police officer told today of signs which indicated that 68-year-old Sir Harry Oakes, his clothing afire, attempted to break loose from his attacker the night he was bludgeoned and burned to death in his sumptuous estate, Westbourne.

Capt. E. W. Melchen, one of two officers summoned from Miami, Fla., by the Duke of Windsor to help investigate the slaying, was the first witness today at a preliminary hearing for Sir Harry's son-in-law, Alfred De Marigny, who is charged with the murder of the multi-millionaire gold miner.

"It appeared", Melchen told Magistrate F. E. Field, "that Sir Harry first was set afire while he lay on the floor not far from his bed.

"The indications are that he tried to go down the hall to the stairway.

"There were smudges on the hall wall where his body fell against it. There were burns and soot spots, too, on the stairs and the rail.

"This indicates that he was afire before he got into the hall".

De Marigny smiled at acquaintances in the small court room as he made his fifth appearance before Field. His 19-year-old wife, Nancy, Oakes' eldest daughter, heard part of yesterday's testimony, but left in the afternoon for Miami, saying she was going on an errand in connection with the case.

She was en route to New York by airplane today.

Melchen related the events of July 8, the day Sir Harry's body was found on the bed in his room by Harold G. Christie, a house guest at Westbourne.

He said there were bloody towels in the bathroom adjoining Sir Harry's bedroom.

The defence was wasting no opportunities to challenge point by point the prosecution's testimony.

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 4—(CP) Defence attorneys are quickly challenging point by point the government's testimony in the hearing for Alfred De Marigny, charged with the slaying of his father-in-law, wealthy Sir Harry Oakes.

When Capt. James O. Barker, Miami identification expert, testified yesterday that De Marigny's fingerprint was on a screen in the bedroom where Sir Harry's bludgeoned body was found July 8, defence attorney Godfrey Higgs swiftly brought out that some prints were not obtained from the screen until a day after the discovery.

Barker explained that humidity had made it impossible to complete the job in one day.

Higgs also brought out that other prints on the screen had been identified, including those of Harold G. Christie, Sir Harry's business associate who discovered the body, those of the medical examiner and of Major Herbert Pemberton of the Colonial police.

De Marigny appeared pale and haggard as he listened closely to the careful exchange of questions and answers before Magistrate F. E. Field.

Capt. Edward W. Melchen, of the Miami Homicide Bureau was the first scheduled witness as the preliminary hearing was called for resumption today.

In his testimony yesterday, Capt. Barker related that De Marigny had "considerable hair burns" on his hands and arms. Sir Harry's body had been sprinkled with an insecticide and set on fire, and flames spread through the room. Barker said anyone in the room "would have suffered burned hairs."

Crew of Plane Is Exonerated

Brandon, Man., Aug. 5. (CP)—A coroner's jury last night decided that Lloyd Wesley Shields, 22, of Roseland, Man., was accidentally killed by a bomb from a Royal Canadian Air Force plane while at an outdoor dance near Roseland, July 17. The jury's verdict exonerated the crew of the plane from any blame.

The bomb was accidentally released from a training aircraft operating from No. 5 Air Observers' School during a routine bombing exercise, said an R.C.A.F. statement after the mishap.

The jury recommended that identification marks be placed on bombing areas to permit recognition of targets from any angle of approach.

WOLF IS SHOT IN PASTURE FIELD

Surprising a pack of four wolves in his pasture field two and a half miles east of Thomasburg, and about a quarter of a mile from his barn, James Wilson, farmer, Wednesday shot one dead as they were chasing his collie. Mr. Wilson used a one-barreled shotgun. The rest fled at the sound of the gun.

Mr. Wilson who brought the pelt to the city for shipment to the Game and Fisheries Department, Toronto, in claim for bounty said that the one he shot was probably a February pup and that the pack comprised an old wolf and three pups.

It was grey in color and weighed 32 pounds.

Mr. Wilson had been at the barn and seen the wolves in the field and his dog, which had battles with wolves and suffered laming in one leg the other night in an encounter with them, went out, the wolves following him. Mr. Wilson hurried back to the house and brought out the gun and found the wolves so busy with the collie that "I got within ten yards of them, as the dog ran towards me with them following."

"It is a common occurrence to see wolves," said the farmer. Last Thursday night there were three in a pack and I shot at one and missed it. I have seen them in the field while I have been cultivating, sometimes two, three or four. One night I got up and shot at them by the moonlight."

Mr. Wilson had ceased raising sheep two years ago as all the lambs had been lost and wolves had killed some of the ewes on neighboring farms.

He gave the assurance he had never known of wolves in that section attacking a human being for "they run if they see you."

The dog which figured in the incident is not bit afraid of the intruders and is ready to be 'sicked' on wolves.

It is thought that the animals have a den in a swamp for they hve been seen both south and north of that place.

Post-Election Statements by Candidates

R. D. ARNOTT
Progressive Conservative

"I do not think a coalition government should be formed," was Mr. R. D. Arnott's comment when called upon for a statement. The successful West Hastings candidate stated that he was convinced that there would be another election in the spring of next year.

The way the government carried on this election removes them from any possible collaboration. The people should not have any confidence in them and I think George Drew should carry on without support from either. I am quite confident that the people of Ontario need a man like George Drew to carry out the platform as brought out by him to be the leader of the Government in Ontario.

"The way the vote turned out makes me more confident that George Drew will be Premier again should a spring election be called."

"In our leader we have a man who is an outstanding statesman and a spokesman for the people," said Mr. Arnott in conclusion.

COL. ROSCOE VANDERWATER
Liberal

"The way I view the situation," said Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, West Hastings candidate for the Liberal party, discussing Wednesday's election results, "is that this is war time and the war is still with us and the only solution is a coalition between the Progressive-Conservative and Liberal parties.

"The leader of the C.C.F. party has gone on public record with the statement that he is unwilling to co-operate with either of the other two parties and the legislation of the Province of Ontario must be carried on without further political strife.

"I am convinced that the Government will go to the people again for the settlement of this inevitable dispute."

ROSCOE ROBSON
Progressive Conservative

The late vote in Hastings and Ontario was evidence that holding an election during Harvest and Holiday Season showed poor judgment on the part of the Government, said Roscoe Robson in his statement to the press the morning after the election.

"Hastings East, on Wednesday, put the stamp of approval on Col. Drew's policy in no uncertain manner. I am wonderfully well satisfied with the support given me by the electors and want to express my appreciation and thanks to those who supported me and those who worked so hard to make my large majority possible.

Now that the Election is over, my one ambition is to serve all the people of Hastings East without discrimination concluded Mr. Robson.

D. W. BEWS
C. C. F.

"I think it is a wonderful victory for the C. C. F. in Ontario and all our workers should have a great feeling of satisfaction for their efforts in this election," said Mr. Douglas W. Bews, defeated candidate of the C. C. F. Party in Hastings West.

"In this county we have made good progress and have established the C. C. F. in every division, every township, town and city. Our fight for better conditions has already been felt and it is our duty to continue this fight into the Federal field or anywhere we may find conditions which need improvement."

"We will support Col. Drew if he keeps his promises. That is what we entered this fight for. If he brings out any of his twenty-two points that we think are good, we will back him to the full, but we will not agree to the formation of a coalition between ourselves and either of the two parties. In this we will stand firmly behind Mr. Jolliffe.

CAN. NURSING SISTERS FIRST NURSES IN SICILY

Hospital Personnel Given Royal Reception by the Troops After Landing

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 5—(CP Cable)—Canadian Nursing Sisters were the first women of the Allied forces to reach Sicily after the invasion of the island July 10.

Acting as personnel of a Canadian military hospital, and recruited mostly in Winnipeg and other points in Western Canada, the nurses are tending Canadian wounded a score of miles behind the front line.

The girls were given a royal reception by the troops after they landed from a transport which brought the hospital from Britain by way of North Africa. As they moved inland in lorries, soldiers literally showered the girls with gifts of tins of tomatoes, lemons, ice cream and melons.

From Blighty

When one of the trucks stopped beside a motorcycle parked on a side road the rider exclaimed: "Women, for gosh sakes. Where'd you come from—Blighty?"

The girls chorused, "Yes." It developed he was from Taplow Bucks where the hospital was last located in England.

She was followed by Lieut. Tremnie Hunter of Winnipeg who explained, "the only reason I wanted to get off in a hurry was just to see if my husband was waiting for me again as he was in Algiers—but no luck this time."

(Hunter, writer of this dispatch, did not explain that he himself was the husband referred to. The Canadian Press war correspondent was sent to Algiers just before the Allied invasion of Sicily and when his wife, Lieut. Tremnie Hunter, arrived there with the Canadian hospital party en route to Sicily, Hunter met his wife. They were married in London last March 20.)

Lorry Convoy Cheered

The lorry convoy carrying the girls from the port where they landed was cheered by troops all the way to their destination.

"We seemed to drive for ages and the cheers along the way made us feel 100 per cent happier," Lieut. Hunter said. "We finally got to our destination where a big mug of tea was waiting for us. I never appreciated a cup of tea as much as that one. We were all hot, tired and dirty. My blue tie was white with dust."

Their first night in camp was memorable.

"We were mighty thankful to find bed," Lieut. Hunter said.

"There was no water to wash with and there was an alert during the night. After a good sleep we were ready to work. We really are quite comfortable now — except for the heat."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 5 —(CP)— The few slaughter cattle offered sold steady on the livestock market here up to midsession today. Veal calves, hogs and one car of Western sheep and lambs sold steady.

Fresh Urging For Second Front

London, Aug. 5. (CP)—The Red Army's successful drive for Orel prompted fresh urging today for the quick opening of a western front in Europe when the only communist member of parliament, William Gallacher, asked Foreign Secretary Eden to tell the war cabinet the Russian victory offers the opportunity to bring the war to a quick conclusion.

Eden replied:—

"The Orel news is grand news for the House today but I think you will also agree that British and American forces have made their contribution recently and we have some confidence that that contribution will continue between now and when we meet again.

Eden announced that on the first sitting after the parliamentary recess the government would make a statement on the war situation and offer an opportunity for debate.

50 NAVAL RATINGS TO PARADE IN CITY

The Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve will be on display to the people of the city tomorrow morning when 50 naval ratings from the Naval Training Station, Kingston, will parade through the streets of Belleville to the Market Square where they will be dismissed. Accompanying these ratings will be a recruiting officer who will be in the Mayor's office at the City Hall between ten o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock at night on Friday and Saturday. Local Sea Cadets will be unable to participatez in this parade.

WE'LL GROW BIGGER

Italian Gov't. Holds Meeting

By FRANK BRUTTO
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 5 (AP)—Announcement that the Italian government would meet today to examine "important measures" again stirred the hopes of the Italian people that steps would be taken to remove them from the war.

(Associated Press dispatches from London said Britons looked for the meeting to bring an answer to the Italian people's cries for peace and Germany's demands that Italy stay in the war.)

(National Broadcasting Company correspondent in Berne reported the Italian Foreign Minister Raffaele Guariglia had drafted peace proposals demanding among other conditions that no Allied troops go into the country except for control purposes and that the peninsula be "neutralized." Guariglia's proposal was said to be up for consideration at today's cabinet meeting.)

A Swiss correspondent in Milan said an air of desperation had settled on the Italian people and signs were scribbled on walls at night reading:—

"Death to Badoglio and the King."

"We want peace and work."

"The Germans must get out of Italy."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—Western Oil stocks posted a small index gain in the early Toronto session today and the mining groups and industrials were lower. Turnover was heavy in some of the junior issues, bringing aggregate volume for the first three hours up to 493,000 shares.

Soft spots in the gold group included McIntyre, Chesterville, Central Patricia and Teck Hughes. Paymaster spurted to 39 for a gain of 7 cents and Golden Gate at 11 was up 1 1-2 on turnover of better than 75,000 shares.

Smelters, International Nickel, Noranda and Falconbridge posted minor losses. In the industrial section the margin of changes was on the down side for the foods, implements and building stocks. Home Oil gained 10 cents to 3.75.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 5. (AP)—Buying Power was feeble in today's stock market and most leaders fell back a little from the levels established on yesterday's recovery.

Volume was low from the start. A moderate run of selling in the early proceedings was attributed partly to profit cashing on the Wednesday upturn and partly to liquidation of security holders who feared a renewal of the decline touched off last week by the Italian news.

Minor losses were well distributed in the principal groups.

Bond market changes were narrow. Commodities were irregular.

Among Canadian issues Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines were up 1-8 and McIntyre up 1-4.

In lower ground a good part of the time were U.S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, U.S Rubber, Dupont, Standard (N.J.) Texas Co., Santa Fe, Southern Railway and Northern Pacific.

One commenator suggested this recovery in the face of excellent war news seemed to confirm idea that last week's break was mainly the result of an overbought condition and a sudden rush to take profits on the good news of Mussolini's downfall.

HOGS

Liveweight: Chatham $12.

Dressedweight: Barrie $16.75 delivered, London and Stratford $16.50 delivered, Chatham $16.10 plus transportation, Hull $16.40 plus transportation.

Hour of Grace

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 27

She turned from the window and went to the coffee table and found a cigarette and lighted it. She smoked a little and put it out. It tasted stale or perhaps she had lost her taste for cigarettes. She could see the house where Erica lived alive with excitement now. She could see Helen trying to subdue her frivolous, too-blonde curls as well as the high spirits of her children. She could hear Helen shouting last-minute instructions to the maids in her loud clear voice. And Roy looking at his watch and Erica sitting at the dressing table looking at the suit she had bought on her first trip to New York a week ago with Helen. Perhaps the children were running in and out of the room asking questions. It was a merry household as any place that Helen lived would be boisterous and merry . . .

She walked to the window again, her eyes beginning to hurt from the intensity of looking down the road. Then she saw a car, a mere speck at first, loom larger and larger as the old motor began to be audible.

Her mother would never know with what infinite relief she said "Toby's coming."

"Then we won't be late," her mother said, putting her knitting in her knitting-bag. "I think I'll go up and touch up my face again, dear. In this weather powder won't stay on. Do you need anything from upstairs?"

"No, nothing, thanks."

"I'll only be a moment. I knew Toby would be back on time."

Meegan was standing by the window when Toby came in and smiled at her.

"Got held up," he said. Then, "You didn't tell Mother we knew she had talked?"

"No."

"Good. No need to disturb her. The damage has been done. How is she?"

"Fine. She went upstairs to powder her nose."

He grinned. "No one will see her nose. You're nervous. What are you nervous about? You're not getting married."

"I . . I was afraid you wouldn't get back on time."

"And keep my bride waiting at the church? I wonder how Erica feels. Funny, when I think that I'll be with her for the rest of my life, with one girl for the rest of my life. I'm not leaving Mother exclusively to you, you know. I mean she's not to be a handicap or a burden. When you want to get married, we'll share her. I want to be emphatic about that. Should have mentioned it before." He grinned again. "You know, there's something about getting married that's comparable to making your last will and testament. Skip it, I have the jitters. I'd like a drink but I suppose I'll skip that, too."

Meegan said, "I hope you and Erica will be very happy, Toby. Very happy. I've said this before, I remember, but I believe in it so much, that love is the one thing that can and must be honest and beautiful. If I were being married, I'd bring nothing out of the past into my marriage. It would be a beginning as new as being born."

He looked at her soberly. When he heard his mother coming down the steps he went into the hall and said, "I knew I'd have to wait for you!"

• •

The sun was shining through the stained glass windows of the little church in which Clare and Fayne had been married, in which Sue and Van had been married and in which most of the people of her generation had been married. The wedding today was perhaps one of the smallest and simplest but to her the most touching. Looking on were only her mother and Helen's children with a maid and she. Her mother was visibly trembling and the maid held tightly to the hands of the children and she, Meegan, had the terrible sensation that if she turned her head, she would find Clare in the church.

She did not turn her head and the terrible sensation came and went intermittently replaced by the comforting one of seeing Erica and Toby married and listening to the same words that had been said over Clare and Fayne and Sue and Van being said again by the same resonant voice over Erica and Toby. They had been said so many, many times before, those same words, without losing their appeal and dignity and inspiration. It mattered so little that Erica wore not the conventional white but a navy suit with a fucshia blouse and a small navy hat from which her hair flowed to her shoulder. What did matter enormously was that Erica looked lovely and cool and competent as she lifted her face for Toby to kiss her. Erica belonged now. She belonged looking lovely and cool and competent for Toby.

Slowly as the organ played Meegan turned her head, her eyes apprehensive as they scanned the empty pews. But Clare was not in the church. Clare had not come. Except for the two families and the clergyman and the maid the church was quite empty.

She kissed Erica's cheek, saw her smiling mouth, her happy eyes, the narrow platinum band on her finger. She turned to Toby and kissed him and felt his firm embrace. He looked as he always looked when he was happy, cheeks flushed, eyes dark and bright with excitement, his shoulder sloping more than usual because he was not thinking about it. He said little. Indeed he had little opportunity to speak. His mother and Helen, the latter rosy with excitement, kept up a steady stream of unimportant but pleasant conversation.

In the house fresh flowers were everywhere. Standing around the festive table where Erica was putting a knife into her wedding cake Meegan was thinking how lost the activities of the island were to her today. When Toby put his hand across Erica's to help her cut the cake, Meegan's eyes met Roy's and his were less those of a stranger. She wished then that she could tell him that her father would have liked him for the skill of his hands and his love for his family.

"You'll have to bring your mother out to our farm," he said.

"We'd love to come."

Helen turned to her. "You won't know me when you see me out there, Meegan. I was raised on a farm. Milking a cow is nothing new to me. And the kids are thrilled! We've promised them ponies and if I haven't gotten too fat, I can still ride a horse. I was raised riding 'em bareback. We thought saddles were for sissies."

Elinor McLean turned her head. "Oh, you are a horsewoman, my dear."

Helen laughed. "Why, yes. I guess you could call me that but we called it work in those days. We used to ride 'em back from the pasture and sometimes we rode to school."

"Meegan adores riding."

Roy said, "I was just telling Meegan we'd like you and her to come out to the farm."

"Oh, thank you. We'd adore to come. My husband always wanted a large country place. I used to ride quite a lot in Virginia, fox hunting, you know. We were much more formal then about our sports."

"I never thought I'd want to go back on a farm," Helen said. "I was so glad to get away from it when I came to the city I hoped I'd never see one again. But when Roy took me out to see this place and I saw the stuff ready for harvest, it got in my blood again. I guess I'm just a farmer's daughter after all. I wanted to roll up my sleeves and go out in the field and help with the corn. One thing when you have a farm you don't have to worry about getting something to eat. My father never made any money but he never had to worry about the price of tomatoes. If the war comes and things get bad, I'll know my kids will eat and we can probably help other kids to eat."

Toby said, "They are leaving us out entirely, Erica. I don't think they'll miss us if we leave."

Erica said, "Will you come upstairs with me, Meegan?"

She was alone with Erica only a few minutes in her bedroom.

Erica said, "I wanted to say something to you, but I can't find the right words. I'll be good to Toby . ."

"Good to him and for him."

"I won't try to change him. I married a man whose face I slapped the first time I saw him. The first day I saw you after you left this house I said, 'Everything is easy for her.' I didn't know what I was talking about. You took your father's place. Toby should have and didn't. Your mother couldn't."

Meegan said, "You belong now, you know."

"On the island? No, and it doesn't matter. I belong to Toby."

They stood on the steps throwing rice until the path and the lawn were covered as with snow. Presently the car, Erica's car with Toby driving, pulled away. Meegan watched it as far as she could. She watched it safely beyond Clare's house and across the bridge to the mainland.

She did not go to see Clare until Monday morning.

The whole of Sunday she spent with her mother hoping that her presence would alleviate any sadness her mother might feel at Toby's absence. The telephone rang constantly through that Sunday morning, for there had been an announcement in the paper of the marriage.

Elinor McLean seemed not to tire of telling her friends of the simply, lovely wedding, of Erica and of Toby's job. Meegan knew that as long as her mother could live on the excitement of the wedding and the attention she was receiving as a result of it she would feel neither sadness nor loss.

No Medicine Ever Helped Me Like Syntona Did, He Says

Was the Only Thing that Gave Relief from Itching, Burning Eczema on Hands and Face. Also Suffered with Stomach Gas, Acidity, Dizzy Spells and Headaches.

The great popularity of Syntona is not surprising for this medicine actually does give wonderful results as vouched for by the many grateful men and women who have used it. Compounded from no less than 12 of Nature's Finest Medicinal Herbs, Roots, and Barks, Syntona is a safe tonic for the whole family, at this season. It is pleasant to take and many say that even after the first few days, the whole system takes on a new feeling of energy and vigor. Today we quote the experience of Mr. John E. Nicholson, 312 Dundas St., London, as reported recently:

"For more than ten years I was troubled with acid indigestion, gastritis and biliousness. I was subject to throbbing, blinding headaches and dizzy spells. Itching, burning eczema would break out on my hands and face and I tried all kinds of ointment and medicine, but couldn't get rid of it. My condition kept me awake nights, so I became very nervous and irritable.

"A friend advised me to try Syntona, but I had been disappointed in so many medicines that I didn't think it would help me. Finally, however, when I had a particularly bad spell, I made up my mind to take Syntona, and I am surely glad I did. It rid me of that indigestion, biliousness and headaches. Then, my nerves became relaxed and I began to get my proper sleep. Soon I found the eczema was subsiding and my complexion began to clear. Now I am feeling just fine once more. I think it is just wonderful the way Syntona has helped me, and I am only too glad to be able to recommend it to anyone who is troubled similarly."

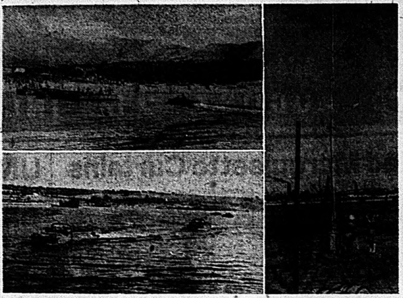
PORT OF SYRACUSE FALLS TO INVADING ALLIES



One of Sicily's largest ports, Syracuse on the east coast, fell to the Canadian and British units taking part in the invasion of the island, after being heavily bombed and shelled. At right a Royal Navy ensign is shown going up over the docks after capture of the port. At top left men of the Royal Army Service Corps are unloading supply laden barges in a bay on the Sicilian coast. Hundreds of tons of supplies and mechanized equipement were put ashore to bulwark troops fighting further up the coast. One of the Allies' surprise packages in the invasion were the "ducks" or amphibious jeeps, and some of these are shown (lower left) cruising near the port of Syracuse.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

"Basuto Soldiers"

By MAJOR L. V. SHEPHERD
(BBC Press Service)

About June 1940 officers of the Pioneer Corps were asked to volunteer for the Middle East. They were put in two categories—those who had previous experience, and those who had no experience at all. Some ninety of us in the last category left these shores in the early days of 1941 and proceeded to South Africa, to a well-known camp in Durban. Day in and day out for ten weeks we were invited to attend classes which were run for the uninitiated in Basuto. Oh, those classes! What a nightmare they were to us poor simple English officers! Will any one of us ever forget them.

After ten weeks we proceeded to Basutoland. What a change from Durban! But after a while — to see the simple happiness of those people in their own surroundings, we got so attached to the country that eventually it was quite a break to leave it again.

Our job was to recruit and train the Basuto to become soldiers. This was an experience entirely new to all of us. No wonder we were skeptical about the results.

Would this venture be a success? Or was it merely going to be a waste of the country's money and time?

* * *

One morning I went on to the parade ground where some 350 Basutos were assembled. These were to compose my company (1901 Basuto Company). We settled down to do ordinary army routine, starting of course to do ordinary elementary drill. Were those fellows keen! Their keenness seemed to good to be true. When they had got hold of such words of command as "Attention," "Right Turn," "Left Turn," "Quick March," "About Turn," "Halt," "Stand at Ease," you could hear them drilling each other after parades until midnight. After eight weeks they really began to get the soldier spirit. Included in their training of course, were talks on military law, discipline, and the important subject of "espirit de corps." I remember in one lecture I told them that the greatness of a country depends upon the character of its people and "Of course" I said, "The greatness of a company depends upon the character of its members." They were now soldiers in the British Army, the sons of Basutoland, who would soon be fighting for the freedom of their own country and the whole world, and their behaviour and their spirit could and must be a credit to Basutoland.

Then orders came through to proceed up north. We marched away to the station 100 per cent present.

* * *

From their home town Miseru, we entrained for Durban, and on arrival at Durban went straight to the boat. Most of these men had never seen a boat before, let alone the sea, and their faces as they were marching up the gangway is a sight I shall never forget. The sea as we left Durban was not too calm, and my servant failed to put in an appearance for four days. I think they all expected to die long before reaching our destination. But towards the end of the first week, they were all fully recovered and we had our first concert. The dancing of these Basutos was amazing. Their rhythm was perfect, and their singing — well they're just natural singers and their harmonizing is delightful. The ship's crew were so interested that they always put in a full attendance at these concerts.

One morning in 1941, about 1 a.m. we arrived at one of the oldest cities in the world — Damascus. It was pouring with rain, and we proceeded by motor lorries to our camp some thirty miles beyond the city. It speaks volumes for the courage and endurance of these fellows after so short a training, when I tell you that owing to the mud and water, the nearest we could get to the camp by lorry was 600 yards. They unpacked all the lorries of kit, etc., and every bit had to be carried. There was every kind of equipment from Sauyer stoves to rifles and ammunition—tons of it. But by 4 a.m. they were having their breakfast. The whole of the lorries had been unpacked, and all the equipment was more or less in its proper place. My work there consisted of guards, digging tank traps, and section posts. We were working with the Australians at the time, who were responsible for training our fellows in military field engineering. Our choir, which we had already formed, had several invitations to give a show before the Australians who were wildly enthusiastic about the performance of these men.

When twenty or thiry of these fellows were in line using picks their perfect movement and timing was fascinating to watch, and their habit of singing while working was a source of continual interest to the Australians.

The C-in-C, Middle East, was so pleased with the work of my company that he paid us a visit. At that time we were in tin huts, but towards the end of December, we moved under canvas. About 11 p.m. on 31st December, 1941, it started snowing—yes, snowing in Syria. I can well imagine that many of my listeners are surprised to hear that it snows in that country. But you can take my word for it, when it snows in Syria, it snows! And what a storm that was! It turned into a blizzard which lasted for five days.

Out of about 50 odd tents, about two were left standing. No one could leave camp, and no one could reach us from outside. I have never in all my life experienced anything like it. I felt like a member of Shackleton's south pole expedition. But these Basutos who had no experience of any kind outside their own country stood up to it as well as any well-trained soldier. I lost only one man, and he was taken to hospital with frost bite. It was a tough five days, but these men who came to me dressed in blankets showed that they could be tougher. After that I had no fear that any one of them would let me down.

They used to do defensive work for eight solid hours every day, which meant that, with marching to their work and back again, they were sometimes away from their camp for twelve hours. And in spite of that I used to get over two hundred volunteers for training most nights. Of course they also had their guard duties, and God help the man, the officer or soldier whom they did not know who tried to get past them.

When you think that in less than six months after leaving their own native Basutoland, they were doing fully qualified mechanical jobs, driving lorries, actually assembling motor engines, and had relieved hundreds of men for a fighting unit, it will give you a slight idea of their amazing adaptability, and of course, of their essential function in the war effort. Believe me, these fellows have fine qualities which include discipline, the fighting spirit and the will to win. They have self control, self respect, loyalty and a very high sense of humor. Of course, they have their own characteristics. They like praise—but isn't that only human? They're proud of their uniform, and do they love to be photographed. I have a picture of nearly every man in the company. When they had a day's leave in Damascus, their first thought was to get their picture taken. One for their wife or best girl, and one for me. And I have other photos which remind me how fond these Basutos were of the water. They were eager to take advantage of any river or mobile shower bath. It was fun watching them trying to lather themselves when they had their first sea bathe — but they soon got over that. They were equally fond of water as a drink, and it was difficult sometimes to get enough to satisfy their thirst. This you can imagine was an additional hardship when they went to the desert.

After some months the men went to a rest camp by sections for seven days leave. They were allowed absolute freedom in Beirut, one of the nicest towns in Syria. I told them before they went that I expected each one to remember that he belonged to 1901 Basuto Company, and that I expected them to conduct themselves like gentlemen. Yes, they understood the meaning of the word gentleman. Not one word of complaint from the camp commandant, or the M.P.'s as to their behaviour. In fact the camp commandant was full of praise for the way they conducted themselves. I had the biggest job in the world to get my servant and the mess cook to leave me for seven days—that's loyalty. Another incident of their loyalty, a Company Commander through an accident was in hospital for eighteen days; when he returned to his Company, they paraded and asked if they might speak to him. This is what they said: "They were very glad to see him back again and they prayed God he would soon be better."

After he had returned to his hut there was a knock on the door, and when his servant opened it, a hand with a five piastre note came through, and after a little conversation between the servant and the owner of the hand, the Company Commander asked what it was all about. The servant replied "Moletsani is so pleased that you are back he wants me to buy you some cigarettes with this note."

* * *

One thing struck me very much about these soldiers. However tough their jobs had been through the day, they would come together every evening under their different denominational leaders, for religious service. And whenever the company had a free Sunday they would all parade together for a service taken by myself, or one of their own deacons.

Some time in 1942 we moved to a dock area where for twelve hours every night of the week, including Sundays, we were loading and unloading freighters and ships. Some months afterwards we moved up into the desert. We advanced with the 8th Army, roadmaking, repairing railways, carrying ammunition and so on. Altogether there are some thirty thousand of these fellows, all volunteers from Basutoland — some driving lorries, some driving ambulances, some in the assembly shops, some in repair shops, and some hospital orderlies.

And I, just in a small way, have given you some of the experiences of the company I had the honor to command for nearly two years. It was only 350 men out of 30,000, but I believe it was a very fair sample of the Basuto soldier, and the work he is doing. I left them in the desert to carry on—not a very interesting job at times but their spirit is such that whatever their job is, they will do it with the best. They will carry on until the time comes for them to return to their own country in peace.

White's District

White's District — On Friday evening a number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Rush to honor their youngest daughter, Ethel, on the eve of her marriage to LAC. Clare Millar. Following a social hour of music, singing and visiting, the Rev. J. M. Spence called the gathering to order. After a few well-chosen words a short address was read to which Ethel made a suitable response. She also thanked each one personally for the gifts which consisted of pyrex, glassware, linen, enamel and other useful articles.

Mexican Sketches Birth of Volcano

Writing as an eyewitness of the birth of the new volcano in Mexico which has been the subject of occasional brief dispatches to American newspapers since February 22 last, Esequiel Ordonez, a Mexican mining geologist and engineer and an honorary member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, says in an article in the July issue of Mining and Metallurgy, official publication of the institute:

"This volcano sprang full blown from a flat-plowed field at the south margin of a small basin about a mile in diameter in the centre of the State of Michoacan, about 100 miles from the Pacific Ocean and about 330 miles from the City of Mexico. It is about 6,800 feet above sea level and the surrounding hills are all volcanic, exhibiting many truncated cones with craters similar to the one now forming in the new volcano.

"The name of the new volcano is Paracutin, taken from the small village about one mile northwest of the crater. Sixty miles southwest of the Paracutin a great volcanic eruption took place is 1759, with the formation of one huge high cone and three small parasitic cones; this volcano is known as the 'Jorullo.' It produced several flows, the largest one of which invaded a cultivated field and destroyed a sugar-cane plantation.

"Fourteen days before the eruption of the Paracutin volcano repeated earthquakes were felt within a limited area close to the present site of the crater. These disturbances caused great alarm among the inhabitants of the vicinity. The owner of the land on which the new volcano was born indicates that on the afternoon of Feb. 20 he felt repeated shocks, accompanied by deep underground rumblings. In the late afternoon he saw small columns of smoke rising from a small depression in the middle of one of his plowed fields, and these soon began to increase in size and intensity.

Farmer is Panic Stricken

"Within a short time flames were coming from the smoke and large pieces of rock and dust were being thrown into the air. At the sight of this terrific manifestation of natural forces the native farmer was thrown into a panic and ran all the way to the town of Paracutin, and from there he went to Parangaricutiro to inform the authorities of the fact that a great catastrophe was happening on his lands.

"By nightime the explosions of the volcano were felt in these small towns and the great glow from the flames of the crater had completely terrorized the inhabitants. Early next day many people from near-by settlements came to the place to see what was happening and, to their astonishment, they saw that the young volcano had already thrown up a mound nearly 100 feet high and that its crater was steadily growing by the piling up on its sides of incandescent rocks and dark sand that were coming from within the earth. At the same time an enormous columns of vapors and smoke was rising into the air to an inconceivable height.

"Arriving on the scene on the third night after the first eruption, I was quite frightened at the terrific exemplification of its power as the few Indians who stood around me. It was a never-to-be-forgotten sight to behold the large white-hot incandescent masses of basalt blowing out from the top of the cone, some of them describing beautiful iridescent arcs across the dark night sky, and others falling down on the slopes of the crater and rolling down the sides of it like pieces of molten gold. All the while a continued series of tremendous explosions were taking place, causing the atmosphere and the ground itself to vibrate incessantly."

Senor Ordonez tells of stones three metres in diameter being thrown as much as 1,800 feet in the air, with terrific explosions coming at intervals of about every four seconds.

Lava Appears on Fourth Day

On the fourth day lava appeared and moved along at the rate of about seven feet per hour. This speed, he says, was maintained for several days and the thickness of the sheet was from fifteen to twenty feet.

The volcano began to slow down about the middle of March, with a violent recurrence of activity toward the end of the month and again in the middle of April, when a new cone within the old crater reared up about thirty metres above the rim of the outer crater. After four days of almost continuous violent eruptions from this smaller crater, a sufficient amount of material had been thrown from it to completely fill the annular ring between it and the larger outside rim.

On June 1 the cone was about 900 feet high and 3,000 feet across at its base. Later on June 9, a new eruption occurred 500 feet to the west, with two new lava flows.

The villages of Paracutin and Parangaricutiro are reported to be virtually abandoned since the latest volcanic outburst, the Federal government having given their inhabitants agricultural lands in a safer place and also helped them with cash and free transportation.

RUSSIAN ADVANCES MENACE ENTIRE EAST FRONT

Bryansk, Kharkov Appear To Be New Objectives

Army Rolling Thru Gaps Made by the Capture of Orel And Belgorod

STALIN JUBILANT

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 6 (AP)—Germany's entire eastern front was threatened with collapse today as the Red army rolled through gaps made by the capture of Orel and Belgorod in the first great Russian summer offensive of the war.

The Red army's new objectives appeared to be Bryansk and Kharkov. Russian troops pressing south from Belgorod were less than 45 miles from Kharkov while in the north the Russian armies pushing through Orel were about 75 miles from Bryansk.

The Kharkov salient now bulges out in the German line and the Nazi garrison there is in the same position as their cohorts at Orel before they gave up the city.

Moscow was in a holiday mood for the first time in the war over the twin victories.

Front-line dispatches gave details of the Russian triumph, which was greeted in Moscow with the first gun salute of the war and an announcement by Premier Joseph Stalin that the victories dispelled "the legend of the Germans that the Soviet troops are allegedly unable to wage a successful offensive in the summertime."

Even as details of capture of the two cities reached the capital the Red army pushed on in its great offensive against desperate rearguard action.

(The German communique reported bitter fighting in the Belgorod area "which is still raging with undiminished violence." The Germans claimed to have taken 69,164 prisoners in the past month and to have destroyed 7,847 tanks in the same period.)

The Russians indicated rapid progress in the Belgorod sector, where it was understood another German unit had been cut off at the same time the Belgorod garrison was defeated.

"Not only individual guns but whole batteries and artillery battalions were found smashed in some places", the communique stated.

Front-line dispatches said Red flags were hoisted over the ruins of Orel and Belgorod. Both cities were occupied after brief but bitter street fighting.

The Germans persisted in stubborn rearguard action to cover their withdrawal from the Orel salient.

No estimate of the size of the enemy forces involved in the Orel salient was available, but presumably a considerable number escaped through a gap along and between the roads running from Orel west to Bryansk and southwest to Kromy.

The German position at Kharkov appeared equally difficult, with the northern flank exposed to the Russian attack from Belgorod and the southern flank menaced by Red Army forces west of Kupiansk.

Some of the Red Army's most experienced generals went into action on this front, including Gen. Chistyakov, who led the encirclement of the Germans at Stalingrad, and Gen. I. P. Belov, whose cavalry was a leading factor in the Moscow offensive in 1941.

Methodical Demolition

Dispatches said the Germans carried out methodical demolition of Orel before the Red Army's entry, even cutting the railroad tracks at intervals of every two or three yards. Only the walls remained of the railroad station.

Along Moscow street, main thoroughfare of Orel, many houses were in ruins, dispatches said, tattered German posters still flapped in the warm breeze. Around Orel the land was described as stripped of vegetation, scarred by ditches and craters, blackened villages and saturated with enemy mines. All nearby landing fields were destroyed.

Thousands of refugees who had been hiding in the fields streamed back to Orel along the dusty roads.

Dispatches disclosed the Red Army penetrated Orel at 1 p.m. (6 a.m. E.D.T.) on Aug. 4 from the eastern side of the city. The 5th, 129th and 380th Red Army divisions completed the occupation yesterday, rapidly crushing rearguard resistance.

The German 9th Army and German 2nd Tank Army, both under the command of Marshal Model, were defeated in the battle of Orel, Pravda said.

Model Placed in Command

Model was placed in command of the Orel sector last month, the dispatch announced, replacing Col.-Gen. Von Schmidt. Model was quoted by the Russians as having said that "the battle of Orel was the decisive battle for the security of living space for Germany."

During the battle, Red Star said, the Germans moved several divisions, including four tank and one motorized, to the Orel salient in an effort to hold the important central road and rail communications.

The Germans counter-attacked as often as 10 times daily, the dispatch said and made as many as 1,500 flights daily over the narrow sector.

The turning point was reached when the Russians crossed the Orel-Mzensk Road July 20, Red Star said. They proceeded to mop up successive lines of defence. Heavy rains slowed down operations last month but a hot sun now is shining.

Belgorod Taken Quickly

Belgorod was taken more quickly than Orel with a sudden thrust led by tanks, which overwhelmed enemy positions.

The Red Army broke through northeast of Belgorod and overcame counter-attacks. The 89th and 305th Red Army divisions entered the city at dawn yesterday and cleared the streets in a single day.

When the guns of Moscow saluted the victory with six minutes of firing many Muscovites thought it meant an air raid. It was the first time such a salute was ever given in the Soviet Union.

14 R.R. Companies Asked to Increase Basic Wage Rates

Montreal, Aug. 6 (CP)—Fourteen railway companies in Canada have been asked to increase their employees basic wage rates, it was announced today by J. W. Ward, Chairman of the General Conference Committee of the 18th Railway Labor organization.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Ward said that the organization which represents 140,000 Canadian Railway employees, demanded an increase in basic wage rates in notices served on the companies July 31.

Mr. Ward said that for employees in the "running trade" such as engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen, yardmen, etc., the organization demanded "an increase in existing basic rates to the extent necessary to equalize Canadian rates with rates paid for similar service in existing basic rates to the extent the amount by which such rates may be increased as a result of negotiations and hearings now being conducted in the United States.

Fliers Alternately Burned, Frozen Helping to Knock Out Gelsenkirchen

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP)—Almost roasted in a burning Halifax bomber and then frost-bitten a few hours later—that's the experience of the crew of FO. "Gord" Bennett of Winnipeg when Canada's Goose Squadron helped administer an aerial knockout to the Ruhr coal centre of Gelsenkirchen.

The R.C.A.F. told today in a press release from London how the four-motored bomber, previously damaged by flak, was struck by eight incendiaries from another Allied aircraft flying at a higher altitude just as bombs were being dropped. Four of the incendiaries started a blaze that took 15 minutes to extinguish.

Flying with FO. Bennett, who received the Distinguished Flying Cross for his part in the raid, were four other Canadians:-

The navigator, PO. Bill Baker of Ottawa; the bomb-aimer, Sgt. Gus Davies of Halifax; the mid-upper gunner, Sgt. Vern Joel of Vancouver, and the tail-gunner, Sgt. Jim Frame of Senate, Sask.

Limping home with holes in the aircraft large enough to fall through, minus lights, petrol gauges, electrical system, heat or hydraulics Bennett set the Halifax down on an aerodrome in southern England. After the blaze, the bomber flew through dense, freezing cloud all the crewmen suffered from frost bite.

Got Hit by Flak

"We got hit by flak going in to the target and it rendered our hydraulics unserviceable," said the 23-year-old pilot, credited with seven operational trips. "Just as we were letting our bombs go there was a crashing noise. Later I learned we had been hit by incendiaries from above.

"Four of them struck the centre of the aircraft, starting the fire. Another one whizzed right by my feet on an angle and over the navigator's head. It bounced off his table and destroyed his maps and charts. Luckily it didn't explode.

"Another incendiary crashed into our port wing and jammed the lateral control. It made it awfully tough to do turns and banks."

The young pilot dived the aircraft from 20,000 to 14,000 feet to extinguish the fires on the outside but three crew members, two Englishmen and the bomb-aimer, Davies, fought the inner blaze with extinguishers for 15 minutes—"and it seemed like 15 years."

Every time the fliers touched the side of the aircraft they received shocks from short circuits and when the R.A.F. wireless operator attempted to repair the lighting system, his hair was singed by a streak of blue flame.

Allies Continue To Roll Back Germans In Sicily

UNREST RENEWED DUE TO FAILURE TO SEEK PEACE

Appears Badoglio Determined to Carry On War on Side Of the Axis

WORKERS STRIKE

By FRANK BRUTTO
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berne, Aug. 6—(AP)—Failure of the new Italian government to give any outward signs that it is seeking peace renewed the unrest of the Italian people today—an unrest accentuated by news of the fall of Catania, Orel and Belgorod.

The Milan correspondent of the Zurich Die Tat reported:

"Everyone is talking of peace these decisive hours and the possibility of re-establishing Italy's honor." He added that the Allied conquests of Orel and Catania "caused an enormous sensation. The people asked each other "how can Badoglio still hesitate?"

The cabinet, however, gave no sign that Badoglio was seeking peace. The announced result of its long session was the enactment of a series of measures continuing the destruction of the Fascist Party structure, revising methods of administering the country's penal code, abolishing racial laws and instituting severe controls of the press for the duration of the war.

Trying to Win Support

All these measures, plus an investigation into the wealth accumulated by leaders of the Fascist Party, said the Tribune de Geneve in a Rome dispatch approved by the Italian censor, are intended to win the support of the Italian masses for the foreign policies of the Badoglio regime.

The dispatch added that the new government is "firmly determined to continue the war and is asking the Italian people to defend their liberties by strict collaboration with German National socialism."

Factory workers in Northern Italian cities were reported still holding half-hour daily strikes in protest against prolonging the war.

In Milan, however, the Die Tat correspondent said, the people already are whispering of a new government in which Marshal Pietro Caviglia, hero of the First Great War, would play an important role. Caviglia is reported to have taken a prominent part in the events leading up to the fall of Fascism, and is known to be a close counsellor of King Victor Emanuel. He is also said to be popular among the working classes.

3,266 Surface Craft Of All Types Used In Sicilian Invasion

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 6 —(AP)— The official Allied naval story of the Sicilian invasion was released today and it disclosed that 3,266 surface craft of all types from battleships to motor torpedo boats took part.

The naval commanders in actual charge of the landings were identified as Rear Admirals Rhoderick R. McGrigor, Sir Philip Vian and Thomas Hope Troubridge of the Royal Navy, and Alan G. Kirk, John L. Hall and Richard L. Connolly of the U. S. Navy.

The report said the British hospital ship Talamba, lying three miles to seaward of one of the British anchorages and fully lighted in accordance with the Geneva convention, was deliberately bombed, with considerable loss of life, the first day of the invasion.

(This was the first disclosure of a loss of life in the attack upon the Talamba. Allied headquarters announced July 12 that she was sunk by Axis bombers off the Sicilian coast and said 400 wounded aboard were transferred successfully.)

Invading Army and Ships

In stressing the importance of Allied naval and merchant fleets in "the greatest amphibious expedition ever undertaken," the official statement said "An invading army cannot live upon the country."

"Food and even water may have to be provided by sea," it said. "Even an Air Force cannot operate without fuel carried in ships.

"In the Sicilian operation nearly 2,000 vessels, big and little warships and merchantmen, took part in the first assaults on Sicilian beaches before dawn July 10.

"In the operations as a whole no fewer than 3,226 ships, vessels and craft of all types played a part. They flew the flags of not only Britain and the United States, but of practically all the United Nations. Units of the Royal Canadian, Royal Indian, Dutch, Polish and Greek navies participated in the widespread operations."

Assembling a Heavy Task

The statement said that collection of the invasion vessels was a heavy task and entailed a serious drain upon the shipping resources of the Allies under Admiral of the Fleet Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, naval commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean.

ALL ORGANIZED JAP RESISTANCE AT MUNDA CEASES

Activity of American Troops Limited to Mopping-up Operations

NEARER TO RABAUL

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 5 —(AP—All organized Japanese resistance at Munda has ceased, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Grim evidence of the bitter campaign to wrest the key base from the enemy, a total of 1,671 Japanese dead were counted. There was no immediate announcement as to Allied casualties.

A special communique said:-

"Munda is now in our hands. All organized enemy resistance has ceased. Action is now limited to destruction of isolated enemy groups. 1,671 enemy dead have already been collected."

Hundreds of Enemy Slain

Hundreds of the enemy already had been slain by U.S. infantrymen advancing on their foxholes and coral caves with flame throwers.

The Japanese aircraft has been subjected to one of the fiercest aerial poundings of the Pacific war. To help soften its defences U.S. naval forces bombarded the base on at least one occasion. Tanks and mortars were brought up for the assault after enemy resistance stiffened preceptibly within 2,100 yards of the field itself.

Munda's capture placed the U.S. air force within fighter plane range of the big Japanese base at Rabaul, 50 miles to the northwest. Its possession by American forces will weaken the importance of such intervening Japanese bases as the Kahili airdrome of South Bougainville, the Buin-Faisi shipping centre and the big supply depot of Vila, Kolombangara.

DARDANELLES AGAIN COVETED AS PRIZE OF WAR

Could Become Important Supply Route for Russian Army

MUST TAKE BALKANS

By WILLIAM B. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 6—(AP)—The Dardanelles, strategically important gateway between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, once again are the synosure of covetous eyes as a possible prize of war.

The western half of the Turkish straits, swum by the love-stricken leader of the hellenistic love-story and by the poet Byron, 133 years ago, could become an important supply route for the embattled Russian Army.

During the First Great War, the Allies tried to take the straits from the Turks with the aim of assisting Russia, but a 10-month campaign failed.

The Dardanelles, coupled with the straits of the Bosphorus on the opposite side of the sea of Marmora, would provide a "short cut" for shipping supplies to the Red Army.

The vital waterway would mean to Russia roughly what the strait of Gibraltar and the Panama Canal mean to the Allies. However, it cannot become an alternative to the overland supply route through Iraq until Russia has won back the Crimea and the Allies conquer the southern end of the Balkan Peninsula and the Aegean Sea.

Decreed by Treaty

On paper, the straits cannot be used by commercial vessels assisting at war. This was decreed by a treaty signed in 1936 by Turkey on one hand and Great Britain, France, Russia, Japan, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Greece on the other. The treaty also allowed Turkey to remilitarize the straits.

At any rate, the Germans hold the island-dotted Aegean and, with their Bulgar and Rumanian satellites, maintain at least surface control of the western half of the Black Sea. This would make the passage of a single supply ship—even with full Turkish co-operation—mostly a matter of luck.

Use of the route by hundreds of ships, which would be necessary to be of any real value to the Russian armies, appears entirely out of question in the present phase of the war.

Even the recapture of Crete and a landing in Greece would not free Allied shipping on the Aegean side of the Dardanelles. The German-held key to the straits is the island of Lemnos. Its capture can hardly be expected before Salonika is taken, which in turn implies a well-advanced Balkan campaign.

Once through the Bosphorus, Russia-bound Allied shipping now would have to run the gauntlet of Axis war vessels, which although not particularly numerous, maintain control of the western half of the Black Sea.

ONTARIO CABINET DECIDES TUESDAY WHEN TO RESIGN

Premier Nixon Says It's Pretty Obvious Whom He Will Recommend

'NO POSTMORTEMS'

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP) — Premier Nixon returned to Queen's Park today and said at a press conference that a general meeting of his cabinet will be held Tuesday when a final decision will be reached as to when the government will resign as a result of its defeat in Wednesday's election.

The Premier, who indicated that the resignation of his Liberal administration might be forthcoming immediately after the Tuesday cabinet meeting, said that Lieutenant Governor Albert Matthews has returned to the city from his summer home and he will confer with him today.

Asked which party he would recommend to the Lieutenant Governor to ask to form a government, the Premier said "it is pretty obvious" but declined to say definitely it would be the Progressive Conservatives led by Lt. Col. George A. Drew, who have most seats with 38 and are leading in another.

"Final decisions will be made on Tuesday," said Mr. Nixon. "But we are resigning. That is our obvious first duty after defeat."

He added that he had not conferred either with Col. Drew or the C.C.F. leader, E. B. Jolliffe, whose party won 34 seats in the election.

Asked about factors contributing to the Liberal defeat, Mr. Nixon said: "I'm not much for post mortems. There's no use going into that now."

He ended his press conference by saying: "I'm sorry I can't announce a reorganization of the cabinet," which would have been done if the government had been re-elected.

'Pay-Day Drunks' And Hoodlums Blamed by Police

Vancouver, Wash., Aug. 6. (AP)—Chief of Police John Blaker today blamed "hoodlums" and "pay-day drunks" for inciting a riot last night which police finally dispersed with tear gas.

Three men were hospitalized and eight jailed.

Chief Blaker said the suspected ringleader of the rioters was in custody but no charges had been filed.

Hundreds of persons drinking in waterfront beer taverns where the trouble started piled into the street. They were joined by soldiers and pedestrians. A crowd of approximately 1,000 persons quickly gathered. Taunts were flung at police and fighting broke out.

Military police called to the scene had all soldiers back in their barracks within an hour. City police, aided by Auxiliary Civilian Defence police, deputy sheriffs, State patrolmen and firemen who laid hoses as a threat finally scattered the crowd.

RACOONS RAID RANCH

Santa Cruz, Calif., Aug. 6—(AP)—Racoons raided Joseph Majors' ranch. He set traps on the ground, dangling chunks of meat over them. Next morning he found the 'coons had climbed the tree from which the bait dangled. They'd pulled up the strings, eaten the meat, and left the cords thoroughly tangled in the boughs.

Jap Losses in Warships and Planes Greatly Exceed Those of Americans

U.S. Headquarters in the South Pacific, Aug. 6.—(AP) — Japan has lost more than twice as many warships and four times as many planes as the United States in the South Pacific since the beginning of the Solomons campaign one year ago.

A compilation based on official communiques covering the period of Aug. 8, 1942 to May 8, 1943, for the South Pacific only, placed Japanese losses as 96 warships sunk, 18 probably sunk and 129 damaged.

United States losses were 41 ships sunk and nine damaged.

Enemy aircraft destroyed totalled 1,802 planes of all categories. American losses were not listed in their entirety, but a navy spokesman said American losses were less than one-fourth of the enemy's, or the vicinity of 450 planes.

(An Associated Press tabulation based on United States and other Allied communiques and announcements to July 19 showed that Allied submarines, warships and planes have sunk at least 634 enemy naval and merchant ships since December, 1941.)

Gagliano Taken While Bombers Batter Messina

MANY BARGES SUNK

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 6 —(AP)— United States troops have plunged forward two to three miles on the north coastal road to Messina, and in the central sector of Sicily have seized Gagliano in a steady rollback of Germans west of Mount Etna, an Allied communique announced today.

The Allied aerial tornado meanwhile reached a new climax as heavy bombers bludgeoned Messina, the last big Axis escape hatch to the mainland, and air and naval forces continued to blast open the path on the north coast.

Advance on Aderno

British and Canadian troops in the centre smashed ahead toward Aderno in "steady progress" forward from Centuripe and Regalbuto, headquarters said, but the Germans are resisting fiercely.

Gagliano lies back of a line between Troina, taken by Americans, and Regalbuto which was seized by Canadian and British troops. Its fall helps straighten the Allied line and further endangers the German defence shielding withdrawal of large Axis forces from the south and central areas of Sicily.

The communique said that a British 8th Army brigade accepted unconditional surrender of Catania the east coast seaport and anchor of the Etna line, at 10:15 a.m. Thursday, and that British troops then swept northwest to take Misterbianco and cross the Simeto river to Paterno 10 miles away.

Messina 55 Miles Distant

Other British 8th Army units were smashing ahead north up the east coast toward Taormina and Messina 55 miles away.

On the north coast the Americans are threatening San Fratello and late reports put them within two miles of that road junction, capture of which would cut the last lateral roads still in enemy hands.

The assault upon Messina marked the first time in many weeks that the Allies' heaviest air weapons have been used against that badly-battered Sicilian target.

R.A.F. Wellingtons blasted the beaches near Messina in a follow-up raid during the night, to disrupt German supply efforts and the evacuation of non-essential personnel reported underway for about a week. Small boats can ply the narrow Messina Straits despite the continuous Allied air and naval siege of those waters. A ship offshore was fired by a direct hit last night.

Little Air Resistance

Swarms of medium bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters continued to fill the sky over the dwindling enemy bridgehead, roving unopposed over roads and railroads, hurling steel into troop convoys and blasting the towns of Aderno, Francavilla and other key points of the German defence system.

Queen Elizabeth Replies to Greetings

Ottawa, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King today received acknowledgement of greetings "on behalf of all Canadians" which he cabled Queen Elizabeth on her 43rd birthday Aug. 4.

Her Majesty's acknowledgement, signed "Elizabeth R." was as follows:—

"I thank you most gratefully for your kind and loyal message on my birthday. Good wishes of Canadians are very precious to me."

Prices Board Cancels Licence Of Poultry Dealer

Montreal, Aug. 6 —(CP)— In the first action of its kind to wipe out black market activities, the Prices Board today cancelled the business licence of the Modern Poultry and Egg Company in Montreal's central section.

The Board also served the proprietor with an order empowering the Board to take possession of all goods on hand. The goods will be sold at ceiling prices and the proceeds will be turned over to the company.

Two Royal Canadian Mounted Police constables served the order on Koppel Mintz, holder of the Prices Board licence, his brother Issy Mintz, and their father, Wolfe Mintz.

Mr. Justice Joseph Archambault of the Quebec Superior Court on July 28 found that the company had been selling poultry wholesale at prices above ceiling by falsifying invoices and demanding extra payment on the side.

Car Accidents Kill 3 Persons

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP)—Three persons were killed in car accidents in the Toronto area last night, one when struck by a car after leaving a theatre on Queen Street in east Toronto and the other two in a crash near Weston involving two cars.

Mrs. Winnifred Burke was killed after leaving the theatre. Her husband and two other persons were seriously injured. Police said the car drove into a crowd leaving the theatre. George Thompson Middleton was arrested on a manslaughter charge while Albert E. Blackman was arrested as a material witness.

Ben Cousins and Mrs. A. D. Fry, both of Weston, were fatally injured in the other accident.

HEPBURN DENIES STATEMENT.

St. Thomas, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP) — Mitchell F. Hepburn, former Liberal Premier of Ontario, who was elected as an Independent Liberal in Elgin riding in Wednesday's election, today said that coalition government for Ontario is "a matter for party leaders to discuss and decide."

Mr. Hepburn was quoted yesterday by The Toronto Star as saying "there must be a coalition" between Liberals and Progressive Conservatives as a result of the stalemated election. This morning he denied that he made the statement.

"I gave no interview to The Star," he said.

POLICE PROBING DEATH

Sudbury, Aug. 6. (CP)—Provincial police are investigating the death of Wilfred Rancourt, 40, of nearby Rutter found dead in his cabin there last night by Omer Rancourt, a brother.

Police said they believe that Rancourt took his own life, sending a rifle bullet into his head. He had been in poor health for some years.

SGT. ARTHUR HOPPING REPORTED MISSING

Serving in the North African war theatre for the past six weeks, Sergeant Arthur Hopping of the R.C.A.F., son of Mrs. E. Hopping, Deseronto, is reported missing following air operations over enemy territory, according to word received by his mother from Headquarters at Ottawa.

An air gunner with the Royal Canadian Air Force, Sgt. Hopping went overseas last December and after being stationed in England for some months was posted — to North Africa about six weeks ago. The last letter received by Mrs. Hopping from her son was received about one week ago. During his stay in England Sgt. Hopping had spent several days with his brother, George, who has been overseas for more than three years.

TWO BANCROFT BOYS RECOVER FROM WOUNDS

Previously reported as serving with their respective units in the current engagement on embattled Sicily, two Bancroft district boys are now recuperating in hospital following wounds received on the action fronts, according to reports from Canadian Army Headquarters. The two boys in hospital are Pte. Manly Tinney and Pte. Ernest Young, both of Bancroft.

According to army reports, the two Bancroft soldiers became casualties during the first few days of the Sicilian campaign. Suffering only minor injuries they are recuperating in a British military hospital in North Africa.

FLT.-LT. ARCHIE GREEN GIVEN NEW POST

Flt.-Lt. Archie Green of the Administration Staff of No. 5 I.T.S., has been moved to London to take charge of the Air Training Course at the University of Western Ontario and will take over his new duties on Monday next. Archie is a graduate in general Arts from this university and it will be like going home for him. Since his coming to Belleville in September, 1941, he has made many friends in sporting circles in the district, being an exceptionally fine basketball player and a better than average softball player. He has taken a great interest in the sporting and recreational activities of I.T.S. and has given valuable assistance to the Sports Staff of that station. All wish Archie good luck in his new post.

(Formerly of Ivanhoe)

After an illness of several months' duration Miss Mary Eliza Duggan, formerly of Ivanhoe, died in the 1st. concession of Thurlow Township, early this Friday morning.

Born in Manvers Township, Peterboro County, seventy-eight years ago, Miss Duggan was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Duggan. For many years she lived in the Ivanhoe district. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon, and was well esteemed.

LATE FRED BLAKELY
(Eldorado.)

Eldorado, Aug. 6. —The funeral of the late Fred Blakely was held from his home on Thursday afternoon to Union Church where service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Crabbe. The large number of friends, and the beautiful floral tributes showed the high esteem in which the deceased was held. Mr. Blakely will be greatly missed as a neighbor and friend to all. He leaves to mourn his wife, formerly Miss Ida Ketcheson, and two sons, Poy of Marmora and Frank at home and one grandson.

The pallbearers were Messrs. R. Bonter, J. Bonter, J. Goodrich, C. McCann, J. Bateman and H. Empey.

Interment took place in Fox's Cemetery.

LATE THOMAS W. LEONARD

The funeral of Thomas William Leonard took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, on Thursday afternoon, August 5th. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. L. S. Wight.

Pte. Sam Way Killed in Action

Pte. Sam Way, a Belleville boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Way, 75 Station Street, has paid the supreme sacrifice serving with the Canadian troops in the battle of Sicily. He joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in December of 1939 and after taking his training at Picton, proceeded overseas in July of 1940 and underwent serious training in England, before being sent to the Sicilian war zone. Pte. Way was born in this city 24 years ago and lived his entire life in this community before joining the Canadian Active Army. Surviving are his parents, his wife in London, whom he married after going overseas, a sister, Mrs. Roy Reid, Belleville, two half-sisters, Betty and Dorothy Reid at home and one half-brother, Edward Way of this city. Word of his death was received by the family from Defence Headquarters in Ottawa on Thursday evening.

1,275,000 Fags Sent Thru Fund

With this week's shipment of cigarettes to Belleville boys serving overseas through the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" the fund passed the million and a quarter mark of fags, some 1,257,000 cigarettes to be exact. Chairman Matt Currie also revealed the cost of these smokes has reached $4,150.12. The continuance of the fund and the provision of cigarettes for Belleville boys overseas is only possible through the donations of the citizens in general.

The list of local lads sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes by the Kinsmen Fag Fund included: J. Ainsworth, B. F. Armstrong, James Asselstine, A. E. Benford, Mac Bonter, H. P. Boyd, Harold Burkholder, Arthur Carleton, Harold Carleton, R. S. Chadwick, John Clarke, George Clements, J. W. E. Cook, Henry Crossen, R. E. Davis, D. J. Dell, Emory Demorest, H. N. Denard, S. A. Fire Destroys Garage Owned by H. Emerson

Just at 12 o'clock noon the fire alarm sounded. A number of men were successful in pushing Mr. Emerson's car from the garage to safety. It is understood that a youngster was lighting matches in a children's play-house at the rear of D. A. Rupert's drug store when the curtains caught fire. The flames spread quickly to the adjoining wooden structure and in a few minutes it was completely ablaze. Under Fire Chief Barnett two streams of hose were brought into play and the fine efforts of the volunteer firemen confined the fire to the garage and prevented what might have been a very serious fire.

Mr. Emerson was away on his stage trip to Belleville at the time and his loss is quite heavy as he only carried a small amount of insurance.

Arrested For Car Theft

Ronald Pecoor of Aylmer, Que., was arrested near Cornwall by Provincial Traffic Officer John Whitty when he observed the car Pecoor was driving the one which had been stolen in Tweed from Mr. Wallace Johnston. Pecoor is being held in custody at Cornwall for having burglar tools in his possession. When questioned last Sunday evening at Cornwall by Chief Constable Hayes, Pecoor admitted several other charges. He had attempted the theft of an American automobile which was parked for the night near the home of Ernest Cronkwright. He entered the home of John Masters and stole money from several milk bottles on different streets in town. He will appear for trial at Tweed on Aug. 12, when Chief Hayes will present other charges on behalf of the Toronto City police against Pecoor for motor thefts.

Two Flying Officers Injured When Motorbike Rams Dump Truck

Trenton, (Special.)—Aug. 6. — Two Pilot Officers Errol Colling and J. T. Thornton, were injured Thursday afternoon when the motorcycle on which they were riding collided with a dump truck owned and operated by Joe Gray of 106 George Street.

Mr. Gray was driving east on Dundas Street East and as he neared Scott Street he slowed to allow an oil truck to pass going west. After the truck passed he allegedly signalled to make a left turn to Scott Street, when suddenly the motorcycle roared up from behind and struck the running board on the left side of the truck. It rammed up on the running board and right over the top of the engine landing on the highway on the opposite side. Dr. W. J. Johnson was called but previous to his arrival both men were removed to the Air Force hospital where it was found P.O. Colling suffered a compound fracture of the right leg and P.O. Thornton a severe shaking up.

Damage to the truck consisted of broken running board, fender and headlight and the motorcycle was badly smashed. Fortunately the driver of the truck was uninjured.

POLICE COURT

In an especially brief sssion of city police court held this morning before Magistrate J. Garvin of Kingston, only three cases of drunkenness were disposed of, two paying their fines out of court.

A resident of this city was charged with being intoxicated while in a public place and pleading guilty was charged $10 and costs or 14 days in the county jail. The accused was committed to the jail pending arrangements for paying of the fine.

Bail Refused

The case of John Osterhout of the Canadian Army at Camp Borden was adjourned until August 10th, he being remanded in custody. The accused asked that arrangements be made for bail in order that he be permitted to assist on his father's farm but the magistrate was advised against this by Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson.

"This man is A.W.O.L. from his base at Camp Borden and I would advise against any bail", stated Mr. Robertson. Bail was refused by the magistrate.

Given Suspended Sentence

In county court held on Thursday, Flt. Sgt. Braddock of the R.C.A.F., at Trenton, was given one year's suspended sentence for stealing rationed goods from the sergeant's mess at the air station, while Sgt. Louis LaMorre, also of the Trenton base but residing at 222 Front Street, Trenton, was dismissed on a charge of being in possession of the stolen goods. The charges were brought by Ft.-Lt. Gilbert of the R.C.A.F., and the Provincial police, who claimed that $16 worth of coffee, tea and other rationed goods had been stolen.

Advised to Return to Toronto

Miss Peggy Levely of West Huntingdon, was given one year's suspended sentence after having been found guilty of stealing $30 from Arthur Thompson, also of West Huntingdon. A younger sister, also connected with the case, was placed in charge of Captain Ruston of the Children's Aid Society. The older girl was advised to return to her job in Toronto. Charges were preferred by O.P.P. O'Brien.

29,057 Increase In Workers Noted

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP)—An increase of 29,057 in the number of Canadian workers in May over April was reported today by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, with the 13,689 firms co-operating in the latest survey reporting a combined working force of 1,818,240 men and women at June 1, compared with 1,789,183 at May 1.

The bureau said the increase, amounting to 1.6 per cent, was accompanied by a rise of 2.7 per cent in the weekly payrolls disbursed, the per capita average salary advancing to $30.91 at June 1 from $30.59 at May 1 and $28.20 at June 1, 1942.

The increase in recorded employment raised the index from 178.2 at May 1 to 181.1 at the beginning of June.

From Jan. 1 to June 1, there was a decline of 1.4 per cent, while employment between these two dates in the period 1921-1939 showed an average advance of 6.8 per cent. In the first three years of the war, the general increase at June 1 as compared with Jan. 1 was 7.1 per cent.

The bureau said:-

"This slowing-down in industrial activity results to some extent from the transfer of men from industry to the armed forces, attended by increasing difficulty in securing replacements. It also reflects the effects of changes in the volume and kind of production brought about by the present stage of the war, and likewise arises in part from growing shortages of materials and labor in the field of civil production and services."

SEVEN BORN EACH DAY IN JULY

London, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—So now the stork too thinks seven a lucky number. Every one of July's 31 days, he brought seven new Londoners to town. During the month there were 217 births in the district as compared with 77 in July, 1942.

GAGLIANO TAKEN

(Dispatches reaching Allied headquarters in North Africa three days ago said the Americans had taken Troina. Earlier, Prime Minister Churchill said they were reported to have entered Troina, but apparently heavy German counter-attacks developed before the enemy could be consolidated.)

The reason for the desperation of the German defence lies in the strategic importance of Troina. Should the town be captured, Axis elements already forced out of Catania, Misterbianco and Paterno would be in danger of being flanked while attempting to retreat around the western slope of Mount Etna.

Rearguard Action

The battle of Troina therefore is regarded as actually a large-scale rearguard action designed to cover the withdrawal of the army that lost Catania and has been beaten back by Canadian and British forces in the south and central sectors.

What are described as "secondary elements"—Axis army personnel not engaged in actual front line fighting—have already been moving northeastward in the direction of Messina and some have been sent across the straits to the mainland.

A full-scale enemy withdrawal from Sicily has not begun yet so far as is known, but it is believed that Axis commanders are endeavoring to get back to a shorter line north and east of Mt. Etna.

Allied airmen reported significantly that the concentration of anti-aircraft guns around the Messina Straits was the heaviest yet met in the Mediterranean.

Scores of barges employed to shuttle troops and supplies between the mainland and Sicily have been sunk in the straits.

Nazis Pull Out First

Two Allied armies—the Americans in the north and the British in the south—now are within 50 miles of Messina and advancing steadily, it was stated authoritatively.

The Canadian drive within six miles of Adreno was threatening still another major link of the Axis communications.

British forces that broke into Catania yesterday captured almost the entire Italian 434th coastal battalion.

The Italians said the Germans pulled out first, leaving them as a rearguard—and, pursuing their habitual tactics, the Nazis failed to notify their Allies of their departure.

The Italians said the first indication they had that the city was taken, was when they saw British troops.

When they asked for terms the commander of the 8th Army brigade replied curtly: "unconditional surrender," and they gladly accepted.

Two Units Specially Mentioned

Two Allied units were singled out for special mention in the fighting in the past few days. They are an Irish brigade of the 78th British division which has been credited with the capture of Centuripe, and the 4th French Goums, a battalion of wild-fighting Moroccan troops.

The Goums have been battling with particular effectiveness in the tortuous hill country of the northern sector.

Since the initial stages, heavy bombers had not been directed against targets in Sicily. The destructive power of their heavy bombs has been concentrated on bigger objectives on the Italian mainland.

The fact that they have been thrown in against Messina to prevent Axis forces from escaping the island indicates the climax of the struggle is at hand.

In yesterday's raid they aimed principally at harbor installations, and the crews reported excellent results. They had fighter escorts, but met no enemy fighter opposition.

"It was a beautiful piece of bombing," said one pilot.

Canadians in Heavy Fighting

The Canadian-British troops—the Canadian 1st Division and the British 78th Division — aimed their advance at Aderno following the mopping up of rough, hilly country around Regalbuto and Centuripe.

Difficulties being encountered on this front were graphically illustrated last night in a delayed dispatch from Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, dated Aug. 5.

He told of Western Canadian infantry, the loyal Edmontons and the Seaforth Highlanders of the 1st Division, advancing on foot and with horses and mules over dried-out river beds, up slopes and along great ridges where mechanized progress was impossible.

Whole battalions of Canadians were engaged in fierce guerilla fighting with the Germans, along the main crests of the ridges, Munro said, adding that the full story of their exploit has yet to come out of the mountains.

(The Rome radio quoted the Italian communique as saying that shipping in the Allied-held Sicilian ports of Palermo and Augusta had been damaged by Axis bombers.

(The communique belatedly admitted the evacuation of Catania, which the Allies announced yesterday had been captured.

Rome Claims

(The broadcast said that Italian assault naval units escorted by a submarine penetrated Gibraltar harbor Wednesday night and sank a tanker and two merchant ships. The same submarine had entered the harbor on the night of May 7-8, when two British steamers totalling 17,500 tons and an American vessel of 7,500 tons were sunk by naval assault units, the broadcast said. All these claims were without Allied confirmation.

(The communique said that casualties in the Naples raid, presumably Friday's raid in which heavy Allied bombers blasted that main Italian port, had been set at 210 dead and 474 injured.)

3,266 SURFACE

Working heads of the operation were Admiral Sir Bertram H. Ramsay of the Royal Navy and Vice-Admiral Henry K. Hewitt, of the U.S. Navy.

On the eve of the invasion, with the waters south of Sicily crowded with convoys and their escorts, Admiral Cunningham messaged all ships:

Message on Eve of Invasion

"We are about to embark on the most mementous enterprise of the war, striking for the first time at the enemy in his own land.

"Our subject is clear and our primary duty is to place this vast expedition ashore in minimum time and subsequently to maintain our military and air forces as they drive relentlessly forward into enemy territory.

"In the light of this great duty, great risks must and are to be accepted. The safety of our own ships and all distracting considerations are to be relegated to second place or disregarded as the accomplishment of our primary duty may require."

Before dawn July 10 two British cruisers, accompanied by destroyers and motor torpedo boats, bombarded Catania, which was to fall yesterday.

Unloading Initial Forces

On the American beaches, from six miles west of Licata to Cape Scalambri, and on the British-Canadian coastline from seven miles west of Cape Correnti to Cape Murro Di Porco just south of Syracuse the intial forces of 160,000 Allied troops, 14,000 vehicles, 600 tanks and 1,800 guns were being unloaded.

The first tanks were rolled out through the surf by 5 a.m. in the British-Canadian sector, while the covering fire of cruisers, monitors, destroyers and gunboats beat down enemy resistance.

Despite heavy surf in some places, the Americans also successfully seized their beachheads early in the morning.

Axis fighter-bombers caused some casualties among British landing craft and personnel during the first day and German dive-bombers inflicted damage to landing forces in the American sector.

To United States landing craft at the western beaches fell the hardest task and the standard of seamanship and resolution displayed were of a high order, the official naval statement said.

Naval Forces Support

During Catania's siege strong British naval forces supported the 8th Army by shelling the entrenched German garrison, and the official statement departed from its serious tone to relate one incident involving an old battleship engaged in the Canania attack.

Despite having fought in the battle of Jutland in the First Great War and being regarded as extremely aged, she developed a remarkable turn of speed, thanks to the efforts of her engineers, and evoked the following signal from the commander-in-chief:

"Operations well carried out. There's no question that when the old lady lifts her skirts she can run."

First Canadian-Built Lancaster To Be Flown Overseas by RCAF Crew

Toronto, Aug. 6. — (CP)— Six Western Canadians and an Ontario airman— called the "Outsider" — left Toronto today for nearby Malton airport where they will board the first Canadian-built Lancaster bomber and fly it to England.

The thought of flying the huge machine, however, ranked second to the excitement that reigned in their Toronto hotel rooms. A small, fluffy, French poodle given to one of the men for a mascot held their attention.

The airmen, who have all seen service overseas, arrived back in Canada a month ago. In the group are Sqdn. Ldr. Reg. J. Lane, D.S.O., D.F.C., of Victoria; P.O. Steve Poczar, Saskatoon; P.O. Jean Carrere, Cochrane, Ont.; Sgt. Ross S. Webb, Glenavon, Sask.; Flt. Sgt. Reg. K. Burgar, Traynor, Sask.; Sgt. Mike Baczinski, Brandon, Man., and Flt. Sgt. R. W. (Bill) Wright, D.F.M. of Saskatoon.

Five members of the party—P.O. Boczar, P.O. Carrere, Flt. Sgt. Burgar, Sgt. Webb and Sgt. Browell—flew together overseas. They went to England together in May, 1942 and in the fall of the same year were crew members of a Lancaster bomber. Two Englishmen completed the crew.

Flt.-Sgt. Burgar said the plane which they flew on operations has since been "cracked up by a green crew"

Made 51 Flights

Sqdn. Ldr. Lane, 23, has 51 operational flights to his credit, having made many raids over Europe. He took part in two daylight raids on the warships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau at Brest but he said the toughest spot of his career was in a raid over Cologne when "flak" cut a petrol line when his aircraft was over the target and two tanks of gasoline were lost. Later his plane was attacked but he landed safely. He has returned to base on three motors a dozen times. He will be at the controls of the Canadian-made Lancaster on its overseas flight.

PO. Boczar has been on 31 trips over Europe, always in Lancasters, receiving his commission after five trips as a sergeant. He and his companion, PO. Carrere, have always been together.

PO. Carrere tried to join the R.C.A.F. in 1939 but was rejected and joined the army of another country, later escaping from Europe in 1940.

A graduate of the University of Montreal, he then made his way back to Canada and joined the Air Force as an air gunner.

Sgt. Webb, 30-year-old wireless gunner, has made 32 operational trips. He said, like other members of the crew, that he has little affection for "Happy Valley," as the Ruhr is called. "It's the most-heavily defended area in Germany but it's really getting pranged," he said. "The last time we were over Essen it was a shamble."

Sgt. Baczinsky, a flight engineer, replaced one of the Englishmen. He has made 26 operational flights. Flt. Sgt. Wright replaces the other Englishman as bomb aimer. Sgt. Browell, air gunner with the crew, also is a veteran of long-range flights over Axis territory. He will return later to England and re-join his chums.

Military Display To Feature Fair

Outstanding military displays with various units from the Bay of Quinte district taking part will be featured on all three days of the Belleville Fair to be held September 20-21-22, it has been announced by directors following a recent meeting during which plans for holding the exhibition were furthered.

With military displays to be featured at the exhibition, directors have also decided that many lines of exhibits and other displays will take on a militaristic view. This will be especially true of the women's department where special classes will be afforded for the display of handiwork of a patriotic nature. Classes will be provided for sweaters, socks and jackets bearing airforce, navy and army crests, while classes will also be provided for Red Cross work, it has been stated.

Entries of such work from women's organization and women's institutes throughout the county will be invited by fair directors and prize lists will be mailed on request.

Provide Good Racing

Lovers of horse racing will be assured of the usual fine racing events with directors having voted a sum for prizes sufficient to attract the best horses in the country. Increased interest is also being shown in the horse exhibit classes, it was stated, with requests having already been received for prize lists from horsemen who never before have shown at the fair.

Adding to the attraction of the exhibition, Garden Brothers will be back with their usual fine program of stage acts to delight the grandstand crowds, while Conklin's Midway, the largest in Canada, will be featured with their usual wide array of amusements and other attractions.

In view of rationing restrictions, considerable changes will be made in the domestic science classes, it was intimated, while renewed emphasis will be placed on public and high school children's work. Lady directors of the fair have been spending much time revising the lists for this phase of the exhibition.

Usual Judging Contests

The junior work of the fair, under the direction of Mr. H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative for the county, will be conducted as usual, with the usual judging competitions for the junior farm girls and boys.

A splendid response from the several municipalities approached for grants has been received by directors with merchants and citizens also giving generous donations in special prizes to add greatly to the prize lists.

All in all the current exhibition being planned by directors of the Belleville Fair promises to be one of the most attractive ever to be held in the local agricultural park, considered to be the most attractive of Class "B" fair grounds in the province.

Fisherman Lands 24-lb. Lunge Despite Distracting Incident

Believe it or not, these fishermen are really a modest lot at heart. They don't always tell with prideful detail of the "big one that got away," and sometimes they even fail to mention the fact they tried to assist in landing a 24-pounder. We heard this one only through the grapevine route.

It seems that Harry Langabeer, well known Front Street barber, was out fishing with a friend in Muscote Bay early this week when the two-man party hooked the big fellow and due to a rather embarrassing situation which developed, the ensuing incident wasn't mentioned when the fishermen were telling their prowess with the road and line.

No, Harry didn't hook the big lunge. It was Ed. Satterswaite of Toronto who has a cottage near Massassaga. When the big fellow put up a lengthy battle, Mr. Langabeer got visions of the fish being lost and getting ready to gaff him somehow caught his foot and overbalanced into the bay. With the punt threatening to turn over; Mr. Satterswaite hanging onto his line on which was hooked the big fish, and his companion hanging with head and shoulders submerged in the water, one can imagine the predicament and Harry cannot swim!

Somehow with one hand Mr. Satterswaite hung onto his straining line holding 24-pound lunge and with the other assisted his unfortunate fisherman friend back into the boat—and then reeled the fish in unassisted.

One hates to think of what might have happened had the big fish got away during the unfortunate accident.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Old Marshal Badoglio is attempting some mighty risky juggling with the Throne of Italy in his efforts to divert at one and the same time the attention of the Allies, who demand unconditional surrender forthwith, and the Germans, who are said to threaten reprisals if he throws up the sponge.

The Italian public wants peace. Fiery demonstrations in many sections of the country show that the people are in that frame of mind which bodes no good for anyone who stands between them and the return to normal for which they so long have yearned. The fact that Badoglio is keeping the lid on by a vigorous display of force doesn't alter that fact.

It was King Victor Emmanuel who, willingly or otherwise, named Badoglio Chief of State, with dictatorial powers, when Mussolini collapsed the other day. That inevitably must link the little monarch in the minds of his subjects with any fresh misfortune which may come to them because of the Marshal's failure to accept the Allied terms, thus inviting bombing and invasion.

Badoglio may see the writing on the wall and surrender. If he persists in playing the Hitlerian games, however, and so condemns his unfortunate country to the horrors of further war, he may precipitate an ultimate political change with far-reaching consequences.

Badoglio or no Badoglio, the Allies are going to take over Italy. Then in due course, when the fires of war have died away in Europe, the people of the country will be permitted to choose the form of government under which they wish to live—so long as it isn't Fascist or Nazi. The United Nations have promised this to the Axis countries.

Will the people want to retain a King who contributed to their suffering? Will they even want to keep the monarchy?

Only time can answer those momentous questions. However, we are bound to note that during the recent days of crisis political elements in various parts of the country have been demonstrating in favor of other forms of government.

Among the demonstrants are said to be communists. One would indeed be short of memory to forget that Mussolini founded Fascism for the avowed purpose of uprooting Bolshevism in Italy, and one would be shortsighted not to see that communism has taken on strength from the great victories of the Red Army.

ROTARY KARNIVAL READY TO OPEN

Everything is in readiness for the gala opening of the Rotary Karnival which will get under way on South Church Street at the Canadian Pacific Railway station this evening. Queen City Shows personnel have arrived in the city and today were busy erecting their equipment in readiness for the opening of their eight-day stand in the city.

Varied rides built with an eye to attract and provide amusement for the younger folk will be featured for the entire stay of the Karnival in the city while in addition there will be the ever-popular bingo and other games operated by members of the Belleville Rotary Club personnel.

Karnival committeemen of the Rotary Club extend a cordial invitation to the Belleville public to visit their place of amusement often during the next eight days and to enjoy the many attractions offered.

It's all for a very good cause with the proceeds to go to the Rotary Club's Crippled Children's Fund, an effort of charity, which has done a great deal of good in Belleville and district.

GOING TO FIGHT HITLER

Indianapolis, Aug. 6 — (AP) — Heinz Hammerschmidt, 34, who was brought out of Germany through the determined efforts of relatives here, still has the upper hand over Hitler. While in a German concentration camp Gestapo officers had left Hammerschmidt to die after they had broken his arches, smashed his knee, knocked out some teeth, shot him in the arm and stabbed him in the eye and neck with a bayonet. Despite the injuries, he was inducted into the United States army here.

DARING THRUST THROUGH WILD SICILIAN HILLS

Men Who Know Rocks and How to Care for Horses on Thrilling Mission.

STIRRING INCIDENTS

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 5—(delayed)— (CP Cable) — The Loyal Edmonton Regiment, chosen for the job because a number of the officers and men know the Rockies and also many of the men, farmers and ranchers, know how to care for horses, were sent on a daring thrust eastward through wild mountainous country of Central Sicily.

They travelled through terrain where no vehicles can be used, where water, rations and ammunition are carried by mule trains. While earlier they had been through a great deal of rough fighting, this advance through the mountains was one of the most difficult operations they have attempted.

This is a partial story of the mountain attack obtained from an officer and a private who had been in touch with the operation.

With Mule Train

The Edmontons first sent patrols into the mountains and as no enemy was reported the battalion moved forward with its first mule train.

They went into barren country where all streams were dried up. I went forward to the fringe of this area and it is a jumble of rolling high mounds and brown mountain slopes with some patches of green trees giving the only relief to the desolate scene in the glaring sun.

Haze drifted across the peaks.

When the infantrymen got into a valley German observation outposts picked them out and there was a crossfire from mortars and machine-guns. The Canadians lost some mules and their wireless communications broke down when the sets were damaged.

Becomes Ghost Battalion

There were some casualties and they were all evacuated by stretcher bearers who had to carry the wounded three or four miles. Then the regiment became a ghost battalion. Headquarters did not hear from it for hours. There were some worried officers until a couple of the Edmontons made their way back with the latest reports.

They were doing all right, and making progress. But they needed food, water and ammunition.

A mule train had been prepared before this to go in to them, and away it went. It was under mortar fire en route, too, but reached the battalion with the first rations to get up in 36 hours, during which the troops had lived on the small amount of rations and water they carried with them.

The Edmontons have taken some prisoners, identified as troops drawn from the Catania front within the past week.

I drove to other Canadian sectors on the way down to Regalbuto, latest town to fall to the combined Canadian and British advance. On the macadam road which corkscrews its way from Agira to Regalbuto I passed a destroyed German armored car, a German tank, half a dozen big enemy guns and a dozen overturned Nazi trucks.

There had been hard fighting here as our troops battled to the top of these hills around Regalbuto and forced the Germans out. The town was captured more by absorption via these dominating hills than by direct assault.

I passed German graves by the roadside — some British and Canadian ones too, with the soldiers' name and his tin hat on each cross.

Regalbuto Desolate

Regalbuto itself was a fearful sight.

It was bombed, shelled and mortared. Few buildings were unhit. The main square was covered with rubble. I had trouble getting through the streets but they were being cleared by sappers.

The war hit Regalbuto harder than any other Sicilian town through which we have passed. Roofs have been blown off houses, towers of chief buildings have been holed by shells, streets blown up by bombs and ruin and desolation are everywhere.

With Americans on the left flank, the Canadians are seeing a great deal of their neighbors these days. American and Canadian convoys wind in and out of each other on the roads. American and Canadian provost officers direct traffic jointly in some towns. They exchange smokes if they have any and are as co-operative and friendly as if they had been campaigning together for years instead of a matter of weeks.

American correspondents are beginning to come over to the Canadian lines to get some stories, for the exploits of the "Red Patch Devils" are beginning to get around the front.

Obituary

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH HORTON
(Foxboro)

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Horton, widow of Benjamin Horton, died this Friday morning at the home of her son, Mr. George Horton, 9 Grier Street, after an illness of several weeks' duration.

The late Mrs. Horton had reached an advanced age, being in her 88th. year. She was born in Rawdon Township and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wright. All her life was passed in the Foxboro district. In religion she was a member of the United Church at Chatterton and was well esteemed.

The Provincial Election

That there were surprises in some form or other for many of the people of Ontario in the Provincial general election this week is generally accepted. Though people realize that there is always the element of surprise in a political contest, many were not prepared for the sweeping change in the political complexion of the Legislature which developed as a result of Wednesday's polling. Many in closest contact with party affairs must have been surprised by the fact that a stalemate resulted with no one party with sufficient number of seats to command a majority of the new House, which means that a coalition or fusion government is probable. And it is generally accepted that Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, leader of the Progressive Conservatives, the largest group, will undertake to form a government of that kind and endeavor to carry out in legislation the proposals of his platform announced during the election campaign.

There was of course a good number of voters who realized that the Nixon Government could hardly hope to prserve as large a membership in the next Legislature as in the last, but there were not so many who foresaw the party retiring to third place. As for the C.C.F., this was the first occasion when it had placed so many candidates in the field and surprise at the strength this group developed was quite natural, though it was expected to poll a substantial vote. Col. Drew, leader of the Progressive Conservatives, had stirred in many the realization that his following would be substantially increased above the number he commanded up to the prorogation of the Legislature and the result proved that view well founded.

In the course of the campaign all parties pledged themselves to advanced legislation and so whoever is destined to form the government it is to be expected that there will be steps taken to implement many of the pre-election pledges in legislation. The situation provides an opportunity for all to get together and cooperate for the benefit of the Province.

It is natural that the people of Ontario in view of the new and peculiar conditions and the problems arising out of them will follow with deeper interest than for some time the policies of those who are directing the provincial government. That this will have its advantages in an observant and watchful public is to be assumed.

Germany Feeling Pinch

The restraints which are to be put upon Germany when the enemy cracks are beginning to make their effects felt. Where Hitler once had the expansive power of German might sufficient to overrun neighbor lands by reason of his long-prepared treachery against the security of the world he now finds he has lost the power to go forward and is now forced to move backward. The end of those roads over which the Hun is moving backward is Berlin.

Germany and Italy lost their power in North Africa and in the Mediterranean. Now Sicily has all but slipped from the Axis grasp and despite their resistance the Germans are being driven back and into what is believed to be a yawning trap like that in Tunisia. In Russia the Huns are bent back by relentless Russian pressure. From overhead comes the air might that flies by night and flies by day, reducing the war plants of Hitlerism and Nazism.

Everywhere the Axis offensive is gone.

Hamburg is in a state of ruins and Berlin is feeling a sense of near-panic fearing that the capital city which is an arsenal of German industry will receive bombing treatment similar to that which has struck Hamburg.

Not only is there material loss to the enemy but there is the loss of spirit. The days are shortening and the nights are becoming longer — a time when airplanes can carry out longer and more extensive flights with greater security than in the short nights of summer. Even these latter have been disastrous to the war machine of the enemy.

The world for all time will know what nefarious Nazism has been like,—the sign of the most degraded tyranny the world has known, treacherous, selfish, cruel, lusting for power and glory at the cost of millions of lives and coercing satellite nations into its orbit out of fear. But as the Axis is feeling shattering blows, the people of the satellite lands are becoming more and more apprehensive and are seeking to get away from the powers that have brought Nazism and Fascism to them. It is a sign of the times this desire to escape being caught as friends of the Axis. Hitler's tyranny is one of absolute negation of virtues. Even the satellites realize that.

Satellites Pulling Away From Axis

(Montreal Herald)

Keep your eyes on the Axis satellite countries—Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria. There is more than a chance that the whole flimsy structure of German dominated Europe may collapse as a result of the upheaval in Italy. Certainly it must have been shaken to its foundations.

London is reported expecting peace "feelers" from those regions soon and the Allies may add pressure by air raids on the capitals, Sofia, Budapest and Bucharest.

Rumania and Hungary are believed already cracking. No wonder the Germans are worried over the rebellious attitude of the Italian soldiers in Greece. Those in Yugoslavia, too, have lost heart.

The tenseness in Bulgaria is reflected in the premier's move to make all over the age of 16 subject to the laws against sabotage. Hungarians have had enough of the war and are anxious for peace.

So it is evident that sweeping results could follow new successes by the Allied armies. Their approach would give courage to the rebellious elements to throw off the Axis yoke.

Bees in a Bomber

(London Evening Standard)

Working round a Halifax bomber at its dispersal point the ground crew heard a buzzing noise. One of the aircraft hands, investigating, found a procession of bees entering and leaving a small hole in the tail 'plane.

The Halifax had to be ready for the night's operations, but nobody on the station knew how to handle a swarm. Then the station padre remembered that a vicar in a local village was a bee-keeper. He asked him to come over to help.

First the fabric had to be stripped from the tail 'plane. Then the vicar, wearing gloves, found the queen bee, surrounded by her drones and workers.

Bees were continually flying in from the hedgerows, but when the vicar had removed the queen the other bees followed her in search of a new home.

The fabric was then patched up, and a few hours later the Halifax took off for Germany and returned safely.

Ulster Counts Houses

A housing survey of all of Northern Ireland is being made to obtain data for post-war planning and housing, and to ascertain the number of houses necessary to eliminate present overcrowding. The information is for the Planning Advisory Board in Belfast. Every house in every city, borough and urban district will be visited. In rural areas a system of "sampling" has been adopted.

THE DRUGGIST'S WIFE

I'd say it means a lonely life
To be the corner druggist's wife,
Condemned through all the years before
To make a home above the store.
On holidays to hear him say:
"My dear, the clerk is off today!
If I should order him to work,
I'd have to seek another clerk,
And clerks today of any kind
I'm sure you know are hard to find."

Time was, at very early age,
I took a druggist's trivial wage
And washed the glasses and the spoons,
The bottles and the brass spittoons.
I folded all the morning through
The Seidlitz powders, white and blue.
From eight a.m. to ten at night
I heard the druggist's clerk recite
The cares, the troubles and the woes
Which endlessly the druggist knows.

Yet though they burn the midnight oil
And seven days a week must toil,
Though pharmacists are never known
To have a moment for their own,
And though their trade they must pursue
On holidays and Sundays, too,
When druggists would a-wooing go,
The women never answer "No."
Although it means a lonely life,
The druggist always finds a wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Mather, College Hill, have left on a trip to Calgary, Alberta, and other places in Western Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. George Meyers of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, are visiting friends in town.

Miss M. Fleming has returned home after a trip to Calgary, Alberta.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Harman have left on a holiday trip to Montreal and Ottawa.

Mr. T. S. Carman has returned home after a boat trip up the Great Lakes.

Mr. D. Foster of this city spent Sunday at the home of Mr. M. D. Adams, Marlbank.

Mr. Cyril Good of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, spent yesterday here with friends.

Mr. Charles Spaulding of Chicago, Ill., is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs., S. Burrows, Bridge Street east.

The general rate of taxation in Belleville this year will be the same as last year, namely 16 mills. The city assessment is up $100,000.

40 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 6TH., 1903.

The semi-anual meeting of the Sun and Hastings Savings and Loan Company was held in the office of the company on Bridge Street here yesterday. The reports showed the company to be in a strong position.

Extensive repairs and alterations are being made to St. George's Church on Station St.

Mr. William H. Hambly of the Bank of Montreal staff at Lindsay, an old Belleville boy, is visiting his parents Col. and Mrs. P. H. Hambly.

Mrs. Howard Green and two children, accompanied by her sister-in-law, Miss Wilhelmina Green left for New York yesterday.

The quadrille music furnished by the band of the 15th. Regiment is a great attraction to the young people, who trip the light fantastic toe with gaiety and enthusiasm. Dancing is always a trump card with the rising generation, and the fine music of the quadrille band is enough to inspire any admired of terpsichore to indulge in the art to their hearts content.

Cucumbers are now being offered for sale and the doctors expect a large increase of cholera morbus.

Course for Army Wives

(From the Manchester Guardian)

To avoid misunderstanding, the rules about the marriage of American soldiers to British girls have been reissued, and it is made clear for those brides who want to sail at once for the United States that they do not automatically become American citizens, although they may be naturalized in three years instead of five.

There is no similar rule about citizenship for women marrying Canadian serving men here, altho' other regulations, such as the preliminary permission for marriage from the commanding officer and several months' waiting, are not very different for Canadians and Americans seeking English brides. Wives of Canadians become Canadian nationals on marriage and a few of them, usually accompanying their husbands on their return home, have happily settled already in the Dominion.

Canadian military authorities in London give an estimate of over 10,000 marriages as having taken place in this country between English girls and Canadian serving men since the war began. A Canadian correspondent has published the figure of 12,000. Though few of the brides will reach their new homes until after the war, they can learn in advance about their future life.

An experimental week's course for the wives of Canadian serving men has on its syllabus the industry and resources of the Dominion as shown by moving pictures its history, social services, and education, and the practical details of household budgets, homes and their heating, and the value of Canadian money. The Canadian Legion educational service is arranging the course.

The Treatment of Anemia With Iron.

In former days if a patient was pale and listless, the physician immediately tested the blood and if the hemoglobin was low (iron), he prescribed iron and usually there would soon be more or less improvement in the patient's blood and appearance. Today the physician is not satisfied to just try to increase the amount of iron in the blood, but tries to find out what is causing the loss of iron. He recognizes the thin blood as only a symptom not a disease in itself. So a search is made for infection, and also into the health habits of the patient as to sleep, food, and the outdoors.

In the Nebraska State Medical Journal, Dr. John C. Sharpe, University of Nebraska College of Medicine, states that the form of iron used is not important but the giving of "enough" iron is the important factor in increasing the iron in the blood. "The rule that hemoglobin should rise at a faster rate than one percent per day when the hemoglobin is below 70 percent may serve as a rough guide for judging whether the amount given is sufficient".

The effectiveness of an iron preparation in increasing the hemoglobin in the blood does not depend on the amount of metallic iron in the preparation but the amount of iron the body can use. Thus iron (ferrous, sulfate is at present considered the best form in which to use iron because it is more completely used by the body than other iron preparations. "The high degree of iron utilization (use by the body) of ferrous sulfate is shown by the more satisfactory results obtained with smaller dosage and less disturbance to the body".

Another point mentioned is that a woman requires about four times as much iron daily as does a man. In addition, at different stages of life such as in the growing child, the menstruating or pregnant woman, or any individual with chronic loss of blood, considerably more iron is required than is supplied by the average diet.

What about liver and extract of liver? Whole liver taken by mouth is valuable in all forms of anemia because it is rich in iron and protein. However, it is in pernicious anemia, where both the hemoglobin in the blood cells and the number of the cells themselves is below normal, that liver and liver extract is the necessary treatment.

KINGSTON RESIDENT ROBBED

Hamilton, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Police said last night that Elwood Nicholson of Kingston, Ont., was attacked and robbed by three men while walking along a street just outside the city limits. The thieves stole $70 in cash, his watch and suit coat.

Nicholson was taken to hospital for emergency treatment for a possible fractured nose and a cut and bruise on the face.

READING WHILE RUNNING

The common expression, "that he who runs may read" is of Biblical origin, but the expression does not occur in the Bible in that exact form.

It is a misquotation or altered form of a passage in the Old Testament.

According to the King James version of the Scriptures, Habakkuk 2:2 says:

"And the Lord answered me, and said, Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it."

This is, as near as possible, a literal translation of the Hebrew version, which is supposed to date back in its original form to about 500 B.C.

The last part of the verse, that he may run that readeth it," is almost always quoted, "that he who runs may read."

This popular version of the expression, however, dates back at least a century and a half.

For instance, in his Tirocinium, published in 1784, William Cowper wrote:

Shine by the side of ev'ry path we tread
With such a lustre, he that runs may read.

Alfred Lord Tennyson in The Flower, employed the some form of the expression:

Read my little fable;
He that runs may read.

It is possible that the expression "he that runs may read," was current in English before the publication of the King James version of the Bible in 1611.

In 1604 Joshua Sylvester published a translation of The Divine Weeks of the World's Birth, by Guillaume de Salluste du Bartas, French Huguenot poet, soldier and diplomat. One line of the English poet's translation is:

And reads, though running, all these needful motions.

It may be that in some of the earliest English translations of the Old Testament the expression from Habakkuk 2:2 was translated, "that he that runs may read," instead of, "that he may run that readeth it."

When Messina Was Shaken Down

(From the Hamilton Spectator)

Soon Canadian troops will march through the streets of Messina, and as their boots beat in military tread upon its pavements of lava they may reflect, perhaps, that not far away classical Mount Etna thrusts its sultry head into the clouds and that there nature in terrible mood slumbers.

Thirty-five years ago the name of Messina was on every man's lips, as it will be again when the flags of the free nations wave in the breeze from the Ionian and Tyrrhenian seas.

Tomorrow it will be uttered with rejoicing and hope; then, it was spoken with horror and pity. For on December 28, 1908, the earth shook Sicily, and the famous city, which once Athenians, the men of Carthage, Romans and Saracens had ruled as conquerors, collapsed in ruins. The ground lifted and fell as though it were liquid and in 30 seconds Messina was a shambles.

* *

The animals sensed the coming of the terror hours before. Horses neighed, dogs howled, cattle were restless in their stalls, birds circled in the air and flew away with cries of alarm. But most of the people were sleeping peacefully in the early Monday morning when, with a roar, the earthquake lifted houses up in the air and dropped them, twisted the streets, even crumbled stone and brick. For thousands of those that slept there was no awakening.

In an uncanny stillness the survivors stumbled through the debris, which still fell around them, hearing only the cries of the injured and the groans of the dying.

They hastened to the water front only to meet a new horror. The water was suddenly sucked out of the harbor, and then returned in a tidal wave, 40 feet high. Boats were smashed utterly and most of the thousands of people lining the shore were swept away. Then the heavens seemed aflame with lightning, and there came a torrential rain. It rained for seven days, without cessation.

Man contributed to the evils of the hour. The criminals of the city, some released by falling walls from their prisons, and augmented by criminals from all over Italy, who rushed to the scene, commenced an orgy of looting. Among the ruins were money and jewels. At the Bank of Sicily half a million dollars lay exposed. Over this treasure a fight between crooks and sailors cost the lives of six criminals and wounds to six sailors. The body of a beautiful woman was found with her fingers chopped off for the rings. Half-stunned girls were carried away to the brothels of the mainland.

* *

From a sympathetic world aid was rushed with all human speed. A Russian battleship, the Slava, was the first to reach the harbor of Messina. The sailors could hear the crash of falling walls and were almost overcome by the smell of roasting flesh, for the gas mains had burst and were alight and flames licked the ruins even amid the downpour of rain.

British ships came to assist the Russians in their search for survivors and later warships of the United States fleet, then on a cruise around the world. The earthquake devastated an area of 7,500 square miles. Forty villages had collapsed with the city of Messina. The population of the city was 150,000. In the area of disaster 100,000 were instantly killed or mortally wounded.

A few years ago many would have sworn that no devastation of war could equal that of nature in her more frightful aspects. But that was before the advent of Hitler! As the nations of the world came to succour Messina thirty-five years ago, so again, the free nations come to the famous city as saviors. Criminals are being fought now, as they were fought then—and it may be Canadians will battle them in the streets of Messina itself.

WEDDINGS

COLLAR—WOODCOX

A very quiet wedding took place on July 31st, in Trenton, when Zella Alfreda Woodcox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Woodcox, Glen Miller, became the bride of Clifford Collar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Collar, also of Glen Miller, the Rev. J. G. McKee officiating.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white triple sheer and a shoulder-length veil held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. Her flowers were Sweetheart roses and carnations.

Mrs. Glen Peterson was matron of honor, wearing a long dress of powder blue satin and sheer, with a coronet of rosebuds in her hair and carrying Briarcliffe roses.

The groom was attended by his cousin, Glen Peterson.

The newly-married couple left for wedding trip to points north and on their return they will reside in Glen Miller.

FLEMING—FLEMING

Wallace A. Fleming, son of Mrs. A. and late Alexander Fleming, of Ivanhoe and Aileen N. Fleming, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Fleming, of Ivanhoe, were married at St. Andrew's Manse, Stirling, on Saturday, July 31st, at 10 a.m., by the Rev. W. H. V. Walker. The young couple were unattended.

After a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and other western points they will reside on the groom's farm at Ivanhoe.

YOUNGHUSBAND—UNGAR

St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, was the scene of a quiet wedding recently when Rev. K. F. Blachford united in marriage Mary Alice, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Ungar, Napanee and Omar Younghusband, only son of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Younghusband, of Belleville.

The bride was attended by Miss Ann Smith, Reg.N., of Elgin, and Dr. P. F. Playfair, of Ottawa, attended the groom.

The bride is a graduate of the Kingston General Hospital and is a member of the nursing staff.

Dr. Younghusband is a recent graduate of the faculty of medicine of Queen's University and is now on the interne staff of the Kingston General Hospital.

STEWART—TULLOUGH

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at 11 o'clock on Friday, July 30th, in Stirling, when the Rev. W. H. V. Walker united in marriage Marion Eleanor, only daughter of Mrs. Thelma Tulloch and the late N. J. Tulloch to Paul Robertson, only son of Mr. Donald R. Stewart and the late Mrs. Stewart, of Stirling.

The bride was dressed in an ensemble of French blue with corn coloured accessories. She was attended by Miss Olive Stewart, sister of the groom. Miss Stewart chose a becoming gown of Robin blue printed silk with accessories to match. The groom was attended by Mr. John Orser, of Stirling.

Amid showers of confetti the party left for Belleville, where a wedding dinner was served at the Belvedere Hotel to twelve guests.

Later the young couple left for a wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw, Ont., Aug. 5 — On Thursday afternoon of last week, Mrs. A. V. Brown and Miss Freida McLaren and their Sunday School classes held a picnic in Haslett's Grove and reported a splendid time. Mrs. W. J. Barlow and her class held their outing at Chard's Bridge a few days previous and spent the day swimming, boating, etc.

Miss Joan Reid, of Oshawa, who has been visiting at her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Reid, returned home on Saturday last.

Miss Mildred McLaren is spending a week's holiday at Perth, the guest of her aunt, Mrs. E. J. Bowdell.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mumby and children, Heather and Lynn, returned to their home in Saint John, N.B., on Sunday last.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Woman Glories in Mad Jealousy of Her Husband

A correspondent asks me to define jealousy. Hasn't everything been said and written about this human infirmity which sometimes incites murder?

"Is there any true love without jealousy?" is a question often asked me. Apparently many think there isn't—and they want it so.

The following letter is an interesting study in psychology:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In our little suburban circle, my women friends envy me for my husband's raging jealousy. I'm 23, we've been married two years and have no children. In my secret soul, perhaps, I'm glad of my Othello, because I made trades with him, promise not to dance with certain men if he'll give me something on which I've set my heart. Ignoble, you'll probably say, but what's noble about jealousy?

When he came home on furlough a week ago, he demanded to know where I got a new golf club. I told him frankly it had been given to me by a friend of ours. We were on the links at the time. He snatched the club, broke it across his knee and threw it away. Everyone was convulsed with laughter, but the women envied me. Luckily, the man who gave me the club wasn't present. What do you make of this little comedy of human behaviour?

—J. W. L.

Specialists who delve in human emotions and sometimes bring up things as unsightly as deep sea nets produce, say the germ of jealousy is inherent in everyone. J. W. L. confesses making bargains with this demon in possesion of her husband. She is showing off at the expense of a primitive person's weakness.

When she is older and inspires less jealousy in her man, perhaps she may think regretfully of the little scene she relates. But as to the emotion . .

In some comfortable souls it lies dormant through life. In others, it scourges like a whip of scorpions all their years.

Jealousy is simply another form of fear. The jealous person fears the loss of a possession, or to appear inferior. Like all forms of fear, jealousy is difficult to eradicate, for it takes root back to childhood.

As in dealing with childhood fears, reasoning is of little effect. The best way to deal with it is to set the stage, psychologically, for the person to discover how baseless or ridiculous the jealousy is.

But, of course, you can't do this by such methods as this wife practices. She wants her husband to be jealous.

Household Fly Disease Carrier

Because it is one of the most active agents in the spread of disease and one of the greatest enemies of public health, the common house fly should not be tolerated in the home or its surroundings, or in shops offering human food and fruit for sale. It breeds in filth, and passes directly from the filth to human food, carrying bacteria and particles of decomposing organic matter on its hairy body and legs and on its sticky feet and mouth. It may light on the face of a sleeping child, and this common fly is notorious for the part it plays in spreading infantile diarrhoea, typhoid, tuberculosis, cholera, dysentery, and other diseases. It is strongly suspected of being a carrier of the virus causing infantile paralysis, and already the case has been almost proved by the finding of the virus in a mixed collection of flies taken in districts where infantile paralysis had occurred.

The common house fly is one of the most serious corrupters of food. In the home, control of flies is comparatively easy. They can be destroyed, and effective covering of the temporary garbage will prevent the flies from finding a breeding place.

The most effective method of control consists in eliminating or reducing their breeding places outside by the proper treatment and disposal of such materials as manure and garbage. One neglected manure heap or garbage dump is often sufficient to infect the whole neighbourhood, and therefore in the control of flies it is necessary to enlist the active co-operation of the whole community. Practical information on this subject will be found in Bulletin No. 637 "Control of Some Common Species of Household Insects," which may be obtained free by writing to Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Tiredness May Be Due To Vitamin Deficiency

Recently, in a careful study of fatigue, Harvard scientists showed that persons who lack sufficient vitamins of the B complex become tired more quickly than those who receive sufficient quantities of these important vitamins in their food. This is an illustration of the importance of food for keeping soldiers and workers in defence industries in the best possible physical condition. Attention must be given to the diet of all persons and particular thought must be given to the vitamin content.

Nowadays much foods is processed, frozen and stored. All of these things may cause some loss of the important vitamins that are present in fresh, well-cooked and immediately eaten foods. Other factors, too, may affect the vitamin and mineral content of foods. For example, the soil itself may not furnish the necessary amounts of minerals and vitamins to vegetables, fruits and grains.

As a result of lack of vitamins, diseases known as deficiency diseases may occur. Mild forms of these diseases may be difficult to recognize. In the past, many of them have been diagnosed as nervous or physical exhaustion. If, for example, there is a lack of niacin, a part of the vitamin B complex, in the blood, pellagra may develop. If this disease is present in a severe form, it is easy to diagnose, but when it causes only mild symptoms it may be difficult to tell just what is wrong. For example, a person may merely be nervous, easily upset, may perhaps have a mild skin rash, be sleepless, and have headache—all due to a mild vitamin deficiency.

A careful study is needed in each case to tell just what is wrong. A lack of any of the vitamins in the diet causes an actual change in the body cells and the effects produced may extend throughout the body. If the defect is not corrected, a severe deficiency disease such as pellagra, rickets or scurvy may develop.

It is true, perhaps, that the low income in certain families may not permit the buying of all of the foods necessary to make the diet proper. A daily diet that contains a pint of milk for adults and a quart of milk for children, one egg a day, three servings of vegetables, one of which is raw, two servings of fruit, one of meat, fish or fowl, at least a tablespoonful of butter and enriched cereal or bread will, as a rule, furnish all the necessary food parts. Some preparation containing vitamin D is also needed, particularly when there is not enough sunshine. Enriched cereal and bread are those to which have been added vitamins and minerals to bring up their vitamin and mineral content to the amounts present before the cereal or the flour for the bread was processed or refined.

If it is found that a person's diet does not supply him with all the necessary food parts then various vitamin products of one type or another should be given. These should not replace natural foods but should supplement the diet. Attention to these facts about adequate diet will improve the health and welfare of all persons.

Canning Corner

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture

When canning fruits with sugar this year it is important to use, for each fruit, the syrup that will give a palatable product with the minimum amount of sugar.

In order that no syrup be wasted the amount of syrup required should be carefully calculated. Small fruits, berries and cherries will require 1-2 to 3-4 cup of syrup per pint sealer and large fruits such as pears and peaches will take from 3-4 to 1 cup for each pint sealer.

Here are the syrups that we have found to give the most satisfactory and economical results in our experimental work.

Apples and Pears.

A one to three syrup ,that is 1 cup sugar to three cups water. Yield approximately cups of syrup.

Apricots, blueberries, raspberries, sweet cherries, peaches, sweet plums and saskatoons:—

A one to two syrup. 1 cup sugar to 2 cups water yields approximately 2 1-4 cups syrup.

Blackberries, currants, gooseberries, loganberries, strawberries:—

A one to one and a half syrup. 1 cup sugar to 1 1-2 cups water yields approximately 2 cups syrup.

Sour cherries, sour plums and rhubarb:—

A one to one syrup. 1 cup sugar to 1 cup water yields approximately 1 1-2 cups syrup.

For all syrups, sugar and water should be brought to boiling point and boiled 5 minutes. The syrup should be kept hot until used.

Cooking-Wise

The cook is in an excellent position to do some important saving—in power, fuel and food value as well—through careful cooking. Vegetables should be cooked in only a small amount of water, and cooked for as short a time as possible. This kind of cooking also saves the flavor, vegetables taste much better.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

What to Do if You're Worried by Lineup of Silver at Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I'm always uncomfortable when I go to dine in a restaurant or when I go to dine in a home where there is perfect service (we live very simply but nicely) when I am confronted with a row of silverware at the sides of my plate. Is there any rule about the order in which these are used?

2. Also just how should one "treat" bouillon served in cups? Should it all be sipped with the bouillon spoon, or drunk from the cup?

3. How is a fruit cocktail eaten, with spoon or fork?

—Grace M.

1. When a table is set properly, as in a home where there is perfect service, there is absolutely no need of your being flustered about the order in which you should use the silverpieces. For you will find the forks (except the oyster fork) on the left of the plate and the knives and spoons (and the oyster fork, if one is needed) on the right of the plate, and they will be laid in the order in which you will need them for the menu to be served.

The dessert silverpieces will not be on the table when you sit down for these are brought in with the dessert course, the dessert fork on the left of the dessert-plate, the dessert spoon on the right of the dessert-plate.

If you have any doubt as to which piece of silver to take up or how to eat a certain food, look at what your hostess is doing and follow her lead.

In restaurant the procedure is not so sure, for the waiters are apt to put on several types of silverpieces and trust to your need and judgment to choose the convenient one. However, even though you can't often depend on the proper sequence, don't let this worry you either, just pick up the most "logical" silverpiece.

2. "Treat" a cup of bouillon as if it were a cup of tea. That is, first sip it from the bouillon spoon to test the heat and then you may drink it from the cup.

3. Use a teaspoon for a fruit cocktail.

Bride May Walk Alone

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At my informal church wedding in August I am planning to wear an ankle-length white gown. 1. Would it be permissible for the groom to wear a business suit? 2. Is it correct for the bride to walk up the aisle alone if there is no one to give her in marriage? 3. If the bride has no attendants should the groom then not have a best man?

—J. H.

1. Yes. 2. Yes. Or if only a few seats in the church are to be occupied, you may enter the side door at the left of the altar. Even if you are not to be given in marriage, you may ask a male relative or a man who has long been a friend of your family, to walk down the aisle with you. 3. The groom usually (although he need not) has a best man whether or not the bride has an attendant.

Manners Tip

One of the most inspiring and comforting rewards about having a dependable standard of manners is that you don't miss the fun of knowing that all's well with what you are inclined to do and say, of knowing that others approve of your manners, of knowing how to handle a social situation that calls for special tact and technic.

The Marry-Go-Round

The Man Of It

Man is perverse. Nothing makes him so certain that he loves a girl as a little uncertainty about her response. But when she begins to take too much stock in his devotion somehow it suddenly ceases to declare any dividends.

If a girl can get into a man's imagination sufficienlty to keep him eager and in doubt for more than a few weeks, these speedy days, she is a good-worker and the chances are that no other girl can crowd her out.

"Confirmed Bachelor": A man who takes merely a speculative interest in a kiss, a sporting interest in love and an academic interest in marriage.

A girl may resent the bold stare in a man's eyes; but the only thing that she absolutely cannot endure is that faraway look with which he gazes straight through her at another girl.

A man can't help feeling a little glow of affection for a woman who frankly professes to admire him. It starts them right off with a mutual enthusiasm.

A man always runs true to type. He will go right on falling for the same type of girl, even after he has married the other kind. That is his consistent nature.

A man discards a worn-out love-affair as promptly as he would an old razor-blade; but a woman keeps as many old loves carefully filed away in her sub-consciousness, as she has old hats on the closet-shelf. She never knows when one of them may come in handy-especially in this day of man-shortage.

Love is no more a voluntary thing than doing K.P. duty. A man plays golf because he wants to; he smokes or drinks because he likes to; but no man ever fell in love, if he could possibly help it.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY

Queen Elizabeth of England was 43 on Wednesday, August 4. She celebrated her anniversary quietly although church bells rang for the first time since war was declared, in her honor.

YOUNG STAR

Pretty Mary McCarthy was a child film star who dropped out when the "awkward age" came along. She's well past that unhappy stage now at 19 and is ready to begin a new career, having signed a seven-year-contract with a major producer.

Hairdressers in a London suburb are asking customers to bring their own towels for shampoos.

Fashion Flashes

THERE'S ROMANCE in the large hat say the designers. A beautiful new hat is a large felt sailor to be worn forward or off the face. It is trimmed with deep red roses and has a black ostrich fringed brim, soft and lovely.

GENEROUS but careful mixing of many hues in one ensemble results in something lovely. Rene Hubert, who is a movie designer, does a suit with collarless diagonal-cut jacket of chartreuse felt with big matching handbag worn with a red blouse and black wool skirt. Jacket and bag have large intricate appliques of black leather touched with red and black sequins.

VERY DIFFERENT and charming is a fairly long hand-knit sweater of black wool with knit-in stamps and cancellations in red, green and blue.

VERY CLEVER touches mark many of the simpler new wool frocks. Beige rayon with a weave that simulates wool is used for a two-piece tuck-in frock with inserts at the top of the sleeve and at the front of the skirt extending into slit pockets, of red with black buttons tied on with black yarn. The square-yoked blouse buttons in back.

NO MORE ermine jackets or coats for evening wear, so the snowy fur appears on afternoon coats. Black woolen crepe makes a handsome coat with one-button side closing and collar with notched revers of ermine. Nice over a black frock with white satin touches.

THERE'S NOTHING like the jumper frock say the youngsters. Designed for the early-teens is a jumper frock with black skirt and suspenders with white crepe blouse. Green, bright pink, blue and gold. Felt trim on suspenders and on the skirt is a novelty edging.

Golfers Turn in Brilliant Scores Preparing for Games

By the Canadian Press

While Walter Hagen prepared to return to golf competition with a practice 72 on the Plum Hollow course, Detroit, and Gene Sarazen, veteran shotmaker, duplicated this par score by way of rehearsal, a mere army sergeant, Vic Ghezzi, from Fort Monmouth, N. J., whizzed through with a 66 on the same links.

It happened while preparations were in progress yesterday for a reopening of Ryder Golf team play Saturday and Sunday which will be marked by the return of The Great Hagen after eight years. As captain of one team, he has chosen Melvin (Chick) Harbert of Battle Greek Mich., as his partner. Craig Wood and Sarazen will form the other half of the foursome. The sizzling sergeant, Ghezzi, and Jimmy Demaret have been matched with Lawson Little and Lighthorse Harry Cooper in what should be a rare battle. Byron Nelson and Harold (Jug) McSpaden will face Willie Goggin and O'Neill White and the fourth foursome is: Lloyd Mangrum and Frank Walsh vs. Jimmy Thompson and Sam Byrd.

Ryder Cup play actually is a war casualty but these games are being staged for war relief and the proceeds, expected to hit $30,000, are tabbed for the American Red Cross.

Julius W. Platte of Pittsburgh in divorce proceedings charged that Mrs. Platte refused to allow him to compete in the U. S. open in 1941 after qualifying and that she insulted members of the club where he was a pro. The Pittsburgh judge granted the decree.

The 36-year-old first-baseman, Adolph Louis Camilli, advised New York Giants yesterday he had decided to retire after 18 years in the Majors in order to go to his California ranch. Last Saturday he had been traded to the Giants by the Brooklyn Dodgers.

A former Toronto Leafs' outfielder, Jimmy Ripple, has been promoted to fourth position, the clean-up spot, in the batting lineup of the Philadelphia Athletics, replacing Bobby Estalella who is out of action because of a strained side. Ripple was secured from Toronto in a trade for Jim Tyack.

The U. S. Navy, earlier this week, put its food down on the participation of naval boxers in ring clashes against civilian mittslingers. Yesterday the war department at Washington ruled that enlisted men in the U. S. Army could not play college football this fall. The annual Army-Navy classic is out, too.

The strength of organized softball in Ontario is indicated in the draw announced by the Ontario Softball Association at Hamilton last night for play-off series of member leagues to start Aug. 16. Listed in different series are team of Sarnia, Chatham, around to Niagara Falls, as far east as Kingston and in the North Country including North Bay and Sault Ste. Marie.

Because of unfavorable conditions, all events on yesterday harness racing card at Old Orchard Beach, Me., were run over a 5 1-2 furlong distance. Over the shortened course, the $5,000 Hambletonian test stake was won by Volo Song, owned by W. H. Strong of Brooklyn and driven by Ben White. Phonograph took the first heat but was second in the next two.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Toronto—(CP)—The draw for the opening round in rink competition of the Provincial Law Bowling tournament on greens of four Toronto clubs was announced last night, with 116 ring entries from many sections of Ontario. The tournament opens Monday, Aug. 9, at 9 A.M.

Chatham—(CP)—Tommy White, former pro pitcher with No. 12 Basic Training Centre, struck out 12 men and allowed but two hits in a Kent Baseball League game last night against Shermans of Chatham, yet the nine-innings game wound up 1-1, the tilt being halted by darkness.

Port Colborne—(CP)—Before the season's record crowd, Welland pounded out a 6-4 victory over Port Colborne Victorias in a Niagara Senior Baseball fixture at Elgin Field. Third-baseman Bill Buntrock smashed out two homers, driving in four runs.

Kitchener — (CP) — Kitchener Ranger Cubs shellacked Brantford 16-1 here last night to advance to the Junior finals of the Inter County Baseball Association by winning the third and deciding game of the semi-final series. Herbie Hess, winning twirler, allowed four hits, fanned six and issued one pass.

Urgent Appeal For Second Front Comes From Russia

Moscow, Aug. 6 (AP)—An urgent appeal for speedy establishment of a second front in Europe came today from the Soviet publication "War and the Working Classes," which asserted it would be "the key to victory over Hitler in 1943."

Declaring that the war had reached a turning point with Axis defeats on the Russian front, in Tunisia and Sicily, the Trade Unions Magazine said that "the victory of freedom-loving countries over Hitlerite Germany is possible in the very near future."

But the paper warned lest the opportunities which now face the Allies be lost and urged united action to end the war at the earliest moment.

Creation of a second front should divert at least 60 German divisions from Russia, the article said.

UNPREPAREDNESS

Pretoria—(CP)—Just how unprepared South Africa was for war was recently revealed in figures passed for publication. When the Union went to war it had two high-speed bombers, 25 obsolete general purpose aircraft, 40 training aircraft, two antiquated tanks and two armored cars.

RELIANCE SQUAD BEATEN 13-6 IN OPENING GAME

'Flyers' From I.T.S. Take Edge in Series for Right to Enter Playdowns

LOOSE CONTEST

Behind the seven-hit hurling of Bill Bancroft and the same number of miscues by the opposition, No. 5 I.T.S. won the first game of the four out of seven series from Reliance at the Fairgrounds on Thursday night 14-6 and by copping that first one, the "Flyers" took a slight edge in the series, that will allow the winning team to enter the O.A.S.A. playdowns. The same teams get together again on Tuesday night of next week. In fairness to the Reliance they have had a long layoff and their timing was not just exactly as good as when they were playing regularly but they did not help themselves by inexcusable errors and everyone of the miscues hurt. Dropping easy pop flies were their worst offence and three of the infielders were guilty of this during the pastime.

Johnny Bawden was wild as a March hare issuing five walks and only whiffing three, a low number for this twirler at anytime. When he did get the apple across the platter, the I.T.S. hit when they hurt and sandwiched with the miscues they rolled up ten runs in the first five frames and from there simply coasted home. Bancroft struck out nine of the Reliance squad and only issued one walk and he was given almost errorless support, especially in the infield. Archie Green, who manages the squad, has a smart inner works on the squad and Thursday evening Westfall at third stood out with his fielding, having five assists without a skip. In the matter of long distance swatting the Reliance held their own with the opposition. Ted Henn smashed a homer; Gerald Ethier smacked a triple and Johnny Bawden had a double to his credit.

Lusty Hitting

Kerr hit a triple in the eighth while Mullins smote two doubles and Bancroft got the other one. In fielding "Speedy" St. Louis made two beautiful catches in the centre garden and Archie Green made a running catch in the same field that was a "honey," but the nicest play was engineered by Muldoon in the ninth when he speared a torrid liner by Barriage and easily threw the runner out. I.T.S. went out on top with a three-run outburst without a hit being registered and the Reliance came right back to even the string when Henn homered. M. Green walked, followed by LaBonne's single and Ethier's triple. After that Bancroft was master of the situation, while the Flyers pecked away at Johnny's offering to take the first game of the series.

The line-up:

Reliance—Barriage, l.f.; Henn, 2nd; M. Green, r.f.; LaBonne, 1st; Ethier, 3rd; St. Louis, c.f.; Pryke, s.s.; Bawden, p.; Tuttle, c.

Score by innings:

		r.	h.	e.
Reliance	320 000 010— 6		7	8

Batteries — I.T.S., Bancroft and Kerr; Reliance, Bawden and Tuttle.

Umpires—Barnett, Schrieder and Bawden.

DOLPH CAMILLI QUITTING BALL

New York, Aug. 6—(AP)—Dolph Camilli, veteran first baseman recently obtained by New York Giants from Brooklyn Dodgers, announced today he was quitting baseball.

Camilli, who came to the Giants with pitcher Johnny Allen in a deal that sent pitchers Bill Lohrman and Bill Sayles and infielder Joe Orengo to Brooklyn, made the announcement after a two-hour conference with Manager Mel Ott and President Horace Stoneham of the New York Club.

"I feel that I can't be of any help to the Giants" said Camilli, who is experiencing his poorest year at the plate. Two years ago he was voted the National League's most valuable player award and topped the circuit in home runs and runs batted in. This season he has hit only six homers and is batting under .250.

HAMILTON BEATS KINGSTON PONIES BY 7 TO 5 SCORE

London Army Will Play Winners in Semi-Final Game

LUSTY HITTING

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 6 —(CP)—London Army and Hamilton Co-ops will meet tonight in the semi-final of the National Baseball Congress Canadian Championship tournament as a result of their victories last night over Halifax Navy and Kingston Ponies. London defeated Halifax 5-4 in the nightcap of a doubleheader after Hamilton eliminated Kingston 7-6.

Toronto Tip Tops and Lachine R. C. A. F., who drew byes, will play in the other semi-final as part of a doubleheader with the London-Hamilton game. The winners of the two games will meet tomorrow at Toronto in the final with tonight's losers playing in a consolation game.

How Wilson started the pitching chore for Kingston last night but after allowing five runs on seven hits was taken out in the fifth inning and Jake Edwards came in to finish the game. Edwards held the Co-ops to three hits but even at that the Hamiltonians squeezed in two runs.

Hamilton scored two in the second, one in the third and two more in the fifth before Wilson headed to the showers. Edwards pitched a tight game until the ninth but two hits and an error by Edwards gave up the tying run. Bonk, Hamilton centre fielder, brought the game to a close in the 10th when he singled and then completed the route on a passed ball.

Scored Three in Sixth

Kingston scored three in their part of the sixth frame and added three more in the eighth, forcing Cotter, the Co-ops starting pitcher to retire. Anderson took over the job and held the Ponies scoreless.

In the second game Halifax Navy took a brief lead in the third, scoring the opening run, but London Army tied the count in the fourth and added two more in the fifth. The Sailors threatened in the fifth and sixth innings and forced a 3-3 deadlock before Tony Diasetti on first base, and Johnny Moyer, pitcher, switched positions. Diasetti's hurling stopped a threatened Navy rally and left the soldiers in command.

London added two in their half of the eighth while Navy countered with a single run.

TORONTO LEAFS INCREASE MARGIN BY WINNING TWO

Hamlin Turns in 15th Win of the Season by Hurling Two-Hitter

BEARS BEATEN

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal Royals and Newark Bears might be a little weak on their running attack, but there was no reason today to doubt the effectiveness of their passing games. The two teams nearly walked each other out of the Park yesterday as the Royals turned in an 8-7 victory to creep a game closer to the Bears in the battle for second place in the International League.

A total of 22 bases on balls was registered, each side contributing 11, with Holcombe and Barney the chief offenders. Holcombe passed eight men and Barney seven.

Home runs played a major part in the contest, Don Savage connecting for a two-run drive, his 12th of the year, in the second inning to help the Bears to a 5-2 lead at that point. In the seventh Roberto Ortiz hit one of the longest drives ever seen at Ruppert Stadium to account for three runs.

Buffalo Bisons made it four in a row over Baltimore Orioles, 7-2. Floyd Giebell allowed the Orioles 10 hits, but steered clear of trouble most of the time. The Bisons collected only eight safeties, one of them being a home run by Kobesky in the ninth.

With Luke Hamlin and Harry Shuman turning in neat pitching performances, Toronto Maple Leafs took a twin bill for Syracuse Chiefs, 2-0 and 4-2, Hamlin turning in the shutout. Frank Kelleher's two-run home run in the second game accounted for the only chief scores.

CINCINNATI REDS PASS DODGERS IN LEAGUE RACE

Now Third and May Put Pirates Out of Second Place

WALTERS IN FORM

(By TED MEIER)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Cincinnati Reds, who have been blowing hot and cold all season, apparently are generating a full head of steam that may blow Pittsburgh out of second place in the National League and possibly prove very annoying to the first place St. Louis Cardinals.

Behind a masterful six-hit pitching performance by Bucky Walters the Reds yesterday beat Chicago Cubs, 4-1, and dropped the crumbling Brooklyn Dodgers from third to fourth. The Reds took over the third place postion, only 2 1-2 games behind the second place Pirates. In this spot they can profit regardless how the Pirates-Cards series, opening tonight in St. Louis turns out. If the Cards win, the Reds gain on the Pirates. If Pittsburgh wins, the Reds take a step closer to first place.

With all other major league clubs idle, the rise of the Rhinelanders shared interest with Dolph Camilli's announcement he had quit baseball. The former Brooklyn first baseman—traded to the New York Giants last Saturday—said he was "washed up" thus voluntarily ending an 11-year career in the majors with the Cubs, Phillies and Dodgers.

It may be only a coincidence, but the return to form of Walters seems to have inspired the Reds. They have won four of their last five starts and Bucky, the third baseman turned pitcher has won two of them. If Johnny Vander Meer begins to win regularly, along with Elmer Riddle, Ray Starr and Walters the Reds will be formidable indeed. They already boast a snappy double play combination in shortstop Eddie Miller and second baseman Lonnie Frey and are getting some timely hitting, especially from Eric Tipton and Ray Mueller.

PLAYGROUNDS PROVIDE FINE RECREATION

Attendance at the two supervised playgrounds for the first full week of operation showed a great many children of the city having a satisfactory program lined up for them by the supervisors. The total participation for the week shows 1,380 enjoying softball, volleyball, horseshoes, soap carving, study groups, hikes, and playing on the swings, slides, etc. Chief Supervisor Art Clare reports a number of parents who have visited the playgrounds from time to time and who have expressed their pleasure at the fine program and the excellent quality of supervision During the week a schedule of inter-playground activities has been commenced and is taking hold in fine style, the competition being keen, particularly in softball.

The four supervisors, Mr. Art Clare and Miss Joyce Watson on the West Hill and Miss Kathleen Rankin and Mr. Gordon Bankier in the East Belleville playground, are all doing a fine job, and are well qualified to give sound leadership to children in many different lines of recreation.

Belleville is indeed fortunate to have the playgrounds operating again, and parents are happy to know that their children can find both happiness and valuable training under good auspices during the summer months.

Sports Roundup

New York, Aug. 6—(AP)—Tennis solves the manpower problem: . . . The turf court tennis circuit in the United States this summer is down to three events—the eastern championships at Rye N. Y., next week, the Southampton invitation and the Nationals at Forest Hills. . . Rye is limiting its fields to 16 men and 24 women; Southampton plans a 10-man round-robin tournament and a similar event for women stars, who will be allowed to play on the Masculine Meadow Club courts for the first time; the Nationals will have 32 players in each division and Walter Merrill Hall, who handles the entries, claims that after the first round it will be as good a tournament as ever. . . That seems to be getting a lot out of a few players. . . .

Come to think of it, with the Rye Tennis starting, Gunder Haegg, finishing his tour and the trotting horses putting on their Hambletonian show, next Wednesday will be a right busy day hereabouts.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 138

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

If Romeo and Juliet should meet again some day, she'd ask him first of all, I'll bet: "What system do you play?"

Which is the best bidding system? The one you and your partner understand and apply together. And if this system is sound, your pair will play good bridge.

Don't raise unless you have another trick. That's one rule every sound system must have. Without it, one hand doesn't know what the other hand is doing.

You have this hand:

♠A Q 9 5
♥A K 7 4
♦9 6 3
♣K 2

Your opening bid with that hand is one spade. Why should you bid one spade instead of one heart? Because with two suits of the same length, first bid the higher rank.

Your hand contains six tricks: Two aces, two kings, a queen, and a short card in clubs. An opening bid of one consumes only five tricks. So you have an unused trick for a future raise.

Suppose partner responds with a bid of one no-trump. Any non-jump response is not forcing unless it is a takeout to a new suit. So, you are not forced to bid again.

Therefore, unless you have something new to show your partner, you may pass. If you have something new to show, you should not raise the last partnership bid unless you have an unconsumed trick.

You have an unconsumed trick. And you have another suit to show. So your second round bid here is two hearts; a raise of one over your partner's last bid of one no-trump.

Suppose your hand contained only five tricks. In that case, even though you had the unshown heart suit, you would not show it. Because you would not have had an unused trick for the raise.

I hope these different bidding situations are taking hold in your mind. When a thing's a little muddy, give it just a little study.

LESSON NO. 139

Whoa, brother. Don't feel your oats every time you run across a rule that does not seem to work. Could be you are not using the full rule.

Take the case of a raise. Each raise shows another trick. So it would seem that an additional trick is shown only by a raise. That's so except with a voluntary no-trump bid.

You have this hand:

♠A J 3
♥A K 10 6
♦K Q 7
♣9 8 3

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. You show five suit tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks, and a biddable suit.

A no-trump trick is any high card (any ace or king or queen). A suit trick is any high card or any short card. But you have no short cards. All your tricks are high cards.

Thus, while your opening bid consumed all your suit tricks, it did not consume your fifth no-trump trick. You have enough for one raise in no-trump, if necessary. But not for a raise in a suit.

Suppose your partner responds with a bid of two hearts. That is a non-jump assist. And a non-jump assist is not forcing. So, any second round bid by you in this spot is voluntary.

You have no takeout. You have not another suit trick for a raise assist in your assisted suit. So, you should pass unless you can make a voluntary no-trump bid.

There is only one time when you make a voluntary bid. That is when you have unshown values. You have an unshown no-trump trick. So your bid right here is two no-trump.

That tells your partner you have five no-trump tricks. Because if you had only four no-trump tricks you would have passed.

That tells your partner you have no biddable spade suit. Because if you had a biddable spade suit, you could have bid two spades without a raise.

That tells your partner you have not six tricks. Because if you had six tricks, you could have raised to three hearts.

Gabby, isn't it?

Catania Civilians Give British Troops Warm Welcome

(By NOLAND NORGAARD)
Associated Press War Correspondent

Catania, Sicily, Aug. 6. —(AP)— Catania surrendered to the victorious British 8th Army at 8.20 a.m. Thursday after troops entered the outskirts of the battered second city of Sicily soon after dawn.

(This was 10 minutes earlier than announced by Allied headquarters.)

The majority of the defenders who had covered roads to the city from pillboxes fled during the night.

The surrender, which was handed to the Colonel who led the first infantry units into the town, in turn was handed to war correspondents at 8.35 a.m. As our caravan entered the streets and frenzied civilians ran alongside the cars, cheering, clapping hands and reaching through car windows to pull at our hands and kiss them.

This dispatch is being written in an automobile in the city's main square, Piazzo Duomo, facing the cathedral.

The square is littered with debris left by Allied bombs, which shattered many buildings in the area, and by dropping power lines. The cathedral appears to be undamaged.

A the windows of my car men, women and children are interrupting me frequently to beg for food. Occasionally a man asks timidly for a cigaret. Others merely stare at the novel sight of a group of men in uniform who drive into town and immediately start pounding typewriters.

Some people speak English enough to tell us they have been virtually without food of any kind for a week.

It is easy to believe, when we watch the children walking along slowly, their eyes on the pavement in the hope of spotting a scrap of anything edible.

The reception here appears to be spontaneous beyond the mere bowing to a conquering force.

No one in our car understands Italian, but there is no mistaking the words in which the 8th Army is being hailed as liberators.

Typewritten Message

The formal surrender of Catania came in a plain typewritten message from the mayor. It said:

"Authorities and functionaries of the city of Catania are in the Carabiniere Casa at the Piazza Verga awaiting orders."

By now a unit of British infantry which has been combing the city for possible snipers or fugitive enemy troops has assembled in the Via Victoria Emmanuel a thoroughfare leading into this square.

Eager citizens almost mobbed them in a joyful demonstration. An order forbids the giving of army rations to civilians but the kindhearted British Tommies are managing to slip a few packages of biscuits into outstretched hands.

We entered the town after receiving a warning from the brigadier who commanded the attack to "be very careful where you drive. We have been told the town is simply lousy with mines."

Gingerly our cars followed the tracks of Bren carriers that had gone before, winding from one street to another in a crazy zigzag fashion to avoid the masses of debris that blocks many avenues.

Pass Many Prisoners

On the road we passed one group of nearly 100 prisoners standing dejectedly waiting for trucks to carry them back to prison camp. With them were two noisy prisoners — Italian dogs, one of them a beautiful Alsatian trained for work on the battlefield.

A few bursts of distant machine-gun fire are heard from beyond the town, but otherwise almost the only sound is the continued shouted greetings of the people.

The many batteries of British artillery which shelled pillboxes and mortar positions into silence late yesterday and last night when assault forces had approached within a few hundred yards of the first buildings are silent now, but they are ready to carry the relentless attack into the tiny slice of Sicily still remaining in Axis hands.

Throughout last night the sky to the north of our camp was lighted by explosions, and a steady pink glow apparently came from burning enemy ammunition and fuel dumps.

FRENCH WEALTH IN GOLD SAFE IN ALLIED HANDS

$285,000,000 in Coin Stored in Fort in Martinique

VAULTS INSPECTED

Fort-de-France, Martinique, Aug. 6 —(AP)— Despite repeated orders from the Vichy Government to sink some $285,000,000 in gold coin stored in Fort Desaix's casemates, France's greatest single cache of wealth is safe in Allied hands.

Officials recently found messages from Vichy in Government House ordering Admiral Robert to resist with force any foreign intervention or internal uprising and to sink the gold and scuttle the French warships and merchantmen in Fort-de-France's harbor. The orders were sent on an average of once every three days.

Complete Plans to Protect Gold

Plans for sinking the gold in the event of foreign attack had been completed. The 8,766 boxes of metal were to be loaded aboard one of the ships and taken to sea at a point known for its great depth. Here, where the sea is too deep for successful diving and retrievement, the gold was to be dumped overboard and the ship itself scuttled.

With Col. Pierre de Chevigne, member of the French delegation from Washington and interim chief of the island's police and military establishments, leading the way, a guard of honor greeted our inspection party at the fort's gateway. The colonel led the way toward the gold-studded casemates holding the coin from the Banque de France.

The containers, each holding about $32,000 in coins of various countries, resemble so many boxes in a shoestore.

About two months ago the United States naval observer, Captain A. S. Hickey, and Marcel Malige, the consul, inspected the vaults to ascertain the presence of the gold.

The American officials were satisfied the gold was still there, and reported to Washington.

Plenipotentiary Henru-Etienne Hoppenot, Col. de Chevigne and Admiral Lambert, Free French naval officer, likewise are satisfied the gold is still there. The future use and location of the French gold is still undecided; presumably, though, it could be used to underwrite purchases of arms and munitions in the United States.

AT THE McCARTHY

Warner Baxter and Margaret Lindsay fearlessly face a mob of gangsters in this tense scene from Columbia's thrilling screen version of that famous radio show, Crime Doctor." Currently showing at the McCarthy Theatre, the film was directed by Michael Gordon.

Premier Nixon To Meet Cabinet

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)— Premier Nixon today prepared to meet the ministers of his defeated government and it was reported they would discuss preparations to vacate office as soon as possible.

Result of the election in one riding —Muskoka-Ontario— still remained in doubt with Frank Kelly, Liberal, holding an 11-vote majority over his Progressive Conservative rival, John Gibson, on the basis of latest returns with seven polls still to report. Kelly had 4,242 votes and Gibson 4,231. Gilbert Mills, C. C. F., had 3,772.

Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative Leader who heads the largest group in the House with 38 seats, left yesterday for a short fishing trip from which he is expected to return next week. Although his party lacks a majority in the 90-seat legislature, political sources said Col. Drew probably will be called on by Lieutenant Governor Albert Matthews to form a government.

The C. C. F. Leader, E. B. Jolliffe, whose party has the second largest group in the House with 34 seats, left today for Montreal to take part in the federal by-election campaign in Montreal Cartier where David Lewis, National Secretary of the C. C. F., is a candidate.

Meanwhile it was reported that the direct vote taken in military camps in Ontario was not compiled in time to be telegraphed to returning officers to be included in returns election night. Major Alex Lewis, Chief Election Officer, said six days were allowed for inclusion of the military camp vote in riding totals.

Officer Cadet Killed by Bombs

Ottawa, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Defence Headquarters announced the death at Brockville, Ont., Thursday of W. J. Otten of Hamilton, officer cadet at the Officers' Training Centre in Brockville, when struck by a fragment from a smoke bomb.

Otten was struck while his unit was on practice manoeuvres west of Brockville and died in Brockville Military Hospital a short time later. A court of inquiry will be held.

Otten's next-of-kin is his widow, Mrs. Phyllis Louise Otten of Hamilton.

NO BIRDS ARRIVED

Granite City, Ill., Aug. 6—(AP)— For three summers, a noisy flock of 1,500 blackbirds defied a residential neighborhood's counter-offensive of cowbells and hanging tin cans. Then with police permission, residents got their shotguns, roped off the streets, and stood by to blast the birds as they came to roost at dusk. No birds arrived.

AT THE BELLE

Mickey Rooney and Rita Quigley, sweethearts in "The Human Comedy," seem to be enjoying a telegram Mickey is about to deliver in his role as a messenger boy in this story by William Saroyan. It deals with people, sincere and honest people, in all walks of life, with Frank Morgan, Fay Bainter and a brilliant cast, giving their best for one of the best pictures of the year.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Meanest Man In The World"

Hilariously disguised as a starving lawyer bent on making good in the worst sort of way, Jack Benny is currently making 'em roll in the aisles at the Capitol theatre, where he arrived yesterday starred as—by far—"The Meanest Man in the World."

The immediate cause of docile Jack's transformation is pretty Priscilla Lane, his home town sweetheart. The remote cause, but apparently not remote enough, is Mr. Benny's worldly-wise right hand, a young man by the name of Rochester.

"Texas to Bataan"

Eclipsing in popularity any of their preceding thrillers, The Range Busters in "Texas to Bataan", Monogram Pictures' new season hit, opened yesterday at the Capitol theatre.

Unleashing a new kind of breath-taking fury in the faraway Philippines, the first in the new series of George W. Weeks productions doubles the melodramatic potentialties of these action features by adding a realistic encounter between the Range Busters and a gang of Axis espionage agents in a wild Bataan battle.

Under masterful direction of Robert Tansey, the Range Busters supervise the transportation of 400 head of horses to the Philippines.

A colored cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties" complete the big program.

AT THE BELLE

"Blossoms in the Dust"

Probably the biggest show ever offered in Belleville is now in its final day at the Belle theatre where two established M-G-M hits are exxhibited in the same program. Academy Award-winning Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon are co-starred in "Blossoms in the Dust" produced in beautiful rainbow technicolor, and Academy Award-winning Luise Rainer and Fernand Gravet head a distinguished cast in the glorious romantic memorable musical masterpiece, "The Great Waltz" is announced as the added feature attraction.

"The Human Comedy"

Donna Reed, who launched her screen career as Mickey Rooney's sweetheart in "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," takes her longest stride toward stardom in the dramatic role of Mickey's sister, in William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy", this weekend to the Belle theatre. As Bess Macauley, she occupies a leading spot in the stellar cast.

The story revolves around the Macauley family of Ithaca, California, and the other people from all walks of life with whom the Macauleys come in contact.

It is to marry Donna that a wounded soldier, whom she never has seen, comes to Ithaca. He has fallen in love with her after seeing her picture, and hearing her described by her brother.

In little more than a year in Hollywood, Donna has appeared in eight pictures, and climbed to the verge of stardom. Her latest picture is "Eyes in the Night" with Ann Harding.

Supporting Mickey Rooney in this William Saroyan tender story are such notables as Frank Morgan, Faye Bainter, James Craig, Marsha Hunt, Van Johnson and a host of others. Clarence Brown directed and produced "The Human Comedy."

Canadian Paramount Newsreel

The Canadian Paramount Newsreel and a clever M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Red Hat Riding Hood," precede the feature offering. On Saturday matinee the closing chapter of "Vanishing Men" will be exhibited.

AT THE CAPITOL

AT THE McCARTHY

"Crime Doctor"

"Crime Doctor", the Columbia picture starring Warner Baxter which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, contains many characters that are vividly drawn from real life. Max Marcin, author of the popular radio series from which the picture was adapted, spent several years covering police headquarters, as a reporter for the old New York "World". In those days he knew practically every underworld character in New York, some of them intimately.

Now, faced with the task of writing a new and exciting episode of Crime Doctor every week for the Sunday night dramatizations over the airwaves, his past close association with criminals is a reliable source of character and plot ideas. Establishing the main character as Dr. Ordway, the role played by Warner Baxter in the picture version, Marcin keeps a stream in and out of Ordway's life.

The main thread of the story is of a man, once the master mind of a gang of thieves, who becomes an ace criminologist and highly respected humanitarian, after a "ride" accident causes him to lose all knowledge of his former outlawed life.

In his new life as Dr. Ordway, he spends most of his time in the rehabilitation of criminals, visiting them in prison and having them come to him for treatment after they are released. Establishing this main character around whom dozens of individual plots can be built, gives Max Marcin the opportunity of creating story characters that seem so true to life because they are from life. In fact, Marcin wisely continues his underworld contacts.

The first picture to be adapted from the popular Crime Doctor series starts Warner Baxter on a thrilling new career as the screen's Dr. Ordway.

Second feature attraction stars Brenda Joyce in the musical hit Thumbs Up. In addition is this week's British Associated News Reel, which features the landing of the Allies on Sicily.

Stirling

Stirling.—Mrs. Charlie Allen of Leamington, spent the weekend with P. C. McQuire and family at Oak Lake.

Mrs. Annie Bailey has left for Lockport, New York, after spending the past month with her son, Gordon and Mrs. Bailey, Oak Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cairns and Teddy, also Mrs. M. Prentice, spent the weekend with Mr. Cairns' parents at Hybla.

Miss Freida Mathews, who has been spending the past month at Stirling, and Oak Lake, left on Saturday for Toronto.

John L. Good left on Saturday last for Cadet Instructors' Camp for the month of August, at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Dr. and Mrs. Carleton and Grace have returned from their holiday at Wasaga Beach.

Miss Hildegarde Helliwell is holidaying with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Helliwell.

The August meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Beatty, Hillsholme, on the afternoon Aug. 3rd, with some fifty ladies present.

The ladies of River Valley were in charge of the program. The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. J. B. Thompson, who gave a graphic description of her trip to the Pacific Coast. A dainty lunch was served by the River Valley ladies, at the close of the meeting.

Miss Daisy Ellen Kent is spending this week with friends in Picton.

Mrs. Edward Kent and Dennis are visiting relatives at Fort Erie, this week.

Visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Good this week are Miss Elsie Roberts of Cochrane and Miss Barbara Roberts of Lanark.

Mrs. S. Reid is spending this week with her daughter, Mrs. M. Murphy at Toronto.

The Progressive Conservative meeting held in the Community Hall, Tuesday evening was well attended, the main speaker of the evening being R. D. Arnott, K.C., candidate. Geo. A. Reid, Belleville, W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., and Dr. E. A. Carleton also spoke. W. C. West, reeve of Stirling, was chairman of the meeting which closed with the National Anthem.

CHAPTER 28

It was unlike Adele not to call since Meegan was certain that Adele not only read the paper carefully but also listened to the gossip around the club house. And certainly Toby's marriage to the unknown and pretty girl stimulated talk. So, during one of the few moments when the telephone was silent, she called Adele and was told by the clerk that Miss Carlson was away for the weekend. He was sorry but he could not tell her where Miss Carlson had gone. Not for as long as Meegan could remember had Adele spent the Labor Day weekend anywhere except on the island.

After a noonday dinner on Sunday Meegan suggested a swim, knowing that while her mother did not go in the water she nevertheless liked to put on a pretty bathing suit, sit under an umbrella and talk with passing people.

Customarily the beach was more crowded on this particular Sunday than on any other Sunday of the season. When Meegan, emerging from a swim, joined her mother, she heard her say to a woman friend who had stopped, "I thought I'd see Clare on the beach this afternoon. I've seen so little of her this summer. But then the summer has gone so quickly. She came to tea one afternoon. Do you know I haven't met her husband? I was so anxious to meet him again, too. The summer is almost over and I haven't seen half the people I planned to see. One never does somehow."

"I don't believe Captain Christopher is down this weekend," Mrs. Fenwick replied. She was a tall, dark, dour person in a dark bathing suit that made her look like a spider. "I'm rather certain of that because Charles, my son, is working in Washington and he's been coming down weekends with Captain Christopher. It worked out beautifully for him. But last weekend Charles called and said that Captain Christopher was out of town for a couple of weeks and couldn't bring him. That's why Charles didn't come down either last weekend or this. I told him he was spoiled and wouldn't be inconvenienced by public transportation. I'm afraid we're all going to accustom ourselves to public transportation in spite of the discomforts."

"Do you really think so?" Elinor McLean asked sweetly. "Really, I think the war will be over in the spring. Hitler will have exhausted himself and then we'll all get back to normal living."

Mrs. Fenwick smiled sourly. "I wish I could believe it was as simple as that. When and if Hitler exhausted himself, it will be a long time before we get back to normal. This is a social upheaval as well."

When she left Elinor McLean asked, "Isn't she pessimistic, dear? You know perfectly well when Hitler is finished, we shall have peace. He's the only person we have to worry about. But what puzzles me is why he hasn't been assassinated. I don't approve of the new bathing suits the girls are wearing, the ones with shorts and bra . . like the one Nancy Pendleton is wearing over there. She's much too large a girl to wear a suit like that."

Fayne was not on the island this weekend, Meegan was thinking. And since it was unlikely that he would be here tomorrow, Monday, she would go to see Clare tomorrow morning before she took the children to the beach. But why was she going? What was the point in going? Only Toby had said he wanted her to go. There was a reason he wanted her to go. She would go to see Clare for the last time.

Elinor McLean enjoyed nothing more than to receive guests. That afternoon it was as if she were receiving guests for hours. Meegan had often wondered at her mother's popularity both with young people and her contemporaries. But Elinor McLean liked people of all ages. She liked people in general. She was sweet and pretty and unfailingly pleasant and sympathetic. There was an air about her that living was a very pleasant business in a world where all people had softly waved hair and soft hands and clear eyes and fresh clothing. And her optimism was infectious. She could neither feel nor think deeply but her optimism was a drug to those who had not lost as much as she and who complained more.

"It's been a perfect day," she said to Meegan as they got into the car to go home. "But, dear, shall we drive by Clare's?"

"Clare's?" Meegan asked, her voice rising. "Why, Mother?"

"Oh, I suppose its silly but I wondered if she were having a party this weekend. I thought we'd ride by the house and see. Isn't it curious that she hasn't entertained more this summer? I thought she would have a great many parties and invite you and you would make new friends. Clare and her husband are so distinguished."

"And you want to ride by her house and see if she's having a party to which I wasn't invited?"

"Yes, dear. Just for a moment. It isn't far out of our way. I wonder what she and her husband will give Erica and Toby for a wedding present. Something lovely, I'm sure."

"Yes, something lovely, I'm sure."

"But of course, dear. They can afford to be lavish."

Meegan pressed her foot upon the accelerator. As the white house came into view she lifted her foot, thus permitting the car to pass the house slowly. There was no sign of life about the grounds or on any of the encircling porches. The grass was high and the rose beds had been neglected. The high wind of several nights ago had ripped one green awning above a window on the second floor. Had not all of the windows been open and Clare's car parked in the garage (the garage doors were open) the place would have looked as if no one inhabited it. Even in the bright afternoon sun the tall grass and the neglected roses and the flapping torn awning gave it the forlorn look of a house in which no one lived.

Elinor McLean looked very disappointed. "Why, there's no one there! Oh, dear, they haven't kept the place up very well, have they? Surely they have a gardener."

"Yes," Meegan said, frowning. "I've seen him working there. A polite colored man who always waved when I went by."

"But Clare is home. Her car is here. Beautiful car, isn't it?"

"And all of the windows are open," Meegan said. She tried to drive away the uneasy feeling that all was not well within the house as she turned the car toward home. "Clare is probably on someone's boat this afternoon."

"Then we won't go in. Of course if I thought she was alone, then it would be a good time to call. Remind me to do it next week. I'd rather go when her husband is there but I don't want to make it seem too obvious that I arranged it like that. Good heavens, isn't that absurd? Why shouldn't I go when he is there? I want to meet him." Looking ahead, she said, "I wonder where Erica and Toby are this afternoon. Bless them. I think your father would have liked Erica, don't you, dear?"

"I'm sure of that." Sue's house was closely tightly, she saw. Then Van had gone, too . .

"I miss him terribly. But when we go back to town well see a lot of them. I have been brave, haven't I?"

"You've been splendid."

"I haven't tried to be brave. Really, I think if I tried, I wouldn't be at all. Somehow it seems perfectly natural for Toby to marry Erica. Perhaps I don't mind because I'm the only one of my friends who isn't a grandmother. For years I've had to listen to their baby talk. I do hope Erica and Toby won't wait years to have a baby. You know, it's embarrassing to a woman not to be a grandmother within a reasonable length of time. She has to make excuses and apologize for the fact that her children don't make her a grandmother. It just occurred to me that I don't believe we have anything in for supper."

"We'll find something. I'm not hungry."

"We have cheese. You could grill some cheese. You do it so well."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma has been trying to get pop to buy himself a new hat to look more respectable, and pop wouldn't do it on account of claiming he hated to desert old friends or old hats, and today he surprised ma by coming home with a bran new hat on, ma saying, Now that's something like it, that's what I call a good looking hat.

I had the most remarkable experience buying it, wait till I tell you, pop said. I went to Bird and Linnets and walked right to the hat department and asked to see a hat. Of course that part is uneventful enough and you're probably been through it yourself hundreds of times in your hat career. The amazing part is still to come. The chap asked me what size, naturally, and I told him 7 and an eighth, although, as I explained to him with pardonable pried, I used to wear a seven and a quarter when I had more hair to help fill it out, pop said, and ma said, If there's anything remarkable about that, I must either be dense witted or dull of comprehension for land sakes.

That's not it, I haven't come to it yet, pop said. The chap wanted to know what color, so I told him brown, and he claimed a lot of men are wearing gray this year but I gave him to understand that at least one man was going to stick to brown, so he produced a brown hat in my size, pop sed, and ma said, All rite, well, go on if you're ever going on.

That's it, this is the hat, I took the very first hat I tried on, did it ever happen to you? pop said, and ma said, No, and it never will. How do you know you got the best value for your money, just grabbing any old first hat and running out like a person in a panic? she said.

Didn't you admit it's a squiffy looking lid? pop said, and ma said, If it's all right it's just pure mismanaged luck and doesn't alter the principal.

Being the end of the subject.

I was watching ma sewing on her sewing machine, and I said, Hay ma, I feel just like an ice cream cone. Can I have a nickel to go around and get one? I said.

It's too near dinner time and you'd only spoil your appetite for no good reason, ma said, and I said, Well jimminy, ma, an ice cream cone is a swell reason. And anyway, ma, just eating dinner would spoil my appetite too, and to make it worse we're not going to have anything but some old fish just because it's Friday, so I'd not only spoil my appetite but I'd have a bum time doing it because I dont like fish, besides all the danger of choking on the bones, I said.

That's all very interesting, but there are important and necessary vitamins in fish, regardless of the fact that fish doesn't happen to be a dessert for your special convenience, ma said, and I said, Sure, ma, but if my appetite gets a little spoiled today I'll be all that much hungrier for dinner tomorrow, so I'll eat twice as much, and not only that but we'll probably have something I like tomorrow, so I'll eat 3 times as much, and by that time my stummick will of had such a good rest I'll even digest it better.

Now that's pure nonsence, everybody knows that irregularity in eating is probably one of the main causes of indigestion, ma said, and I said, Sure, ma, probably, that's the thing. I mean here's your chance to find out one way or the other for sure by leaving me try it for one day. So how about it, ma, can I get the ice cream cone? I said.

What Is Mystery Hinted by Writers?

Madrid, Aug. 6 —(AP)— Spanish correspondents in Berlin have unanimously closed their articles during the last week with mysterious references to something they could tell if German censorship permitted.

A dispatch to the newspaper Informaciones today ended typically:—

"Obliged by circumstances to limit ourselves to military events, articles during the last week subjects by no means less interesting."

Over 800 Axis Planes Are Found Abandoned

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 6. (AP)— More than 800 Axis airplanes, many of them serviceable, were found abandoned on airdromes captured in Sicily up to last Wednesday, it was stated officially today.

FALL GRAIN YIELDS ONLY AVERAGE

Despite exceptional stands of fall wheat and rye straw, yields of fall grain in the Bay of Quinte district appear only to be average, it was stated this week in the weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

The cutting of early oats is well under way in both Hastings and Prince Edward counties, while yields of fall wheat in the latter county appear to be a bit disappointing, farmers claiming the kernels have shrunken. On the whole the corn crop is uneven but nevertheless is making satisfactory growth. The tomato crop is doing well.

Experienced farm help is reported very scarce, but labor from the district airports is still co-operating splendidly is assisting to harvest the crops.

GET ONE WEEK'S HOLIDAYS WITH PAY

Employees of the Reliance Aircraft and Tool Co., who have one year's seniority have been granted one week's holidays with pay. Application for this was made to Regional War Labor Board it was reported.

S. American Newsmen Arrive in Toronto

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)— A party of 12 South American newspapermen from Columbia, Ecuador and Venezuela arrived here today from Detroit as guests of the Canadian government.

They will tour Montreal, Ottawa and Quebec after leaving Toronto. The group will study Canada's industrial part in the Allied war effort.

Tonight they will be guests at a city of Toronto dinner, leaving later for Ottawa.

Asks Women to Urge Daughters to Enlist

Ottawa, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Mrs. Edgar Hardy, president of the National Council of Women, in a statement today urged Canadian women to encourage enlistment of their daughters and friends in the Canadian armed forces.

"We have committed ourselves to stand by those already in the services and to urge others of military age to realize a like devotion," she said, speaking for the council.

"I am in a position to assure Canadian mothers that their daughters joining the forces will receive a supervision, physical, mental and moral equal in every way to that which they had in civilian life.

"The training and discipline there obtained gives these young women splendid preparation, not only for war, but for the years of peace."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Base Metals were higher this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Other groups were down moderately.

Hudson Bay, Noranda, and Waite-Amulet were the stronger issues while Steep Rock was down a few cents. In Golds small losses were posted for Kerr-Addison, Teck Hughes, Malartic Gold Fields, Cochenour Willans and Lake DuFault.

Utilities held up with gains for Bell Telephone, Gatineau Pfd. and Winnipeg Electric Pfd. Steels and Miscellaneous issues were lower.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 6 —(AP)— The stock market skidded into lower ground today after a number of leaders tried to rise and failed.

Here and there resistance to the downturn was offered by favorites but the majority was in arrears toward the fourth hour. Volume dwindled with the retreat.

Selected Rail Bonds were steady and Commodities higher.

Among Canadian issues Canada 4s advanced ½ point and Dome Mines gained ⅛. Canadian Pacific lost ¼ and McIntyre and Lake Shore were unchanged.

Shares slipping included American Telephone, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Consolidated Edison, Standard Oil (NJ.) and Texas Co.

Dressed Poultry Prices Firm

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP) — The dressed poultry market is very firm, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. While receipts are showing an increase there is not sufficient to meet the good demand. More chicken are arriving of good quality but supplies are less than last week. Three shipments of approximately 15,000 lbs. of poultry went forward to Newfoundland.

Quotations to producers and country shippers are unchanged.

The live poultry market is somewhat quieter. Receipts are not so plentiful as previous weeks. Chicken have predominated with fowl and broiler arrivals falling off.

The dressed poultry market quotations are:

Broilers, all weights, A milk-fed 33 cents lb., B milk-fed 31, B 29, C 22.

Chicken, A milk fed, over 4 lbs. 34 1-2, under 4 lbs. 33 1-2, B milk-fed ,over 4 lbs. 32 1-2, under 4 lbs. 31 1-2, B, over 4 lbs. 30 1-2, under 4 lbs. 29 1-2.

Rifleman Arthurs Taken to Tokyo

Picton, Aug. 6—A prisoner of the Japanese since the fall of Hong Kong, Rifleman John Arthurs of Picton, has with other Canadian prisoners, been transferred to a prison camp in Tokyo. Official word to this effect was received by relatives, here. No letters have been received from him since his capture.

Relatives of Arthurs here received a newspaper clipping from a United States paper which stated that a prisoner had been heard broadcasting from Japan and had mentioned a number of Canadians who were with him. Among them was Arthurs. The broadcaster stated that the food was good and Red Cross parcels arrived occasionally. He stated that letters were much appreciated. He also announced their impending transfer to Tokyo.

Has Not Reached Any Decision

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)—Lieutenant Governor Albert Matthews, of Ontario said today in a telephone interview from his summer home in Muskoka that he has not reached any decision as to whom he will call on to form a new government in Ontario following the Liberal defeat in Wednesday's election.

"As soon as I am wanted I will return to Toronto," he said. "As yet I have not all the returns before me, I will have to have them before I can come to any decision."

RAID-FREE NIGHT

AMERICAN TROOPS CAPTURE TROINA IN SICILY

Island of Ustica In Tyrrhenian Sea Also Occupied

R. N. Warships Pound Taormina And Planes Blast Naples in New Raid

NAZI FLANK TURNED

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 7 (AP)—American 1st Division troops have stormed and captured the vital mountain fortress town of Troina in Central Sicily and Allied forces advanced on other sectors to sweep up a total of 125,000 Axis prisoners, headquarters announced today.

"The German line is now disjointed" by seizure of Troina guarding the escape hatch west of Mount Etna, it was announced. U. S. units inflicted heavy casualties on German elite troops defending the town in some of the most savage fighting of the entire campaign.

American naval forces occupied the island of Ustica, 40 miles north of Palermo, and Allied bombers shattered Messina in their heaviest attack devastating this last Sicilian escape port. British warships again pounded the east coastal road of withdrawal near Taormina.

The fall of Troina threatened to prevent junction of the German 15th armored division and Herman Goering division in their retreat toward Messina.

The British-Canadian 8th army advanced on all sectors, threatening the communications town of Aderno 14 miles southeast of Troina on the main road skirting Mt. Etna. The Germans demolished nine bridges and a 12-mile stretch of road as they fell back.

Paced by Heavy Bombers

Allied airplanes paced by heavy bombers struck Messina yesterday with the heaviest, most concentrated assault yet attempted during the Sicilian campaign.

Approximately 350 tons of bombs were poured on the small strip of territory around Messina. The huge concentration of enemy anti-aircraft guns about the port—described as rivaling the defences of the Ruhr area of Germany—offered "considerably less fire" yesterday, returning airmen said, and no enemy planes were sighted.

Other Allied planes ranged over the narrowing Messina bridgehead, pounding road communications and supply centres around Mount Etna and strafing evacuation beaches on the coast.

No Italian troops were fighting anywhere on the Sicilian front.

The powerful sledgehammer drives by the Americans and British again cracked the dwindling bridgehead still held by the enemy and with the Allied air force pounding enemy roads and beaches by day and night, the Germans were in precarious position.

The Sicilian front on July 20 was 175 miles wide. Today its narrow width or 45 miles enabled the employment of tremendous firepower and air power by the Allies.

American naval and military forces took about 100 Italian soldiers and sailors prisoner at Ustica, and found 216 Italian civil prisoners on the island. Ustica has been used by the Fascists as a penal settlement.

All Germans fled Ustica July 11, the Italians said. The civil population of the tiny patch of volcanic land, two miles long and a mile wide, consists of about 1,100 persons. Many were destitute and without water, many ill of Malaria.

(Today's Italian communique, broadcast from Rome and recorded by The Associated Press, claimed violent fighting continuing in the Central sector of Sicily and that "new strong enemy attacks launched with great support of artillery and armor were withstood by Axis troops."

(The communique asserted Allied air forces struck at Salerno south of Naples and Cosenza on the Italian mainland, and that Axis air force set a steamer afire and hit a heavy cruiser and another merchantman in attacks of the north coast of Sicily.

(A list of casualties from Allied air raids mentioned Naples, Messina, Eboli and Battipaglia in Salerno Porvince and Paola in Cosenza province as targets of Allied attacks. The communique reported 54 persons killed and 71 injured at all these places.)

Close in On Aderno

Near the east of towering Mount Etna, British and Canadian troops were slowly closing in on Aderno, while the American 7th Army was locked with the German defenders of Troina in the most fierce fighting it has encountered since the Sicilian invasion began.

Both towns were being desperately defended. Loss of Troina would rob the Axis of their main shield protecting their forces withdrawing from the south and central sectors of Sicily following the fall of Catania. The fall of Aderno would cost the Germans their last strongly-fortified position on the southwestern base of Mount Etna.

Field dispatches reported British forces as having penetrated from the southwest to within 2,000 yards of the Aderno stronghold, while on the west Canadians had approached to within 4,000 yards of the gates of the city. Both forces were pushing ahead despite stubborn opposition offered by strong German gun positions on Mount Etna.

Giant Bomber On Way Overseas

Toronto, Aug. 7. (CP)—Employees of Victory Aircraft Limited at nearby Malton saw the product of their months of work take the air when the "Ruhr Express", first Lancaster bomber to be built in Canada, set off last night on the first leg of its flight overseas to go into action over enemy territory.

The giant bomber was christened before the aircraft shops by Mrs. C. G. Power, wife of the Minister for Air, who smashed a bottle of champagne over the nose of the plane amid the cheers of the crowd, which included detachments of the R.C.A.F. Women's Division, the Canadian Women's Army Corps, the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service and many visitors.

Canada's first lancaster then was officially turned over to Ralph Bell, director general of Aircraft production, representing the Canadian government, by James Wark, president of Aeronautical Lodge No 717, International Association of Machinists, representing the workers.

Brief addresses were given by Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, chief of Air Staff, Munitions Minister Howe, Mr. Bell, and representatives of the workers.

Mr. Howe told the crowd of a talk with Winston Churchill in which the Prime Minister said that the best birthday present Canada could send him would be 1,000 bombers. "I am now able to cable Mr. Churchill that the first edition of his birthday present is on its way", Mr. Howe said.

Reds Threaten Rear Of Nazi Positions Near Kharkov

VON RIBBENTROP MEETS ITALIAN FOREIGN MINISTER

Presumed the Nazi Leader Sounded Out Italy's Plans for Immediate Future

UNREST PREVALENT

London, Aug. 7 (CP). — Italy's people were cheered today by the timely call for prayers for peace issued by Pope Pius, which provided a strong antidote to the war-like utterances of Premier Pietro Badoglio.

The Pope's action came as any hope that Italy might be rescued by Germany from ultimate surrender to the Allies faded on the battlefields of Russia and Sicily and in the bomb shattered Reich itself.

Typical of Badoglio's new militaristic propaganda line was a broadcast from Rome this morning that "a large number of lads under military age have asked to be allowed to join the army as volunteers."

It appeared, however, that Hitler has not completely abandoned hope of holding Italy in the axis orbit. An Italian frontier report said that Nazi foreign minister Ribbentrop met the new Italian foreign minister, Raffaele Guariglia, somewhere in northern Italy yesterday. It was presumed the Nazi leader sounded out Italy's plans for the immediate future and her position regarding her alliance with Germany. How long Ribbentrop planned to stay in Italy was not divulged.

Reuters News Agency reported from Lisbon that airport officials there have been told that a special Italian plane would arrive from Rome today, but there was no indication as to who might be aboard.

Julio Morones, Rome correspondent of EFI, official Spanish Foreign News Agency in the first dispatch sent out of Rome in a fortnight, said that Rome had announced that "the war continues" because "the adversaries of Italy did not present acceptable conditions for a cessation of hostilities." There was no mention in Morones' dispatch of any negotiations between the Badoglio government and the Allies, who insist that Italy must surrender unconditionally.

Russian Successes Potential Catastrophe for Germans

(By DEWITT MACKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The Red Army's double-barrelled triumph in the capture of the strategic cities of Orel and Belgorod—a stupendous feat which threatens the security of Hitler's entire 1,000 mile line in Russia—might rapidly develop into a situation which would produce the "second front" for which the Muscovites are again begging.

The loss of these two heavily fortified railway centres is a major defeat for the Nazis as it now stands, and potentially it's a catastrophe. Whether it actually will develop into a catastrophe depends on what reserve strength the Russians have with which to follow up their successes.

Latest reports show the Reds smashing forward with great striking power to capitalize the capture of the two key positions. Should the Nazis lose much more ground in these vital sectors, their High Command would be compelled to withdraw their entire right wing, which is anchored on the Sea of Azov, west of Rostov. This in turn would force an adjustment of the rest of the front to the north, clear to Leningrad. If the Germans are compelled to retreat, they likely will fall back in the first instance to the line of the Dnieper River.

A withdrawal of this magnitude, under heavy enemy pressure, is one of the most difficult and dangerous operations in war. It could easily be turned into a rout.

This new and great Russian success, coupled with the rapid progress of the Allied operations in Sicily, is calculated to cause the Allied Command to check immediately and seriously whether now is the moment for the great adventure of landing an army in France. That might not fit in with current plans, but it seems likely that the Allied program is flexible enough so that a quick change could be made.

One circumstance which might favor an invasion of France in the near future is the happy state of the Allied campaign of bombing Western Europe. Careful analysis of the daily objectives of the Anglo-American air forces over a long period would indicate that much attention has been paid to "invasion points", quite apart from the big industrial centres and communications.

AERIAL RAIDS SUGGEST NEW BATTLES TO COME

Vulnerable Spots in Japanese Armor Given Terrific Pounding

MANY BASES BLASTED

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 7 —(AP)—Vulnerable spots where the next blows against the Japanese may fall, now that Munda has been captured, felt the impact of America's air might in the Pacific during raids reported in today's communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

United States fighters whipped a numerically superior enemy in an air battle off Southern Bougainville. That enemy air and shipping sector is the most formidable barrier still between Allied forces and Japan's mighty fortress of Rabaul, New Britain.

Bombers with fighter escorts blasted Rekata Bay, a float-plane base, with 65 tons of explosives. It is on Santa Isabel Island, northeast of New Georgia flanking the line of advance and supply from Guadalcanal to Munda.

Other bombers 750 miles to the west ranged along the New Guinea coast, wrecking the supply barges Japan is utilizing to maintain the garrison at Salamaua, New Guinea. Salamaua, menaced by Australians and Americans only five miles away, is the objective of the left prong of the offensive which opened last June 30. Munda was the goal on the right.

On Munda, jungle troops fanned out from the newly won 4,000-foot airstrip into nearby mangrove swamps tracking down fleeing stragglers of the crushed Japanese garrison.

Seven Jap Planes Downed

More than 1,600 enemy dead have already been counted.

In the Bougainville air fight, 16 United States planes sought battle with 30 Zeros, downing seven at the cost of one.

(Hints of developments to come in the Pacific were supplied at two other points. At an unidentified advance base, it was disclosed that Lt.-Gen. Alexander Archer Vandegrift, who led the marines ashore at Guadalcanal just one year ago today, is back on the job. Expressing openly his pleasure over the planes, ships and men available for current operations, he gave assurance "the amphibious corps is ready for action anywhere."

(And at Honolulu, the commander-in-chief, of the Pacific Fleet, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, said the Japanese, after "temporary conquests" now "must stand ready everywhere for assault from the surface and air . . .")

TOOTHACHE LEADS TO SUICIDE

Los Angeles, Aug. 7 (AP)— Mrs. George W. White said several dentists declined to pull a tooth for her 38-year-old husband and the pain was so intense he threatened to kill himself. Officers found White dead —one gunshot wound above his heart and another in his temple.

FEARFUL OF RAIDS STATE OF PANIC EXISTS IN BERLIN

Mass Stampede From the Capital Reported in Switzerland

ARRESTS MADE

London, Aug. 7 (CP).—The German International Information Bureau, a propaganda agency, said in a broadcast today that it was "understood in Berlin that a number of important discussions of a military and political nature have taken place in the Fuehrer's headuarters the last few days."

This indication from German sources of a rising crisis came as reports filtered to London telling of fears in Berlin approaching a "state of panic" over possibility of massed air raids in the German capital, serious strikes and German peace demonstrations.

Reuters News Agency quoted arrivals in Zurich from Berlin as saying that the capital's authorities were "at their wits end to control a mass stampede from the city". Many arrests have been made among refugees from bomb-battered Hamburg, Reuters said, to prevent their spreading stories of fantastic casualties in that north port city.

Berliners' fears that their city will be singled out for devastation when Autumn nights make longer Allied raids possible were reported heightened also, Swedish dispatches said, when the R.A.F. showered leaflets over the capital warning that Berlin would serve as a sequel to the fate of Hamburg, which has become the world's most battered city.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels has admitted a partial evacuation of Berlin, but he said the list was restricted to non-essential residents.

Reuters also quoted reports heard in Istanbul that the Germans were preparing to proclaim Berlin an open city and remove the ministries and other services to Dresden, Leipzig, Munich and Prague.

Nazis Evacuating Civilians From Smolensk, Report

Moscow, Aug. 7 (AP).—Information received from Russian guerillas behind the German lines today said the Nazis were carrying out a general civilian evacuation of the Smolensk region.

Smolensk, 220 miles west of Moscow and probably the most important German base in all Russia, would be endangered by complete deflation of the Orel salient to the southeast as the Russians already hold positions less than 50 miles to the northeast between Yartsevo and Vyazma.

COL. SUTCLIFFE KILLED WHILE ON RECONNAISSANCE

88-M.M. Shell Lands Near Him While He Was Trying to Locate Enemy Guns

O. C. OF H. & P. E.

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(C. P. War Correspondent)

With Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 6 (Delayed) (C.P. Cable) — Lt.-Col. Bruce Sutcliffe of Trenton, Ont., was killed by shellfire while making a reconnaissance ahead of the front line July 20, it was disclosed today.

(Col. Sutcliffe's death was announced by his wife in Trenton July 29.)

The reconnaissance he was on was aimed at completing final plans for the subsequently successful attack by the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment up the 2,500 foot cliffs at Assoro, which Canadians captured.

On the afternoon of July 20, Col. Sutcliffe and a brigadier with a small party of officers went forward over a valley leading to the Assoro peak, then strongly held by Germans.

Wanted to Survey Ground

Col. Sutcliffe wanted to look over the ground personally before leading his Hastings and Prince Edward Battalion into a surprise attack that night. In addition there were some German 88-millimetre guns which had been firing on the battalion area and he wanted to spot them to bring Canadian artillery to bear on them.

The party was in an orange orchard about a mile from Assoro when Col. Sutcliffe told the brigadier he was going a few hundred yards to the right to get a better view and perhaps spot the German guns.

Killed Instantly

He had hardly left the party when the Germans shelled the area where he had gone. Col. Sutcliffe was killed instantly by an 88-mm. shell which burst near him.

The plan which he had prepared was carried through with brilliant success that night when his regiment clawed its way up the precipice and surprised and took Assoro town.

Col. Sutcliffe, aged 38, was one of the youngest officers commanding an infantry regiment in the Canadian army. He went overseas a major with the Canadian 1st. Division in December, 1939.

He was born in Toronto, son of J. A. and Mrs. Sutcliffe, and had lived in Trenton for a number of years.

Mrs. Sutcliffe survives with three small children and the colonel's parents.

SEASON OPENS SEPT. 18

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP) — Following a meeting of the Ontario Rugby Football Union at Toronto last night it was learned here today that the union's schedule will open September 18 with games in Ottawa, Toronto and Hamilton.

Harold Bailey, secretary of the Union, said after last night's meeting "there is nothing for publication yet."

It was stated here the full schedule will not be released until Aug. 16. ?

Month's Fighting Costly to Nazis In Dead and Material

Russian Troops Cut Kharkov-Bryansk Railroad at Zolochev To Menace Nazis

PREPARING PINCERS

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 7 — (AP) — Two Russian Army groups which outflanked Kharkov from the north in a swift drive through Belgorod, were threatening the rear of the German positions around that third largest city in the Soviet Union today, front line dispatches said.

Descending the valley by way of the Uby River, the Russians raced through Zolochev, a little more than 20 miles northwest of Kharkov in a flank attack similar to the action farther north which drove the Germans from Orel and opened the way for a simultaneous push toward Bryansk.

Both Kharkov and Bryansk, 275 miles to the northwest, were threatened by the broad advance.

Russian troops battering their way westward beyond Belgorod have already advanced 37 miles to cut the Kharkov-Bryansk railroad at Zolochev, 25 miles to the northwest of Kharkov, the Russians reported.

(The German radio said in a broadcast recorded in London that another Russian column was poised at Chuguyev, 24 miles southeast of Kharkov, which gave rise to the belief that the Russian High Command was preparing another pincers operation similar to the one which pinched off Orel at the north end of the Kursk salient.)

A Red army war communique, which indicated there was to be no letup in the initiative seized from the German army on July 12, summarized the month of fighting with figures showing the Germans' ill-starred attempt to erase the Kursk salient had cost them 120,000 dead and the destruction of 4,605 tanks, 11,000 trucks, 2,492 planes and 1,623 guns. In addition, the Russians said they took 12,418 prisoners and captured 621 tanks, 875 guns and 2,521 machine-guns and 325 supply and munitions depots.

The momentum of the advance which brought the Red army into Belgorod on Thursday has carried them well beyond the city in the new offensive operations centring around the strongly-defended Kharkov area, the communique said. The Russians said they already had captured 150 villages along a 44-mile front including the railroad town of Zolochev and seven district centres.

Gain of Six Miles.

To the north, the Russians said they routed picked German forces to advance on Bryansk which lies about 80 miles to the west and slightly north of Orel.

The movement toward Bryansk gained up to six miles in yesterday's fighting, giving the Russians 70 villages including the town of Kromi, 26 miles northwest of Orel.

The advances on Kharkov and Bryansk were being heavily supported by the Red army airforce operating on a round-the-clock schedule to bomb and strafe German concentrations and supply dumps. Thirty-six Nazi planes were shot down in combat during the day, the Russians said.

CAMP, BARRACKS SERVICE VOTE TRICKLING IN

Additional Military Camps Have Yet to be Reported

EFFECT ON RIDINGS

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP).—Results of the service vote, trickling in from camps and barracks throughout the province, left most of the candidates elected Wednesday in the Ontario general election secure in their constituencies but the outcome in Perth today continues to be in doubt.

Wednesday, the Perth seat was conceded to Angus Dickson, Liberal, who showed a 12-vote advantage over Fred Edwards, Progressive Conservative, but the service vote sent the constituency into the doubtful class and at present Mr. Edwards is leading by seven votes.

William Pratt, Perth returning officer, said in Stratford last night he did not know how many camps had yet to report.

In Toronto Beaches the 129-vote majority held by T. A. Murphy, Progressive Conservative, over Gordon Ferguson, C.C.F., was cut to 48 by the service vote reported up to last night and additional military camps have yet to be heard from.

Muskoka-Ontario Riding.

The Muskoka-Ontario riding which remained in the doubtful column for two days was finally conceded to Frank Kelly, Liberal, who late yesterday showed a 42-vote majority over the Progressive Conservative candidate, John Gibson. There still is one poll to be heard from but Norman Alexander, returning officer, said there were only about 35 voters there.

The Ontario cabinet will meet on Tuesday to discuss the resignation of the Liberal government headed by Premier Nixon and it was understood the resignation would immediately follow the meeting. The cabinet also will determine whom it will recommend to Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews to form a new government.

Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, with 38 members of the Progressive Conservative party elected, heads the largest group in the new legislature with the C.C.F., headed by E. B. Jolliffe, second with 34 members elected. Should the election of Mr. Edwards in Perth be confirmed, the Progressive Conservative party would have 39 members. There will be at least 14 Liberal members in the new House with the Perth riding offering a possible 15.

Premier Nixon said yesterday he had no intention of resigning the leadership of the Ontario Liberal party.

"I am going to represent my riding of Brant in the legislature and lead the Liberal representation," he said.

Smashing of Hamburg Seen As Pattern Of Devastation for Other Nazi Cities

Washington, Aug. 7—(AP)—The smashing of Hamburg, in the view of American experts, is the war's first example of the complete use of air power, and the pattern of the devastation to be extended to other German cities.

It was not, as has been suggested in enemy quarters, a "terror" operation, nor was it simply a ruthless laboratory test.

On the contrary, it was an attack on a prime military target—the nest and centre of German submarine production—and fortuitous circumstances made it the first completely successful strategic bombing operation.

Here, for the first time, daylight precision bombing and night area bombing were teamed to perfection, with enough planes to keep the operation moving day after day, and with weather which allowed the R.A.F., R.C.A.F. and the United States Air Force to carry the attack through to completion— the absolute smashing of a city about the size of Montreal, the greatest port of continental Europe, and a key point in the communications system which is vital to Germany's prosecution of the war.

The United States Air Force picked off the vital centres, the factories, power houses, key junctions, while R.A.F. and Canadian airmen moved in at night and levelled the city.

Ruthless at this destruction of residential quarters of a great city may seem to the distant observer, it is an integral part of the military attack. Experience has shown that in other area-bombed cities, the Germans have been able to repair the factories and move the bulk of the civilian population out.

This latter, however, was done not out of humanitarian interest in the comfort and safety of he civilians, but merely as the quickest and cheapest way of providing new housing for the essential workers in the war industries. To prevent that, the wrecking of all housing becomes neccesary. Add the precision bombing of the production facilities, and in a city like Hamburg the work of destruction is complete.

That the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. has found it necessary to return time after time to such cities as Cologne, Essen and Duesseldorf, the experts explain, is due to two facts—area bombing of the type done by British and Canadian airmen is not sufficient to wreck the production facilities, because there is no guarantee of destroying the key points, and in a large industrial concentration, precision plus area bombing will wreck the productive capacity of the factories only if weather permits continuing the attack until the target is a shambles beyond hope of repair

Futhermore, newer industrial facilities have been built by the Germans at isolated points, carefully camouflaged, and these—once located—can be reached effectively only with precision bombing. Thus the daytime attacks on such places as Magdeburg and Kassel were linked closely to the plan of destroying Hamburg and its production of submarines and other war goods.

The submarine industry has been the priority target, and when that is cleaned up, the Allied air forces can be expected to move in similar coordinated attacks against such objectives as Germany's airplane industry and synthetic fuel plants. These as yet have not felt the full fury of air assault although they have received enough attention to cut Germany's plane production considerably.

When the Allies finaly are able to establish bases on the Italian mainland as far north as Rome, the outlook is for a sudden development of strategic air warfare against Germany on a scale impossible now.

Brightly-Lighted Dummy Railway Stations Fail to Accomplish Purpose

At the German frontier, Aug. 7 (AP). — An elaborate system of brightly-lighted dummy railway stations, built by Nazi authorities to deceive Allied night bombers but which failed to accomplish their purpose, were described today by travellers reaching this border town.

"Those raiders somehow seem to find everything," the travellers said. One man, describing his first impression in crossing into Germany, said there was an "incredible muddle" at all Nazi railway stations.

Railway equipment is old and decrepit and new material is gobbled up by the army for the transport of troops and war materials to the various fronts, he said.

This traveller, who visited many parts of the Reich, said that the scent of death pervades the heavily-bombed German cities, with the inhabitants suffering from raid psychosis. They are completely indifferent about the fate of their property, expecting it to be blasted into smoke at any time.

Duesseldorf was a "terrible sight". He said he saw it two days after a raid and thousands of workers were still busy clearing away the wreckage. There was no electricity, gas or water and over all hung the penetrating odor of decay. This odor was typical of all bombed cities he visited, he said.

One of the grimmest pictures he brought back was that of the great number of wounded veterans from the Russian front, swarming in the streets of the cities. Useless now to the army, they are used in clean-up squads.

TPR. F. W. MARVIN WOUNDED IN SICILY

Another Belleville boy has been added to the list of local men wounded in action, during the past week. On Friday, Mrs. C. H. Marvin, Marshall Road, received a cablegram from Canadian Army Headquarters announcing that her son Trooper Frank W. Marvin has been wounded in action, presumably in Sicily. Son of the late Charles H. Marvin and Mrs. Marvin, Trooper Marvin enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in January, 1940 and went overseas in April of the same year. Later he was transferred to the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards.

He has one brother in the army, Pte. Jack D. Marvin, of the Ordnance Corps.

PTE. D. STAPLEY REPORTED WOUNDED

A Stirling boy, Donald Stapley, son of Cpl. and Mrs. Oliver Stapley, has been added to the growing list of Canadian casualties in Sicily it has been learned by the parents from an announcement from Canadian Army Headquarters at Ottawa. Born 22 years ago Pte. Stapley enlisted in the early days of the war and has been overseas since May, 1940. The announcement indicated the Stirling boy had been wounded in action on July 18th, but extent of injury was not given.

BENEFIT FUND USED TO HELP PLAYER

Money realized through the sale of tickets for the benefit game played by the Mountain View R.C.A.F. (WD) team and Bristols several weeks ago has gone for the intended purpose — that of assisting to pay the doctor bills of injured players — it has been announced by officials of the local girls' softball team. Several weeks ago Marilyn Donovan, popular shortstop for the Bell Sargent team, injured her knee during a scheduled league game and was forced to retire for the season. Her knee was placed in a cast for two weeks. The Injured Players' Fund has now contributed $26.50 toward expenses incurred by Miss Donovan as the result of her injury.

FINDS LARGE WORM FEEDING ON LEAVES

Something new in the way of garden pests was reported this morning by Mr. George Britton, enthusiastic College Street gardener who brought to The Ontario Intelligencer office a sprig o apple tree on which was clinging a rather gruesome appearing worm approximately 2 1-2 inches in length and rather closely resembling a tomato or cabbage worm. The worm, green in color, was almost as large around as a person's thumb and was reported by Mr. Britton to be feeding on apple leaves. Mr. Britton was unable to identify the specimen.

NAMES SHOULD BE DOROTHY AND BETTY WAY

In a news story in Friday's issue of this paper there occurred an inadvertant error in reporting the names of two half-sisters of the late Private Sam Way, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Way, 75 Station Street, who was officially reported killed in action in the battle of Sicily, while serving with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in the Canadian force. The reference to the relatives of the late soldier should have read: "Surviving are his parents, his wife in London, whom he married after going overseas, a sister, Mrs. Roy Reid, Belleville, two half-sisters, Betty and Dorothy Way at home and one halfbrother, Edward Way of this city.

Portable Pipeline Used in Sicily

New York, August 7. — (AP)—A portable steel pipeline, through which liquid supplies were pumped, was a major contribution to the success of the Allied forces in the Tunisian campaign and now is being used in Sicily with the same effectiveness, it was disclosed Monday with approval of the United States War Department.

Details of the light-weight pipeline were disclosed in a press conference by Alexander Fraser, president of the Shell Oil Company, who credited its origination to Sidney S. Smith, manager of the products pipe line department of Shell Oil.

It was put into use by the United States Army after two years of experimental work by the oil company's engineers. Several thousand miles of the new flexible line were used in North Africa to carry gasoline and water in separate pipes, said Fraser. More than 50 per cent of the total volume of Allied supplies, excluding ammunition, were pumped by this means, he continued. The lines varied from 75 to 300 miles in length, keeping pace with the advancing troops.

With automatic cut-offs on the pipelines, which have pumping stations at 20-mile intervals, liquids can start flowing immediately after a section is laid, Fraser said. He said damage from enemy bombs becomes relatively ineffective since pumping stations can be replaced within a few hours.

Fraser said that after brief training, otherwise unskilled army crews can lay the pipe at the rate of 20 to 30 miles a day as it is fabricated in 20-foot sections weighing 90 pounds each, light enough to be carried by one man. The four-inch diameter pipeline has a 25,200-gallon capacity a day, and Fraser said the joinings can be adjusted to any climate ranging from 40 degrees below zero to a temperature of 130 degrees.

Opening Night Rotary Karnival Well Attended

Almost everyone, young and old, loves a carnival. At least such is the impression gained from the splendid attendance at the Rotary Karnival on its opening night performance on South Church Street near the C.P.R. station.

Queen City Shows, featuring six of the most popular rides and a varied array of games and other concessions, together with five special booths operated by the Rotary Club members provide the attraction which will run this evening and for the whole of next week. The Karnival is being held in aid of the Rotary Club Crippled Children's Fund.

Mechanical carnival rides will ever remain popular with young and old alike, it was indicated when during a casual visit to the carnival grounds all six of the rides were demonstrated as being the high point of interest. In addition to the ever popular ferris wheel and merry-go-round, there is the comparatively recent innovation, the ridee-o, the rather awesome spectacle, the dive bomber, and the sky-ride. For the kiddies there is the auto-ride.

For those that like to try their luck at the games of skill there are plenty varied concessions and the ring toss and ball throwing booths did a thriving business. There are the "guess your weight" booths and the fortune teller as well as the bingo and many confection and candy vending booths.

Of the five booths operated by the Rotary club members, the dollar-covered-doll booth seemed to be drawing considerable attention from the crowd. Here tickets were being sold on the doll which will be drawn for at the close of the carnival.

All-in-all the show is one of good clean fun and amusement and is certain to be a centre of attraction for amusement seekers during the next six days.

Ralph G. Clapp Receives Wings And Commission

Ralph G. Clapp, son of Alderman C. R. Clapp and Mrs. Clapp, Ann Street, has received his commission of Pilot Officer in the R.C.A.F. after passing and receiving his wings as a pilot at a ceremonial parade at Brantford on Thursday, his parents being interested spectators. He is now enjoying a well earned holiday at his home in this city before being posted for duty.

Born in Belleville, 23 years ago, Ralph attended the public school and Collegiate Institute in this city graduating from the latter in commercial subjects. He joined his father in the Service Station on Front Street as a clerk accountant and entered into the business life of this community. He was most interested in music and took an active part in band work being a member of the Municipal Band. He was also a clarinet soloist and won competitions at the musical festivals held in Western Ontario.

In June, 1941, he joined the R.C.A.F. as a clerk-accountant and was posted to No. 5 I.T.S. in that capacity but later re-mustered to air crew and started his upward climb to be a pilot, an ambition sought by many young Canadians. He attended the Initial Training School at Belleville, the Elementary Training School at St Eugene, Ont., and the Service Flying Training School at Brantford passing through all grades with very high standings in all subjects. His many friends wish him the best of luck in the great adventures that lie ahead.

Will Carry War To Japan Itself

Naval Headquarters, South Pacific, Aug. 7 (AP)—Admiral William Halsey Jr. on the first anniversary of the start of the battle for the South Pacific promised today that the United Nations will carry the war into Japan itself.

"We will destroy the enemy," Halsey told a press conference. "We shall push forward until the battle of the South Pacific becomes the battle of Japan."

The Commander-in-Chief of naval forces in this war theatre said the United States is entering the second year of the South Pacific campaign "with every confidence in ultimate victory."

LATE JAMES OSWALD CARNEY
(Hungerford Township)

The funeral of James Oswald Carney, late residence, First Concession of Hungerford Township, took place Friday afternoon, Aug. 6th., from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, to the Anglican Church at Roslin where the Burial Office was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Robinson of Tweed, who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in the Roslin Anglican Cemetery.

During the service in the church a vocal solo was rendered by Mr. J. McCabe.

The bearers were Messrs. William Preston, James Vance, H. Horton, W. Dawe, S. Robertson and R. Kincaid.

MRS. ALEXANDER ANDERSON
(Demorestville)

Mrs. Alexander Anderson died at her home in Demorestville, Prince Edward County, early Friday evening, August 6th. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Anderson was born sixty-three years ago at Northport and prior to her marriage she was Miss Grace Donella Leslie, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alec. Leslie. All her life was passed in the district where she was born and by many friends she was held in high esteem. In religion she was a member of the United Church at Demorestville.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Alexander Anderson; four daughters, Mrs. Alec. Graham, Stayner, Ont.; Mrs. Clarence Allison, Picton, R.R. 8; Mrs. Ralph Conder, Belleville and Mrs. J. Boyer, Toronto; three sons, William Anderson, R.R. 2, Picton; Malcolm Anderson, Belleville and Jack Anderson, at home; one brother, Thomas Leslie, Thurlow Township; five sisters, Mrs. H. R. Dunning, Cannifton; Mrs. Bert Hastings, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Ruth Howe, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Miss Claudia Leslie, New York City and Miss Katherine Leslie, New York City.

The funeral announcement is made on page two in this issue.

MRS. MARGARET RILEY
(Trenton)

Mrs. Margaret Riley, 78 Scott street, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Saturday morning.

WILLIAM EDWARD GARFIELD

William Edward Garfield, corner of College and Park Streets, Thurlow Township, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Saturday morning. He was in failing health for some time.

Born in England seventy-six years ago, the deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Garfield. For some years he lived in Winnipeg and for the past seven years he lived in the vicinity of Belleville.

Fraternally he was a member of the Order of Oddfellows and was well respected. Surviving him is his wife, who prior to her marriage was Anita Aileen Beverley.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell St., the funeral announcement is made on page two in this issue.

NAME CONFUSED CLERK

Kansas City, Aug. 7 —(AP)— The volunteer worker at a community house several times asked the name of an apprentice seaman who wanted a pair of trousers shortened. "Mine are white," was the reply. "I see that," she sweetly replied, "but what is your name?" The exasperated sailor spelled it: "M-i-n-o-r W-h-i-t-e."

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

One of the very rare instances that a mobile recruiting unit for the R.C.N.V.R. has been stationed in Belleville, a naval recruiting unit from Kingston is here for a two days' stand starting Friday and continuing until this Saturday evening. The presence of the recruiting unit in the city is indicated by the two stalwart ratings standing on guard at the entrance to the city hall.

Previous to the opening of the recruiting stand, approximately 50 ratings of the H.M.C.S. Cataraqui in Kingston paraded through the streets of the city, headed by their drum and bugle band. The navy men formed up on the market square marched the length of Front Street and swung past several of the war plants in the city. The white naval uniforms are a marked contrast to the familiar air force blue seen on Belleville streets so frequently.

With a record of having the most enlistments per capita in the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve of any city of its size in Canada, Belleville will undoubtedly respond to the call, thus keeping her name at the top of the list.

Another former Belleville boy who recently arrived overseas with a Canadian Hospital Unit is Sgt George Monan, who three years ago worked in a local restaurant. George came to Canada from England and worked for six years as night waiter at the New Service Lunch on Front Street, and at the Belmont Restaurant. At the outbreak of war he enlisted in the Canadian Army later being transferred to the hospital unit which is now reported to be overseas.

With the announcement that the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is in the thick of the battle of Sicily, announcement from army headquarters of Belleville and district boys becoming casualties have started to come through.

Although not the first casualty of a Belleville boy reported from the Sicilian battlefront, the announcement received this week that Pte. Sam Way, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Way of Station Street, had been killed in action, was received with much regret. Pte. Way is thought to be the first Belleville boy with the Canadian Army to have been killed in action.

Twenty-four years old, Pte. Way enlisted with his regiment in 1939 and after training at Picton went overseas in July of 1940. He leaves a young wife in England.

* * *

Other casualties to have been reported in the Sicilian war zone are Pte. Gordon Parkhurst and Trooper Albert St. Denis. Both boys have been wounded but announcements received gave no indications of the seriousness of the injury. Pte. Parkhurst enlisted with the Glengarry Highlanders and was transferred to the "Hastie P's", while Spr. St. Denis went overseas with the H. & P.E. Regiment in 1939.

Proudly graduating at Uplands, R.C.A.F. station on Friday afternoon was John W. Bradley, son of Mr. and Mrs Fred J. Bradley, 224 Ann Street, Belleville, who had a pilot's wings pinned on his tunic. Sgt. Bradley attended Belleville schools and was a student at Albert College prior to his enlistment in the R.C.A.F.

J.B. Boyce Hails Leadership Of Roosevelt and Churchill

Belleville Man Tells Rotary Club of Toronto of Importance of Constructive Leadership

EVERY DAY CONTACTS

"Leadership is not a lot of theoretical hocus pocus, nor cold logic, it is hot logic because it has to do with human relationships, with influencing the attitudes and actions of human beings", J. B. Boyce of Belleville, told a meeting of the Toronto Rotary Club held in the Royal York Hotel.

"In the main", he said, "human beings are not influenced especially, by cold passive logic, much as we like to think we are, but are influenced by emotional impulses, our likes and dislikes, our loves and hates.

"In the future we do not want any of this destructive leadership which creates suspicion, prejudice, jealousy and hatred in men's minds", said Mr. Boyce, "because these things are a thousand times more malignant than cancer and a billion times more destructive. They spew death, suffering, misery and destruction over the face of the earth to a degree beyond the power of human minds to conceive.

"Instead we want a constructive leadership, the type that creates confidence, good will, harmony and co-operation", declared Mr. Boyce. He referred to President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill as examples of leaders we should support.

"When we are looking for leaders, we shouldn't go too far afield", he declared, "because like the great fundamental truths of life, they are to be found in every day contacts and experiences".

Trenton and District

R.C.A.F. Women's Auxiliary

Trenton — The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the R.C.A.F. was held in the rooms on King Street this week with the president, Mrs. Stephenson, in the chair.

The report of the work convener, Mrs. W. E. Baker, showed 10 sheets mended, 14 gowns mended, 2 pairs pyjamas mended, two dozen square tape sponges made and 8 rolls of gauze made into swabs for the Air Force hospital.

A motion was passed whereby $25 monthly would be spent for Red Cross parcels for prisoners of war overseas, in addition to the $20 already being used each month for cigarettes for R.C.A.F. personnel overseas.

Police Court

Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston presided over Trenton Police Court on Friday with S. O. Robertson, Assistant Crown Attorney, prosecuting.

FEARFUL OF RAIDS

New Trouble Piled Up

The Zurich Die Weltwoche said that strikers demanding peace had piled new troubles upon Germany's already over-taxed war industries, that workers in some factories in Austria had refused to work and their action had been followed in Stuttgart and Berlin factories. Promises of increased rations and the presence of Nazi Elite Guard members in the factories failed to deter them, the newspapr said.

The collapse of Mussolini and his Fascist regime has struck German morale with the weight of a "political Stalingrad," whose final effects on the Axis may be much more important than has yet been indicated, said Die Weltwoche.

Dispatches to Swiss newspapers told how the German propaganda ministry was left practically "gasping for breath" at the collapse of the Mussolini government. The best it could do, reported Die Weltwoche was to tell the German people to "rely with confidence in their own strength," assuring them that "only weapons are decisive."

But just as in Italy — especially in the minds of the younger Germans — Mussolini's own fall was difficult to grasp.

London Carefree

In sharp contrast to the wave of jitters enveloping Berlin was the carefree attitude of Londoners who today are singing their way along with a new hit tune, "I'm Going to Get Lit Up When the Lights Go Up in London." The government promised modifications in the blackout as conditions may warrant.

Both Goebbels and Reichsmarshal Herman Goering were reported in Hamburg today. Before he left Berlin Goebbels made a final attempt to allay the fears of the Berliners with assurances that Berlin anti-aircraft defences have been strengthened and that the Reich High Command is preparing massive counter air blows against Britain. Goebbels gave no indications when the counter air offensive would be launched but promised that German military experts would utilize a new secret weapon on which they are now working.

Swedes Happy Sweden Bars Nazis Transit

By JOHN COLBURN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Aug. 6—(AP) — The Swedish public demonstrated pleasure today at the decision by the government of King Gustaf to bar Sweden's transit facilities to German troops and war material.

The average Swede never approved of the Nazi transit traffic between Germany and Norway and Finland through Sweden. It was accepted by the government as an expedient measure when war threatened the unprepared country in 1940.

Now the Swedes are better prepared militaristically than at any time in their history, with a well-equipped army of 400,000 men and coastal and other defences on 24-hour alert for any eventuality.

No reprisals have been indicated or threatened by the Nazis for the decision, announced yesterday, to stop the transport of German war material across Sweden Aug. 15 and to halt the movement of troops Aug. 20.

For Sweden, the drastic step lifted a heavy burden from her neutrality policy; for Germany it will force further use of the perilous North Sea route to Norway and it also added materially to the problem of supplying Nazi troops in Finland.

New encouragement was provided the loyal population of Norway, who have already reported the morale of the German occupational forces ebbing dangerously.

Brings Demands to Head

The growing possibility of an Allied invasion of Norway and Allied raids upon German objectives there July 24 brought to a head Swedish public demands that the traffic be ended.

A foreign office spokesman said the Nazi movements had proved a burden on both "the Swedish neutrality policy and relations with Norway."

Anywhere from 600 to 1,000 German troops have been moving daily on Swedish railways. The amount of war supplies freighted through is a military secret, but such trafic may have been more important than the transfer of the soldiers.

The Swedish foreign office said the decision does not affect ordinary passenger traffic and goods traffic.

Hospital trains with wounded and the ill will, even in the future, as cases arise pass through Sweden in accordance with The Hague convention.

With no railways through the mountainous region linking Trondheim to Narvik, the Germans will need one-third more ships to supply Norway by sea, one Swede estimated.

New York, Aug. 6. (AP)—A German Foreign Office spokesman was quoted by the Berlin radio today as saying that the cessation of Nazi military traffic through Sweden resulted from an agreement between the two governments and that no tension existed between Berlin and Stockholm.

Hull Expresses Gratification

Washington, Aug. 6. (AP)—State Secretary Cordell Hull expressed gratification today that Sweden is cancelling facilities given Germany since 1940 for the movement of troops and war material through Swedish territory to Norway and Finland.

The fact that Sweden felt able to take such action at this time was in itself significant, he told a Press conference.

Hull indicated that Anglo-American recognition of the French Committee of National Liberation may be imminent.

3,266 Vessels Took Part

"In the Sicilian operation nearly 2,000 vessels, big and little warships and merchantmen took part in the first assaults on Sicilian beaches before dawn July 10.

"In the operations as a whole, no fewer than 3,266 ships, vessels and craft of all types played a part."

This statement appears in the official statement of the Armada that carried the invasion to Sicily.

The insularity of Sicily and of Italy from the south did not save Sicily from invasion. Sea-power of Britain, the United States and of practically all the other United Nations took part for sea-power is a flexible force against which the land enemy cannot easily compete. Hitler in 1939 set out to conquer the world and he had to trust mainly to land routes and land power but that has its drawbacks in that it is not fluid or flexible like sea-power. Hitler had for his task that which he never achieved and could never achieve — that is, to try to plan some means of invasion against Britain but he never found the means for the miles of Channel defied him and he gave up. He also tried the air ways but could not crush Britain. Here too he desisted.

The Allied nations have had a gigantic task to organize the Sicilian invasion but they were equal to the task by their own spirit of enterprise and by their command of the sea by their sea-going craft.

The assembly of a total of 3,266 sea craft used in invading Sicily was a massive task but it was achieved, while Hitler's invasion plans were never completed.

Sea-power helps to spell security and freedom. Together with landpower it has given the greatest pattern of amphibious warfare the world has ever seen.

To End Transit

As Germany cannot prevent such defeats as she has suffered in Orel and Belgorod in Russia and Catania in Sicily, she cannot prevent other events of deep importance taking place.

One of these other events is Sweden's decision to bring an end to the transit of German soldiers through Sweden. That means that later this month the movement of German troops and war material through Sweden will cease. Sweden, a small country, had seen in 1940 her neighbor, Norway, grabbed by Germany and Denmark overrun by the Germans. The government allowed transit for the Germans but this month that ends. And that means Germany has to trust more and more to the water route to aid German forces in Norway.

Sweden is well armed now, and she knows the steadily growing Allied supremacy over the Axis. She knows Germany will go down.

The acceptance by Germany of the Swedish demand for ending the traffic is a proof that Germony cannot afford to irritate another nation. Germany was not so obliging in the early days of her entry into the war, when she attacked and bludgeoned smaller nations in her fury to gain her evil ends in a hurry.

Neutrals are not impressed by the Huns' power today and that can have but one meaning, the power of the enemy is on the wane. Even Axis satellites have an uneasy feeling in being associated with Germany. All this points one way, the world at large has seen through Germany's front and discovered its weakness.

It knows Hitler and Germany are doomed.

Anniversary

Twenty-nine years ago Britain declared war against Germany and the conflict went on for four years, three months and seven days. The long armistice did not bring peace but was seized upon by the Germans again to build up, secretly at first, and then openly, a mighty military power to endeavor to grasp world power. Again for almost four years this second war, caused by Germany and by Italy which entered in June, 1940, and by Japan, who threw off the mask in December, 1941, has been raging. Again for the second time the chains are tightening against the war-making Axis powers, Italy almost knocked out, Germany showing the strain of war and pulling in her lines as she has been forced to do after the events in the Mediterranean and North Africa, and Japan having lost her thrusting power.

For the second time in less than a generation Germany is nearing the time when she must suffer defeat that will be so complete as to free the world from the threat of Nazi militarism. In time Japan will suffer defeat. The lesson this time is to be made so effective that Germany will have to learn through utter defeat that the way of the war transgressor is hard and does not pay.

For a second time the ways all point to Allied victory again, how near no one can say, but that the end of this war is to mean the crushing of Germany is certain — it will mean unconditional surrender.

Germany has brought two devastating wars to come to pass and she has been stained in the blood of millions all for a mad and unholy ambition. Hitler, who thought he had foreseen all emergencies and protected his plans against any possibility of defeat must today look with the bitterness of a fiendish spirit on the approach of his own doom and that of the people who allowed him to bring about a second war.

The Allies are determined that no third would-be world conqueror shall rise in Germany or elsewhere to make desolate so much of the earth and to rob so many of their lives. They will take the necessary steps to that end, however drastic they have to be in dealing with so mad a foe.

Civilization demands that Germany be made to obey international codes and laws. There is no room in the world for a warlike Germany.

Orel in Russia, and Catania in Sicily, are names with an ominous sound to the Germans, for in both these places they suffered defeat, at the former at the hands of the Russians and in the latter from the forces of the British and Canadian troops. Orel is the natural consequence of the failure of Hitler's summer offensive, and Catania marks the steadily pushing backwards of the Axis power, unable to hold Axis territory.

Goebbels' Name

(Stuthers Burt in Saturday Review of Literature)

What a fantastic name Goebbels is! Gnomelike, goblinlike, gooselike; red-eyer and hissing.

Try saying these out loud and fast. Goering, Goebbels, Hitler and Hess!

History has a strange sense of caricature and of stage direction as if, back of the historian, were a major historian, history itself. What better name, for example, could be found for Caesar than Caesar? The short, sharp, predatory consonants and vowels of the first oratund, pompous, but dignified and important vowels and consonants of the latter.

And what could be more perfect for weasel hearted traitors than Quisling? While even Charles Dickens, genius of nomenclature, could have hit upon nothing more apt for the greatest and most vocal liar the world has ever seen, natural and self-taught, than Goebbels. Some god must have laughed at the birth of this man; if one of the bloody German gods, laughing deep in his beard, all the better.

Therefore, for the enrichment of the already magnificent English vocabulary I suggest a further word, onomatopoeic and exact, complete in all its necessary nouns, adjectives, adverbs and verbs, tenses and cases.

"To goebel; goebbelingly. A goebbeler; a goebbel."

Hogs Lead in Usable Meat

(From Collier's Weekly)

For every 1,000 pounds on the hoof, sheep and lambs produce 470 pounds of usable meat, beef cattle 540 pounds, veal calves 570 pounds and hogs 750 pounds.

THE LESSER ODDS

They never question right or wrong
  Or for an easier service plead.
Their only wish is to be strong
  And valiant in the time of need.

They never question how or why
  Or bicker when the order's made
They forward step to live or die,
  However great the odds are laid.

They never sneer at duty's call
  Or quarrel over time or price.
In freedom's cause they offer all
  To the supremest sacrifice.

Oh, when victorious they return,
  Each to his old accustomed place,
What of our service will they learn
  Who had the lesser odds to face?

Aderno Menaced By Canadians

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 7—(CP Cable)—Aderno is seriously threatened by troops of the Canadian 1st Division who are reported officially to be progressing steadily in an area of Sicily west of Regalbuto.

If the Canadians succeed in capturing Aderno, probably with help from the British 78th Division, it was said here today, the defenders' only lateral line of communication from the foot of Mount Etna will be cut and the German chances of extricating themselves greatly reduced.

The highway is already cut further south at Paterno and Misterbianca, both captured by the British 8th Army.

Aderno is a great bottleneck of communications in the area in front of the advancing Canadian and British troops.

Let's Stop Noise

The first thought in looking at the various avenues in New York City where the elevated tracks and structure have been removed is of the width and cleanness of these avenues, but from the health standpoint no one can estimate the value of "quietness" now present.

Does noise really interfere with work and health? In their booklet "Let's Stop Noise", the National Noise Abatement Council, 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City, state:

"In one test, when paper bags were blown up and exploded, it was found that this innocent noise raised the brain pressure to four times normal. Experiments have also shown that sudden or loud noise produce the same reaction in a person as does a great fright. Though we may not pay any attention to noise consciously because we are absorbed in work or conversation or day dreams, still our nervous system is alert to it. In the fear reaction which follows from noise, blood pressure and heart action are increased; and there is a paralyzing influence on the digestive tract, resulting in so-called nervous indigestion".

When noise occurs our muscles and nerves become tensed. This tensing of all the muscles uses up our energy just as much as if we were using the muscles in work or exercise. This means wasted energy. "It causes wear and tear on the entire system, thus producing rapid fatigue and nervous exhaustion".

"Noise prevents sleep and with so many war workers on night shift trying to sleep during the day, there is a great need for the prevention of "needless noise". Whereas people have been known to go without food for days without serious injury, loss of sleep for 36 to 48 hours is often attended with grave mental and physical symptoms. Especially today the longer working hours and intensified war time activity make relaxing sleep absolutely essential for the well-being and stamina of our citizens".

The commonest forms of needless noise are honking motorists; car owners with screetching brakes or wide-open mufflers; the hosts at loud and boisterous parties; bell-ringing peddlers; and people with noisy animals.

There will always be necessary noises but from the health standpoint of doing our best at our daily work, there should be no needless noise.

HUGE FIRES LEFT RAGING

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 7 (AP)—R.A.F. four-engined bombers left huge fires raging on railway sidings and in the vicinity of the ferry terminus at San Giovanni on the Italian toe in an attack last night, a Middle East air communique announced.

R.A.F. Beaufighters in offensive sweeps off the west coast of Greece scored hits with cannon and machine-guns killing the gun crew of a trawler at Preveza.

No Allied planes were lost in the operations, the communique said.

London—Single women in Britain between the ages of 19 and 31 are liable to conscription for the women's auxiliary forces, but may elect to go into certain specified jobs in industry.

Capital Closeups

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 7—(CP)— One of the biggest headaches facing the men who handle Canada's food problems is that of building up a reserve of foodstuffs to help feed the hungry people of Axis-dominated countries liberated as the Allied victory drive unfolds.

Right now, for instance, some Canadian food is among that being distributed by the Allied occupation authorities to the underfed people of Sicily. It didn't reach them directly from Canada but went through some other United Nation to which the Dominion had allotted foodstuffs under mutual-aid assistance.

It's a problem with many angles but there are sure signs that the solution lies in the not-too-distant future. The word in official quarters is that "tremendous" increases are expected within the next six months or so in production of meats of all kinds, poultry, eggs, milk and other staples.

While those increases might not be felt on the home front, they will go to help build up the needed reserves and increase supplies available for shipment to the United Kingdom and other Allied countries.

However, there's no need for worry on the home front. There is enough for all and, with rationing controls, each gets his share.

Diplomatic history was made in the capital this week when two ministers, on two successive days, presented their credentials to the governor-general and took their places in Ottawa's rapidly-expanding diplomatic corps.

They were Ray Atherton, the darkly elegant and distinguished new United States minister who succeeds the late J. Pierrepont Moffat, and Per Wijkman, the fair, youthful Swedish Minister, who became his country's first envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Canada.

Further additions to the legation colony are expected shortly from Mexico, Peru and Cuba.

To reciprocate with Canadian ministers to Mexico, Cuba, Peru and Sweden—the probable order in which the legations will open—will place a heavy strain on Canada's trained diplomatic service and will present a problem in obtaining suitable ministerial appointees.

Speaking of diplomats calls to mind the story going the rounds about the legation official— comparatively new to Canada—who went fishing in Northern Ontario waters and caught what he thought was a marine monstrosity.

Back to Ottawa came the fish, for expert opinion. It was a monstrosity in name only, scientifically called the horned pout to amelurus nebulosus but known to Canadians as—catfish.

Cairo—When Kenya natives were released from the Italian prison camps at Adi Ugri by conquering British forces in the East African campaign, they shouted, "Three cheers for King George and British Empire."

London—In the Royal Ordnance Factories in Britain, where guns, shells and explosives are made, 60 percent of the workers are women.

Senator William Maclay, of Pennsylvania, who dined with George Washington March 4, 1790, recorded in his diary that "at every interval of eating or drinking" the first President of the United States "played on the table with a fork or knife, like a drum-stick.

James Sullivan who described Thomas Jefferson from his personal recollections, said of the author of the Declaration of Independence: "When speaking he did not look at his auditor, but cast his eyes toward the ceiling or anywhere but at the eyes of his listener."

The practice of referring to the Senate as the "Upper House" and the House of Representatives as the "Lower House" was borrowed from British parliamentary practice. The House of Lords and the House of Commons were so designated already centuries ago. Even members of the first Congress, which met in 1789, referred to the Senate as the "Upper House" and the House of Representatives as the "Lower House."

A munificent patron is called a Maecenas. This refers to Caius Cilnius Maecenas ("me-SEE-nus") a Roman statesman, diplomat and man of great wealth who was the patron of Virgil, Horace and many other men of letters in the time of Augustus Caesar.

"To the manner born" means to be accustomed to from birth, or to be congenitally fitted for a position or employment. Often is it incorrectly written "to the manor born," owing perhaps to a false theory of its origin. That "manner" and not "manor" is the original and correct spelling of the word in the phrase is proved by early usage. So far as known, the phrase was first used in Shakespeare's "Hamlet," which is supposed to have been written about 1602. In the first printed edition of that play occurs this passage: "But to my mind, though I am native here and to the manner born, it is a custom more honored in the breach than the observance."

The title and rank of "lieutenant colonel" originated in the French and British armies in the days of "absentee" colonels. At that time the colonel often was a courtier at court, while the lieutenant commanded his regiment in the field.

It is estimated that more than 18,000,000 immigrants have entered the United States through the port of New York since the Statue of Liberty was unveiled in 1886.

P. T. Barnum's "Museum, Menagerie and Hippodrome" was the first circus transported by railroad. Until 1872 "the Greatest Show on Earth" was moved from town to town by means of 600 horses. In that year Barnum bought 65 railway cars for the purpose and after that the circus was transported by railroad.

"Sweet Adeline" was composed just forty years ago by Richard H. Girard.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Gauthier announce the engagement of their younger daughter, Veronica Teresa, to John Leonard Whibbs, son of Mrs. Mary Whibbs and the late Thomas James Whibbs, of Peterboro, the wedding to take place the latter part of August.

Gunner Jack English is spending furlough in the city, the guest of Captain T. E. Hyland, Coleman St.

Mrs. F. M. Sprague, Queen St., has received word that her husband, Capt. Sprague, has arrived safely overseas.

Pilot Officer and Mrs. Donald McLean, of Winnipeg, were recent guests of Misses Jessie and Edith McLean, Alexander Street.

LAC. Frank H. Foley, R.C.A.F., Brandon, Man., is spending a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Foley, 282 George St.

Mr. Harold Langabeer, of Kingston, is spending holidays in the city.

Mrs. Arthur Wynne and daughter Sheila, of Toronto, are visiting at the home of the latter's grandparents, North Park St.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Codling and Mrs. Alice Selden are home after visiting relatives in Toronto and Hagersville.

Mrs. J. S. Wardner, of Belleville, is spending the weekend in Burlington, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Simpson Rusk.

Messrs "Toots" Holway and Bill Dennis are in Windsor representing the Belleville Kinsmen Club.

Mrs. Dorothy Brant, Herchimer Ave., has received a cable from her son, Gunner Kenneth Brant, informing her of his safe, arrival overseas.

Mrs. A. C. Kirkby and little daughter, Jo-Ann Elizabeth, have returned home after spending a week's vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Morbey, 42 Meyers Street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Maddick, Mr. and Mrs. James Mason and Mr. William McGregor, of Hamilton, have returned home after spending the past week the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Brant, George St.

Squadron Leader and Mrs. E. B. Osler, of Lethbridge, Alta., are spending a week's holiday at the home of the latter's parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. H. Stobie, Campbell St.

Miss L. Simpson, of Winnipeg, Man., is spending a few days at the home of Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Payne, 85 Victoria Ave.

Mrs. Grace Childs, Hamilton, spent the holiday weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Morbey.

Miss J. Shafpe has successfully passed her first year in the annual examinations of the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto.

Mr. Donald Pratt, 96 Station St., is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where he underwent a very serious operation.

Honouring Miss Freda York, bride-to-be of the near future, the Misses Doreen Cunningham and Alice Ellis were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower on Tuesday evening last. During the evening a bride's book was made by her several friends, at which all had an enjoyable time. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess after which Freda thanked all for the lovely gifts she had received. Miss York was again feted on Thursday evening when Mrs. Fred Ashmore was hostess at a delightfully arranged shower. Cards were enjoyed by the guests, the prizes going to Mrs. T. York, Mrs. Langman and consolation, Mrs. G. Rowbotham. Freda was then given a seat of honour and an address was read conveying to her the best wishes of all present and in a tangible way showing the esteem in which she is held. A dollar covered doll, in a daintily trimmed basket and a beautiful Kenwood blanket were then presented. Although taken by surprise, Freda expressed her thanks to everyone. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and a pleasant evening brought to a close.

Featuring the delightful music of Buff Estes, the Stewart Warner-Alemite Guild, headed by Walter Batchelor, sponsored a most successful and highly entertaining dance at the Hume Arena Gardens on Friday evening. A sparkling floor show, conducted by the Garden Brothers from Toronto, received loud applause. It consisted of a four-girl tap dancing team, piano accordian and violin duets and several magician acts. Bingo games, played during the evening, were heartily enjoyed by everyone and a number of spot dances wholeheartedly received by the dancers. On the whole, it was reported a very gala and jolly occasion.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Young Wife's Grave Problems

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Thirteen years ago I married, when I was 14 years of age. We have four children between 11 and and 5 years. We live with my husband's parents. I have no privacy, and my children have no yard in which to play. When friends visit me, all the in-laws come in and enter into the conversation, so my friends have stopped coming.

My war-worker husband eats breakfast at 6:00 A.M. and supper at 10 P.M., so he's no company. He is terribly jealous and accuses me of having, as a lover, a man whom I hardly know. I want to move into a home of our own, but my husband says if I go, I'll have to go alone.

The doctor says I'm headed for a nervous breakdown if I don't get away from these crowded conditions soon, but it doesn't seem to worry my husband. He gives me his pay work check, but insists I put half in the bank. He also has a welding shop from which he collects $15 a week for his own use. His regular pay is $200 a month.

I know he has relations with another woman, but he denies this. However, I've come to the point where I don't care what he does. I know I could get a job, as I've had commercial training in school, and I want to leave.

A. Y. W.

I believe your husband is wrong when he says he will not be obliged to contribute to his children's support, regardless of the circumstances of the separation.

Your letter indicates that you have the knowledge and background for a secretarial position. But are you sure that you can make proper provision for your children's care while you are working? And are you sure that you can provide better housing for them in a crowded "war boom" city than they now have? These are questions to ask yourself before taking a decisive step.

The thing to be remembered is the strain which working and traveling conditions places many of our men. I judge by his meal hours at home that your husband has a long trip to and from his working place. Naturally he is tired and on edge when he gets home, and "ready for an argument." It may be that improper diet is further fraying his temper. Nagging him under such circumstances would tend to drive him more and more to seek sympathy from other women.

Your income appears adequate to provide separate quarters, if you can find them. Possibly there is small place where there is ground for a garden in which your husband could find some relaxation and the children a means of recreation. A change would do you both good. Why not look for one, and if one can be found, put the question of moving up to your husband diplomatically? Your doctor might help you show the advantages not only to the children and you but also to your husband. Most men have strong affection for their children and want above all for them to grow up into healthy, happy surroundings.

Anything is worth trying if it offers a chance of preventing your family from being broken up, and of preventing a war worker's morale from being shattered.

Values His Hurt Pride

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a very unfortunate physical handicap—a club-foot, which has put me in the 4-F classification. The other day while I was pitching horse-shoes, hit an innocent bystander, which happened to be the family dog, and my brother-in-law said "What could you expect of him"? Almost immediately he apologized and said he had no thought of my foot when he made this remark. The dog wasn't seriously hurt, and everything would have passed off, if it were not for my morbid sensitiveness.

But I packed up that night, went over to my mother's house. My heart is hungry for my wife. I adore her, but I am always looking for insults whether they are meant or not. Do you think I'm a fool?

W. L. B.

You're made a fetish of your handicap and you prefer ministering to your pride rather than to your heart. Go back to your wife, and do some apologizing yourself. Bear in mind that Byron had a club-foot but it did not prevent the ladies from pursuing him all over Europe.

The Marry-Go-Round

Definition of a Friend

This is a kindly, friendly old world; and it's easy to find friends when you are down or in trouble, and need them. It is the successful men and women who are long on admirers but often short on real and sincere friends, and are sometimes the loneliest.

People don't seem to think that a man or woman who has success and money and applause could possibly need or want anything else—friendly affection and comradeship, for instance. And yet, there are many now shining in the limelight of publicity and so-called "popularity", who could heartily subscribe to the following:

Wanted—A Friend-in-Success!

Not a friend who will grieve for me if I fall—but one who will rejoice in my good luck and success.

Not one who would stand by me in time of trouble—but one who will stand for me in times of triumph and good fortune.

Not one who would lend me money if I needed it—but one who will give me courage and self-confidence and praise when I long for it!

Not one who knows all my faults and forgives them—but one who believes that I have a few talents and virtues, and admires them.

Not one who loves me "in spite" of what I am—but one who loves me because he thinks I'm all right!

Not one who will condole with me if I'm ever down—but one who will cheer me and applaud me when I'm on the up-and-up.

Not one will give me "advice for my own good"—but one who will occasionally, tell me how good I am!

Not one who will offer to "see me through"—but one who will give me the grit and nerve and self-reliance and optimism to see myself through!

Not one who would share my sorrows—but one who can endure my joys and be proud of my achievements.

Not one who will apologise for my mistakes and explain my blunders—but one who will boast of my attainments, and tell the world that I'm "wonderful"!

Not a charitable judge or a reformer—but a booster and a cheerleader!

Wanted—a Friend-in-Success!

(Signed) Everybody.

WEDDINGS

MOUNCEY—SPOONER

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Spooner, Hastings, on August 2, at twilight when Margaret McCormack (Betty), became the bride of LAC. James Edward Mouncey, R.C.A.F., Calgary, Alta., eldest son of Mr. Edward Mouncey and the late Mrs. Mouncey, Hastings, the Rev. W. E. Smythe, Warkworth, Ont., officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a pale pink floor length sheer dress with fitted basque and headdress of pink net, trimmed with Sweetheart roses and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Miss Ona Hoard was bridesmaid, wearing a rose floor-length sheer gown and carrying a Colonial bouquet of roses and baby's breath. Mr. Harold Fife was best man.

A reception followed the ceremony. The bride's mother received the guests wearing gold silk jersey dress with a corsage of deep pink roses.

MILLAR—RUSH

Standards of mauve and white gladioli with ferns formed an effective setting for a wedding in White's United Church, Bayside, August 4, when Ethel Annie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush, became the bride of LAC. Clare Millar, son of Mrs. Noyes and the late Mr. Clinton Millar, Belleville, Ont.

During the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. James Spence, Mrs. Verna Waldron rendered beautifully "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mrs. Clayton Ritz at the piano.

Gowned in a lovely floor-length dress of turquoise blue triple sheer with full-length sleeves and high rounded neckline, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her matching shoulder-length veil of English tulle fell from a rosette and she carried a bouquet of pink and cream roses, blue cornflowers and baby breath.

Miss Mary Rush, her sister's only attendant, was wearing a princess style old rose sheer gown with inserts of lace and a matching turban with shoulder-length veil. She carried yellow snapdragons, blue cornflowers with baby breath.

The groom was attended by his brother, Aircraftman Roy Millar. Messrs. Allan Rush and Murney Jeffery were ushers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home. The bride's mother received in a grey figured sheer ensemble with navy accessories and corsage of yellow and pink snapdragons. The groom's mother was attired in navy sheer trimmed with white and corsage of roses.

Later the happy couple left by train for Montreal. The bride donned a gold two-piece dress with matching accessories and corsage of roses. LAC. Millar and Mrs. Millar will make their home in St. John's, Que.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

The August meeting of Plainfield W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Harrison with an attendance off twenty-two. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs.. C. Hall. Mrs. N. D. Hall led in community singing. The minutes were then read and approved. A letter of thanks from Mrs. J. W. Hamilton for flowers received, was read. Reports from war work were given by Mrs. Fred Hall, Mrs. E. Denyes and Mrs. Prindle. War work collection for the month amounted to $11.25. A quilting was planned for the last week of August. Mrs. Prindle then gave the current events of the week. Mrs. Harrison, district president, gave a very interesting talk on "Agriculture." Miss Annie Hamilton took charge of the program. "Paper and Paper Making" was explained by Mrs. C. Marshall. Mrs. Norman Hall, Sr., gave a paper on "The Agricultural Representative." Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr., explained the process of tomato canning in the canning factory. Mrs. H. Palmer gave a reading on "The Potato Flea." The meeting was then closed and lunch served by the hostess and her helpers.

Women No Longer Need Fear Middle Age Physical Problems

Not many years ago the terror which faced most women of middle age was the change of life.

Various forms of treatment may be employed to give relief from these symptoms. Proper diet, mild exercise, regularity of living, and the development of hobbies and new interests are all of help. Certain mild sedative drugs, such as sodium bromide and phenobarital also may be given by the doctor to tide the patient over a bad time.

The most important drugs for treating the systoms which develop during the change of life are known as glandular extracts or estrogenic hormones. According to many physicians, these drugs should at first be given by injection under the skin. Later on the amount of the preparation used as well as the frequency of injection may be reduced and the patient may take a preparation known as stilbestrol by mouth. Finally, all of the injections can be stopped and the patient permitted to use only the stilbestrol, and still she will obtain complete relief from her symptoms.

About one out of every five women cannot take stilbestrol successfully because it causes unpleasant symptoms. Then the injections of estrogenic substances must be continued. Every now, and then it will be found that the hormone treatment will produce pain in the breasts or other disturbances. It is suggested that in these patients the use of glandular extract called testosterone propionate may be given by injection under the skin once a week as long as is necessary to overcome the trouble.

The use of hormones for the treatment of symptoms which occur during the change of life evidently does not produce a complete cure, so it may be necessary to continue their use over a long period of time. However, at intervals of about two weeks, the patient should stop taking the medicines for a week or two. It is also pointed out that the hormones should not be used by women who have had cancer.

There is no good reason why any woman should suffer from the discomforts of the change of life because there are preparations available which will relieve the unpleasant symptoms in practically all cases.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP). — Helpful hints to war-worried housewives from those in the know.

HOSIERY HELPS — Hang your hose; don't pin them on the clothesline. Squeeze them out of the rinse water; don't wring them. Dry them in a warm place; NOT in direct sunlight or over a radiator. Those are a few suggestions from the Price Board's consumer branch on stocking preservation. On the basis of a recent survey, the branch said that office workers are washing their hose out at night and putting them on again the next morning. This, says the branch, is fatal to their lifespan, for damp rayon hosiery is 50 per cent weaker than when absolutely dry. The branch advises a 36-hour drying period.

SPOTTING THE SPOT—There's many a time when a dress gets a trip to the cleaners because it's spotted. It may have been worn just once, but the spots spoil the spic and span look, so off it goes. Now, to relieve their over-taxed establishments, dry-cleaning men across the Dominion are offering to identify spots and tell how to remove them. The consumer branch suggests housewives avail themselves of this service, and try a job of home cleaning.

BLUEBERRY DOUGHBOYS — Plump blueberries are one of our most attractive native fruits. And from Laura Pepper, chief of the Agricultural Department's consumer section, comes a recipe for blueberry doughboys — a sumptuous, easily prepared dessert. Here it is: Put two cups of blueberries, 1/3 cup of sugar and 3/4 cup of water in a saucepan. Bring to boiling point and simmer five minutes. Meanwhile, mix and sift two cups all-purpose flour with two tablespoons sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt and four teaspoons baking powder. Cut in three tablespoons shortening and add 2/3 cup milk to make a soft dough. Drop this mixture by spoonfuls into the simmering blueberries, as you would dumplings, cover the saucepan and cook 15 minutes. Serve hot with the blueberries over the top.

KITCHEN SHORT-CUT — Eliminate the potato-peeling chore from your kitchen routine and your potatoes will make a really valuable contribution to the family meal—in Vitamin C and iron. Marion Harlow of the Health Department's nutrition services tells us that the skin of the potato acts as a sort of waterproof jocket, keeping the goodness where it belongs.

LIVING ALONE ON THE RATION—There have been suggestions that ration coupons, especially those for meat, be perforated so that rationed commodities could be purchased in smaller quantities by those who have small families or live alone. Prices Board officials have a word of explanation, pointing out that as it stands, the public, the banks and the ration administration share the burden of responsibility. If coupons were perforated, it would complicate the process of coupon flow-back. They also remind us that certain rationed meats may be bought at the rate of one-half pound per coupon, which should simplify the problem for those who don't want to buy too much at one time.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

She Has Qualms About Inviting Soldiers to Her Humble Home.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Two young men whom I met when I was on my vacation two years ago, are now stationed in an Army camp near my home. I have not seen them in the meantime, but we have corresponded. They are great friends, and I like them both, but from many things they told me I've always had a feeling that their social position is far higher than mine.

Yesterday they sent me a postcard signed by both saying that they would like to have a "reunion". I hesitate to invite them to come to my home, principally for the reason I've given above, and also, although my parents are very fine people, our home is very "modest" and our meals are served in the simplest way.

But my parents are very hospitable and have often said that they would like to make a habit of inviting two or three servicemen from the camp to mid-day dinner on Sunday. So they are urging me to "begin by inviting these two young men for Sunday dinner soon". I'm scared to death they may be critical of the way we live, or think I'm forward or presuming. What do you advise about this?

R. E.

The "inferiority complex" you're hugging to yourself is unworthy of you, and I'm confident your fears have no foundation. These young men had the discrimination to elect you as a friend, and to keep the friendship thriving by their letters. They will, I'm sure, be singing hallelujahs to you if you invite them to come to your home, and share the warm hospitality your mother and father are so eager to give them.

Think what it will mean to them to "reunite" with a friend; to talk with a welcoming mother and father; to see a simply but carefully-set table, to eat a home-cooked Sunday dinner! Don't deprive them of your friendliness and of the hospitality of your family and home . . . such precious things are "tops" with our boys so far away from home!

And if you'd like to go a step farther in your friendly thoughtfulness, ask them, as they're leaving, for the privilege of writing or having your mother write to their mothers, giving news of their well-being, telling their families how much you and your family enjoyed their visit at your home. That "higher social position" bugaboo will completely vanish then (if it ever really existed), and there will inevitably be the endearing appreciation of human heart for human heart. Get out your camera too, and take some snapshots of the young men to enclose in the letters.

Courtesy Tip

If in your volunteer War Work you work with committees or other groups, you'll undoubtedly have lots of temptations to gossip; to pass on what you've "heard" about this-one and that-one; to criticise the work or methods or suggestions of committee-heads or co-workers. Be wise, be a good sport . . .tenaciously steer clear of these dangerous activities.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.:

Q. I secured my No. 2 ration book in Toronto and am now living in Kingston. Do I have to send to Toronto for my No. 3 ration book?

A. No. Fill in and sign the card in your No. 2 book and take the book intact to a distributing station in Kingston when the No. 3 books are issued late this month. A recorder will issue you with a new book.

Q. I have been in the habit of giving my unused meat coupons to my butcher. Is that the right thing to do?

A. Of course not. You yourself should destroy them as soon as they have lost their validity.

Q. Someone told me that I could use all my canning sugar coupons now regardless of the month stamped on them. Is that right?

A. Yes. All canning sugar coupons are valid at any time until September 30.

Q. There are a whole lot of things about the rentals regulations that I still do not understand. I want to obey the law but it is hard for me to know what I should do.

A. Call at or write to the nearest

A. Call at or write t othe nearest office of fthe Wartime Prices and Trade Board. There is a rentals representative on the staff of each of these offices.

Q. There seems to be an increasing shortage of canned goods in the stores. What is the reason?

A. Wholesale stocks of canned fruits and vegetables have been frozen until further notice so that a sufficient supply may be available for the armed forces and the civilian population next winter, when fresh fruits and vegetables will not be so plentiful. People are expected to make use of fresh supplies during the summer season.

Q. I went to a garage to have my car repaired and the proprietor not only asked to see my gasoline ration book but said I would have to wait until more essential vehicles received attention. Was he right in taking such action?

A. Yes, there is priority on motor car repairs, and no garage may start work on the repair of any motor vehicle until it has recorded the category and number of the gasoline ration book.

Should Use Water For Cooling Milk

The speed at which milk can be cooled depends upon the rate at which the heat contained in the milk can be passed on to something else which will absorb heat. Some materials absorb heat much more rapidly than others. Water, for example, will cook milk 20 times faster than air. Air absorbs heat very slowly. Consequently if a can of warm milk is placed in a refrigerated room where the air temperature is at freezing point, it will be about 12 hours before the temperature of the milk has fallen to 50 degrees Fahrenheit. This explains why attempts to cool milk in winter by setting the cans in a snow-bank or exposing them to outdoor temperature often leads to trouble.

Because milk must give its heat to surrounding water, the larger the volume of water and the lower its temperature, the quicker the milk will be cooled, and the cooling will be still more rapid when the water is kept in motion.

Cardinals End Rip Sewell's Eleven-Game Winning Streak By Beating Pirate Hurler 8-3

Slow Baller Put Together Longest Streak of Any Pitcher

REDS CREEP UP

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rip Sewell's 11-game winning streak for Pittsburgh Pirates ended abruptly last night as first place St Louis Cardinals pounded out an 8-3 triumph.

The 35-year-old Sewell and his tantalizing slow ball had handcuffed National League hitters since June 9 when he lost a 4-3 game to the Cards at Sportsman's Park. In his next start he beat Chicago Cubs, 4-2, and followed with victories over Cincinnati, Chicago, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, New York and Boston for the longest winning streak of the year.

His bid for his 18th victory came to grief through the hitting of Stan Musial and Ray Sanders, backing up Max Lanier's five-hit pitching. Musial, league-hitting swatsmith, whacked out for hits in four times at bat while Sanders drove in five runs with a double and triple.

Cincinnati climbed within 1 1-2 games of the second place Pirates by again beating the Cubs, 9-7. The Reds piled up a big lead, but Ray Starr and Clyde Shoun couldn't hold it and had to call on Joe Beggs to stamp out a ninth inning cub rally.

Hammered Without Mercy

Hammered without mercy on their western trip, Brooklyn Dodgers returned to Ebbets Field and absorbed their eighth straight defeat, a 4-3, 10-inning setback at the hands of the Braves. Charley Workman won the game with a three-run homer in the top of the 10th.

Whit Wyatt, Brooklyn starting pitcher, and Manager Leo Durocher were thumbed out of the game by Umpire Jocko Conlan for protesting too heatedly that Kirby Farrell's sixth inning double, that tied the score at 1-1, was foul. Les Webber came in and was the losing pitcher.

New York Yankees started a long road trip by taking a 4-0 shutout at the hands of Roger Wolff, knuckle ball artist of the Athletics. Pete Suder's sixth inning homer was all Wolff needed to win.

Held to Two Hits

Johnny Niggeling of St Louis Browns held Cleveland to only two hits, but dropped a tough 1-0 decision to Allie Reynolds, who twirled a three-hitter. Niggeling made the mistake of hitting Oris Hockett with a pitched ball in the fourth. Roy Cullenbine singled Hockett to third, from where he scored as Jeff Heath hit into a double play.

Detroit handed Orval Grove of the White Sox his second defeat of the year, 6-0, as Rudy York socked his 15th homer of the season.

Dutch Leonard won his eighth game in pitching Washington to a 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The Phillies beat New York Giants, 7-4, by virtue of Ron Northey's two homers and Bill Lee's relief pitching. The Giants, however, won the replay of the disputed June 13 game, originally won by the Phils, 6-3, but ordered by League President Ford Frick to be resumed as of the inning with the score tied at 3-3. The Giants won, 4-3, when Newt Kimball issued four bases on balls, forcing in the winning run.

11-RUN SPLURGE GIVES TIP TOPS WIN OVER LACHINE

Toronto Club Will Meet Army for Congress Championship

SCORE IS 13-2

Hamilton, Aug. 7—(CP)—An 11-run splurge in the eighth inning gave Toronto Tip Tops a 13-2 victory over Lachine R.C.A.F. last night, moving the Toronto Club into the National Congress Baseball Canadian Championship final against London Army. The Army qualified with a 9-3 victory over Hamilton Coops in the first game of a doubleheader here.

The final will be played at Toronto today with Montreal and Hamilton playing a consolation game.

Tip Tops, 1942 champions, and R.C.A.F. played an even game for seven innings with the Fliers taking a one-run lead in the opening frame. Tip Tops tied the count in the third and moved ahead 2-1 in the fourth. The game continued scoreless until the eighth inning when Lachine notched their second run for a 2-2 deadlock.

Loose fielding by the Fliers settled the issue in the last half of the eighth and Tip Tops rolled in their 11-run spree.

Jack Morris carried the brunt of the pitching task for Montreal but fell apart in the eighth and was relieved by Driscoll. Al Yarnell went the route for Toronto and gave up six hits to the R.C.A.F. team. Both teams were loose in the field and seven errors were marked up against each club.

London Army was more than a match for the Co-Ops and behind the three-hit pitching of Max Samuely claimed their 9-3 victory. The soldiers drew six hits each off Anderson and MacDonald with Anderson retiring in the third inning.

Army held mastery throughout the frame with one run in the second, three in the fourth, two in the sixth and three more in the eighth. The Co-Ops netted their score in the seventh when they collected three hits.

Hamilton had hoped to have Sal Maglie, former International League hurler, on the mound but he failed to show up.

BOBBY COOMBS WINS 6 STRAIGHT AS A PITCHER

Blanks Montreal Royals 3-0 Although Touched for Nine Hits

LEAFS WIN 9-2

By the Association Press

There'll be no more catchers, infielders or outfielders masquerading as pitchers in the International League.

President Frank J. Shaughnessy ruled today that starting Sunday managers in his loop will be permitted to send to the mound only those players whose names appear on the official roster as pitchers. He said the restriction was being imposed because some games this season have been turned in farces through the use of catchers, outfielders and infielders in the mound.

He gave Baltimore's 19-7 victory over Rochester on July 29 as an example. In that fray, Manager Peper Martin of the Red Wings took up the pitching duties in the third and walked five of the first six men to face him. Martin later was relieved by pitcher-outfielder Paul Wargo and catcher Jerry Burmeister.

All the pitchers were bona fide last night with stubby Bobby Coombs of Jersey City Giants especially effective. He won his sixth straight by shutting out Montreal Royals, 3-0, although the Canadians pounded him for nine hits.

In other games, Buffalo and Syracuse divided a twin bill, the Chiefs taking the first, 6-3, and the Bisons the 10-inning aftermath 4-3; Newark edged out Rochester, 7-6, and Toronto smeared Baltimore, 9-2.

Jim Tyack, newcomer in the Toronto outfield, further endeared himself to his new mates by smacking a home run in the Leafs' easy victory.

LONGSON READY TO MEET KATAN

Palermo Assassin Says He Will Take Champion in His Stride

John Katan, the Palermo ring assassin, didn't have much trouble beating "Toar" Morgan in their first meeting, but the Palermo farmer in his anxiety to beat the popular ex-marine did not gamble on a title bout with "Wild Bill" Longson so quickly. Katan is recognized as one of the top-notch Canadian wrestlers and although he has been gunning for "Whipper" Watson's Empire Crown, Katan by-passed that urge to accept a bout with the world champion at the Hume Arena next Wednesday night.

Palermo John has a perfect right to be in the same ring with the Salt Lake Gity title-holder if for no other reason than he once held the Empire crown. Since losing the headgear to Watson, however, Katan has resorted to rough-house tactics until today he has earned for himself the name "Killer Katan", a moniker "Toar" Morgan respects to this day.

However, "Wild Bill" Longson has successfully defended his world heavyweight wrestling crown for over a year now and merely smiled when Promoter Tunney signed him to meet Katan. "I've heard about the Canadian farmer rube and take it from me if it's rough rasslin' he wants, well this Utah state laddie will see he is accommodated in Belleville," promised Longson. Then there are the usual preliminaries for good measure to a title bout card.

DEACONS OUSTED FROM PLAYDOWNS IN GIRLS' LEAGUE

Schedule Finishes With Two Tied for First and Two for Third

SWACOS WIN GAME

A two-way tie for both first and second positions and the third and fourth slots, is the way the Belleville girls' softball schedule wound up last evening as the result of the playing of the SWACO-Deacons postponed game which saw the former team defeat the yellow-clad girls to oust them from the playdowns.

Deacons had to win the game to gain a place in the league playdowns but went down to defeat before a heavier hitting and niftier fielding team on the night's play. The score was 12-7 with home runs accounting for considerably more than one-half the counters.

As a result the league playoffs will get under way on Monday evening with Reliance and Bell-Sargent playing a sudden-death game to decide the third and fourth positions, while on Wednesday night Bristol and SWACO will tee off to decide the first and second playoff positions. Next Friday evening the first and fourth teams will play the first game of the league semi-finals.

As for last evening's game which saw Deacons eliminated from any possible chance of gaining a niche in the playdowns, it must be said that the better team won. Pauline Schrieder was hit ran lustily by the SWACO nine and scored in every inning but the seventh as the Deacon fielders played rather listless ball at times to present the winners with runs.

A Hitters' Night.

It was purely and simply a hitters' night with eight homers being conked over the Pinnacle street fence, four of them to each team. Irene Colden proved herself the most prolific in knocking round-trippers conking three over the fence, while Jean Corneal for the losers was a close second with two round trips. Other homers were hit by Joyce Woodhouse and Gladyse Pomeroy for the losers, while Dot Rowbotham got the odd one for Swaco.

SWACO's went ahead in the first inning and were never headed as they chased six runs across in the second to build up a commanding lead. Despite a concerted rally by Deacons in the later innings they could not just quite overcome the lead.

Fielding gems were provided by M. Ronsky who took a couple off the iron railing to rob Deacons of what appeared like sure hits, while shortstop M. Allin also playing a good fielding game. "Stewie" Stewart played spasmodically for Deacons, making good plays, but committing a couple of errors in the pinch that gave SWACO runs.

Deacons—Stewart ss, Pomeroy 2b, Sword 3b, Corneal 1b, Kellar cf, Woodhouse c, Callery lf, Green rf, Schrieder p.

Score by innings:

SWACO	1 6 1 1 1 2 0	—12
Deacons	0 1 0 2 2 1 1	— 7

Umpires—Young and Bawden.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Aug. 7—(CP)—Baseball coach Flt. Lt. Frank Doughty, of Toronto is keeping a watchful eye on Leading Aircraftman Joseph Krakauskas, of Hamilton, Ont. Joe, former major leaguer with Washington and Cleveland, awaits posting as a radio mechanic to a night fighter squadron, but in the meantime is not letting his pitching arm go to seed.

The R.C.A.F. has already had a baseball match with the U.S. Army Air Force this year and emerged with a negative decision, 7-2. The teams appeared in a "Wings for Victory" exhibition at Sutton, Surrey, and attracted 5,000 persons. The first ball pitched was later auctioned off and brought £50.

Leading Aircraftman Jack Whitby, of London, Ont., was on the mound for the Canucks with Flt. Lt. Fred Alexander, of Regina, who once caught for Iowa State University, on the receiving end.

Cpl. Red Groves, Stratford, Ont., played first base, Flt. Lt. Bob Wallace, Winnipeg, second; FO. Walt Battersby, Hamilton, short stop and FO. Cliff Dolan, Ottawa, third base. Outfielders were Sgt. C. A. Windsor, Westmount, Que., Cpl. Jack Heenan, Cobourg, Ont. and LAC. George Alexander Vancouver.

Another member of Canadian sports' famous "House of Dutton" is cropping up in the news these days, but not in the sports news this time. He is PO. William Dutton, of Winnipeg, nephew of Mervyn Dutton, National Hockey League president and former major league manager and star. Dutton has been riding Spitfires in the Malta sector. In 1935 he was a member of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, when they nosed out the Hamilton Tigers in the Dominion rugby football finals.

Flt. Lt. Walter Martin, erstwhile Canadian Davis cupper, and Canada's No. 1 player, has been featured in numerous Saturday Red Cross tennis exhibitions in England and gets a big bang out of it. When partnered with Henry Billington recently, he split sets with Pat Hughes, the British Davis Cup doubles player, and Ellesworth Davenport, former United States ranking player, at the famous old Queen's Club. Hughes is one of England's greatest doubles players, and was a big factor in Great Britain winning the Davis Cup in the heyday of Perry and Austin. Hughes still displayed much of his canny doubles touch. Martin and Billington carried Hughes and John Olliff, another Davis Cup player, to five sets at Newport, Wales, in another Red Cross exhibition which drew 5,000 people. Bruce Harrison, R.C.A.F., has been an occasional practice opponent of Martin's. They both claim Toronto Tennis Club as their home courts.

FO. George MacSween used to play professional baseball for the Glace Bay Miners in the Maritime League before joining the R.C.A.F. George qualified as a pilot in the summer of 1940, only to lose the sight of one eye in an accident. In Britain he has served as a flying control officer, and since going to the Middle East almost two years ago has been an air transport officer.

R.C.N. Stages First Track And Field Meet Overseas

(By The Canadian Press)

The Royal Canadian Navy staged its first track and field meet overseas, reported last night from "a Scottish port." A 27-event program was run off.

High aggregate winner was Ab. Robert Lewis of British Columbia who scored firsts in three jumping events and finished second in two other contests. Both sprints were captured by Sub-Lt. George Orr of Toronto while the winner of the mile was Stoker Lloyd Laporte of Windsor, Ont., who came from behind to finish in five minutes, 45 seconds. Almost immediately Laporte ran off with the 880-yard event in two minutes, 43 seconds. Laporte was high-point man for the engineering branch. Another aspirant to gain two victories was Signalman J. Scott of Winnipeg, the events being the 440 and sack race.

A feature was a tug-of-war in which Canadian nursing sisters, based at the R.C.N. Hospital, competed against British Wrens. The heavier British girls defeated the Canadians in two straight pulls.

A protest that Detroit talent had been given preference over other U.S. golfing stars in the selections for Ryder Cup team competition now under way at the Motor City was made last night at Philadelphia by Leo Diegel, member of the Professional Golfers Association's Ryder Committee, who said he had not been consulted.

The first dead heat of the Grand Circuit season was recorded yesterday at Old Orchard Beach, Me., when Frances Guy and Baden Hall over finished even in the first dash of the 11 bar trot, with the former finally winning the event. Carty Nagle, a long shot, won the $2,500 Maine Pacing Derby in three straight heats.

The Fergus team, recently added to the loop, took the lead in the Guelph and District Soccer League yesterday by defeating Netherlands Army 3-1 at Guelph. S. Blackburn, J. Patterson and J. Duffy scored for the winners.

As the leading batter of all organized baseball in 1942, outfielder Jimmy Grudis of the Toronto Leafs will be presented with the Louisville slugger trophy during the Baltimore-Toronto game at Maple Leaf Stadium next Thursday. Grudis earned the award with a mark of .418 while playing with Thomasville in the North Carolina State League.

Jockey Johnny Longdon, formerly of Cardston, Alta., and one of the leading riders of the U.S. turf, was set down for 10 days commencing Monday when his mount, Esterita, crossed over in front of the field coming into the home stretch in the third race of the Saratoga meeting at Belmont yesterday. The second horse, Showtown, was declared the winner at odds of $78.80.

Gunder Haegg has promised to go after the U.S. two-mile mark of 8:47.8 —in his next-to-last appearance in America at Withrow Stadium, Cincinnati, tonight, with the field strung out ahead of him to give him somebody to go after. Before he returns to Sweden, Haegg will start in a mile handicap at New York next Wednesday.

Jake Powell made his major league debut with Washington 12 years ago. Last night owner Clark Griffith of the Senators announced Powell is returning to the team in exchange for outfielder John (Red) Marion and cash in a deal with St. Paul of the American Association where Jake is playing the outfield and batting 270.

A five-way deadlock for first place, necessitating a playoff Monday, was the result yesterday of the 36-hole Quebec Victory Bond open golf tourney at Summerlea, Montreal. Five who turned in 149 comprised Phil Farley, Toronto amateur and Bob Gray of Toronto, Gerry Proulx and Red McKenzie of Montreal and Rudulph Huot, Royal Quebec, pros.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

New York, (AP)— A broadcast of the Nazi Transocean Agency picked up by the U.S. Intelligence Service last night contained announcement of the resignation of Vittorio Mussolini as President of the European Professional Boxing Association. Vittorio is the son of Benito, former Il Duce.

Toronto, (CP)—The largest field in 15 years, including 15 rinks from the United States, has entered the Provincial Lawn Bowling tournament starting here Monday. Fifty-seven of the 102 rinks are from Toronto Clubs.

Winnipeg, (CP)—Right-winger of the New York Rangers in the N.H.L. last season, Bob Kirkpatrick of Winnipeg has signed a new contract—with the Canadian army. Previous to last winter, Kirkpatrick had played with the New York Rovers and the Flin Flon bombers.

Dublin, (AP)—Jack Doyle, Irish heavyweight boxing champion, opened a comeback drive here last night and was knocked down twice before he was able to cut loose in the third round to knock out Butcher Howell.

St. Thomas, (CP)—Three crack athletes are included in the team which will represent the St. Thomas R.C.A.F School at the district meet at London, Aug 11. They are Herb Follet, former all-round titleholder of Westmount High School, Montreal; Cecil Peet of Yorkton, Sask., former Intercollegiate high jump champion, and Russell Phillips of Vancouver who ran third in the mile at the last British Empire team trials.

Welland, (CP) — Welland strenghtened its hold on second place in the Niagara Senior Baseball race by winning its second game in as many nights. On the Crowland Diamond Friday night, the Union Jacks bowed to the Steelmen 7-5.

LESSON NO. 140

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Don't get impatient with me, gals and fellers. Here is the last of the current series: Raises and second round bids by the opening bidder after a simple (non-jump) response by partner.

Maybe I repeated myself in spots. But in each case there was at least one new angle. Let's throw the main ideas into a few sentences and give them a quick once over.

An opening bid of one in a suit shows, among other things, five suit tricks, of which four are high cards (no-trump tricks).

Bids follow the order in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. Any other simple response is not forcing.

Each raise shows another suit trick. Each voluntary bid in no-trump shows another no-trump trick.

Strange as it may seem to experts, that's about all there is to a second round bid by the opening bidder. So, give that dope a tryout with a hand.

You have this hand:

♠ K 9
♥ A K 8 4
♦ A Q 5 2
♣ 9 6 3

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. You have six suit tricks and five no-trump tricks. So you have an unshown suit trick and an unshown no-trump trick.

Suppose partner responds with one spade or one no-trump. Your second round bid is a takeout to two diamonds. Having raised, you consume your sixth trick.

Suppose partner's first response was two clubs. Your second round bid also would be a takeout to two diamonds. But you did not raise. So you still have an unused trick. It may be used later, if necessary.

Suppose partner's first response was two diamonds. Now you have no takeout suit. But you have adequate support for an assist. Raise to three diamonds. That consumes your sixth trick.

Partner's spirit reaches bottom when you raise and haven't gottem.

Washington Spotlight

(By J. F. SANDERSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 6 (CP) — The time is within sight when some portions of American industry will begin to shift from production of war supplies to production of goods for civilian use. At first this will centre in texties, shoes and other products not made of metal.

As far as production is concerned, the United States is showing the world something few people believed a nation could accomplish—it is making war on a scale measured in dollar terms at ninety billion dollars a year and, at the same time, turning out civilian goods on a scale calculated to permit a retail trade of sixty billion dollars.

The vastness and efficiency of this production machine will provide a major problem in the peace, when some formula will be required to maintain its pace and distribute its products but, meanwhile, it is the deciding factor in Allied war effort.

FOX — HE NO SMELL

Two weeks before American troops landed on the Aleutian Island of Attu, a low-flying reconnaissance plane spotted a blue fox ambling along, taking its time, obviously unconcerned about human smells and human distractions.

It was decided to trust the fox, to launch one of the invading forces through the valley he was travelling, on the theory there would be no Japanese nearby.

The plan was put into operation and the fox was right—there were no Japanese in that section of the rocky island, giving the Americans an initial success that had considerable to do with the ultimate victory over the Japanese.

Ten Congressional teams, each with a Republican and a Democrat, are touring the country these days urging public support for the Senate resolution declaring that the United States now favors the establishment of United Nations machinery for the suppression—by force, if necessary—of any future attempt at military aggression by any nation.

OUR FLAG PROBLEM AGAIN

Because Canada has no distinctive flag, the men who plot the Sicilian campaign on newsmaps for American newspapers are having difficulty in deciding how to represent the Canadian 1st. Division. The British Union Jack does for the British 8th. Army and the Stars and Stripes for the American 7th. Army, but almost anything is used to symbolize Maj.-Gen. Guy Simmond's men.

The red ensign, bearing the Canadian coat of arms, Canada's unofficial flag, is used on some maps bu this reporter has seen the Canadian army symbolized by a white flag with the Union Jack in the upper left-hand corner, a red flag with only the Canadian coat of arms on it and, a distinctive touch, a red flag with a constellation of stars on it, somewhat resembling the Australian flag.

TO THE DOGS

By the end of 1943, the United States army, coast guard and marine corps will have 32,000 dogs at work as sentries, first aid, scouting, beach patrol and as sled and pack dogs. Most of them are German shepherds, Doberman pinchers, boxers and retrievers. Entrance requirements are stiff and only 100 out of 250 dogs pass them. Practically all are donated.

President Roosevelt confesses he is "somewhat bewildered by conflicting statements that I see in the press," first that the war will end in the Pacific in 1943, then that the American navy is preparing to fight in the Pacific until 1949. He didn't mention the sources for the two predictions—Admiral William F. Halsey, the optimistic one; Vice-Admiral Frederick J. Horne, on the pessimistic side.

When a new Associated Press reporter for the State of New York introduced himself to Rep. Hamilton J. Fish for the first time, the Congressman replied, almost in one breath:

"How do you do. I want to make a statement."

Tweed

Tweed.— Mr. and Mrs. Roy Christie and two sons of Barrie, visited for a few days with the latter's mother, Mrs. Lena Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Hall accompanied them back to Barrie for a short visit.

AT THE BELLE

James Craig is introduced by Marsha Hunt to his prospective mother-in-law, Katherine Alexander, in M.G.M.'s "The Human Comedy," now at the Belle Theatre. Mickey Rooney, Frank Morgan, Fay Bainter, Donna Reid, Van Johnson and John Craven are some of the people in this stirring story which will be long remembered.

AT THE CAPITOL

Deborah Kerr as a Norwegian patriot and Francis L. Sullivan as a local Nazi dictator in "The Avenger," coming to the Capitol Sunday midnight with the added comedy "Blonde Inspiration."

9 Million Tons Shipping Lost By Axis During War

London, Aug. 7. — (CP)—During the 46 months of the war up to June 30, a total of 9,045,683 gross tons of German and Italian shipping were captured, sunk or damaged by surface ships, submarines, aircraft or mines of the Allied Navies, the Admiralty announced today.

The totals do not include losses inflicted by the Russian navy and airforce.

The announcement said also that total German and Italian merchant shipping sunk or damaged had increased by more than 2,863,000 tons during the past year.

ON FRESH RAIDS

London, Aug. 7.—(CP)—A large force of planes, apparently heavy bombers, thundered southward across the English Channel early today and the Nazi High Command said some bombs were dropped over western Germany "without causing damage"

Specific targets were not immediately disclosed.

Britain had its sixth raid free night in a row. Not a single air raid casualty has been reported now in 23 days.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his appetite, and I said, Hay pop, you ought to see how good I'm getting with my box of magic tricks. I practice and practice every day and I can fool all the fellows easy and none of them can guess how I do it, I said.

Any kind of serious practice is probably never wasted, but just a same I'd advize you not to devote all your efforts to a single talent, pop said. I've heard of men who spent their entire childhood learning to take a bysickel apart and put it together again, but when they grew up they didn't want to do a thing except eat steak and potatoes. In fact I knew a child myself who was always either giving imitations or practicing imitations, and now he's a full grown man and cant imitate a sole to save his neck and doesn't even know how to act natural. But if a boy becomes many-sided by diversifying his talents, maybe he'll turn out to be a really successful man like Leonardo Davintchy or Benjamin Franklin, he said.

But G, pop, how about Skinny Martin's uncle? I said, and pop said I never heard of him.

Well, he never has a job or any money, so they have to leave him stay there free whenever he comes around, but just a same you ought to see all the different things he can do, I said. He can make his voice sound just like it was coming up out of the cellar, and he can put a knott in a handerchiff and make it come undone just by pulling both ends, and he can eat a whole hard boiled egg without choking and blow smoke rings at the same time, and he can take a dive and slide half ways across Skinny's living room floor on his stummick, and lots of other things, so how about him not being successful, I said.

Well, maybe sheer luck plays an important part in most lives after all, pop said.

Which maybe it does.

New Delhi—Early in April, the tonnage of bombs dropped by the R.A.F. on Japanese-occupied Burma since the first of this year passed the thousand mark.

New Delhi—Three Indian members of the Indian Army have won the V.C. in this war.

London—Nine out of ten unmarried British women between the ages of 19 and 45 are in the uniformed forces, munitions factories or essential war work.

"Follow the Band"

Crowded with headline entertainers, Universal's gala "Follow the Band" comes Monday to the McCarthy Theatre. Rhythm, romance and revelry are said to be happily combined in the new picture which boasts 14 headline players and featured acts in its talent array. Topping the performers list are Leo Carrillo, Leon Errol, Mary Beth Hughes, Eddie Quillan and Anne Rooney.

The plot, described as highly diverting, was taken from a Collier's Magazine story by Richard English and deals humorously with the plight of an amateur trombone virtuoso from the country who, through a fluke, plunges headlong into fame and fortune on Broadway.

Frances Langford, Alvino Ray and The King Sisters and Ray Eberle appear prominently in gay musical sequences. Other well known performers include The Bombardiers, Hilo Hattie, The King's Men and Skinnay Ennis and the Groove Boys.

Ten popular songs, some new and some standard favorites, are featured. Recent hits are "Spellbound" and "Swingin' the Blues." Additional outstanding tunes are "So What Do You Want To Make Those Eyes At Me For?" "Don't Tread On The Tail Of Me Coat," "My Melancholy Baby," and "My Devotion." Heard also are "Rosie The Riveter," "The Army Air Corps, "Hilo Hattie," and "Aint Misbehavin'".

Samuel S. Hinds and Bob Mitchum, well known character actors have important roles in "Follow the Band."

2nd feature attraction is "Two Tickets to London," starring Michele Morgan and Alan Curtiss.

AT THE BELLE

"The Human Comedy"

Tender and great is the story of human people as brought to the screen in the M-G-M film, "The Human Comedy". Eagerly awaited by many, the story, written by William Saroyan, is now playing at the Belle theatre. In it Mickey Rooney gives the outstanding dramatic performance of his long career, leaving behind him the unique characterization of Andy Hardy in the series of the same name.

"The Human Comedy" deals with family life in a typical American small town. The Macauley family, for instance, is poor in worldly good, but spiritually rich. Ma Macauley, portrayed by Fay Bainter, is a widow and her oldest son, Marcus, played by Van Johnson, is a private in the army. Mickey Rooney is the second son. He gets a messenger's job in the local telegraph office, working after school, so that he can help out at home. His work calls for him to meet people—all sorts of people—and to get to know them. He learns much from Frank Morgan, who gives a telling account of himself as an old broken down telegrapher, and James Craig, the philosophical manager of the office.

Runs the Gamut of Emotions

There are comic moments, tragic incidents and tender love scenes, all deftly interwoven in this inspiring story. Craig handles the romantic angle effectively as Marsha Hunt, daughter of the rich banker, plays up to him as "her man."

Clarence Brown, who has a long list of successes to his credit, has directed and produced with a heartwarming touch. Additionally there is an inspiring musical score.

Jenkins Newest Discovery

Other members of the Macauley family include Donna Reed and Jack Jenkins, filmdom's newest child discovery. Dorothy Morris is seen as Marcus' sweetheart, the girl who lives next door. Moving characterizations are given by Mary Nash as the sympathetic school teacher, Rita Quigley as the girl of Mickey's dreams, Darryl Hickman, Barry Nelson, Henry O'Neill, Katharine Alexander, Ann Ayars and John Craven.

The Canadian Paramount News and a clever M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Red Hot Riding Hood" precede the feature attraction. Like all great pictures to be best appreciated "The Human Comedy" must be seen from the beginning. We sincerely urge you to do so. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday. The engagement ends on Wednesday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"BLONDE INSPIRATION"

It must be wonderful to be a comedian. Charles Butterworth, who rates caresses from the glamorous Mary Martin in "Blonde Inspiration", starting Sunday midnight at the Capitol, has a record of which any matinee idol would be proud.

Although definitely no glamour boy himself, his last two screen appearances before "Blonde Inspiration" found him the object of affections from Paulette Goddard and Carole Landis. In addition, various pictures during his career have seen him romancing with such stars as Jeanette MacDonald, Margaret Sullavan, Lilian Harvey, the pert little English star, and Una Merkel.

Butterworth has never actually won the girl, but probably comes the closest to it in "Blonde Inspiration". Miss Martin, who played Clark Gable's dance-hall sweetheart in "Boom Town", plays Butterworth's beautiful but dumb girl friend right up to and including the final scene.

"THE AVENGERS"

With the war reaching new heights of fury and the underground movement throughout Europe playing ever more important roles in this global struggle Paramount has crashed through with one of the most exciting pictures of the season in "The Avengers", a powerful romance with the battle of the Atlantic and the struggle against the Nazi invaders of Norway as background. The film opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

"The Avengers" shows in brilliant fashion how the heroic peoples under the Nazi tyranny are striking back at their oppressors. According to critics, it's a picture that should be on everybody's "must" list.

The Canadian Universal News completes the bill.

Marmora and District

Marmora — Miss Jean Allore of Belleville, is visiting Misses Mary and Hilda Hughes.

Mrs. E. Kehoe and two children of New York are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. English.

Mrs. K. Price and her daughter Miss Marguerite Price of Toronto are visiting Mrs. James Brady.

Mr. James E. Bailey is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Born on Monday, August 2nd., at Mrs. Lawlor's nursing home, to Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, a son.

Mrs. (Dr.) H. M. Jones and daughters, Muriel and Olive of Toronto are occupying their cottage at Crowe Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Parker and daughter Mary of Toronto are visiting the former's mother Mrs. G. Deacon at Crowe Lake.

Judge Hopkins and son of Cleveland are occupying the Misses Sullivan's cottage at Crowe Lake.

Ronald Parker of Toronto, is visiting his grandfather, Judge Parker at Crowe Lake.

JAP TROOPS REPULSED

Chungking, Aug. 6 —(Delayed)—(AP)—Japanese forces in northern Chekiang Province which advanced against Chinese troops by way of Wucheng and Hsinshih were repulsed after losing more than 100 men, a Chinese communique said today.

Another detachment of Japanese troops from a Kwangtung unit was repulsed in an attempted advance on Kucheng northwest of Holmon on July 26 and 27, the bulletin added.

Hour of Grace

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 29

That evening she spent with her mother. About eleven they went upstairs together, said an affectionate good-night and Meegan closed the door of her room behind her. And before she switched on the lamp beside her bed she went to the window and parted the curtains and looked for the lights in Clare's house. There were none. The house was dark. Odd, for Clare to go away and leave her car in the garage and all the windows in the house open, knowing the storms were sudden and frequent and severe. And if Miss Willoughby were there, she would have a light. And even if both Clare and Miss Willoughby were away, the servants who lived on the third floor of the house would have lights burning. But there were no lights. The particular place in the familiar landscape that she had identified as Clare's house was a black patch over a dead eye.

Since she had to pick up the children at eleven, she left the house at ten the next morning and drove slowly to Clare's. The chill of the morning giving a premonition of autumn, she had at the last moment put on a warm red sweater over her white cotton frock. The weather would be changeable from now on, she thought, but it was a perfect day for tennis and golf and it would be warmer by noon for those who wanted to swim.

She thought, I'm thinking of the weather and the children and how happy Erica and Toby must be in the morning because I don't want to think of Clare, because I don't want to see her. To her I'm a girl who has done nothing for herself, a failure. She despises me for my lack of aggressiveness, my obscurity, my acceptance of things as they are. She doesn't know how aggressive I've had to be and how I've rebelled against things as they are. And to me she's like some bright hard metal. And yet I think of her in movement, always in movement and touching things, touching them but not feeling them. But I won't see her again after today unless we meet by chance. I wonder why Toby wanted me to see her. He said I'd find out a few things for myself. There's nothing I want to find out now. She can't hurt him and she can't hurt me. And she's only a woman, only a woman.

If there was any difference in the appearance of the house between yesterday afternoon and this morning it was that it looked more forlorn and neglected in the brighter light and with the ripped green awning now streaming tatters.

She stopped the car and sat a moment, filled with a nameless dread, a fear she could not define. Why was it not perfectly simple to walk to the front door and ring and to be received by one of Clare's servants? Why was it not as simple as that? This was childish nonsense she thought. Sheer, childish nonsense. What did it matter if Clare made her feel small and gauche and a failure this last time?

Yet it was with a decided effort she got out of the car and walked around the silent house through grass tall and wet. It was with an even greater effort that she stepped up on the porch. The door was open and the living room stretched wide and handsome before her and deserted. She heard nothing. There was only unnatural silence in a house with the windows and doors open.

She put her finger to the bell, hearing the loud shrill ring penetrate the silence. She waited but no one came. There were none of the familiar sounds that usually result from the ringing of a bell and the possibility of receiving a guest. No sounds from the kitchen or from upstairs. No sounds of any kind.

She rang the bell and waited and rang it once more and waited. Clearly there was no one here. No one in the house with the windows open and the garage doors open. The strangeness of it bewildered her. She tried to solve it but her thoughts always returned to the open door which revealed the hospitable living room. Somehow it seemed to her that the room was asking her to come in. Perhaps Clare was asleep. With the door open? Where were the servants? It was unlikely for her to give all of them a holiday. I'll come back later she thought and she turned and walked down two steps and stopped. She could not leave. Returning to the open door she peered into the living room again and once more the room seemed to ask her to come in. She could not leave until she knew why this was strange and unnatural. Had Toby known she would find only silence? Was that why he had asked her to come? Then he knew she could not leave. She was doing exactly what he expected her to do.

Quietly, fearfully, she opened the screened door and stepped inside, seeing that the clock above the brick fireplace had stopped. Even the clock was silent. Then she began to walk through the rooms where a light veil of dust had settled over the furniture and the few potted plants here and there were dying of thirst. She swung open the door that led to the kitchen. There was a soiled glass into which milk had been poured and drunk. Just one soiled glass and a small crystal ashtray into which had been squashed a lipstick-stained cigarette.

Returning to the living room she stood a few moments debating whether or not to go upstairs. She felt guilty at trespassing and at the same time a terrible urgency not to leave.

She walked slowly up the steps. There were five bedrooms on the second floor. She looked in four, heeding their lived-in look and the tasteful blending of many bright colors. She had seen them before, the first summer that the gregarious Haynies had opened the house and Mary Ann had so proudly shown it to her friends.

There was yet another bedroom, the master bedroom of the house. She recalled that it was decorated in a warm peach color as she turned and went toward it. It was Clare's bedroom and Fayne's, she thought.

The door was ajar. She gave it a little push and it swung back slowly, revealing Clare in the wide maple bed, Clare covered to her chin with a wrinkled pale blue sheet, her back hair spread fanlike upon the pillow, Clare in a deep sleep . . .

The sensation of guilt at her trespassing assailed her more sharply now. Clare was asleep and she, Meegan, would slip out of the house as quietly as possible. It was shameful, what she had done. As she reached for the door to close it again, she had to lean forward a little. As she did so she was very close to Clare, so close that she saw that this was unnatural sleep, a sleep too deep and still. For Clare was not breathing. She was not asleep. She was dead.

In that moment of stark terror she felt that her own flesh was leaving her body and it was impossible for her to move or to utter a sound. She seemed to be only eyes that stared and burned at that still figure, that same figure heretofore always fluid and volatile. It was as if also an icy blast had struck her and it was with the greatest difficulty that she removed her hand from the knob, leaving the door still open. She was freezing, she thought, surely freezing, as she hugged her arms to her and shivered. Clare was dead. Who had murdered her? What evidence of murder lay beneath the wrinkled sheet? Someone had killed her and covered her and closed her eyes and gone away, leaving the front door open.

Someone had killed Clare. Someone had come up the steps as she, Meegan had come up the same steps. Then someone had come to this room and killed her so quietly that there was no evidence of a struggle. Everything was in place. Yes, everything was in place except the words they had said to each other and words left no mark. Someone had come up the steps. Not an anonymous person but someone she, Meegan knew. Either Toby or Van or Adele or Sue or perhaps Erica or Elinor McLean or even she, Meegan, in a blind moment she could not remember. One of them had come up the steps to this room and killed Clare and covered her and closed her eyes and gone away, leaving the front door open. Or Fayne, she thought. Or Fayne.

One by one she saw them coming up the steps and into this room. Toby, an hour before his wedding when he said he was going to the club for cigarettes. Toby dressed for his wedding, coming into this room and murdering Clare, silencing her because only death could silence her and keep her from the church. And then he had straightened his tie and pushed back his hair and gone to the church to marry Erica. She remembered Toby's hand over Erica's as they cut their wedding cake. Toby?

Perhaps Van had come up the steps. Perhaps he was drunk and had stumbled up the steps weaving his way in and out of the various rooms until he had come to this room. Van, disheveled, his eyes red, his twisted smile a sneer, coming into this room. But if it had been Van, he had not been drunk. He had been sane and clearheaded and coldly murderous because he had covered her and closed her eyes. He had cared how she looked when she was found. And nothing in the room was disturbed. If it had been Van, he had been sober and sane and cool and deliberate and efficient.

Or she could see Adele in one of her ill-becoming sports costumes coming up the steps in her long stride, her soft sports shoes cushioning her footsteps. Adele with purpose in her ugly, kind face, a glow of triumph in her small eyes. Adele had read of these things. She had so gorged herself with stories of death that she had felt herself a heroine. She had never been a heroine before. Good old Adele. And so she had come up those steps to murder Clare. An eye for an eye, she would think. You murdered Jerry and now I'm going to murder you. You've had it coming to you for a long time and I've let you have love and marriage and success and everything you wanted, everything Jerry missed, everything I missed. But you can't have it any more. I'm going to be good at this. I've planned it and studied it and I won't make any mistakes. You've lived too long, Clare. I've given you a break to let you live this long and now your number is being called. This time you're on the receiving end, my dear friend, my old pal, my childhood playmate . . .

Strike's Off!

Philadelphia, Aug. 6 — (AP) — There was going to be a strike at the Quaker City Iron works but it's off, because Charles Daggert, President of the tank and body builders local No. 1, made a speech on company time. Daggert told the workers, who were demanding a 10 per cent wage increase:

"All of you have sons, brothers, other relatives, in the services. If you walked out now you'd be going back on them." He called for a show of hands on a back-to-work motion.

ESCAPES PRISON HOSPITAL

Sudbury, Aug. 6—(CP)— Guards at the Burwash Industrial Farm here said today that Vernon Senior, who was serving a 15-month term for fraud, escaped from the prison hospital late yesterday and is still at large. He was reported dressed in regulation prison garb of blue denim overalls. He had been confined to hospital for treatment for a skin rash.

Wartime Switzerland

(By LESTER POWELL)
(B.B.C. Press Service)

In normal times Switzerland is to most of us a holiday land. In Britain highly colored posters displaying the delights of St. Moritz and Lucerne stare at us from every railway platform, urging us to get our tickets without delay. It is the land of snow and sunshine, of skiing and long idle days.

Now that has changed. Instead Switzerland is that almost mythical of places, a neutral country. It is the home of the Red Cross and the Protecting Power for both the Allied and the Axis interests. Switzerland may be neutral but she is far from remote from the war.

Working for the British Red Cross I have got to know a great deal about wartime Switzerland, through the members of the International Red Cross delegation in London who are all Swiss. I have learned through conversations with these men that to the average Swiss war means more or less what it means to anyone living in a belligerent country. In Geneva, Zurich, Lucerne, the war means black-out, clothes and food rationing, queues, shortage of supplies, heavy taxation—everything, apart from bombs—that it means in London, Rome, or Berlin.

* *

The food problem in Switzerland is particularly acute. Before the war she was obliged to import most of her food from the neighboring countries of Italy and France. Now, of course, the Italians and the French are having a hard enough job to feed themselves — and their German masters—and have nothing to spare for the Swiss. A certain amount of agricultural land has been reclaimed but Switzerland is a very mountainous country and only a limited quantity of food can be home produced. This means therefore, that practically everything Switzerland eats has to come in by sea. And this again presents a knotty problem. Switzerland being a land-locked country did not keep a merchant fleet in peacetime and when the war came she had great difficulty in buying ships. But she managed to get hold of a small fleet and they bring food — and it is unloaded at the Italian port of Genoa. And this isn't so easy as it sounds as the R.A.F. has this port figuring prominently on its Italian objectives list. Still, the special Swiss dock at Genoa has been left alone by our airmen and so far no British bomb has landed on it. Nevertheless food is not easy to get to Switzerland and is expensive. The frequent dislocation of the Italian railroads by our bombs makes it difficult for the supplies to come in regularly. In spite of this the Swiss allow the Red Cross food parcels to British prisoners of war in Europe a Number One priority on their railways. Switzerland places her obligations in the cause of humanity even before her own larder.

* *

What applies to food holds good for textiles and leather. Clothes and shoes are scarce and severely rationed. Petrol and rubber are unobtainable and the Swiss have had to fish out their bicycles. In Genoa, for instance—a town which before the war had more motorcars in proportion to the size of its population than any other town in Europe—today has a bicycle to every two persons.

Add to all this the cost of keeping up a large standing army, for invasion of Switzerland is never quite out of the question. The Swiss are by no means better off than any belligerent people. It would be unreasonable then to imagine that though they may officially follow a policy of strict neutrality—and they certainly do that—the average Swiss has no opinions about the war. Or that he has no sympathies. The other day I asked one of the Red Cross delegates, who had recently left Switzerland, whether he thought the prevailing sympathies of his people were with the Allies or with the Axis. He reminded me that Switzerland is the oldest democracy in Europe. He mentioned too that British films are especially popular. The biggest hit of the war in Switzerland has been "Mrs. Miniver," which while not British made was one of Hollywood's better efforts at portraying the spirit of Britain at war. In Zurich this film had a run of over six months and played to crowded houses.

* *

It is however in the work that she has done to relieve hardship and suffering that I have come to know wartime Switzerland best. Apart from the work she does as the parent body of the Red Cross movement, a work employing thousands of her people, Switzerland has found time and money to do a very formidable amount of relief work on her own account. In a talk of this length it is not possible to deal in detail with the whole of this work and I would like, therefore, to concentrate on what I consider is the most important side of it. The relief work done by the Swiss for the suffering youth of Euorep.

The plight of children caught up by war is not difficult to imagine. It isn't difficult to estimate what hardship, what suffering the children of Holland, of France, of Greece, Norway, Yugoslavia, Russia, all the countries invaded and pillages by the Nazis have been through during the past four years. Deprived of homes, of parents, of proper care and food, it is at these small citizens that war strikes with its full force.

* *

I have seen a little of it myself, while serving with the British Army in France when the war first burst with full force on Europe. I have seen the roads of France choked with refugees, long lines of haggard faces dragging wearily through the dust in search of a safety which seemed for ever to elude them. Old men, women and little children. I have heard them scream in terror as Stukas dived to machine-gun them, attacking them from a height at which only a blind man could mistake them for troops. I have seen children fight for the food which we gave them from our own not too plentiful rations. I have seen them lying dead by the sides of the roads, their little bodies twisted in silent reproach at the awful inhumanity of modern war. I have seen them die and seen them starve, there is nothing more horrifying to see. You cannot see it without saying: This should not be; this MUST not be. It is something I would rather not have seen. And yet in a way it is better that I should have seen it; better that I, as one individual concerned with the war, should have been taken out of my comfortable British home where the worst I could ever see would be a child accidentally run over by a car, and to see these horrors. If for no other reason it has made me fully appreciate what a great work the Swiss relief organizations have done for the stricken youth of Europe.

* *

It was quite early in the war that the suggestion came, from the Swiss people themselves, that their country should be turned into a refuge home for the homeless children of Europe. During that terrible summer of 1940 this suggestion was turned into a reality. Units of the Swiss relief organizations were able to go amonb the pitiful streams of refugees bringing with them food and medicine, milk and clothing. And then when the terror temporarily subsided and Petain had accepted the German terms of France's humiliation, representatives of these organizations went to the Nazi occupying authorities with a scheme for sending homeless Dutch, Belgian and French children into Switzerland to be cared for and fed. The Nazis agreed, not so completely perhaps as the Swiss had wished, for they refused to sanction anything like a regular quota. But by persistence and unceasing patience nearly ten thousand children from the Low Countries and France arrived in Switzerland during the first year after the collapse of France. I saw photographs of some of these children, taken on their arrival, and all I have to say is that the day of their being taken into Switzerland didn't come a second too soon. Their eyes stood out like pools of distress and anguish in pinched faces and the thinness of their little bodies was pitiful to see. No one, except possibly a German, could have seen them unmoved.

* *

They were placed with Swiss families prepared to receive them — and few Swiss families had not volunteered. They were fed, reclothed and nothing spared to bring happiness back into their little pinched faces. And the children which the Nazis would not allow to come to Switzerland were not forgotten either. A system of adoptions was worked out whereby families in Switzerland could adopt children who remained in Holland, Belgium and France. Each family paid ten francs monthly towards the upkeep of the child it had adopted and in addition to this the adopters were encouraged to correspond with the child and to take a personal interest in its welfare.

As Hitler's plans for the domination of Europe flourished and his New Order spread farther and farther across the continent more children with thin bodies and big sad eyes appeared in the Swiss mountains. Slavs, Serbs, Greeks, as each country fell the trickle of small bodies grew. During the first nine months of 1942 nearly 16,000 children were placed with Swiss families.

* *

In Greece the plight of the children was particularly great. That gallant country was left pillaged and empty. But on the heels of the Nazi gauleiters came the Swiss Red Cross, bringing, not edicts, terror and penalties, but food and medicine and comfort. Today, the Swiss Red Cross is feeding 25,000 children in Athens and in Salonika it keeps open ten canteens where 2,000 children are fed daily. And whenever the Nazi authorities can be made to agree, batches of Greek children are brought to the sanctuary of Switzerland.

Now the cost of this work has been prodigious. It has been difficult to bear, for as I have shown, the Swiss have been hard hit by the war and have neither food nor money to spare. It has been accomplished only by sacrifice. The Swiss people pay into a fund similar to our own Red Cross Penny-a-Week Fund and they pay regularly and generously. In Zurich, a city of about 150,000 inhabitants, over half the population are regular subscribers to the fund. Individuals have opened their houses; hospitals and hotels have been set aside for Switzerland's tragic little guests.

* *

To conserve the country's slender stocks of food and material, every Swiss citizen is asked to go without some of his food and clothing rations to help these children. And his response to this appeal is on a par with his response to the appeals for money. This relief work for children was the Swiss people's own idea and they support it wholeheartedly.

Switzerland is no longer a holiday land. It is, in a sense, a workshop for tomorrow. These children, sheltered in her mountains, are the citizens of tomorrow, the citizens upon whose shoulders much of the task of rebuilding the continent of Europe is going to fall.

Switzerland may not be helping to finish the war by dropping bombs or firing guns but she is certainly helping to make the peace. She is the protecting power not only of the Allied and Axis interests but of the interests of humanity.

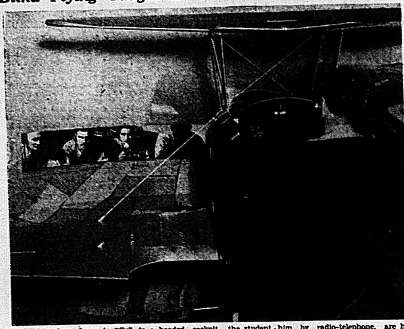
Blind Flying Taught In Ground-bound "Aircraft"



Link instructors learn to "fly" their hobbled training devices in this open-cockpit type known as the "visual Link," at the newly opened No. 1 Instrument Flying Training School of the R.C.A.F. at Deseronto, Ont. Before graduating to a hooded cockpit, the student learns how to steer by landmarks in a cyclorama painted to simulate fields and villages far below. In the cockpit of the Link trainer here is Flight Lieut. J. P. Cross. Outside the cyclorama, directing him by radio-telephone, are his classmates, (left to right) Flying Officer W. E. McDermott, Flying Officer H. Tegelaar, Flying Officer G. V. Allen instructor, and Flight Lieut. R. L. Bruce — (R.C.A.F. Photo).

No. 1 Instrument Flying School at Camp Mohawk Near Deseronto Instructs Canada's Airmen In Difficult Technique of Flying by Instrument

Only School in Allied Air Forces To Combine in One Station Instruction Courses in Beam Approach, Beam Approach Technical Training and Link Trainer

LEARN TO LAND IN DARKNESS OR FOG

DESERONTO, Aug. 7th.—At old Mohawk Field near here, where Canada's fledgling pilots of the last war learned to fly by the seat of their pants, by guess and by God, a new generation of air-minded Canadians is learning advanced R.C.A.F. techniques of flying by instrument. With the aid of "beam approach," they can return to their home airfields and land safely, no matter how black the night or dense the fog.

MEN OF GREAT EXPERIENCE

The new training station is No. 1 I.F.S., the first instrument flying training school to be set up in Canada and the only school among the Allied air forces to combine on one station instruction courses in beam approach, beam approach, technical training and Link trainer. Commanding officer is Wing Commander D. F. Macdonald, of the R.A.F., one of the original three members of the first Link trainer school at Hendon, and reputed to be one of the greatest R.A.F. authorities on instrument flying. Chief flying instructor is Squadron Leader Harry Gibson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, an R.A.F. night bomber captain who was an airlines pilot prior to the war. Of his 4,000 flying hours, more than 300 wer spent in 37 bombing trips to Berlin, Kiel, Cologne, Brest, Hamburg, Dusseldorf and Essen. A veteran instrument flier, he was at Malta prior to coming to Canada last November.

No. 1 I.F.S. is still in the throes of construction but training has been underway for more than two months. Aircraft were flying night and day when only 20 percent of the buildings were habitable.

With the output of trained instructors anticipated from the Deseronto school, it is proposed to set up "beam approach" flights at all twin-engine service flying training schools across Canada, so that bomber pilots graduating under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan will be well grounded in this newly developed method of "homing" and controlled "let down" while they are still in the training stage. The school also is turning out instructors for the Link trainer, the ingenious "ground aircraft" which can do everything but take-off, land, or do loops. Training in the Link is closely tied with training in beam approach, for it develops mastery of flying by instrument panel— an essential feature of a pilot's ability to make "blind" approaches and landings.

Graduate Instructors

From a third course at No. 1 I.F.S. will graduate instructors and maintenance crews to instal and repair the aircraft and ground equipment used for beam approach radio communication.

In twin-engine service flying training schools, the beam approach unit will be known as the "BAT" flight—a particularly apt and accidental title, for bats have developed their ability to fly at night to an uncanny degree. By singular coincidence, the motto of Wing Commander Macdonald's first R.A.F. squadron was "Per Noctem Volamus", or in English, "We Fly by Night".

Commercial airlines for some years have used radio beams to guide aircraft between airports. Being "right on the beam" has become a common synonym for maintaining perfect direction. The R.A.F. in recent years, however, has developed a radio technique for combining accuracy of direction with knowledge of position over the aerodrome, so that pilots can come in for a safe landing even when they can't see the ground until they are within a few score feet of it. Known as "Standard Beam Approach", this procedure many times has been a life saver to pilots blinded by fog, darkness or snow.

Radio Beam

In theory, it is simplicity itself. From one end of the aerodrome, in line with the longest runway, projects a narrow radio beam. If a pilot hears dots, he knows he is on one side of the beam. If he hears dashes he knows he must steer in the other direction. If he hears a steady hum, he knows he is squarely in the centre of the correct line of flight. Over the airfield, the beam is slightly narrower than the actual width of the runway, so that the pilot knows that, so long as he is "on the beam" he also is on the runway. At intervals from the airfield, in line with the beam, are other radio signals which denote the aircraft's position. When the pilot hears the first one, for example, he knows he is two miles away and that if he remains "on the beam" and approaches at a fixed rate of descent from a pre-determined height, he is sure to hit the runway "on the button". From a mathematical point of view, it's easy. The correct technique in making the proper turns and calculations, however, must be drilled into pilots until they are letter perfect. They also must be well-versed in reading instruments, for they have nothing else to guide them in judging where they are or how high they are from the ground.

Icing Feared Most

The Deseronto station has the first "beam" in Canada. On days when aircraft at other fields in Canada were chained to the ground by low-hanging clouds and fog, aircraft were flying at Deseronto. They're flown every day and five nights a week since the station opened in April. Icing is the only flying hazard they fear, for it renders aircraft unserviceable and is apt to freeze over the instrument apertures.

At first regarded as a sort of "black magic" which only super-pilots could master, the beam approach can be learned by anyone who can fly on instruments. If a pilot can't fly by instrument, of course, he can't fly the beam. Those taking beam approach training at Deseronto are proficient S.F.T.S. instructors, picked for their instrument flying ability and their only task is to adapt their ability to beam approach procedure.

Trainees are first converted to the type of aircraft used at Deseronto, twin-engined Oxfords . Then they take a few hours of instrument flying as a refresher. Flying by day "on the beam" and practising the proper turns for the "let down" are the next steps. During this period they actually are flying "blind". A canvas hood shuts out landmarks on the pupil's side although the instructor's side is left clear to forestall mid-air crashes. Next they do night flying by instrument, one of the most important phases of their course.

Beam Operation

Here, in more exact technical form, is the way the beam operates. At the end of the longest runway at Deseronto is a transmitter throwing a long, narrow, high-frequency radio team which slants upwards. Only a degree and a half wide, it has a range of about 100 miles at 4,000 feet. When squarely on the "Front beam", as it is known when he is heading into his home station, the pilot hears a steady monotone through his ear phones. If he swings off course to the left, he hears a series of dots. If he swings off to the right, he hears dashes. On the instrument panel is a visual indicator which gives his eyes the same information as his ears receive through the earphones.

Cruising at 600 feet altitude on the beam, he receives a distinctive signal when he crosses the "Outer beacon", a vertical cone of radio rays which interest the directional beam two miles from the end of his home runway. He begins to descend at a standard rate and crosses the "Inner beacon" at 100 feet. Here he levels off and approaches the runway in the correct position for landing. The beam brings him down within 50, or even 25 feet, of the runway. With the Standard Beam Approach equipment, pilots will tackle landings when they have only 100 yards visibility and a 50 foot ceiling conditions which would be foolhardy to anyone flying by sight alone.

Begun in 1937

In the R.A.F. modern instrument flying goes back to 1937. Considerable time was spent in developing the best procedure for a standard beam approach and the first beam was installed in 1939. Since then many score have been placed in active operation abroad.

Adoption of the Link trainer by the R.A.F. in 1936 paved the way for beam approach development. The Link, a U.S. invention was then being demonstrated in Europe for the first time, and both the R.A.F. and General Ernest Udets of the German Luftwaffe were quick to realize its value in the field of synthetic air training. Air Vice Marshal R. Leckie, D.S.O., D.F.C., A.F.C., Air Member for Air Training, R.C.A.F., got wind of Udets' intention of ordering 40 Link trainers and forestalled the German's intention by ordering the entire available supply for the R.A.F.—a valuable stroke of strategy which gave Britain's fliers a considerable advantage over Nazi airmen.

The Link trainer follows R.C.A.F. pilots from their first few weeks in uniform throughout their service careers. They take Link training at manning depot and in between bombing raids at operational station. No pilot is ever so good that he can avoid sharpening his skill on the Link.

Link Training Supervisors

At Deseronto the Link Instructors Course turns out men who go back to R.C.A.F., schools across Canada and supervise Link training. They don't have to be able to fly service aircraft, although many flew in the last war. For example, Flight Lieutenant L. A. Fonseca of Winnipeg, now taking a Link Instructor course at Deseronto, was a flying instructor 25 years ago at the same station when it was Mohawk Field. Others might be High School teachers, or from other walks of life who have shown capacity to impart Link instruction.

In the first two weeks of the course, embryo Link instructors learn elementary flying subjects like theory of flight and navigation. They take the controls of a "visual Link", a trainer with an open cockpit, and "fly" by sight, learning the feel of the controls. They are assessed after two weeks and if their standing is high enough, they do elementary flying in new low-wing Cornells up to the solo stage. There they learn the value of synthetic flight. It shows them that if they handle the controls properly in the Link trainer, they will handle the actual aircraft properly.

Extensive Training

From there they go to the Instrument Link Squadron, where they are taught synthetic instrument flying, radio procedure, and synthetic operationtal exercises. For example they are taught to direct a "fighter pilot" in a Link trainer to hunt down enemy bombers, the sort of exercise which lends interest and value to Link trainer work. It's a real test of flying lore. They must watch to see that the "bomber" doesn't cheat by going faster than a real bomber could travel or that the pursuing fighter doesn't travel at top speed all through the chase, for it would shake itself to pieces in five minutes.

In the final stages of the course, trainees go into the air again. They do ten hours "blind" flying on instruments, once more learning by experience the practical value of their synthetic training on the Link. Throughtout, the pupils receive constant tests and are under constant observation as to suitability.

Valuable Men

"A good Link instructor is worth his weight in gold on an operational station", pointed out Squadron Leader J. C. Edwards, chief Link instructor, who was at operational stations in Britain and in Africa before coming to Canada. "Pilots must know perfect procedure in taking off and landing on these big bombing raids and it is is the Link trainer which constantly brushes them up. Can you imagine what would happen with 1,000 bombers landing or taking off in a period of 45 minutes, unless we had perfect procedure ingrained in our pilots by means of Link training? Chaos would result".

AMIENS RECALLED WITH CANADIANS, SICILY TRIUMPHS

Tomorrow is 25th Anniversary of British Victory in France When Maple Leaf Led the Great Attack

(By H. H. GORDON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Backed by Cavalry

Canada's soldiers in Sicily are battering at the doors of Axis Europe and thousands of other Dominion troops chafe in Britain awaiting the word to attack just a quarter of a century after their fathers destroyed Germany's hopes for victory in the First Great War.

Tomorrow is the 25th. anniversary of the Battle of Amiens, August 8, 1918, marked the beginning of the "last hundred days" when the German armies collapsed before the combined strength of British, French and American forces.

It was at Amiens that Marshal Ferdinand Foch delivered the first of a series of hammer blows following the obliteration of the German bulge created at the Marne by the enemy's spring offensive. The victory brought from Emperor Wilhelm II the admission: "I see that we must strike a balance; we are at the end of our resources; the war must be ended."

To the Canadian Corps, commanded by Sir Arthur Currie, fell the honor of spearheading the attack east of Amiens. Advancing over a five-mile front, the Dominion's fighting men smashed through enemy defences a distance of eight miles the first day. In the week that followed they increased the penetration to 14 miles and captured 10,000 prisoners out of a total of 21,000 bagged by the Allied armies.

Ruse Fooled Germans

For nine months following the great battle of Passchendaele the Canadian Corps had undergone intensive training in the "quiet" Arras sector for Foch's big counterstroke. Secret transportation of the corps south to Amiens was one of the most successful ruses carried out during the First Great War. The appearance of the Canadians in the forefront of the battle astonished the enemy who, because of a number of deceptions, believed them to be at Kemmel Hill on the Flanders Front.

Another surprise for the Germans was provided by a vast array of tanks behind which the Canadians advanced steadily across the hills and plateaus. They swept thru' the German front lines and beyond the support and reserve battalions. The initial break-through on August 8 exceeded even the highest hopes of the British general staff.

Enemy opposition grew stronger on succeeding days, but the Canadians joined by the 4th. Division on August 9, continued to make headway, sometimes in close hand-to-hand fighting at German strong points. Cavalry squadrons backed up the attack.

Sir Arthur Currie wrote on August 13: "The first stage of the Battle of Amiens is over. One of the most successful operations conducted by the Allied armies is now a matter of history."

The battle, ended on August 15, released the strategic Paris-Amiens railway. The Canadian Corps in addition to prisoners captured about 170 guns, 1,000 machine guns, and more than 100 trench mortars. Vast engineering and other stores fell to the overseas soldiers and their own total casualties were fewer than the number of prisoners taken.

The operation has been referred to by military writers as the most brilliant victory gained by British arms in the 1914-18 conflict.

In a book written within a year after the armistice, Gen. Erich Ludendorff, the German master tactician, referred to August 8, 1918, as the "black day of the German army."

Veteran Airmen Recall Early Days of Flying at Camp Mohawk in the Last War

Flt. Lts. Forseca and Fall Return to Deseronto as Instructors

1ST PLANE BUILT HERE

(By Staff Reporter.)

On April 1st., 1918, the name of the Royal Flying Corps was changed to the Royal Air Force which marked the beginning of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The first flying school in the Belleville area was located at Camp Mohawk and Rathbun, near Deseronto, where, today, is located the first school of its kind, the No. 1 Instrument Flying Training School.

Going back into recent history farther than 1918, the exact date lost in the local archives, Belleville was the birth-place of the first aeroplane built in Canada, a flying-machine which was designed and constructed by the Pawley Brothers who utilized the abandoned building of the old Station Street church. The Pawley Brothers tried hard to float a company for the manufacture of the plane, dismantling it and hauling it piece by piece to the City Hall where they re-assembled it and put it on show to the local citizens for ten cents admission. Many residents paid their ten cents and saw the "flying bird," but not quite sufficient to pay for the rent of the Assembly Hall. The Pawley brothers took their machine and left the district and were later associated with the Wright Brothers.

Flying Primitive Then

Much like migrant birds, their flying machine prototypes have returned to the vicinity of Belleville and the Bay of Quinte district, taking [illegible] expired leases on "last year's nests" as witnessed by R.C.A.F. Stations at Mountain View, Picton, Trenton, Belleville (No. 5 I.T.S.) and again at Deseronto. These old-timers only resembled their vastly improved descendants in that they also were air-borne, were driven by a propeller and motor, had wings and landing gear; the highly scientific flying instruments found in modern aircraft were undeveloped or unknown, the instrument panel composed of an altimeter, gas gauge, oil gauge, air-speed indicator, engine revolution counter and a compass (of a kind) were all the World War I, pilots had to guide themselves by.

Early Cadets

Today we call embryonic pilots, observers and navigators "aircrew", yesterday, in the days of 1918 and Camp Mohawk, they were known as "Cadets for Pilot," and each trainee had to know something about every division of aircrew, a smattering of navigational knowledge and sufficient knowledge to get his aircraft off the ground and back again to qualify as a pilot.

A pilot had to know pretty certainly how to get his plane back down otherwise he found himself in a rather unhappy situation; it was against regulations to carry or wear a parachute. The aeroplane was called a "ship" and it was the unwritten law that, being the captain of the ship, the pilot could not abandon ship. Crews flying in balloons and blimps were entitled to wear parachutes and it was some considerable time before this safeguard to life was extended to "captains" of planes.

Short Training Period

Accelerated training was the key-note at Camp Mohawk; cadets were trained and completed their instruction here and embarked for overseas after 8½ hours dual and 10 hours solo flying. Before embarkation all cadets were commissioned. Cadet training consisted of a few pointers on taking off and landing. It was a regulation that a cadet must come in at over 2,000 feet and spin to lose altitude. Another regulation by which all cadets flew was to turn right on all take-offs; if the turn to the right could be accomplished at a few feet from the landing field, all well and good, the cadet was a good pilot. If a cadet attempted to land down wind he was never, or very seldom, criticised, but was laughed at by his mates and instructors. A constant bane in the life of the 1918 fledgeling was his magneto, never more than 100 miles of cross country flying could be accomplished without the necessity of landing to wipe off this recalcitrant device and emergency landing fields were not indicated on any map, if the cadet possessed such a map; all forced landings were made on fields that were selected by the pilot himself from 2,100 feet.

No Night Flying

Night flying was something which was simply never attempted by last war pilots in training; flying for the day commenced around 4.30 in the morning and continued until about ten o'clock when flying was washed-out until the early evening hours when they would take off again for two or three hours in the air. The cadets' instructors had a veritable paradise on earth, according to reports, their day was never any longer than three hours, and that only when flying was possible.

Flt./Lts. L. A. Fonseca of Winnipeg, and S. P. Fall of Brandon, Manitoba, are the persons responsible for supplying the interesting information about training at Camp Mohawk and Camp Rathbun. They recalled these former flying days with considerable mirth but their reminiscing brought back many pleasant days spent in the Bay district. "We flew old Curtis JN-4 biplanes in those days," remarked Flt./Lt. Fonseca, "complete with open cockpit and our trust in the Lord. We thought we were really getting somewhere when we pushed her out to her full 65 m.p.h., and could hear the roar of her 90 h.p. motor.

Few Schools in Canada

Camp Mohawk was one of the three or four flying schools in Canada in the last war and many famous fliers passed through their training there. "It was not customary to "wash-out" cadet pilots," said Flt./Lt. Fall, referring to the occasional failure of present day trainees. "Wash-outs usually took care of themselves. If a man wasn't a good flier, or was unable to learn how to fly, he usually had an accident which automatically washed him out. We used to climb into our planes and warm them up for the take-off which we made usually at the speed of 50 to 55 m.p.h and when we landed we did so at about 40 m.p.h., but we we were really doing something."

Remembers Vernon Castle

Both officers, Flt./ Lts. Fonseca and Fall are back at Deseronto, where they are on course as instructors in instrument navigation. They agree that the new R.C.A.F. Station does not resemble the old camps but recall many landmarks of their former days. "I used to sleep in the quarters which had been those of Vernon Castle when he was training here before I arrived," said Flt./Lt. Fonseca. "I didn't know him," he continued, "but he was a very popular man on the camp because I heard a lot about him when I came." It will be recalled that Vernon Castle was killed in a flying accident in Texas when he purposely crashed his aircraft to avoid a collision with a cadet who was coming in to land. At the time of his death, Vernon Castle was one of the world's foremost dancers with his wife, Irene Castle as his dancing partner.

Belleville might be excused for being proud of her record in the annals of flying when it is shown that here was the birthplace of Canadian air activities, the cradle of the great British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. For three years Belleville has welcomed to her doors these new airmen with the same enthusiasm they displayed to those others who went before them and made Canada's name resound through the pages of history as they themselves are repeating today.

REDS SMASH GERMAN RESISTANCE AT KHARKOV

Capture Several Important Centres Northwest of City

Sever All Railway Connection With Bryansk; Prepare For New Advances

HUGE ENEMY LOSSES

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Aug. 9 (AP)—Russian tank forces crashing back toward the gates of Kharkov from the north have encountered stubborn resistance from fresh German reserves rushed into the battles raging near Dolzhik, 15 miles northwest of that big industrial centre of the Ukraine, front line dispatches said today.

Soviet infantry was reported, however, to be moving up through the path of German wreckage left by their big armored units, and to be mopping up and consolidating their gains in preparation for renewed advances.

The capture of Bogodukhov, a railway town, and Bolshaya Pisarevka and Travasovka all northwest of Kharkov on the upper reaches of the Vorskla River, was considered to have reduced German chances of rushing further reinforcements into that area.

21 Miles From Sumy

In capturing Krasnopolye, another column of the Russian forces driving in from the north had driven to within 21 miles of Sumy, rich Ukrainian agriculture centre which lies about 80 miles northwest of Kharkov.

Bogodukhov's fall also servered the second of two rail lines linking Kharkov with Bryansk, rail juncture 250 miles northwest of Kharkov also threatened by Soviet columns crashing westward from fallen Orel.

Bogodukhov and Dolzhik were the most important of the 60 populated places which the Russians reported they had swept into their bag in the day's fighting. All were located north and west of Kharkov. There was no further mention of activity by the Red Army troop concentration in the Chuguyev sector to the southeast of Kharkov, which would be the most likely starting point of a companion column in a pincers move.

The German retreat apparently was being carried out with a loss of men and material comparable to that suffered by the Nazis in the earlier stages of the Russian offensive. The communique said that the Germans lost 77 tanks and 125 planes in combat, and that the Red Army captured 48 German tanks, including 15 Tigers, in working order. A large number of Germans were reported killed.

130 Villages Recaptured

The Russians said their columns moving toward Bryansk captured 130 villages in an advance of between four and nine miles. Among them was the district centre and railroad town of Narishkina, 12 miles west of Orel.

The Russians acknowledged that the Red Army met with stubborn resistance west of Orel, but said Nazi counter-attacks, supported by aircraft, were repulsed with the Germans suffering heavy losses.

West of Kromi the southern wing of the Russian forces advancing on Bryansk killed more than 1,000 Germans and took a large number of prisoners and war material.

Although the Russian communique made it clear that the major operations were directed against Bryansk and Kharkov, both important Nazi bases, there was much activity in the Voroshilovgrad area and in tthe Donets Basin sector around Izyum.

Red Army aircraft operating around Izyum attacked Nazi supply trains and motor convoys, smashing 400 motor trucks and three trains, forcing the Germans to halt all traffic on the line.

A German attacking force supported by 10 tanks was beaten off southwest of Voroshilovgrad.

Red Army airmen bombed and sank a 3,000-ton Nazi transport and two barges in the Black Sea, the communique added.

DUCKY FOR DUCKS

Winnipeg, Aug. 9.—(CP)—It's too bad the duck hunter's supply of ammunition is going to be low this autumn. Because the same can't be said for the ducks.

A report yesterday by Ducks Unlimited stated that in 551 or 650 districts in western Canada the are more ducks than last year, in 65 the population is the same, and in only 34 is it less. Mallards have increased most in numbers, and pintails, teals, redheads, widgeons following close behind.

RADIO LOCATION PROVIDES SUCCESS AGAINST U-BOATS

Sir John Anderson Says Britain Ahead of Germans in This Science

VALUE OF HOLIDAYS

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—Success of the war against submarines is "very largely due" to improved methods of location, Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council in the British Government said today at a press conference here.

Sir John, who presides over cabinet committees concerned with the organization of science for war and with home-front war activities, came to the United States on business relating to the collaboration of scientists and is visiting Ottawa to meet a number of British scientists carrying on their work here.

In radio location, he said, Britain has been and still is ahead of the Germans. Had it not been for the development of that technique before the war the German air attack on Britain might have had different consequences.

Sir John said the best protection against gas attack is to be prepared for retaliation.

"We are quite determined to keep ourselves in a position to retaliate effectively if gas is used."

Britain's rationing system has worked smoothly and with few complaints, considering what it has been necessary to do with it; but definite shortages of certain commodities—including foods—were to bee anticipated in the future. Continued control and a careful system of distribution would be necessary.

Britain's Food

Britain was not able to accumulate any stocks of food, fuel or other supplies. Supplies for the relief of territories freed from the enemy would have to come from the large producing countries.

Better war news caused a great rush of British people to summer and holiday resorts although they had been advised to spend their holidays at home.

"We came to the conclusion it was good business to give the people holidays," he said.

Sir John, after whom the "Anderson shelter" is named, said there are about 1,250,000 of these structures and that they were a big help during the blitz. They gave protection to some 12,000,000 people in the most vulnerable areas.

At the height of the evacuation from London, he said, about 1,000,000 people had moved out. Many of them now are back in the city and the government is not discouraging their return.

'Black Hole' Horrors in Jap Vessel Told by One of Survivors of Sinking

Seattle, Aug. 9 — (AP) — A.J.W. Evans, 41, one of the three known survivors of the torpedoing of a Japanese troopship said to have been crammed with 2,000 British and Canadian prisoners from Hong Kong, yesterday told a Seattle Times interviewer of well-nigh incredible "black hole" horrors in the Nipponese vessel.

On one detail he maintained tight secrecy — the route by which he and two companions escaped from the China coast to Chungking. Evans said he was the only American and the only civilian among the 2,000 prisoners. The fate of the remainder is a mystery. Dispatches have carried Japanese reports that 900 Canadian and British Army and Navy personnel were saved but no list of names was ever released.

Evans said that during the voyage the prisoners were herded below decks like animals, and had to fight their way through heavy hatch covers after the craft began to settle. Evans said he reached the China coast four hours after the sinking.

POWERS OF GREAT MAGNITUDE GIVEN HERMANN GOERING

Reported Army is Taking Over Conduct Of German Affairs For Long War

HITLER FIGUREHEAD

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ

Madrid, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Press dispatches reaching Spain from Berlin yesterday said that "powers of great magnitude" have been given to Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering following a meeting of Nazi party chiefs and army leaders.

News of the meeting at Hitler's headquarters, announced by Berlin during the week-end, lent color to various reports current in Spain that the army is taking over conduct of German affairs in preparation for a long defensive war.

Although, these reports say, Hitler remains as a figurehead leader, the real rulers of Germany are Goering, Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the High Command, and Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, Commander-in-Chief the Navy.

German reports reaching Spain indicate the German army considers it necessary to retain the Nazi party as a facade behind which it can operate without causing an upheaval within the country.

This view, it was said, was prompted by recent disorders in Italy, which jettisoned the Fascist party when the military dictatorship of Marshal Pietro Badoglio took over. German leaders are reported to believe that if Italy withdraws from the war it will be the result of administrative chaos as much as a public clamor for peace.

It was understood that Goering was chosen as the Nazi representative in the new set-up because he has long been aware of the army's views and holds the confidence of the military leaders.

If German reports here are accurate, the army's power now extends to press, production, civil rationing, foreign affairs and transport. It was said that the army has long been convinced that it would have to take full control of Germany if the country were forced to fight a defensive war.

Since Hitler was reported left as the nominal head of state under the new set up, the transition apparently has not proved difficult and was not likely to cause repercussions like those which followed the resignation of Mussolini in Italy.

The reported developments in Germany were characterized in London as a "desperate" German attempt to "win the peace even though the war is lost."

The London Sunday Dispatch warned that a military dictatorship would have the full consent of Nazi party chiefs. "The Nazis would just go underground and re-emerge later," the paper said.

The paper also expressed belief that Hitler's removal was, in fact, accomplished several months ago.

Other London comment expressed the view that the shift was nothing more than an attempt to shove the Nazi party and Hitler into the background in an effort to gain better terms after the inevitable defeat.

Believes Nazism Will Go To Pieces When Hitler's Dictatorship Collapses

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

Reports that a politico-military conference of German leaders has decided on a military dictatorship which will relegate Hitler to the position of figurehead, while unconfirmed and therefore to be accepted with reserve, are of world-wide interest.

The rapid decline of Axis fortunes certainly presages a military regime in the Reich. This column long ago pointed out that the Prussian war lords were most likely to take matters out of Hitler's hands when the Axis finally was crowded into a corner by the Allies.

German gangsterism springs from the generations-old Prussianism — one of the greatest evils the world has known. That's the putrid matter from which the morbid growth of Nazism, or Hitlerism, has drawn its nourishment, and from which many other criminal schemes against civilization have sprung.

The Prussian military machine — always plotting for conquests of aggression — has supported Hitler because it saw in him a powerful leadership. It has fostered his ego, and pushed him forward as a world-beater. So long as he kept his grip and was going places, Prussianism was willing to let him break trail, but it always has been a foregone conclusion that the Fuehrer would mean little to the militarists once he had ceased to be useful.

Plan Was of Defence.

The reports have it that the Prussian generals are planning a long war of defence. It's said that Field Marshal Hermann Goering, Hitler's second in command, has been vested with great powers and is to act as liaison between the generals and the Fuehrer, who is to be allowed to carry on nominally with his Nazi party so as to prevent the political chaos which Mussolini's collapse has caused in Italy.

While we must treat this unconfirmed report gingerly, it makes sense. We are fighting this war to exterminate Hitlerism, and other forms of gangsterism, and that certainly means Prussian militarism. Therefore we must expect this most powerful of all militaristic organizations to make a last-ditch stand, for it knows it won't get another chance as it did after the last war when the Allies got soft-hearted and failed to exact punishment for war guilt.

So far as Goering is concerned, next to Hitler he has been the outstanding personality in Germany. He has had a great popular following. The rank and file of German people had a real liking for "Hermann' as they always called him.

I believe that no man can take Hitler's place, and that once his dictatorship collapses, the whole structure of Nazism will go to pieces rapidly. Goering perhaps could do better than anyone else in trying to fill his mater's shoe, but "Hermann" is no Messiah.

THREE ITALIAN CITIES POUNDED BY LANCASTERS

Turin, Genoa, and Milan, Targets of British-Based Planes Saturday

INDUSTRY CRIPPLED

London, Aug. 9. —(CP)—Large areas of Milan, Turin and Genoa —cities that contain two-thirds of Italy's war industry—were reported in ruins today under the hammer blows of Britain-based Lancasters of the R.A.F., which blasted all three Saturday night.

The triple attack was the heaviest since Italy was warned more than a week ago by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower that the Allied air assault would be resumed and intensified because of Premier Pietro Badoglio's resistance to peace moves.

The weather was good and the Air Ministry said "well concentrated" attacks were carried out on war factories at Milan and Turin and on shipping facilities and yards at Genoa.

The Italian High Command admitted in a Rome broadcast that "damage was considerable, mainly in the central quarters" of Milan and Turin. The Fiat Automobile and Engine works and the Italian Royal Arsenal are located at Turin.

Resistance to the night raiders was described as slight. Few enemy fighters appeared, and anti-aircraft fire, which Rome claimed accounted for the two bombers lost, simmered down to almost nothing during the course of the hour-long raid.

In contrast, in the last big raid on Turin on July 12 the R.A.F. lost 13 planes.

Planes Drop Leaflets

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 9. (AP) —The Swiss Telegraph Agency reported today that the R.A.F. planes which raided Milan, Turin and Genoa Saturday night also dropped leaflets containing a picture of Premier Pietro Badoglio with the words: "The War continues".

On the reverse side, the Agency said, was a picture of Prime Minister Churchill and a reprint of his declaration that Italy again would feel the offensive powers of the Allied air, naval and land forces because of the Badoglio regime's refusal to ask peace.

Travellers arriving in Chiasso said the principal railroad station at Genoa was badly damaged by the R.A.F.

Scenes of "indescribable panic" resulted from the fact the bombing began before the alarm sounded, one of the travellers said.

MACARTHUR SAYS PACIFIC WINS ARE DECISIVE

Jap Cruiser and Two Destroyers and Possibly Three Sunk

8,500-TON SHIP HIT

By WILLIAM F. BONI
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, The Southwest Pacific, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today Japan has used her fullest resource of concentrated attack on the Pacific fronts, "has failed, and is now on the defensive."

"The margin was close but it was conclusive," the Commander-in-Chief of Allied forces in the South and Southwest Pacific said in a statement expressing supreme confidence in final victory.

The statement that Allied victories "have been decisive of the final result" gained added significance from the words of Gen. MacArthur's spokesman, who said he would interpret it as meaning that "the final outcome of the war in the Pacific now is clear."

Commenting informally on the war's progress in his sphere of command, Gen. MacArthur said:—

"We are doing what we can with what we have. Our resources are still limited but the result of our modest but continuous successes in the campaign has been cumulative to the point of being vital.

Contrast Would Mean Defeat

"A measure of their potentiality can be obtained by imagining the picture to have been reversed, with the enemy capturing Guadalcanal and besieging Port Moresby, rather than we in possession of Munda and at the gates of Salamaua.

"Such a contrast would have meant defeat for us in the war for the Pacific."

Gen. MacArthur's statement was coupled with a communique which told of a 63-ton bombing attack on enemy positions on Kolombangara Island, above New Georgia in the Central Solomons. No enemy planes were encounteered.

The General also sent Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., Chief of the South Pacific Forces, a message paying tribute to the officers and men of a fleet task force which sank a Japanese cruiser and two destroyers and possibly three in Vella Gulf, northwest of Kolombangara Friday night. The United States forces came through without loss.

Today's communique told of two heavy bombers bombing an 8,500-ton freighter-transport, a destroyer and a small cargo ship 300 miles northeast of New Ireland. Results could not be determined.

ALLIED ARMIES POISED 50 MILES FROM MESSINA

Many Towns Seized In Weekend Assaults Forcing Germans To Withdraw

NEW AERIAL BLOWS

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Allied armies slashed great chunks from German defence lines across the Sicilian bridgehead in week-end assaults and the Allied right wing was poised today within 42 airline miles of Messina.

The British 8th Army swept thru Acireale, a port only 42 miles by air and less than 50 miles by road from Messina, in a nine-mile drive up the east coast from Catania and also captured San Maria De Licodia, high on the southern slope of Mount Etna, where British armored charges knocked out Nazi tanks.

Detachments of the U. S. 7th Army, starting the attack from the sea behind the Germans' strong positions on the north coast of Sicily, captured San Fratello and San Agata, the latter but 50 miles from the Axis escape port.

Another American force seized Cesaro in an eight-mile advance from the captured inland citadel of Troina.

The amphibious and ground operations were coupled with aerial blows at railways, roads and bridges in southern Italy, fresh and heavy raids on the Nazi communications centre at Randazzo and attacks on enemy shipping.

Attack Messina Strait

Without stating whether the enemy was still attempting to reinforce divisions in Sicily or was pursuing a salvage operation, the communique said "enemy troops and shipping in the Messina Strait were attacked throughout last night by our light bombers."

Allied ground lines from San Agata to Acireale through San Fratello, Cesaro, Bronte, Aderno and San Miaria Di Licodia were cut to a length of little more than 60 miles. It is but 22 miles from San Agata to the northwest slope of Mount Etna, where Allied troops are closing upon Randazzo.

Americans outsmarted the fierce German defenders of San Agata and San Fratello by the seaborne flank attack. The amphibious manoeuvre via the Tyrrhenian Sea completely surprised the strong fortified garrisons.

Landed Unopposed.

The Americans landed unopposed on the enemy rear, captured 300 Germans and drove off others who were moving west as reinforcements.

His grip lethally loosened, the enemy's northern troops fell back and may not attempt to make another stand short of Capo D'Orlando, which juts into the sea 10 miles northeast of San Agata.

Boche's Days Numbered in Sicily Montgomery Tells Correspondents

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Canadian Headquarters in Sicily, Aug. 7 — (Delayed) — (CP Cable) —Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, Commander of Britain's veteran 8th Army, declared today: "The Germans in Sicily are doomed. The Boche's days are numbered here."

The General made the statement to Canadian war correspondents following a conference with Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, Commander of the Canadian 1st Divison which has been incorporated into Gen. Montgomery's 8th Army.

After poring over maps and aerial photographs with Gen. Simonds, apparently drawing up further moves to bring down the curtain on the Sicilian operation, Gen. Montgomery told the correspondents:—

"The general situation, I think, is excellent. As I said before, the Germans in Sicily are doomed. The Boche's days are numbered here. I don't know how long, but they are for it."

This was my third interview with Gen. Montgomery in Sicily and he was in higher spirits than ever. He greeted us warmly again, chatting informally for 15 minutes while sitting in a chair under an almond tree with Gen. Simonds.

I asked Gen. Montgomery if he were employing the Canadian Division along the lines of the role played by the New Zealand Division in the desert war in Africa when he frequently used sweeping flanking movements.

"Yes, there is comparison there," he replied. "The New Zealanders always were used for a left hook, so much so that the troops used to refer to Freyberg (Lt.-Gen. Sir Bernard Freyberg, Commander of the New Zealand Division) as the chief hooker.

"The Canadian role here is very much similar except that while the New Zealanders were motorized and nobody walked, the Canadians have had to march a good part of the way because of the nature of the country. The geographical physical limitations have meant that this hook has not been so speedy as the desert ones."

First Time F.D.R. Has Holidayed Anywhere in Canada Except in N.B.

LIVED ON TRAIN

By BERGE JARNEL
(Canadian Press Correspondent.)

Little Current, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP) —President Roosevelt spent a one-week fishing holiday at Manitoulin Island, the largest inland island in the world and one of Canada's most popular peace-time holiday resorts, it was disclosed today. It was the first time he holidayed in Canada anywhere but at his summer home at Campobello, N.B.

North country natives respected the President's desire for quiet and privacy but buzzed with interest in the 10-car private train in which he and his party travelled from the United States through Ontario to Birch Island in the Georgian Bay area. In his first afternoon's fishing the President caught five black bass with a light trout rod but as yet no further reports on his catches have leaked out.

Stayed at Birch Is. Station

Although the President's train was at Birch Island Station, nine miles north of this Manitoulin Island town, he actually was not on an island at all. Birch Island one of the most attractive spots in the Manitoulin district, is separated from the mainland only by a small, unnamed stream and is also known as La Cloche Peninsula.

Special tracks and a platform had been built at Birch Island Station to accommodate the special train. From its windows the President and his party had a view of the island-studded north channel with La Cloche mountains in the background.

Waters about Birch Island — Whitefish Channel, McGregor Bay and the North Channel—abound in such fish as bass, pickerel, northern pike, muskelonge and trout.

Sensed Something Doing

Residents of this resort town first sensed that something was in the air when a number of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police as well as representatives of the United States army arrived in town. Curiosity was whetted further when a twin-engined transport plane and a U.S. army plane dropped in at regular intervals.

When it became generally known in the area that the President's train had stopped at the picturesque Indian village of Birch Island Station, all realized his desire for privacy and no attempt was made to call any attention to the occasion.

Donald MacKenzie, well-known Little Current guide, acted as the guide for the President on his fishing outings with the assistance of Ernest St. Pierre of McGregor Bay.

Crashing Plane Causes Freight Train Derailment

Wendover, Utah, Aug. 9. (AP) — A United States army bomber crashed seven miles east of here early today, tearing up Western Pacific tracks and causing a freight train derailment.

One flier died in the Wendover Air Base hospital shortly after the accident. His name was withheld. Ten other fliers were injured, some critically.

The train crew escaped injury although 29 cars piled up, causing damage which railroad men at the scene estimated at approximately $100,000.

Swedish Torpedo Boat Fired On

Stockholm, Aug. 8. (AP)—A Swedish communique announced today that a Swedish torpedo boat had been fired on in Swedish territorial waters Aug. 6, by the crew of a Norwegian boat now in German service, but that the torpedo boat was not hit.

(The attack was the second Sweden had reported on her forces by German units since she announced last week the termination of an agreeemnt whereby Germany had been transporting troops across Swedish territory.

(In the first incident, announced Saturday, Sweden reported that one of her aircraft had been fired on and damaged by a German merchant vessel.)

Woodsman Shot By Searching Posse

Greenville, Me., Aug. 9 — (AP) — A bewhiskered, French- Canadian woodsman was shot and fatally wounded on a wilderness woods trail Sunday by one of a posse seeking him for questioning concerning the slaying of Wesley F. Porter June 3.

Just before he died in a Greenville hospital, the man told an interpreter, Deputy Sheriff David Knowlton said, that his name was Alphonse Maurine of St. Dupaile, Que., and he was 35 years old.

Chub Foster, a guide and camp-owner at Mattagamon, near Webster Lake where Porter, a 46-year old Patten guide, was shot to death June 3, fired the shot that ended the search.

W. Earle Bradbury, Maine's chief fish and game warden, said Porter's 16-year-old son, Clinton, was with Foster on a trail between Clear Lake and Fort Musquacook when the man stepped from the woods into the trail.

"For a few moments," said Bradbury, "the man didn't see Foster, toward whom he was walking. Suddenly he looked up and seeing Foster pulled up his shotgun and swung toward Foster. Foster let him have it in the leg in self defence."

The wounded man was flown to a hospital here in one of several state and civil air patrol planes aiding in the search and died late Sunday.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CERTIFICATE WINNERS ARE ANNOUNCED

In the campaign for the selling of war saving certificates carried on by the several stores in the city, winners have been announced from the sale conducted by Zellers Limited. Mr. S. Wood, 224 Albert Street, Mr. H. Latch, 24 North Front Street, Mr. George Wilson, 111 Chatham Street and Mr. D. Culhane, 290 Albert Street are winners of $5 certificates.

YOUNGER GIRLS ASSIST WAR EFFORT

Miss Barbara Jean Diment of Belleville has been contributing her share towards the war effort each year by holding an open air concert sometime during the summer ever since the war began. This year's concert is to be held on Wednesday night, the proceeds to go to the British War Victims' Fund. During the concert a draw for a cushion will be held, the proceeds of this also for the War Victims' Fund. Girls assisting in selling tickets for the cushion which is on display in the window of the Hydro Public Utilities, are Joan Toms, Shirley Reynolds, Marian Kerr, Patricia Kellett, and Teresa Lorimer.

PROGNOSTICATORS SAY COLDER WEATHER COMING

Indications of an abrupt summer were in evidence last night, when the skies north of the city attracted the attention of citizens when rays of the Aurora Borealis, better known to readers of Robert W. Service as "the northern lights", pierced the skies. Sharp rays of floodlight-like rays lit the northern skies in a wide radius and attracted considerable attention. Old-time weather prognosticators say the early appearance of the northern lights indicate colder weather. However, the moon receded with a golden-red hue late Sunday night along the western horizon, which other weather prophets say is a sure sign of warm weather. Take your pick!

SQDN.-LDR. M. WILSON GIVEN PROMOTION TO WING COMMANDER

Word was received in the city on Saturday that Squadron Leader H. M. (Mac) Wilson, R.C.A.F., has been promoted to Wing Commander. Mac Wilson is the son of Lt.-Col. and Mrs H. R. Wilson, Trent Road.

POLICE INVESTIGATE MOTOR ACCIDENT

Considerable property damage resulted to two motor cars at the intersection of Bleecker Ave., and Station Street, late Saturday night as the result of a head-on collision. Lorne Palmatier, Thurlow Township, was proceeding in a westerly direction on Station Street, when he claims a second automobile, being driven in the opposite direction struck the front of his car with considerable force. Constables Evans and Wright investigated and estimated damages to both vehicles at around $400. Roy Palmatier, a passenger with his brother, sustained facial lacerations and bruises as the result of shattered glass. Mr. Palmatier informed police the vehicle in collision with his car had been driven into a nearby alleyway and the occupants left the scene.

Following police investigations it is alleged the hit-and-run' driver was Elwood Brant of Buffalo, N.Y., who was driving his brother's motor car without permission of the owner. The Brant vehicle was removed to a local garage until such time as the parties concerned could be interviewed by police pertaining to the actual trouble. On Sunday Harold Brant of Buffalo, N.Y., complained to the police his car had been driven away from the Belle Theatre parking lot without his knowledge allegedly by his brother, Elwood. Charges are pending, police revealed today. The front grills, radiators and fenders of both vehicles were badly damaged as the result of the collision.

'DIT' CLAPPER TO BE ONE OF JUDGES

"Dit" Clapper of Hastings and captain and assistant coach of the Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League, will be one of the judges in the "Miss War Worker" contest to be conducted by the Kiwanis Club at their forthcoming fall carnival. The industries of Belleville have taken a keen interest in this competition and three girls from each factory are entered in the contest. These girls have been picked by the popular vote of the respective factories entering. The competition will be held on the second night of the carnival, which promises to be one of the best that the Kiwanis Club has ever sponsored. Besides the "Miss War Worker" contest there will be draws for the Hope Chest and also for the model sailboat now on display in a local window. The customary games will be a feature and the money derived from this effort will be used to extend the many war projects of the club.

Pte. H. Burkholder Woundedin Action

Private Harold Burkholder, son of Mrs. Maude Burkholder, 21 Octavia Street, has been officially reported wounded in action, on July 21st. The nature and extent of his wounds are not known according to the official news which has reached his mother.

He enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment shortly after the war broke out and went overseas with the First Contingent.

It is presumed he was wounded in the fighting in Sicily.

His father, Sergeant Gordon Burkholder, lost his life in an airplane crash in Western Canada a year ago last April while serving in the R.C.A.F.

Garbage Truck Now Working Satisfactorily

The new garbage collecting machine, an Elgin Refuse Getter, which was purchased by the city sometime ago for use by the garbage collection department, is now being operated daily by the Department of Public Works with satisfying success. When the machine was first put into use by the city early in July trouble developed in the loading and dumping mechanism and the machine was completely unserviceable. Several consultations were held between Ald. Armstrong, Chairman of Public Works, City Engineer Charles A. Mott and Mr. A. H. Bilbrough of Mussens Ltd., through whose firm the Refuse Getter had been purchased at Toronto, and this firm ordered the unit dismantled. The work was carried out by Stanley Kerr, motor mechanic at Greenleaf's, and it was discovered that steel cuttings had worked into the oil system of the loading and dumping mechanism completely ruining the oil pump, pistons, gears etc. Whether these steel cuttings developed from worn parts, improper alignment in assembly or what, has not yet been decided.

New Parts Installed

Mr. Bilbrough, the Toronto Manager of Mussens Ltd., ordered complete new parts for the equipment and these parts were installed at Greenleaf's by Mr. H. Lippold, chief mechanic of the Elgin Corporation, who arrived here from the head plant at Askosh, Wisconsin, Mr. P. Richardson of Mussens Ltd., from Montreal, and Mr. Stanley Kerr. The new parts were properly installed in the presence of the Chairman and Engineer last week and the Refuse Getter was then turned over to the city for operation last Saturday.

The special committee of councillors and officials responsible for the purchase of this new equipment now feel that this unit is in A-1 condition and trust that the citizens will be well pleased with its smooth operation in the future. Credit is given to Mussens Ltd., who were immediately on the job to repair their equipment and maintain the policy of the firm and all repairs were made with no cost to the city. Daily efficient collections are being made by the Department throughout the city and much of the former dissatisfaction will be overcome in the very near future.

Youth Held Here For Identification

Suspected of being a German prisoner-of-war escaped from either a Canadian or American internment camp, but telling contradictory stories of his true identity, an unidentified young man is being detained by Belleville police following suspicions aroused when he attempted to enlist with the R.C.N.V.T. recruiting unit here last Friday.

The young man who claims to be only 1o-years-old, has stated since his apprehension that he escaped from Bowmanville; that he escaped from Sherbrooke internment camp and from an American prisoner-of-war camp in Alabama. In his last story told police he stated he was born in Georgia, U.S.A., and that his name was James Edward Alewain.

Speaks German

Able to speak German fluently, the young man is being held on a nominal vagrancy count until his identity is definitely established.

Of clean cut appearance and standing approximately 5' 11" the young man walked into the beverage room of the Crystal Hotel, Friday noon and aroused suspicions of his nationality when he talked with a German accent. He asked for the National Selective Service office and after being directed police were notified.

Arriving at the city hall, the suspect apparently changed his mind of wanting work and tried to enlist at the office of the naval recruiting unit. Officers questioned him for a half hour and again suspicions were aroused when he could not furnish his birth certificate proving his identity. At the time he claimed to be from Georgia.

Changes His Story

When apprehended by police the suspect again claimed to be from Georgia and stated he had come to Canada for a brief visit. When Bowmanville was mentioned, however, he stated he was a German prisoner and that he had escaped from the Ontario camp Friday morning about ten o'clock. He claimed then to be corporal air gunner in the German air force who had been shot down over London, England, and later captured.

Checking at Bowmanville, however, Chief of Police Walter Probert was advised that no prisoners had escaped. The suspect then changed his story and said he had escaped from an Alabama prison camp.

A call from the R.C.M.P. at Ottawa, revealed a German prisoner had escaped from Sherbrooke and hearing Chief Probert repeat the escaped prisoner's name over the telephone, the suspect claimed to be Luger. Description of the two men did not tally; the Sherbrooke man's age was 33 years. Also the the number given by man apprehended in Belleville did not check with the escaped Sherbrooke prisoner.

Born in Georgia

When the Sherbrooke identity was exploded the man then admitted he had been born in Georgia and stated that two years ago he had come to Canada and enlisted with a Canadian Highland division under the name of Myerboez. He had been in Christie Street hospital, he said.

When questioned as to his knowledge of the German language the suspect stated his mother was German and that he had learned the language from her.

Saturday morning the man's fingerprints were taken at the county jail by Police Chief Probert who stated that his prints had been formerly taken.

"It looks now like a matter for the immigration officials who will probably hold him on a charge of illegal entry into Canada", stated Chief Probert. "As far as we are concerned, however, the man is going to be held until his identity is definitely established. He was apprehended by city and federal police.

Navy Has Immediate Need For Laundresses

The Navy has sent out an urgent appeal for 120 laundresses for the W.R.C.N.S. to be enlisted before September 3rd. Naval recruiting officers in Belleville state that these recruits for the women's branch of the service will relieve naval ratings now employed in this occupation for active service at sea. Additional inducement is being offered which includes an increased rate of pay and new and smarter winter uniforms which will be issued to all W.R.C.N.S. early in the autumn. The increased rates will be from 15 to 30 per cent higher and every effort is being made to make the service enjoyable to girls who enter. For information applicants should write to Cataraqui Ontario.

The W.R.C.N.S. service has always been popular with the young women of Canada just as the navy has attracted many young Canadians to venture onto the high seas and the adventure lying beyond. Belleville is generously represented by the numbers of local boys who have shown their preference for the water and many girls from the city have gone ahead of those who will follow in response to this appeal.

Not only laundresses are needed but telephonists, stenographers and clerks. At this critical time in the rapid movement of the war theatres every available man must be released from jobs that women can do and each girl enlisting is doing the same as though she herself was capable of going overseas to a field of battle or the decks of our destroyers and battleships now hammering the faltering Axis partner in Sicily.

Two Harrington Brothers Wounded In Sicily July 22

Trenton (Special)—Mrs. M. A. Harrington, 143 Wragge Street, received word on Saturday that her two sons Pte. Charles and Pte. Reginald (Jim) have both been wounded overseas in operations in Sicily. Peculiarly enough both were wounded on the same day, July 22nd, but up to date the extent of their wounds has not been learned.

Mrs. Harrington has three sons overseas, Charles, 26, enlisted in Toronto two years ago with the 48th Highlanders and proceeded directly overseas. Jim 21, who has been in the service three years enlisted in the artillery at Kingston and after arrival overseas was transferred to the 48th. Another son of Mrs. Harrington, Peter a gunner has been overseas for three years having enlisted at Kingston in the artillery and has been for several months past in hospital in England recuperating following a serious operation.

Jack, 16 year old son of Mrs. Harrington is anxiously waiting his turn for helping his King and Country, while their only sister Miss Clara Harrington is employed in a war industry.

4 Break-ins Reported

Four break-ins occurred during the week, the office of Spicer Cartage, the Bailey Hardware, the Salvation Army Hall, and the office of Stacey's Mill. A local juvenile was questioned by the police and most of the stolen articles were recovered.

Had Narrow Escape

Failing to make the proper turn at the top of Gilmour Hill when approaching town in an automobile early Saturday morning. A. Vincent and E. Barbee miraculously escaped injury. Vincent was the driver and it is alleged his car was forced to make a close turn by an oncoming vehicle which had taken too wide a sweep at the top of the hill driving east. Vincent's car struck the sidewalk curb and cement steps of the Trent House, and then crashed forward to tear away about 30 feet of heavy fencing around the park at the top of the hill.

A charge of reckless driving was laid by Trenton police.

Picton and District

C. S. M. Nutley, Sgt. H. W. Lawson Killed in Sicily

Picton, Aug. 9. — Two Picton young men are officially reported as killed in action in Sicily. They are Company Sergeant Major Charles Nutley and Sgt. Harold Wilfred Lawson. Both were members of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and both went overseas with the local unit as part of the First Division.

Company Sergeant Major Nutley was 32 years of age and was a lifelong resident of the town and district. He had been a member of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment for fifteen years, and before going overseas was awarded the Efficiency Medal. He was an exceptionally fine soldier and had always been keenly interested in military affairs, his father being a veteran of the last war. His father resides here as does his wife and small son. A brother, Allen, is overseas, and a brother, Reginald, saw two years services in England, before being invalided home. He is also survived by three sisters and two brothers here.

Sgt. Lawson is the son of Robert Wilfred Lawson, Hastings and Prince Edward Regt. overseas, and Mrs. Lawson, Picton. He has a brother also overseas, and his wife, an English girl, he married in 1942, resides in London. He has always resided here and enlisted with the local unit a few days after war was declared.

These are the first two members of the regiment from Prince Edward County officially reported killed in Sicily, though two others are reported wounded. Both were killed July 10, when the invasion of Sicily began. Word of their deaths was received by their families here last week.

POLICE BLOTTER

More than the usual run of weekend inebriates were picked up by Belleville police and lodged in the confines of the station cell block to "sleep it off." Among the half dozen or more drunks was a young woman, who was apprehended lying off the beaten highway near the intersection of Foster Avenue and Franklin Street late Saturday afternoon. Her male companion escaped the clutches of the law after residents had made the complaint. Charges of intoxication have already been preferred, to be heard in Tuesday's court, Chief Probert revealed.

Gary Schrieder, 340½ Front St., reported the theft of his roller skates to the police authorities on Saturday.

Police are in possession of an Ontario licence plate, registration card and several other articles, which were picked up on city streets after being lost by careless owners over the weekend. Such lost articles may be recovered by means of identification at the police sergeant's desk.

Argylls Return After Two Weeks Of Training at Connaught Ranges

Suntanned and rugged as the result of two weeks military training at the Connaught Ranges in Ottawa, officers and members of the Argyll Light Infantry (R) returned to Belleville on Sunday under the command of Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, officer commanding.

Although the unit was not numerically as strong as had been anticipated, owing to a large number of the Argylls being employed in essential war industry, the fortnight of military training at Ottawa was marked as highly successful by those in attendance. All phases of modern infantry and mechanized military training were part of the program, which was identical in all of its scope to that given men on active service while training in Canada. Rifle and Bren gun target practice on the Connaught Ranges, bayonet drill, anti-aircraft practice with live ammunition, and other such phases of warfare occupied the men in the two-week camp period.

Due to heavy rains on Sunday, however, a party was left in Ottawa to dismantle tents and other equipment that was left behind owing to the inclement weather. The rear party was under 2nd Lieut. Boyce and Sergt.-Majors Tice and Harden. This party arrived home early today with all equipment intact. The Argylls were under canvas for the entire camp period.

Obituary

MRS. ANNA (HOWDEN) WILMOT

Mrs. Anna Wilmot, widow of Charles Wilmot, died at her home, Trent Road, on Saturday evening, August 7th. She was in failing health for some time, but her immediate death was unexpected and she died suddenly.

The late Mrs. Wilmot was born in Port Hope and was a daughter of the late Major and Mrs. James Howden.

To many friends in Belleville the death of Mrs. Wilmot will bring sincere feelings of regret. During the thirty-eight years she resided here she was prominent in musical circles and in the social and church life of the city. She was a gifted musician and possessed a fine voice, which was often heard with much pleasure by the music lovers in the city. In assisting at concerts and other musical events, Mrs. Wilmot was most generous and for many years she was a valued member and leader of the choir in the Church of St. Thomas, in which parish, when able, she took part in the activities of the women's organizations. By many friends she will be much missed.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. D'Arcy Rutherford, at home; three granddaughters, Anne Gwendolyn Wilmot, Brantford; Carolyn Audrey Rutherford, Belleville and April B. Coats, Belleville; three grandsons, Vernon Coats, now serving with the British Army in the Middle East; Michael Eardley Wilmot, Brantford and Henry Wilmot, Brantford. Her husband died in 1913.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church St., the announcement of private funeral is made on page two in this issue.

JAMES ALEXANDER ROSS
(Dummer Township)
(Contributed)

The sudden death of a life long and respected resident of Dummer district in the person of James Alexander Ross occurred on Friday morning, July 23, at his late residence in Dummer township in his 72nd year.

The late Mr. Ross was the elder son of the late James and Mary Ann Robertson Ross and had lived all his life on the homestead where he was born. Of a quiet and kindly disposition he was a friend of all who knew him.

He is survived by his sorrowing wife, whose maiden name was Carrie Rawley and one brother, George; a sister, Eliza, predeceased him in October, 1942.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence to Norwood cemetery. The service was conducted by the Rev. E. Pugsley, pastor of Norwood United Church, of which the deceased was a faithful member.

The cortege was a large one, many relatives and friends attending. Beautiful wreaths and clusters of flowers were laid upon the casket, giving silent evidence of the high esteem in which the departed was held.

Six friends and neighbors acted as pall bearers, John Gardner, Golden Andrews, Maitland Gardner, Lyle McMillan, Francis Gardner and Elex Brummel.

LATE MISS MARY ELIZA DUGGAN
(Ivanhoe)

The funeral of Miss Mary Eliza Duggan took place Sunday afternoon, August 8th, from the home of her brother, Mr. Albert Duggan at Ivanhoe and many friends were present. The service in the home and at the graveside in White Lake Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. D. Gray, of Stirling.

During the service in the home the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon, rendered two selections, "Peace, Perfect Peace" and "Face to Face."

The bearers were Messrs. John Clement, Albert Clement, Frank Palmer, Hugh McMillan, Thomas Fleming and Albert Reid.

ROBERT DONALD RIDLEY

Robert Donald Ridley, the six-weeks-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Ridley, 43 West Bridge St., died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, August 7th. The parents will receive the sympathy of friends in their bereavement.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church St. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. E. Farnsworth.

MRS. WOLSTAN G. RILEY
(Trenton)

After a brief illness, Mrs. Wolstan G. Riley, 78 Scott Street, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, August 7th. She was in her 29th year and prior to her marriage was Miss Margaret Lovaine Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Green, 50 Ashland Ave., Toronto.

Surviving her are her husband, LAC. Wolstan G. Riley, posted at 6 R.D., three children and her parents.

The body was forwarded from the Martin Funeral Home, Church St., on Sunday, to Toronto, where the funeral will take place.

RICHARD STOUT
(Cannifton and Minto)

Richard Stout, formerly of Minto in Rawdon Township, died at the home of his nephew, Mr. Richard Lambert, Cannifton, on Sunday, August 8th, after an illness of six weeks' duration.

The late Mr. Stout, who was in his 80th year, was born in County Cork, Ireland, and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stout. His mother's maiden name was Susanna Skinner. For many years he was a general merchant at Minto and resided in the district for fifty years. He was well known and highly esteemed in the community and was a member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Rawdon.

Surviving him are one niece, Miss Bessie Stout and one nephew, Mr. Richard Lambert, both of Cannifton; two brothers, Mr. Robert Stout, Phoenix, Arizona and Mr. Harry Stout, County Cork, Ireland; one sister, Mrs. O. F. Temple, Arizona. His wife died two years ago.

Resting at the Duffin Funeral Home, Stirling; the funeral announcement is made on page two in this issue.

EUGENE (OWEN) J. McEVOY
(Madoc)

Saturday morning, August 7th., the funeral of Eugene (Owen) Joseph McEvoy took place from his home in Madoc to the Church of the Sacred Heart in that village where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father F. Hyland. Present in the sanctuary were Rev. Father Farrell of Marmora and Rev. Father Cullinane of Tweed.

During the offertory Mr. Edward Merrau sang, "Lord Have Mercy and Compassion."

Interment took place in St. Edmund's Cemetery at Stoco and the committal prayers were said by Very Rev. Dean J. V. Meagher of St. Edmund's Church, Stoco.

The bearers were Messrs. Robert Riordan, J. McCaffery, George Walsh, William Stewart, George Pollard and Edward Brown.

The flower bearers were Messrs. Thomas Kilty, Francis Kilty, and Gerald Mulrooney.

MRS. MARTHA JANE MOUCK
(Thomasburg)

Mrs. Martha Jane Mouck, widow of Herbert Mouck, Thomasburg, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Coulter, Chapman's Corners, on Saturday evening, August 7th., after an illness of six months' duration.

The late Mrs. Mouck, who was in her 74th. year, was born near Thomasburg and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kerr. All her life was passed in the district where she was born and in the community she held a high place in the esteem of many friends. In religion she was a faithful member of the Church of England and when able she took part in the work of Christ Church, Thomasburg. To many friends her death brought much regret.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. Harry Coulter, Chapman's Corners; one son, Mr. Clarence Mouck, who resides on the old homestead near Thomasburg; two sisters, Mrs. Wilson Sherry, Belleville, and Mrs. Fred Coulter, Thomasburg; one grandson, Reginald Mouck. Her husband died in September of last year.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Coulter. The service in the home and at the graveside in Thomasburg Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Robinson of Tweed.

MRS. ARTHUR HOLLANDS
(Eldorado)

Madoc, August 9, (Special)—Mrs. Arthur Hollands, residence R.R.1, Eldorado, died at her home on Sunday, August 8th. She was in failing health for the past two months.

The late Mrs. Hollands, age fifty-five years, one month and eleven days, was Miss Annis Elzina Wright, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Merchison Wright. All her life was passed in the Eldorado district and she was well esteemed. In religion she was a member of Fox's United Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Arthur Hollands; one daughter, Mrs. Cecil Boyle, (Edith), at home; one sister, Mrs. McAdams, (Bertha), Newburg and one brother, Mr. Fred E. Wright, Whitby.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon, August 10th.

Picton and District

Picton, Aug. 9—Thirty-five members of H.M.C.S. Cataraqui, Kingston, paraded through the town several times Friday, this being part of a recruiting campaign being carried on by the R.C.N.V.R. here. The men made an excellent showing. Before leaving Picton, each man was given a package of cigarettes by the Canadian Legion Ladies' Auxiliary.

Ptes. Milton and Harold Heffernan, brothers, are now in Sicily, according to word received by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Heffernan.

Among the graduates at No. 39 S.F.T.S., Swift Current, Sask., was Ralph Welsh, of Picton. He received his pilot's wings. With Mrs. Welsh he will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nixon Welsh here for two weeks before going to Arnprior to take an instructor's course.

SLASH GREAT

ing Sicilian defence line, was menaced by Allied columns converging from the west and south, the nearest less than 10 miles away.

Everywhere the enemy was reported withdrawing farther into the bridgehead. The "general squeezing out" process by the Allies continued at a steady pace.

The fact the Allies control the coastal waters and can repeat the American outflanking feat obviously caused grave alarm to the German command.

More than half of the base of Mount Etna is in Allied hands.

Two Towns Captured

"The United States 7th Army made an unopposed landing behind the enemy lines and drove back enemy reinforcements moving west, capturing 300," the communique said.

"San Fratello and San Agata were captured yesterday and our troops are now pushing forward to join the landing force. (15 miles) further south, Cesaro was captured yesterday."

San Fratello was also overrun by the United States 7th Army in the north coastal push, wiping out German efforts to establish a defensive anchor at that point some five miles southwest of San Agata, it was disclosed.

These gains in the coastal sectors came as British, Canadian and American forces were closing a trap on fleeing German forces in the central region at the strategic road junction of Randazzo northwest of Mount Etna.

Capture of the port of Acireale placed the right wing of the 8th Army 42 airline miles from Messina.

(The Monday Italian communique said that "fierce fighting" was raging without let-up in Sicily and that Allied naval and air forces again had bombed coastal routs of Sicily and Calabria, on the southern Italian mainland.

(The Italian report said that two Allied destroyers had been hit in Sicilian waters by German planes.)

Within Artillery Range

Units of the 8th Army, of which the Canadian 1st Division is a part, after capturing Biancavilla, Aderno and Bronte in a northward advance through Etna's western foothills during the weekend, were within artillery range of the Troina-Randazza highway, main escape avenue for enemy troops falling back before an American onslaught east of Troina.

Should the British and Canadian soldiers cut this highway, only impassable mountain trails would remain to the enemy.

(Ross Munro Canadian Press war correspondent, reported last night in a delayed dispatch from Sicily that a joint Canadian division and British 78th division drive hammered home near the plateau city of Aderno broke the Mount Etna defence line dead in the centre. He added that following that attack there was "a subdued atmosphere of victory" around the Canadian headquarters as the success of the thrust was a triumphant climax to a Canadian advance of some 150 miles from the coast.

Supported by Highlanders

(Spearheading the audacious attack, said Munro, were the Loyal Edmontons who, after carrying the burden for five days, were supported by the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada. Later the Royal 22nd Regiment of Quebec and the 48th Highlanders threw their weight into the struggle, and in the mopping up stages fresh units of the Royal Canadian Regiment, the Carleton and Yorks and the West Nova Scotias appeared, he said.)

Allied airmen who have pounded Randazzo almost without let-up said the road junction was virtually paralyzed with traffic moving away from the scene of battle.

Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery's troops made few contacts with the enemy anywhere along the British and Canadian sectors Saturday and Saturday night and Noland Norgaard, Associated Press War Correspondent, reported from the front line yesterday that "it appeared likely the Germans were intent primarily on disengaging their troops and getting them back to the Messina bridgehead without risking a major stand."

GENERALS MONTGOMERY AND SIMONDS PLAN THEIR ADVANCE

Master strategists of the Canadian and British armies fighting in the battle of Sicily, General Bernard Montgomery (left) commander of the British 8th Army, discusses plans with Major-General G. G. Simonds, commander of the Canadian troops there. The discussion took place when General Montgomery visited Canadian headquarters in Sicily. —(Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

led the President on his fishing trips, along with the guides. Cliff Bradley of Little Current, acted as pilot for the cutter while Oscar Roszel was in charge of the boats for the party and J. Trimmer spent a day with his launch.

Courteous to Guide

MacKenzie recalled that when he was introduced to the President, the latter greeted him with a cheery smile and a firm handclasp.

One day just as the President was starting off for some fishing a Catalina flying boat landed and a man left it and came over to the launch. "Mr. Harry Hopkins, Mr. Donald MacKenzie, my guide", said the President.

The President's private car came to Little Current each day for the guide, police and other officials and then brought them back to town each night.

Although it was a holiday, the President was kept busy and was in constant touch with the shore by radio and telephone. The guide was asked to be ready at 11 a.m. each day but it was usually 3:00 or 3:30 p.m. before he was ready for fishing.

(An official announcement from Washington today said the President was accompanied by his Chief of Staff, Admiral William D. Leahy; his Naval Aide, Rear Admiral William Wilson Brown; his Military Aide, Maj.-Gen. Edwin M. Watson; his personal physician, Rear Admiral Ross McIntire; James Byrnes, director of the Office of War Mobilization; and Harry Hopkins, chairman of the Anglo-American Munitions Assignment Board.)

Three Drowned

Magog Point, Que., Aug. 9 (CP)—Body of E. C. Grimley of Montreal, President of R.C.A.-Victor, Limited, was found today in Lake Memphremagog.

Mr. Grimley, 52, was drowned Aug. 3 when he fell into the lake from the stern of a sail-boat.

Timagami, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Stephanie Peters, 26, of Toronto drowned in Lake Timagami yesterday after she lost her footing on a slippery rock and fell into deep water.

A girl friend, Nellie Hall, also of Toronto, fell in at the same time but was rescued.

Sudbury, Aug. 9 (CP)—Dragging operations are being conducted today by Provincial Constables C. Millbank and R. Crozier of Sturgeon Falls, for the body of Gerald Thanase, 19, of Penetanguishene, drowned in the Sturgeon River at nearby Field, Sunday afternoon.

Thanase was unable to battle a heavy current while swimming. A companion, Jerry Johan, went to his assistance but was unable to get him to shore.

Thanase is survived by his mother, Mrs. M. Hhanase of Penetanguishene, five sisters and two brothers.

TWO MANTEL RADIOS REPORTED MISSING

Police are investigating the mysterious disappearance of a radio reported missing from the Christian Hardware premises on Front St., last week. The small portable radio was not found to be missing from the stock until a weekend stocktaking revealed the article missing. It was valued at $44.95. Today city police learned that a second mantel model radio was missing at the local Canadian Department Stores. Plainclothes Constable W. L. Rathwell is investigating both cases.

Failed to Report Change of Address

London, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Roy Phillips, 26, today was fined $30 and costs or 30 days in jail on a charge of failing to report a change in address to the Divisional Registrar under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations. Magistrate D. B. Menzies ordered Phillips turned over to the nearest military establishment at the expiration of the sentence.

Constable C. R. Grieve of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, said that Phillips had registered at Port Stanley and subsequently lived in Lambton County, St. Thomas and London, without reporting a change of address.

TPR. AARON TOMPKINS REPORTED SAFE, WELL, IN SICILY

Word was received in the city today assuring the safety of Trooper Aaron Tompkins, son of Mrs. Mary E. Tompkins, 28 East Bridge St., who enlisted with the First Battalion, Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas in December, 1939. Tpr. Tompkins is in the Mediterranean war zone, presumably in Sicily.

The cablegram received by his mother read: "All well and safe. Please don't worry." Signed Aaron.

"It was a great feeling of relief to know my brother is safe," stated Mrs. Blanche Dafoe, a sister of Tpr. Tompkins.

Sicilian Natives Give U. S. Flier Warm Welcome

By DON WHITEHEAD

Klooster saw a rosy-cheeked young fellow in a grey cap, dirty blue sweater, green checked shirt and blue velvet trousers.

Staff Sgt. Arthur P. Rohr of Lewisville, Ohio, had ended one of the strangest adventures yet recorded during the invasion of Sicily.

After a hearty meal, Rhor told his story:

"We left North Africa to bomb a Sicilian town. There wasn't any flak when we approached the target but our right motor caught on fire. The pilot headed back. But then he had to order us to bail out.

"The rear escape hatch was stuck so I jumped up and down on it to get it open. That's the last I remember until I woke up with the sun shining in my eyes. I still don't know how I got my chute open.

"I was near Mount Etna and about a mile away I could see the plane burning. I started over to it but when I got near I saw soldiers around it.

Slept on Mountainside.

"I slipped away and began walking west. I didn't know how far away our troops were but I didn't intend to be captured by the enemy if I could help it. So I avoided roads and stayed in the hills.

"I walked all day and it was dusk when I reached the foot of Mount Etna. I didn't have a map or emergency rations.

"That night I slept on the mountainside. The next morning I was pretty hungry and thirsty. I decided to risk going to a little stone cottage where a Sicilian farm family lived.

"So I went up to the farmer and asked for 'Aqua.' He brought me a drink and then his wife came out and wanted to know if I wanted something to eat. I told them I was an American, and they just about went crazy. They kept saying: 'Italian-American—Friends.'

"They insisted that I stay with them in their little hut so I stayed there for seven days. The woman washed my clothes and they did everything possible to make me comfortable.

"But then I decided I was going to try again to find the Americans. For two days I walked through the mountains. In the valleys and along the roads I could see soldiers and vehicles moving. I was scared they'd see me in the coveralls and recognize me as an American.

"That evening I met a sheepherder. He couldn't do enough for me. He gave me cheese, bread and goat's milk and said he would hide me in the straw if any one came.

"For two nights I stayed with the sheep-herder. Then I started out walking again.

"Next day I met two Italians on a hill and it turned out they were deserting the army and trying to get to the American lines. We went on together.

"Finally my feet got so sore I couldn't walk any more and I told my companions to go on without me. I sat down and took my shoes off at a stream of water and washed out my socks. Next morning they felt much better.

"Once I walked over a hill almost into a German gun position. I knew I was close to the American line when our artillery opened up and the shells started falling all around me. So I hid.

"I went to another farmhouse for food and water. They were just as glad to take care of me as the others and gave me more cheese and bread and kept me that day and night.

"Then a bunch of Italians came by and understood enough to tell me the Americans had gone to Nicosia.

"The farmer saddled two mules and put me on one of them and we rode into town."

10 PERSONS DIE IN ACCIDENTS

Weekend Toll Includes Five Traffic Deaths in Ontario

(By The Canadian Press)

Ten persons were killed in Ontario in weekend accidents. Five died in traffic accidents, two were drowned, two airmen were killed in an air crash and one man died from a revolver shot.

James S. McCaughey of Hamilton and Mrs. William Bassett of Owen Sound were the victims of a two-car collision near Port Elgin Sunday night. Mr. McCaughey was riding in one automobile and Mrs. Bassett in the other. The accident, details of which were lacking, also resulted in injuries to four others, including a 17-months-old baby.

Mrs. Lillian Mabel Barham was killed Sunday when the car driven by her husband Tr. Harold A. Barham of Camp Borden, Ont., ran into the rear of an autobus parked on the highway, two miles south of North Bay, Ont. Frederick Hulbert, 51, of Dundas, Ont., died in hospital Sunday from injuries suffered when struck by a car near his home.

Run Over on Parents' Farm

Bridget Marie Kelly, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kelly, died in a London, Ont., hospital from injuries suffered when run over by a truck on her parents' farm, 17 miles northwest of London.

Flt.-Sgt. John H. Nestor, 25, an electrical instructor at the R.C.A.F. Technical Training School at St. Thomas, Ont., was drowned Sunday night when he leaped into Lake Erie at Port Stanley in an attempt to rescue a woman who had been swept into the lake by a wave. Lloyd Baumback, 13, was drowned Saturday in the Grand River near Kitchener when he waded into a deep hole.

Two airmen were killed Saturday when a training aircraft from No. 4 Wireless School, R.C.A.F., crashed near Burford, Ont. Their next-of-kin have been notified and names will be released shortly.

Harry Broder, 56, was found Saturday in a Toronto rooming house with a bullet wound in his head. Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner, said a note left beside the body indicated Broder had taken his own life with a revolver.

Liner Normandie Again Afloat

By FRANK LOWE

New York, Aug. 9 (CP). — The youthful United States Navy lieutenant hunched over the rail of the pier, pointed into the harbor, and said. "Isn't she a sorry sight." And the Normandie, a $60,000,000 ship that in peacetime was termed the most beautiful afloat with her plowshare bow, sweeping hull and streamlined, gleaming superstructure, was that and more.

The former North Atlantic speedster, now the U.S.S. Lafayette, floated today—at least temporarily—for the first time in 18 months. But the one-time marine beauty has rather gone to seed: she is as shocking a sight as a queen on a drunk.

Gone is her gleaming superstructure, as are her three slanting, jaunty funnels. Her once broad, gleaming decks are covered with catwalks and coated with rust and patches.

She was refloated at high tide at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, after having rested on her side in the North River since Feb. 9, 1942.

Salvage engineers said, however, there was a chance that the former French luxury liner might again become mud-lodged as the tide receded. Meanwhile, they stopped the 93 pumps that had been heaving water from the hull as she was drawn slowly from the river bottom.

Former Beauties Hidden.

It was said that the giant ship, which sank after a fire 18 months ago when the United States Navy had nearly completed a $20,000,000 job of converting her into a troopship, had not reached the 45-degree angle required to float her to a point where she could be turned around. The angle was given as 49 degrees from vertical.

Lone traces of her former beauty are only hinted at in the battered, smoke and rust-blackened hulk that is gradually becoming a ship again. Not even dirt and river mud can hide those fluid hull lines and the breath-taking sweep of her bow.

There is a big difference, too, in the way people get aboard the ship. No canopied gangplanks with lights and attendants are around. Instead, shaky planks lead from the pier and end in gaping holes in the Normandie's side.

Inside, the change is even more noticeable. Where once luxury fittings gleamed softly, rust and muck are the only decorations. In cabins and companionways formerly filled with immaculately groomed passengers and fragrant with perfume, grimly men sweat in the August heat.

People Line Pier.

Just occasionally does a bit of the ship's former glory remain. Here and there from the floor a bit of chipped tile sparkles, by some chance, having escaped the general coating of grime. Or on a smoke-blackened bulkhead a colored mosaic will momentarily reflect the light of a workman's torch.

But navy men say the U.S.S. Lafayette will sail again, as a troop transport, if she is refitted before the war ends. Today, as she lifted off the floor of the river and moved slightly to the pull of the river, she seemed anxious to return to the salty highways.

And the Old Queen is still the super-showman of the North Atlantic. After a brief but glamorous career as a blue ribbon holder, she retired from the luxury trade spectacularly, and now, beginning life anew, she is still the main aquatic attraction. People by the hundreds today lined the pier where she is being refloated.

Vivid Memories Stirred.

However, there was little evidence of the Normandie's promised new life as newsmen, before the work of pumping her out began, slipped and clambered through the muck and over the girders of the salvaged hulk. And despite the fact the navy guide conducting the tour, with a true seaman's love of ships, kept repeating: "Isn't she a sorry sight," probably the chief mourners in the procession were the veteran New York shipping reporters.

As they crawled through the cavernous wreck, smelly with river mud and from fumes escaping from the holds, one after another they stopped, saying: "It's just about here the bar was. And that was a bar that was a bar."

Or "This is the cabin So-and-So the acress had. Boy, whatta interview that was."

Used as Salvage School

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 9 — (AP) — The fire that swept and capsized the Normandie transformed a $60,000,000 luxury liner into a United States Navy classroom, and the lessons learned while salvaging her now are benefiting British and Canadian as well as American seamen wherever those Allied navies fight.

Capt. W. A. Sullivan, Officer in charge of salvage in the Navy, had long wanted a salvage school. But because of lack of funds and the difficulty of finding a suitable site, nothing was done about it until that February night in 1942 when the Normandie, gutted by flames, rolled onto her side on the Hudson River floor.

It was a tailored-to-order salvage school. As soon as skilled divers and other workers began to clamber over the sunken ship, Sullivan began to mix with them sailors who wished to learn the salvage business.

Working alongside veterans, those youths were quick to catch on. Soon they were handling a full share of the job, and passed their examinations as first class salvage men.

Then Capt. Sullivan expanded. He established a big salvage pier alongside the Normandie, stocking it with all the miscellaneous equipment that is needed to raise sunken vessels. He also started additional classes for officers.

More than 250 skilled salvage men were developed in this way for the United States Navy, as well as 150 officers.

Today they are raising ships in the harbors of Sicily and North Africa and on the sea roads approaching Britain. They took part in the mammoth job of raising the warships sunk at Pearl Harbor, and followed the troops deeper into the Pacific as the Allied advance spread among the islands there.

Capt. Sullivan himself now is a Commodore in charge of salvage operations in the Mediterranean.

And, even though the Normandie now has begun moving to a vertical position, classes are still being held and lessons learned at the pier where she burned. Four hundred men and 40 officers are there, at present under Capt. B. E. Manseau.

CANUCKS LONG TRAINING SPEEDS PROGRESS IN SICILY

These pictures of Canadian troops in action give a clue to the breed of fighting men who have practically swept the island clean of Axis. Toughened by years of gruelling training in England, patrols like the one pictured at TOP moved rapidly and relentlessly from one Sicilian town to another. Peasant donkey carts were commandeered to haul heavy weapons and other equipment. Grinning despite their wounds are these Canadian troops, shown in the BOTTOM picture as they rested at an advanced dressing station. Medical Officer Capt. C. A. Campbell of St. Thomas, Ontario, is shown third from left. —(Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

More Women in Forces

Now that Canadian troops are seeing more action — and it promises to increase steadily — the need for women in Canada's armed forces increases accordingly.

The 27,000 women already in the Navy, Army and Air Force have proven what a wide variety of duties women can perform capably in the services. They have proven, as hundreds of thousands of women throughout the United Nations are proving, that they can play just as an essential part in the conduct of this war as their brothers-in-uniform.

The simple fact, of course, is that jobs like driving trucks and tractors, operating signals systems, coding messages, manning operational rooms, staffing equipment rooms, photography, and all kinds of clerical work, can be done just as well by women as by men. There's nothing "auxiliary" or supplementary about them. They are essential jobs which must be done by someone. If enough women don't come forward and volunteer to take over all such jobs, physically fit men who have been trained for combat must stay behind and do them. It's as simple as that. It should be as obvious as that to young women of reasonable fitness and qualifications.

The new pay regulations for service women just announced help to eliminate any financial obstacles which may have been holding some women back from enlisting. Service women now get four-fifths of the men's basic pay, instead of two-thirds. They get equal trades pay, which is additional to their basic pay. They may obtain dependent's allowance for a dependent father, mother, sister or brother, as the men do. If a woman is married to a man in the Armed Forces, she may now enlist herself and still retain her own dependents' allowance, just as she could always do if she held a civilian job.

This new, increased pay schedule is a definite improvement and was the just due of the thousands of women in the forces who are carrying on essential jobs so the men can go on to do the actual fighting. But thousands more women are needed in the Navy, army, and Air Force —because there are still thousands of jobs which they can do which are being done by men who have been trained for fighting.

And Lo! He Was Not

Thousands of years ago the writer of the thirty-seventh Psalm said these words which a writer to a newspaper points out as indicating the career and end of Mussolini, "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like the green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and lo! he was not; yea, I sought him, but he could not be found."

This passage is one of myriads of quotations which could be used to illustrate events of life in which individual and group or national crime and their end are described. The writers of the priceless Scriptures spoke for the ears of all mankind to hear when they described life in their day. These words quoted could not be more true for they tell the whole story of such a man as Mussolini.

Those words were written on the very basis of truth by a great moral writer who not only knew the type and kind he described but was a poet and singer who was able to express once for all the ruin to which such men come as the man who spread himself like the green bay tree.

Germany and Italy

News from Sicily speaks of not an Italian soldier being in the fighting and any references are to the Germans in the island who are battling to try to avoid a second Tunisia.

This would seem to indicate that as far as the Germans and others can see, Germany is forced to go the way to defeat henceforth alone because Italy is in a serious plight and unable to play an effective part in the Axis counsels and actions.

One of the sequels to the fall of Mussolini, Ciano and the rest of the Fascist power is very interesting. It concerns a story of the appeal of Hitler through Goering to Italy to have Mossolini handed to Hitler for the former Duce's safety, since it was felt that Italy might not be able to safeguard him. How true this story is, is not clear, but the answer goes that the Italian authorities refused to deliver Mussolini. That would indicate that Germany can see little or no help from Italy.

Germans will have to tread the path of aggression alone whatever Italy and Badoglio decide to do. However much or little Hitler listened to Mussolini in the past he will evidently have only himself and his Nazi associates to confer with on important matters of the future course of the war.

For Italy herself an anxious time must be in waiting as the Sicilian campaign nears the windup, the island of Ustica, forty miles north of Palermo, falls and the world looks to the Italian mainland next.

Enemy Geodetics

(Chicago Sun)

A report from enemy sources by way of Madrid says that German scientists working at the Potsdam Geodetic Institute have discovered that North America is moving away from Europe at the rate of 12 inches a year.

Perhaps this may explain the new German theory that time is on the side of the Axis.

And it may be some comfort to American isolationists.

Now, according to the Potsdam scientists, South America is moving west at the rate of only eight inches a year compared to 12 inches for our continent.

Every three years it falls back a foot in the race to get away from the Old World. Of course, this may be only enemy propaganda, but a look at the map tends to bear out the contention.

If South America is lagging, it would explain why the lower half of Mexico is twisted to the east. Already Panama is a slender thread, stretched due east and west.

If the Germans are right, one of these days the connection may be split asunder under the strain and the Americas be gobbled separately. Perhaps the slit of the canal should be filled in with reinforced concrete.

Nature's Help

In Massachusetts, it is estimated there are not less than five insect-eating birds per acre, or some 25,600,000 in all, says The Christian Science Monitor. Orthinologists agree that 100 insects a day is a conservative estimate of the quantity consumed by each insectivorous bird. Thus the Bay State furnishes some 2,560,000,-000 insects daily to the bird population.

A recent writer to the Rural New Yorker discusses the question of natural pest control. The writer explains how plum and prune trees in a chicken yard were free of curculio and that apple trees in which bird feeding stations were maintained were remarktbly free of worms.

Mankind has much to learn of Nature's processes. It has a fruitful experience in store as it learns to harness her services more fully. On the surface, American agriculture has made great progress with chemicals for fertilizers and improved plant varieties and methods of cultivation. It can also help food production by encouraging the co-operation of feathered allies.

Always a Cad and a Liar

One hates to kick a man when he is down. But we would do violence to truth if we said any good thing of Benito Mussolini. Always a cad and a liar and a racketeer, he has proved himself a coward to the last.

JUST FOLKS

THE DREAM WE HOLD

This is the dream we hold: that the earth shall some day be Fit for a human dwelling place, from ancient hatreds free;
A playground safe for its children small,
secure every spire and dome
And governments all which guarantee the sanctity of home.

This is the dream we serve. that power shall be second to right;
That what is decent and what is just shall have precedence over might;
That a poor man's cottage shall sacred be and the wage for his toil be fair,
And who grows rich shall consider his wealth as a privilege to share.

This is the dream we keep: that never shall tyrant rule
Or close the doors on the House of God or poison the public school.
We have set our hearts on an ampler life,
and in sky and on land and sea
We have given our bravest and best to fight, till the whole wide world is free.

Two Picnics End In Stabbing Frays

Delhi, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—Two men were stabbed here Sunday at two different picnics and one of them is in serious condition in Simcoe Hospital.

Frank Springman, 46, a Delhi tobacco worker, has stab wounds in the chest, abdomen and left arm, allegedly inflicted by Jak Tropp, 48, R.R. 1, St. Williams. Tropp was lodged in the county jail at Simcoe by Provincial Police.

William Prokopetz of Teeterville received a four-inch gash on the neck from a knife said to have been wielded by Joe Lehan of the Simcoe district. Prokopetz was also treated in Delhi for scratches and bruises to his face. Police intimated that charges would be laid against the alleged assailant and a companion, John Todka, of Teeterville.

Springman was stabbed at a fight at a Hungarian picnic two and a half miles west of Delhi on No. 3 Highway.

Prokopetz received his injuries at a Polish picnic Sunday afternoon between Windham Centre and Waterford.

Giant War Birds

(New York Times)

The mammoth new plant of Douglas Aircraft has been dedicated at Chicago, only ten months after ground was broken for the main manufacturing plant. Here the largest planes in full scale production in the nation, the four-engined C-54 Skymasters, which are the cargo version of the DC-4 developed for the commercial airlines,are to be turned out in quantity.

These light metal giants will be hatched from a nest of wood, the largest wooden structure in the world. Realizing the critical demands for steel for other purposes, 'plane engineers and the Material Command of the Army Air Forces utilized enough lumber in its construction to build 4,500 good sized homes. Even downspouts have been made of fibre, water and process lines of asbestos, and plastic pipe, siding of cement and asbestos, and huge trusses and columns of plain and laminated woods.

Enough critical material has thus been saved to make 3,000 medium tanks, 4,200 army trucks, 2,400,000 rifles, one hundred million 20-mm. aircraft shells, and three million 75-mm. armor piercing shells. From the airport of this ingeniously fabricated plant, which itself includes runways totalling twenty-five miles in length, will fly Skymasters each capable of carrying fifteen tons of arms and equipment or 50 fully equipped and armed soldiers.

Sublime or Insane?

(From Ottawa Journal)

"It is a magnificent exhibition of democracy. It is not war." This was the remark of the New York Herald Tribune in May of 1940 when the British House of Commons held a long and wide-open debate on Chamberlain's conduct of the war. Norway and Denmark had fallen and Holland, Belgium and France were on the brink.

But another view of that historic debate, in which Chamberlain was given a supporting vote of only 281 to 200, is expressed by the French writer, Raoul De Russy De Sales in a diary he kept at the time which is about to be published. It seemed to him that the democratic frankness of the debates at such a time was not without its greatness. "There is something sublime—or insane—about this English readiness to display their weakness, fears and mistakes."

Continues De Sales, writing on May 7, 1940:

"These debates leave an impression of greatness. In a certain sense they restore the prestige of Britain, which was shaken by the Norwegian defeat. Nowhere else in the world would it be possible to hold such debates in such grave circumstances. Churchill coldly stated that the danger had never been so great, even in the last war. It takes great courage to make such admissions. Neither the Germans nor the Italians will understand the value of these historic debates. They will see in them only signs of decadence and weakness. As a matter of fact this is the first time for many years that parliamentarism, with all it implies, has achieved a real victory. This is the first real, sincere manifestation of what is called democracy."

We reproduce that observation for those who like to keep scrapbooks. It was three days before the Germans invaded Holland, Belgium and the Luxemburg. We all remember the debate and perhaps we should remember what De Sales thought of it. There is a tendency in our own country to keep bad news down, to cover our confusion; because, some say, to reveal these weaknesses would give comfort to the enemy. De Sales interprets such sublime or insane revelations of weakness as revelations of great strength—and we think he's right.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Phantasy—Day Dreaming

A few years ago a physician met a young man of twenty who had given much promise as a youngster as a student. He was poorly clothed and was apparently unemployed. On asking him what he was doing the youth replied, 'Oh, I am doing a lot of reading at home and I expect to write a book on philosophy. That is why I am not working; I feel that I can do big things later and I do not wish to waste my time at trivial tasks."

"Who is supporting you while you are doing so much reading and planning?"

'Oh, I am living at home but I will pay them back many times soon".

The physician saw that this young fellow had constructed a phantasy for himself, that is he was daying-dreaming. He was living in a pleasant world of his own in which the fact that he was reading and imagining himself a successful author, or a hero of some kind, satisfied him.

Now everybody, especially young men and some young women, have day dreams and get real satisfaction therein, but fortunately the great majority realize that they must work, study, compete with others in the affairs of life, and they can day dream but a small part of the time.

What can or should be done where the young man or woman is "satisfied" to remain in this state of day dreaming?

In this case the physician pointed out how unfair he was to his hard working mother and father, because none of the other children were old enough to lend any support to the family. That he was really a "quitter" and would not admit it.

The words sunk deeply into the young man's mind and within a few days he was working in a lumber yard where his natural strength of body earned him an income sufficient to help support the family, clothe himself decently and enable him to attain the natural morale and ambition of a normal young man.

Phantasy or day dreaming is dangerous to mental health because it provides a "refuge", a "defensive mechanism" behind which the individual shuts out the responsibilities of life.

Fortunately during stress of war, the number of these cases of persistent day dreaming decreases.

Catania Had "Reign of Terror" For Month Before British Arrived

(By NOLAND NORGAARD)
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the British 8th. Army in Catania, Aug. 7 (Delayed) (AP) — The dapper Marquis of San Giulia, mayor of Catania and the scion of a proud old Sicilian family, said today that "for a month we have had a reign of terror."

He stood in the office of the Prefect of Police and told the story of his town under German rule and Allied bombing.

Only a few moments before, he had conferred with the British brigadier commanding the troops who had just chased the Nazis through the town and beyond.

The Allied air raids had sent four-fifths of Catania's 250,000 people fleeing to the countryside weeks ago. The remaining 50,000, consisting largely of the city's poorest residents, stayed behind. Of them, he said approximately 2,000 had been killed in raids since July 15.

Survivors looted. British troops, pursuing the Germans, had no time to interfere and the Catania police —still decked out in their gaudy Fascist-type uniforms—were slow in arriving at trouble spots.

Fatal Squabble Over Mules

The Marquis said that the Germans earlier had taken bedding and furniture from homes to sell elsewhere. Then he told of an incident two weeks ago at nearby Mascalucia, when the Germans attempted to commandeer 14 mules, and the Sicilians refused to give up the animals.

The Germans, he said, tried to persuade the mule owners with machine-guns and Italian troops intervened, armed with tommy-guns and grenades. Three Germans and one Italian were killed and others were wounded.

Originally the Germans sent only airplane reinforcements to Sicily, the Marquis continued, but after the fall of Tunisia ground troops began pouring in and made no secret of their belief that "they were the master."

Enemy Knows He's Defeated Now

The Marquis declared that he was "convinced that the Germans know they are going to lose the war."

The mayor, who was Italy's foreign minister at the outbreak of the First Great War, concluded by telling us that the Germans dynamited some of Catania's buildings before withdrawing in the night, and had left the post office rigged up with mines and booby-traps.

We rode back to the business district. The police had been given back their carbines and they carefully patrolled all streets where almost every store was now stripped.

Whatever police were in the neighborhood avoided intervention when looters broke into the Fascist headquarters, but the shabby people wanted nothing of the takings there. Two boys rushed into the street with arms loaded with dress words, apparently intended for party parades, and began distributing them to embarrassed British troops who were passing.

They dumped into the gutter a boxful of German and Italian medals.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By FOSTER BARCLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in Britain, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Sqdn. Ldr. Walter Edwin Edser, a Canadian in the R.A.F., has set a Flying Fortress endurance record as a member of the coastal command's Fortress Squadron which has rescued more than 100 airmen and seamen from the Atlantic in six months.

Edser, whose wife lives at New Westminster, B. C., established the record — length of which is a military secret — when the squadron maintained a "shuttle service" over a group of lifeboats from a ship torpedoed 500 miles at sea. The fortress provided protection until the men were picked by by another ship.

German night raiders better watch out for Sqdn. Ldr. A. G. Lawrence, D.F.C. of Brandon, Man., who has knocked bombers from the sky every time he has come within gun range. He has four to his credit, the last one a Dornier 217, destroyed 10 miles off the east coast of Britain.

"We made two sightings that time," said Lawrence, a night fighter pilot. "We sighted the first one about one a. m. flying high directly over the coast. It saw us too and beat it out of there.

"After that we sighted a DO 217 crossing our bow. We came round on its stern and it immediately started to dive and climb and make hard turns to port and starboard. We got in a burst from our cannons at about 500 feet without any apparent result. Then with our second burst there was a huge flash from the starboard engine. It seemed to blow up with a hell of a blast that settled down to a steady glow."

Wing Cmdr. Lloyd V. Chadburn of Aurora, Ont., leader of a Canadian Spitfire Wing, and Flt. Lt. Jack Rae (750 Spadina Ave.) Toronto, teamed up in a neat bit of co-operation to destroy an ME-109 near the Netherlands Coast.

The Canadian wing and an RAF. squadron were escorting torpedo-carrying Beaufighters on an excursion which took them through heavy coastal flak to attack a Nazi convoy. Several German fighters were patrolling above the convoy and as the Beaufighters went down to release their "fish" the fighters went after the Germans.

Squadrons led by Sqdn. Ldr. Geoff Northcott of Minnedosa, Man., and Sqdn. Ldr. Frank Grant of Brockville, Ont., and the R.A.F. squadron sandwiched the Germans among them and they bounced from one squadron to the other in frantic efforts to escape. Four of them were shot down.

During the melee Chadburn opened up at short range on an ME 109 and at the same moment Rae, on the enemy's tail, poured cannon and machine-gun fire into the fighter. Hits were scored around the engine and the German crashed.

The Maryland toleration act of 1649, one of the landmarks of religious freedom, put Catholics and Protestants on the same footing but dealt harshly with non-Christians.

A certain king of France is said to have lost his life through an excess of moral stamina in the observance of good form, wrote Thorstein Veblen in The Theory of the Leisure Class. "In the absence of the functionary whose office it was to shift his master's seat, the king sat uncomplaining before the fire and suffered his royal person to be toasted beyond recovery. But in so doing he saved his Most Christian Majesty from menial contamination."

The earliest known grain reaper using animal power was rescribed by Pliny the Elder as used in Gaul in the first century A.D. It consisted of an ox-pushed, two-wheeled cart on which was mounted a box with a comb projecting from the front. The comb tore off the heads of the grain and caused them to fall into the box.

Levi Coffin, who ran a store at Fountain City, Indiana, and helped fugitive slaves on their way to Canada, was known as "The President of the Underground Railroad."

When Simon Bolivar Buckner, Confederate commander of Ft. Donelson, saw that the jig was up in February, 1862, he sent a note to General U. S. Grant asking for the terms of surrender. Grant replied: "No terms other than an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted." Because of this note and because his initials were "U. S." Grant thereafter was nicknamed "Unconditional Surrender Grant."

Under date of July 22, 1790, Senator William Maclay of Pennsylvania wrote in his diary that the resignation of George Washington as President of the United States "is expected."

In the early days of the federal government the chief interest in the Atlantic fisheries was as "a nursery of seamen for the navy."

President Taft encouraged what was popularly known as "dollar diplomacy," the promotion of American trade and investments abroad by diplomatic means. During his first year in office President Wilson, in a speech at Mobile, Alabama, specifically repudiated dollar-diplomacy and declared his intention "to cultivate the friendship and deserve the confidence" of Latin America.

Broiled Dinners

Broiling and pan-broiling fit neatly into the warm weather food picture

No one wants to spend hot hours in the kitchen these days, so now's the time to plan easily prepared meals with a come-on flavour that will satisfy the family, yet leave time for outdoor activities.

If broiling brings to your mind only luscious pictures of a thick beef steak, remember that lots of class C meats as well as some unrationed meats readily lend themselves to broiling!

Many an exclusive restaurant menu used to list—even in the days of plenty—"de luxe chopped steak." And this featured entree can just as well be prepared in your own kitchen.

One coupon's worth of ground beef or lamb mixed with a pinch of herbs or chopped onion shaped into flat cakes makes a delicious meal for four people. Serve with broiled tomato slices or mushrooms and a quick cooking green vegetable.

Calf or lamb liver, veal or lamb kidney or par-boiled sliced sweetbreads brushed with soft fat are all meals well worth trying. For a big party a mixture of any or all of these three plus lamb cutlets, tomatoes and mushrooms gives you a ration-thrifty but impressive "English Mixed Grill."

WARTIME BROILING

For broiled meats (whether oven-broiled or pan-broiled) the basic rule of meat cookery should be followed: slow cooking to avoid shrinkage. So keep the heat down and do not overcook.

Soprano Diva Goes "Swing" For Soldiers

(By ARLENE WOLF)
(Associated Press Writer)

New York, Aug. 9 (CP) — Things—and people—are seldom what they seem. Especially women.

Take Natalie Bodanya for example. She looks like 111 pounds of sweater girl. She talks like a co-ed. She's been christened "Sweetheart of the Merchant Marine," and loves to jitterbug. She sings in a nightclub. But she's a Metropolitan Opera star!

The 8,000 soldiers out at Scott Field, Ill., thought exactly what you'd think if someone said an opera stor was going to toss off a few notes for your entertainment. They pictured a rather large, weighty female, with a penchant for pear-shaped vowels, histrionics and the classics.

So when pint-sized Natalie tripped out on the stage in a cotton dirndl and clog shoes, they whistled with delight. And when she opened her mouth, out came tunes the boys knew—popular medleys, folk songs, semi-classics.

"Wherever I go, there's the same reaction," Natalie laughs. "Particularly at the camps. They announce me, and I hear a deathly silence out front. I walk on stage. I go like this (she made a voluptuous hour-glass outline in the air.) I wink at the boys. I giggle. They roar. Then we're friends."

Unusual Background

In addition to not looking like a lyric soprano, Natalie doesn't have the kind of background you'd expect of an opera star either. In her 'teens she was too busy helping her mother support a younger brother and sister in New York's east side to worry about a career.

"But I was always singing," she says. "We lived near Italians and they were always vocalizing too. I sang on the streets with them."

It wasn't until Marcella Sembrich heard the 16 year old at a neighborhood settlement house that Natalie was on her way to music school and fame.

"It sure took me long enough to get into the Met," Natalie remembers. "I auditioned until I thought I ought to ask them to pay me for it, it took so much time. And you know, when they finally telephoned to me I was hired, I thought it was a gag.

Just Hung Up

"'This is Mr. Johnson's office at the Metropolitan,' they said. 'Sure, I'm Queen Mary,' I answered, and hung up." (Edward Johnson, Canadian-born tenor and Metropolitan Opera manager.)

"That happened three times. Finally Mr. Johnson got disgusted and left his number. When I called back I felt sick. But they hired me anyway."

And with the exception of her present invasion into New York's niteries, and time out for concert hours, to get married and have a baby, that's where Natalie has been ever since. Her small stature has always worried people—ever since that first day when Director Johnson insisted on changing her name from Natasha Tatiana Bodanskaya to Natalia Bodanya.

Such a little girl, he decided, shouldn't have such a big name.

Diet, Care Remove Eye Puffiness

Sonja Henie has clear, lovely eyes.

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Women who have puffy little hammocks under their eyes, hate them. They make them look worn and haggard, if not dissipated, and that's no fun for anybody. The popular belief is that they signify the presence of kidney disorders, but that's not necessarily the case.

If they are permanent fixtures they may be an unwelcome inheritance. If they come and go, they are due to loss of sleep, lack of fresh air or minor digestive disturbances.

Stick to Diet

The thing to do is to determine the cause, if possible. Try to ease up on activities. Get to bed early. Have as much outdoor exercise as you can get. Stick to a simple, nutritious diet, cutting down of pastries and rich sauces. No need of telling one to restrict the intake of meats: rationing is doing that for you.

Try the water cure. Start the day with two glasses of water, especially if you suffer from constipation. Take a glass between meals, another at bedtime, though that amount can be cut down if you have tea, coffee or milk. Find time each day for five or ten minutes of deep breathing exercises to slap the circulatory system into a state of lively activity. All these health measures are good for your complexion and morale.

Local treatments will reduce the swelling.

Dip a heavy wash cloth in hot water, apply to the eyes, holding the cloth close to the flesh. Repeat five or six times.

Wrap an ice cube in gauze, and friction the flesh. This change from hot to cold will hustle the blood streams. Dry gently.

Dip your finger in a massage cream and apply lightly, starting at the inner corner of the eyelid, sweeping out to the temple, coming back under the eye to starting point.

THE MIXING BOWL

THIS YEAR'S PICKLES

Hello Homemakers! A search warrant is being made for sugarless recipes for relishes. This year, pickles must be made without sugar or with the little you are able to save from your ration. Just like everything else that is not easy to obtain, is one reason why we hope to have a supply on our own shelf.

We've just opened beets canned by the saccharine method last year and they are real good. Because we eat a small amount of relish or pickle at any one time, we are recommending the following recipes:

Saccharine Pickles

1 teapsoon Saccharine—exact measurement (if too much is used it produces a bitter-sweet flavour in the product), 1 teaspoon powered alum, 1 cupful salt, 1 gallon white wine vinegar.

Stir the powdered alum, saccharine and salt into the vinegar and it is ready for use.

Prepare the pickles; wash, cut and dry. Pack in sterilized jars. Spices can be added (preferably dill). Pour solution over the pickles and seal tight. This produces about ten quarts. This solution may be made and kept in a jug and poured over cucumbers when enough to make a jar full is available. If it is to be used on beets, the alum should be omitted. Beets preserved by this means may be used within a few hours. Cucumbers pickled with this solution should be allowed to stand for two or three weeks.

Pickled Silver Skin Onions

Soak one cup white onions (peeled) in strong brine for 24 hours. Soak —in fresh water 1 hour and drain. Mix the following:

1 cup white wine vinegar, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ tablespoon allspice, ½ tablespoon white mustard seed, 2 peppercorns.

Boil 1 minute. Pack onions into clean sterilized jars. Cover with boiling syrup and seal.

Dill Pickles

Wash cucumbers and wipe well. Pack into jars. To 1 quart jar add:

4 teaspoons salt, 1 small hot red pepper, 1 clove garlic, dill and savory.

Fill jar with mixture of vinegar and water in proportion of 1 quart of white vinegar to 2 quarts water. Seal tightly. Ready to use in 6 weeks.

Beet Relish

8 cups chopped cooked beets, 1 1-3 cups chopped red peppers, 1 cup chopped onions, 1 cup horseradish, grated, ½ cup sugar, 1 1-3 tablespoons salt, 4 cups vinegar.

Cook beets until tender. Remove skins and chop. Add onions and peppers. Combine all ingredients and cook until mixture is clear. Pour the hot mixture into sterilized jars and seal.

Sour Mustard Pickle Sauce

Use half-cup vegetable combinations to make 1 quart, such as onions, sliced or tiny; corn; yellow beans, cut; cauliflower flowerets, cucumbers, sliced; green peppers, chopped.

Cover with weak brine and let stand overnight. Drain and soak in clear water for 1 hour. Add 1 cup water, 1 cup vinegar and let stand 15 minutes. Cook 10-15 minutes. Drain. Add sweet or sour mustard sauce. Let pickles come to a boil. Bottle.

Sour Mustard Sauce:

1 tbsp. flour, 3-4 tbsp. mustard, 1-4 cup brown sugar, 1-8 tsp. tumeric, 1 cup vinegar, ½ tsp. salt.

Chili Sauce

1 6-quart basket tomatoes, 8 onions (chopped), 4 green peppers, 2 cups cider vinegar, 2 tablespoons salt, 2 cups corn syrup, 4 tablespoons mixed pickling spices (tied in a bag).

Peel the tomatoes and cut in pieces; chop onions and peppers; put in large preserving kettle. Cook slowly, uncovered, for 3 hours, or until thick. Pour into sterile jars and seal at once. Yield: approximately 7 pints.

• •

TAKE A TIP

1. Grape or horseradish leaves covering the top will keep more green color in the cucumbers.
2. If plum stones are stubborn to remove leave them in until after the fruit is cooked for jam. They will come to the surface and are easy to skim off.
3. A sprig of mint cooked with peas gives a pleasant flavor and keeps the vegetable green.
4. White cabbage, cauliflower and white onions keep their color if cooked in water that has had ½ tsp. cream of tartar added. This softens the water.
5. There are two ways to prevent pickle sauces from burning as it begins to thicken. Rub preserving kettle with a hard fat before putting in the ingredients. Or, slip an old tin pan under the preserving kettle during the last ½ hour of cooking. If you have to leave the kitchen for any length of time, put the kettle in a 350 degree oven, leaving the door ajar.

ECONOMIC CHANGE

X-Ray Detects Slightest Trace of Tuberculosis

There are two important ways in which the doctor learns whether or not tuberculosis is present in a patient. One way is by X-ray pictures of the lungs. A second method is to examine the sputum (the coughed-up excretion from the lungs) to see if the tuberculosis germs are present. Both of these methods of diagnosis are almost always used nowadays.

The diagnosis of early tuberculosis is not easy. Before the discovery of the X-ray, a diagnosis often was made by examining the chest with a stethoscope, which is an instrument the physician uses to listen to the breathing sounds. Of course, this type of examination is not as exact as the use of the X-ray. Even though the tuberculosis germs are not found in the sputum, the X-ray may show evidence of the disease.

Dr. Donald R. Chisholm of Hawaii advises that whenever a physician suspects that a patient has tuberculosis an X-ray should be taken at once. Even though an X-ray may be expensive, the patient cannot afford not to have it taken.

There is another test which is used in diagnosing tuberculosis. This test is known as the tuberculin test and is made by injecting tuberculin, which is obtained from a culture of tuberculosis germs, into the skin. However, a positive test does not mean that the patient necessarily has active tuberculosis. It may merely mean that he has been sensitized to the tuberculin as a result of a tuberculosis infection which may be completely healed. On the other hand, a negative test does mean that tuberculosis is not present.

Tuberculosis may be present for some time before it gives rise to marked symptoms. However, such things as unusual tiredness, continued coughing following a cold, aching in the chest, a slight loss of weight and a complaint of being feverish especially in the afternoon should bring the suspicion to mind that tuberculosis may be present. If the source of these symptoms is not readily apparent, the patient should be carefully examined, and an X-ray fluoroscopic examination of the chest should be made, a tuberculin test made, and the patient's sputum examined for the presence of tuberculosis germs.

The earlier the treatment is started, the better, of course, will be the results. One of the most modern methods of treatment is the use of lung collapse. This is produced by injecting air into the chest cavity. The pressure of the air tends to keep the lung immovable and thus give it rest, so that healing may occur. Not all patients with tuberculosis can be treated in this way. However, after a period of rest in bed the patient who is acutely sick may improve to such an extent that the lung collapse may be carried out. Another method of making the lung immovable is the cutting of the phrenic nerve.

Just which treatment should be used can be decided after the patient is carefully studied by all the available methods.

Fashion Flashes

A NICE DISCOVERY is the variety available in new blouses. Smart for afternoon is a white or pastel satin blouse with fine rows of stitching marking the narrow, standing collar that ends in a self bow, also stitched. Simpler stitching down the closing in front. Self ruffles edge the wrist of the long sleeves.

FEATHERS FLY onto the smartest new hats. A tiny sailor of black velvet has its brim covered with black glycerined ostrich held by turquoise plumage pads. Shrimp pink grosgrain trimming.

DRESS UP woolens are again important. A short skirted dinner dress of dark green jersey is made with a deep rounded neckline and self belt that ties in a bow. A band of pearls and colored stones is set in the bodice and similar embroideries edge the short sleeves.

BETTER START slimming down for the new frocks. They are so smoothly slim that the slightest bulge is going to jut out. Lavish embroideries, color and fabric contrasts dress up the ultra slim lines.

NEW VERSIONS of the fur lined coat show contrasting fur trimmings. A dramatic and beautiful coat of black tweed has a lining of white South American lamb plus a collar, and wide notched revers of black Persian lamb.

AMONG THE REVIVALS appearing this autumn is the pearl bead necklace. Chokers, triple strands, dog collars of pearls with jewelstone studded clasps are cited to dress up the new simple little sheath frocks in crepe and satin. The 60-inch necklace of pearls with pearl earrings or earrings to match the jeweled clasp are new notes.

CHATTERTON W.M.S.

The August meeting was held at the home of the president, Mrs. E. B. Finkle, who opened the meeting. Minutes were read and twelve members answered the roll call. The worship service, "The Christian Stewardship of Time" was conducted by the president with Scripture readings by Mrs. W. Lough, Mrs. F. Finkle, Mrs. C. Marisette and Mrs. B. Mitts.

Mrs. Alex Tanner, group leader, welcomed the Mission Band members who were being entertained by the W.M.S. and also thanked all band members who helped with the program. A reading, "Golden Rule," was given by Helen Carter. A song was rendered by Evelyn Holmstead and a reading given by Shirley Tanner. Wilma and Wanda Lough sang "Listen to the Voice of Jesus" and Mrs. A. Tanner read "Tangled Threads." The Mizpah benediction closed the meeting. A lunch of sandwiches, cake and tarts was served and a short time was spent in visiting.

Rudy York After Major Loop Record of Nineteen Home Runs During the Month of August

Detroit Player Has Hit Five in the First Week of This Month

DODGERS GO DOWN

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rudy York, whose home run bat has revived unexpectedly, may set a major league record by hitting 19 or more round-trippers this month.

The husky Detroit first baseman socked three homers yesterday in leading Tigers to a double win over the Chicago White Sox. The circuit clouts gave him the major league leadership with 18, but more important, they gave him a total of five for the first week of August.

It was six years ago, in August, 1937, that York walloped 18 homers for a major league mark that still stands. If he continues to connect for five homers in each of the remaining three weeks of August he is certain to break his own record.

York's booming bat, which whacked 21 homers last year and 27 in 1941, backed up superlative pitching from Virgil Trucks and Tommy Bridges as Detroit tied the White Sox for third place. York hit two of his homers in the first game while Trucks beat the Sox, 8-2, limiting them to six hits. His third round-tripper came in the second game as Bridges twirled a four-hit 3-0 shutout. Altogether York drove in five runs for the day and boosted his season R.B.I. to 64, despite a humble .266 batting average.

The first place New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals each swept a doubleheader to further increase their leads in the American and National Leagues.

Chandler Wins 15th.

The Yankees, with Spud Chandler twirling a five-hitter for his 14th win of the year and, in addition, lacing out a home run, walloped Philadelphia Athletics, 7-1, but had to come from behind to win the second game, 8-4, in 10 innings. The Bronx Bombers now move on to St. Louis with a three-game winning streak and a nine-game lead.

The Cardinals stretched their lead to 13 games by beating the second place Pittsburgh Pirates twice, 8-6 and 5-2.

Cincinnati moved within half a game of the Pirates by splitting a twin bill with Chicago Cubs. The Cubs took the opener, 4-3, as Hi Bithorn came to Claude Passeau's rescue to stop a late Red rally. A big seven-run outburst in the fifth gave Cincinnati the nightcap, 10-7, for Bucky Walters' third straight win and eighth of the season.

The fading Brooklyn Dodgers took it on the chin for the 10th straight time when Elmer Nieman doubled Tommy Holmes home in the ninth inning to give the Boston Braves a 5-4 victory. Brooklyn now has lost 15 of 18 games.

Indians Win Twice

Cleveland pulled to within half a game of Detroit and White Sox by beating St. Louis Browns twice, 6-5 in 14 innings and 5-2 behind Jim Bagby's five-hit pitching for his 12th win of the year. Chubby Dean, who relieved Mel Harder in the 10th, singled home Jeff Heath with the winning run in the 14th inning of the opener. Bobo Newsom started for the Browns in the nightcap and gave up a three-run homer to Heath in the first inning. The Browns played the second game without making an assist for a major league record. The previous record of one was held by several clubs.

Washington divided a bargain bill with Boston Red Sox. Jake Early batted in three runs with a homer and double as the Senators took the opener, 4-3. The Sox won the nightcap by the same score as rookie George "Pinky" Woods outpitched Milo Candini.

The Phillies swept a four-game series from New York Giants by winning both ends of a doubleheader, 5-1 and 8-2, thus regaining 6th place.

THE CHAMP — 1943 EDITION

Although somewhat of a smoothie and really good looking, "Wild Bill" Longson, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, is far from a softie. He can, and will, rough matters with the best of them and one of the best is John (Killer) Katan, the Palermo assassin, who meets Longson in a title bout at the Hume Arena on Wednesday night. To support the appearance of the "champion" Promoter Tunney has Earl McCready meeting Al Dunlop and Jerry Monahan opening matters against Doc Felice. TORONTO LEAFS WIN TWO OVER THE WEEKEND

Defeat Baltimore Orioles in Twin Bill on Sunday

BEARS WIN TWO

By The Associated Press

It wasn't more than two weeks ago that Tom Sunkel, now pitching for Montreal Royals of the International League, threatened to give up baseball but today he probably is happy that he didn't.

Sunkel sulked when sent down to the Jersey City club by the parent New York Giants and then was shunted to the Royals.

But that was all forgotten yesterday when he emerged the victor over the Jersey City club, 2-0, although his former mates clubbed him for six blows while his new friends found Crip Polli for only a pair of hits.

The former major leaguer won out when Jersey City erred three times in the sixth frame and the miscues helped manufacture a pair of runs.

Montreal also won the first game, 5-4, with Hal Gregg the winning pitcher.

Newark took a pair from Rochester, 8-2 and 5-1; Syracuse mastered Buffalo twice, 6-3 and 3-2 and Toronto annexed both games from Baltimore, 3-1 and 10-7.

Home runs were numerous as the Bears completed their long home stay with their twin triumph. They didn't get any in the first fray as Walt Dubiel coasted into the ninth with prospects of his sixth shutout. That was ruined when Joe Mack and Earl Naylor homered for the wings in the final frame.

All Bear runs in the nightcap, however, came on four-masters. Russ Derry and Steve Roser each got one with the bases empty while Frank Silvanic's came with two mates on.

The home run also was the favorite weapon of Syracuse Chiefs as they chalked up their twin triumphs at Buffalo. Frank Keller got one in each game and Hank Sauer one in the first. All the Bisons tallies in the two tilts came on circuit smashes.

Jimmy Slattery Dies in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Jimmy Slattery, 40, recognized as the world light-heavyweight champion for a few months in 1930, died last night in a New York hospital.

Slattery was admitted to the hospital shortly before noon Sunday and died within 12 hours from causes which attaches did not divulge.

Slattery, who was born in Buffalo, outpointed Lou Scozza in a 15-round bout at Buffalo to gain recognition as the New York Commission's light heavyweight champion in 1930. He held the crown for only four months, however, before losing it to Maxie Rosenbloom in the same city. He retired in 1931.

Ryder Cup Defenders Win Two-Day Golf Tournament

(By The Canadian Press)

With Byron Nelson setting the pace, the Ryder Cup defenders, captained by Craig Wood, captured the two-day golf tournament 8 1-2 to 3 1-2 from Walter Hagen's challengers and when it was all over late Sunday, at Detroit, the sum of $35,000 was available for the American Red Cross.

American crucial test was Nelson's 4-and-3 win over Willie Goggin with the former turning in six under par for the required 33 holes. This was the first time, too, that Nelson had been victorious in Ryder play, although a prominent veteran in the game. Nelson's victorious team-mates comprised Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Sgt. Vic Ghezzi, Lloyd Mangrum, Al Watrous and Craig Wood. For the losing side, one of the match winners was Lawson Little who chalked up his first Ryder success by whipping Gene Sarazen 6 and 4 while another winning challenger was Melvin (Chick) Harbert who was six under par in his defeat of Jimmy Demaret of Detroit, 4 and 3.

In last year's domestic play for the Ryder trophy, abandoned internationally for the duration, Wood's team held off Hagen's squad 10 points to five. For the war years, two U.S. teams have continued to compete for the cup and thus far $85,000 has been raised all told for war charities, including this year's $35,000.

Gunder Haegg of Sweden was actually beaten in his second-to-last race in America Saturday night at Cincinnati but Ehlman who led him to the tape of the two-mile event, Bob Berger, an Ohio High School student, started from the 440-yard handicap mark. Haegg, from scratch set a new American outdoor record of 8:51.3.

At Saratoga's transplanted meet at Belmont track Saturday, which saw $2,000,000 in wagering, Lochinvar, a long shot at $16.80, romped home in the Merchants and Citizens Handicap to earn $12,200, doing the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:55, a new track record. Market Wise and Shut Out were withdrawn from the track.

Eddie Accaro, Kentucky jockey and one of the turf's best, will ride again, commencing Sept. 19, when his year's suspension by the Jockey Club, New York, will be over. Accaro was set down a week after he had been charged with rough riding in a race at Aqueduct.

A pupil of Luis Firpo, once famed as the wild Bull of the Pampas, heavyweight Abel Cestac easily won his fight with Feliciano Brizuela at Buenos Aires, Sunday, sending his opponent to the floor twice. Cestac and Firpo will shortly arrive in the United States for bouts.

Colby Hanover, the four-year-old which was badly beaten in the 1942 Hambletonian, was the winner of the $2,500 derby consolation trot on closing day of Grand Circuit racing at Old Orchard Beach, Me., taking the last two heats after breaking in the first start. Seven races on the card required 19 heats.

The Inter County senior baseball race closed Saturday for the Ingersoll Combines with a 4-1 loss on the home diamond to the Galt Terriers. The scheduled season came to an end with Ingersoll in the cellar, the team having been defeated in every game throughout the campaign.

In an International lawn bowling tournament at Hamilton, six Canadian rinks earned a 150-109 win over representatives of the eastern division of the American Lawn Bowling Association Saturday. The visiting players came from points from Boston to Milwaukee, Wis.

DOG IN JAIL WITH MASTER

Franklin, Ind., Aug. 7 (AP)—Raymond Bess, 36-year-old Indiapapolis painter sentenced to jail here for two weeks' on a charge of intoxication, asked Sheriff Russell W. Cochrane, "please let me take my dog with me." Brownie now is helping his master even the score with society.

Chubby Dean and Jeff Heath, Indians—Dean's 14th-inning single and relief pitching in first game and Heath's three-run homer in second game gave Cleveland double victory over Browns.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

The man came into a barber shop and a manicurist started work on him as he sat in the barber chair:

Man (to manicurist)—How about a date, honey?

Manicurist — That wouldn't be right.

Man (pleading)—Aw, just let's have dinner.

Manicurist—I'm afraid not, my husband wouldn't like it.

Man—He wouldn't mind.

Manicurist — Maybe not. Why don't you ask him? He's shaving you.

Some Veteran Receivers

Now that the major ball leagues are over two-thirds through with their schedules, it looks very much like a repitition of the 1942 world's series. Although don't forget what happened to "Dem Bums" in the last two weeks.

Perhaps the unsung heroes of the majors are the aging receivers. Pitchers gain headlines, an outfielder blasts a circuit blow and has his name smeared all over the sport pages. But what of the veteran catchers who have been in the game for years, squatting behind the batters and virtually directing field play?

The American League has the greater number of such performers, though in Gus Mancuso of the Giants, the National League probably has the oldest active catcher, as Gus is 38 years old.

The American League has such as Rick Ferrell, of the Browns, 37; Gene Desautels, of the Cleveland Indians, 36; Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, 36; Rollie Hemsley, of the Yankees, 36 and Paul Richards, of the Detroit Tigers, 35. There is George Susce, of the Indians, too, nominally a warm-up catcher, of 36, who occasionally breaks into the box score, filling out in the late innings.

Bon Voyage, Archie

It was with regret we learned of the transfer of Flt. Lt. Archie Green from No. 5 I.T.S. here to take charge of the Air Training School at Western University. A native of Windsor and graduate of Western, Flt. Lt. Green will virtually be "going home." However, Archie will be missed in local basketball and softball circles and we wish him bon voyage and success at his new post.

Flyers Take Command

Skipper Green's "Flyers" gave him a real send-off present. A win over Reliance in the City softball finals last week. Nothing would have made Archie more happier, but unfortunately he will not be around for the remainder of the series. Reviewing the first Flyer-Reliance game the score book shows that Bud Wilkins' nine collected exactly seven hits off "Winnipeg Bill" Bancroft and three of these came in the first inning when each team scored three runs. On the other hand, the Flyers collected eleven safe hits off Johnnie Bawden, four of which were for extra bases. True enough, Reliance counted three extra base smashes, including Teddy Henn's initial frame homer. The real difference in the score can be laid to Reliance miscues, as they booted the ball for eight costly errors, while Bawden walked five to add further trouble.

However, it is safe in wagering goodly sums that in no future game in the series will 20 runs be scored nor will either nine win by a margin of ten, as was the case in the opening tussle. The series will resume Tuesday evening when Skipper Wilkins has Bawden, Anderson, Luffman and Vasil to choose his pitching from, while the Flyers have Bancroft to throw right back or possibly Bob Kuryluk. To-date Reliance and the No. 5 Flyers have met five times, Reliance won three, Flyers one and one was tied. However, the Flyers have the edge in the league finals today with one in the proverbial bag.

Girls' Softball

President Chuck Barnett's Girls' Softball League wound up their regular schedule with two ties that will be played off commencing this evening. Reliance and Bell-Sargent battle it out for third place, while on Wednesday Bristol and SWACO go at it with first place at stake. These play-off games mean considerable to all concerned and with the girls playing Monday, Wednesday and Friday and the men Tuesday and Thursday, well the sports department might have Saturday off for a breather.

The Champ's Comin'

So Promoter Frank Tunney is bringing "Wild Bill" Longson, 1943 edition of the wrestling champion, to Belleville for a bout with John (he's a toughie) Katan? This hombre, Katan, isn't afraid of man or Longson, but the part to look at is the fact Earl "Moose" McCready is also on the card in the semi-finals. Now "Big Earl" has been seeking a world title bout for some time past and Longson ducked the popular Westport native in both Toronto and Buffalo. It's fair betting "Moose" will be at ringside to hurl challenges and taunts at the winner of the Katan-Longson bout Wednesday night in an effort to gain some sort of recognition. Incidentally, the last time Longson defended his crown in the local palace de sport a capacity house was on hand and the S.R.O. sign was out for reserve seats, remember? Belleville has long been recognized as a good wrestling community, but getting a world title bout is something just a little extra special, at least so says Skipper Tunney, the boss barber.

Remember When—?

Slammin' Sammy Snead won the Canadian Open Golf Championship for the third time in a row two years ago today at Toronto's Lambton course. He shot a one-under par 69, in the final round for a 274 total to pull away from Bob Gray, of Toronto, who had held him even for the first 54 holes.

AT THE BELLE

"THE HUMAN COMEDY"

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer has brought William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy" to the screen as a deeply moving picture of American life. In this heartwarming story, now playing at the Belle Theatre, Mickey Rooney gives the greatest performance of his career, not to overlook Frank Morgan in a role that is entirely different from anything he has done before.

"The Human Comedy" is the story of a typical American family, the Macauley's of Ithaca, Cal. Mrs. Macauley, a widow, played by Fay Bainter, is poor in worldly goods but spiritually wealthy. Her oldest son, Marcus, portrayed by Van Johnson, is a soldier. Another son, Homer, played by Mickey Rooney, takes a job as a telegraph messenger after school to help out at home.

PEOPLE ARE GOOD

Homer is just coming into manhood. When delivering messages of joy and sadness he meets people from all walks of life. He learns to know them and to love them. At the telegraph office he meets Willie Grogan, an old time telegrapher, enacted by Frank Morgan, who teaches him that there is good in everybody. The manager of the office, James Craig, is a good-hearted fellow. He is in love with the daughter of the richest family in town, Marsha Hunt. Through her, he learns rich folk are just as warm and human as his own people.

CAST IS SUPERB

Donna Reed and Dorothy Morris are the girls of the Macauley family who do their bit for the war effort. Jack Jenkins as the youngest Macauley, is a tot to watch and to remember. John Craven, son of veteran actor Frank, is the orphan soldier pal of Marcus who comes home to take the place of Marcus in the Macauley family.

Clarence Brown, who directed and produced the film, has certainly achieved his greatest triumph. "The Human Comedy" is a film that will be listed with the great pictures of all time.

Like all good pictures to be best appreciated "The Human Comedy" must be seen from the beginning. We sincerely urge you to do so.

The Canadian Paramount News and a colorfun cartoon "Red Hot Riding Hood" complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Blonde Inspiration"

Sparkling comedy, with cast and story built for laughs, filled the screen at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight when "Blonde Inspiration" opened an engagement. The picture introduces a new romantic team in John Shelton and Virginia Grey, two youngsters who appear headed for stellar heights in Hollywood.

Comedy Is Keynote

Comedy is the keynote throughout, with three of the veteran comedians of pictures having a field day. Charles Butterworth, as editor of a magazine, Donald Meek as the former writer whose job is taken over by Shelton, and Reginald Owen, as Shelton's henpecked uncle, all supply their share of the laughs.

Albert Dekker also stands out as the hardboiled publisher, while Marian Martin makes a hit in the picture's most unusual role. The glamorous blonde is seen throughout the film but only has one line, and that comes at the picture's climax. The rest of her role as Butterworth's beautiful but dumb girl friend is played in pantomime.

"The Avengers"

With the light of the Norwegian "underground" for theme and a Commando raid for a smashing climax, Paramount's "The Avengers" opened Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre.

"The Avengers" tells a powerful and poignant love story—and sets your jaw just a little firmer in your determination to break Hitler's neck. Produced in England by Paul Soskin, the picture had the co-operation of the British War Office and the Norwegian Government-in-Exile. Real Commandos, troops from several of Britain's famous Guard regiments, were used in the battle scenes.

Hugh Williams, well-known in the United States for his lead roles in such films as "David Copperfield" and "Sorrell and Son', has the part of a young newspaperman who is in Norway at the outbreak of war. With Deborah Kerr as his leading lady, he speedily finds himself on a special mission for the British Admiralty, locating a Nazi U-boat base and guiding a squadron of bombers to the spot.

The Canadian Universal News completes the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

Follow The Band

Hollywood goes lavish in its own reckless style in Universal's "Follow the Band" musical extravaganza, which opened today at the McCarthy Theatre. Blending rhythm, romance and revelry, the gay new film has 14 featured players and specialty performers in its cast. Leo Carrillo and Leon Errol head the list which boasts such favorites as Mary Beth Hughes, Eddie Quillan and Anne Rooney.

A Collier's Magazine story by Richard English furnished the novel plot. It traces swiftly the exciting career of a farm boy who rides to success as a trombone player. Popular Eddie Quillan has the role of the boy and wins applause as well as sympathy in a thoroughly good portrayal.

The seemingly endless parade of entertainers which moves through the film included Frances Langford, Alvino Ray and the King Sisters, Ray Eberle and The Bombardiers. In addition, there are Hilo Hattie, The King's Men, Skinnay Ennis and the Groove Boys plus Samuel S Hinds and Bob Mitchum.

A musical score, supervised by Charles Previn, is a definite treat. Highlighted among the song presentations are "So What Do You Want to Make Those Eyes at Me For"; "Don't Tread on the Tail of Me Coat" and 'Swingin' the Blues". Other popular tunes are 'My Melancholy Baby" "My Devotion", "Rosie, the Riveter", "Spellbound", "The Army Air Corps", "Hilo Hattie" and "Ain't Misbehavin".

Second new hit on the program stars Michele Morgan and Alan Curtis in "Two Tickets to London".

Foxboro

Foxboro. —The August meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Clifford Wilson on Thursday afternoon with a good attendance.

The President gave the theme, "The Christian Stewardship of Time" and a beautiful responsive Worship Service was conducted as outlined in the Missionary Monthly. Some passages, relative to stewardship, were given by Mrs. W. Scott, Mrs. H. Stewart, Mrs. W Wickett and Mrs. Clare Finkle, and the "Wonder of Each New Day", was given by the leader, Mrs. S. C. Gay. Reports from different secretaries' reports were given and Mrs. Reynolds gave a temperance reading "What Can Women Do". Mission Band Leader, Mrs. Priest, reported a picnic supper at Gowsell's Grove on Friday evening. Mrs. E. Tummon gave a reading, "The Waste of Life", after which the Misses Jean and Shirley Finkle sang a duet, which was heartily applauded. A reading "Fields White Unto Harvest", was read by Mrs. James Reynolds. The meeting was closed by a beautiful prayer by the president and a social time was enjoyed while light refreshments were served.

Greeks, Yugoslavs Asked To Be Patient A Little Longer

London, Aug. 7 (CP).—Greeks and Yugoslavs were asked to "be patient a little longer" and counselled "not to allow the enemy to sow confusion" in their ranks in a special message from the Allied High Command broadcast by BBC throughout today.

The so-called fortress of Europe is threatened "from within and without" since the collapse of the Mussolini regime and the exposure of Europe's underside in the Balkan peninsula, the message said.

But the Germans will not relax their grip easily, the broadcast warned, and "would not hesitate to use weapons of the most odious barbarism, the most devilish deceit in a panic endeavor to destroy and disorganize the active resistance of the Greeks and Yugoslavs."

Canadian Red Cross Supplies Captured By Canadian Troops

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(C. P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 6 (Delayed) (C.P. Cable) — Among the captured medical stores in Sicily, Canadian officials found some Canadian Red Cross supplies.

While clearing up captured hospital supplies from a warehouse in Leonforte about a dozen bales of pillowslips and sheets stamped "Canadian Red Cross Society, Quebec Province Branch," were uncovered.

They were sent to a Canadian general hospital in Sicily.

Major J. K. Bell of Sarnia, Ont., deputy assistant director of medical services, said: "It is pure supposition as to the source or reason of these stores being in enemy hands in Sicily, but there are two logical conjectures. The supplies may have been sent to our prisoners of war or to suffering people of the occupied countries such as Greece and transferred to Sicily."

He added: "The Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps much appreciated the fact that Red Cross supplies now are available."

A Canadian general hospital in Sicily has been equipped out of captured Italian and German army hospital supplies in addition to the regular Canadian supplies.

A number of Canadian wounded are being treated at the hospital and others are being evacuated by air and boat to another Canadian general hospital in North Africa.

Fire Still Rages In Ploesti Fields

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 2 (Delayed) (AP)—Rumanian and German fire-fighting services are battling a great fire that has been raging in the entire petroleum area near Ploesti, hit on Sunday by American Liberator bombers, according to the first eyewitness account reaching Turkey today.

The latest information said that seven United States Liberators participating in the raid had been forced down in Turkey, while an eighth was reported to have crashed in the sea near enough to the Turkish shore for the crew to make its way to land in rubber boats. All the crews were interned.

Three of the bombers came down in the Smyrna district of the west Turkish coast. There were no details concerning the others.

The first report of the Ploesti fire came in a telephone conversation with an eyewitness who was near hysteria and obviously awed by the terrific destruction that the raid had inflicted. He said that the fires were the biggest that he had ever seen anywhere.

The witness added that the bombers had hit almost everything worth hitting in the entire mile-long oil pumping and refinery district in and around Ploesti. A terrific air battle raged during the attack. Swarms of Rumanian and German fighters were waiting at high altitudes for the American bomber fleet and pounced as it neared the target.

The defences had been on the alert for approximately an hour, as the flight of the Americans had been charted while they were still crossing Bulgaria. Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, had an alert beginning at 12.10 p.m.

The eyewitness said that he had seen some bombers crash but many more of the attacking fighters came down. The raiders headed straight for their individual targets, heedless of the fierce opposition, while the gunners poured steel into Focke-Wulf 190's flown by Germans and Messerschmitts flown by Rumanians.

The low altitude at which the American airmen flew to the attack threw the ground gunners off their aim.

The eyewitness said that it was still impossible to assess the damage accurately because of the widespread fires, but that the Ploesti region's efficiency as an oil-producing and refining centre had probably been cut by half at least.

SMOKE BOMBS ALARM VILLAGERS

Lucan, Ont., Aug. 7 —(CP)— An unidentified plane yesterday dropped two bombs on this Western Ontario village causing two four-foot craters no small amount of consternation and no casualties. They were smoke bombs of the type used on the nearby bombing range by student bombardiers from Crumlin airport.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge -- The August meeting of Wallbridge L. A. was held at the home of Mrs. Clarence Woods on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance. It was in charge of the president, Mrs. James Sine. In the absence of the secretary, her report was not given. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $25 on hand after paying a share on the parsonage stove. It was decided to send Col. Ketcheson a letter of appreciation thanking him for the new blinds for the church windows, which he had donated. It was moved by Mrs. Badgley, seconded by Mrs. Hancock that Mrs. J. Sine, Mrs. J. N. Chisholm and Mrs. Fred Phillips be a committee to purchase new mats for the church aisles. Some other discussion followed. A letter of thanks from Mrs. Barton Hinchcliffe was read. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Ella Phillips and Mrs. Sine gave a short talk on it. Mrs. A. Wright kindly offered her home for the September meeting.

Meeting of W.M.S.

The W.M.S. meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. W. Badgley. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Chas. Colley. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The treasurer's report gave a balance on hand of $4.15 after having spent $50 to the branch treasurer.

Mrs. Elliott, group leader, then took charge. The theme for the month was : "The Christian Stewardship of Time," and some very helpful thoughts on the subject were given. Time lost is never recovered but each new day God gives us another chance to improve our time and use it to the best advantage. Mrs. P. Westover gave a reading "A Study of a Missionary Society." Each member should cooperate with the officers of the society and use whatever talent she may possess for its benefit and by intelligently reading her Bible, Missionary Monthly and Church paper will be better fitted to do her part. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Woods for her hospitality and the meeting closed with singing the National Anthem.

Clare's Secret

If Sue had murdered Clare she had come with dignity head up, shoulders back, faultlessly dressed. Sue would even have noticed how lovely the house was on her brief and desperate visit. And she probably would have wondered what her children were doing while she was about this grim business .. if they were too warm or too cool or if they were breaking something or annoying somebody and if they had eaten all of their last meal. And Sue would murder neatly. Her efficient hand would cover Clare, would make her cover Clare. And if anything in the room had been out of order, she would have put it back in place with hands which heretofore could do no wrong. And if they had done wrong now it was because her perfect world had been shattered. Clare had dared to come into that world into which no one new was ever welcomed and Sue had thrust her out. She had killed her.

Behind Erica's dark eyes and the tense triangle of her face had there been murder? Had Erica, loving as passionately as only her kind can, killed Clare? Or Elinor McLean with her soft voice and soft ways who loved her son as passionately as a mother can. Or had she, Meegan, or Fayne . . . or Fayne . . .

She did not know how long she stood there, seeing each one of them coming up the steps and into the room. Perhaps she stood only a moment with her mind a fast camera turning on and turning off the scene that had taken place in this room. She stood so rigidly, scarcely breathing that her body began to ache and fear ran up and down her spine as fingers run up the keys of a piano . . .

When she heard someone coming up the steps . . .

Someone was coming up the steps again . . .

She did not breathe now and, standing on the threshold of the room she was as motionless as the dead Clare. As the steps came closer the thought raced through her mind that she envied Clare who was beyond feeling now, beyond the agony of wondering who was coming up the steps, beyond the feeling of cold upon her body and sweat upon her forehead. Whoever was coming, be he or she innocent or guilty, would accuse her. They'll say I did it, she thought. They'll say I killed Clare. This will kill my mother, disgrace Toby and Erica and Fayne will think I murdered his wife. And all the things of my life have led me to this door and the sound in my ears of someone coming who will say that I killed Clare.

She turned and looked down the hall.

He saw her as he reached the last step. He stopped and lifted his head and frowned. Then slowly he came toward her. Slowly .. He did not smile as he came nearer. He looked shaken, the fine lines of his mouth grimly set. Nor did he speak when he reached her. With a forthright gesture he pulled her into the hall, keeping one hand on hes while with the other he closed the door of Clare's room.

"Down here," he said and guiding her gently but firmly they went down the hall to another room. "Sit down," he said. And again, "Sit down. I'll get you some brandy. I'll only be a minute."

The room had begun to spin. She sat down as a blind person does, feeling for the chair rather than seeing it. Then he heard his footsteps on the stairs . . . Fayne? No, she thought. Not Fayne. I did it, not Fayne . . . .

She was sitting back in the chintz covered chair looking a little mad when he came back and closed the door and went to her and held the brandy to her lips. It was like fire. She choked over it and the tears ran down her face.

"Feeling better?" he asked. He was standing before her, smiling a little. She noticed then that the shadow on his face was his beard.

"Yes, thank you." I did it, she thought. Not you. You must not tell me that you did it. I love you .. How can I think of love now? But I love you .. I did it. I tell you. I'll tell everyone I did it. They'll have to listen to me.

"Poor Meegan," he said. "How in God's name did you happen to come in this house this morning?"

"I did it, Fayne."

"You did what?"

"I came in and the door was open. And I came up the steps and . . ."

"The door was open, yes. I found it open. Everything wide open and . . . Clare dead. You've had a bad fright. Shall I take you home? There's nothing I can do now. I've made the necessary phone calls. I went over on the mainland to call because I've been told that the lines here are not strictly private. They will know, of course, but I wanted to get through some of the formalities first. They won't be here for quite some time."

"Who won't be here?"

He said patiently, "the doctor and the mortician."

"And the — the police."

He frowned. "Police? I don't see any need for police. What do you mean?"

She looked up. "Clare was murdered. I think you'd better call the police."

He smiled again a little. Then he said, his smile vanishing. "No, Meegan, Clare wasn't murdered. I know she died. Clare had diabetes, a bad case of it. She had an operation in Europe in a little town where there was no hospital and the doctor wasn't careful. There was an infection. She came out of it with diabetes, having to depend upon injections of insulin to keep her alive. Miss Willoughby wasn't her secretary. She was her nurse.

"Clare didn't want anyone to know. She didn't want to be thought of as an ill person. She rebelled against the injections and the strict diet. Twice a day she had to have the needle...It hurt... Miss Willoughby usually did it. I didn't know she wasn't here until she called me last night. Clare wouldn't cooperate. She was abusive, Miss Willoughby said. She's been trying to get me to tell me she'd left but I've been moving around the country. I got back as fast as I could...

"Clare was dead when I came this morning," he went on: "She went into a coma and died because the plunger that fits into the hypodermic needle was broken and she didn't know it. She's been giving herself injections but getting no insulin...I examined the things she used and saw what happened. I knew about them....Then I went over to the mainland and telephoned...When I left, there were two servants here. The others had left to take defence jobs, I don't know what happened to old Freddie and Mary.

"Clare was...difficult. She died in this house alone, all alone. Of all people to die alone ... You've heard of the man without a country. Clare was a woman without a country. That's what the war made her. And because all the good doctors were in the army in that German town she had to have a bad one who made a mistake and left her with an illness she died of.... She is another war casualty, another of Hitler's victims ... Funny, on this peaceful island in peaceful America Hitler murdered an American woman ... You were right. She was murdered. But it took her a little longer to die than most."

"I'm so ashamed! I thought..."

"I can imagine what you thought. Do you feel well enough to go home now?"

"I'm all right. I can drive."

"I saw your car. I thought it was Toby."

"Toby was married on Saturday."

"Married? I see..."

She got up slowly. She felt as does one who rises for the first time after a long illness. "Is there anything I can do?"

"No, nothing." He was silent for a moment. "There will be the usual formalities. Her Aunt Clara is buried in New York. I'll take her there" At Meegan's troubled, questioning face he said, "I wasn't unprepared for this. Diabetics can live out their natural life span and die of something else if they do what they are told. It has to be a very Spartan existence. But when you've lived with a woman for two years and forced her to take the stuff that gives her life, you can't be unprepared for something like this. She hid it as if it were a stigma. It was her enemy. She's never been ill before in her life and she never really believed she had to depend upon insulin to keep her alive. Illness was synonymous with defeat and failure to her and she could be nothing but a superior person. She had everything in the world, but she had a sick body and she was homesick for France ... Clare never loved a man. She loved a country. Hitler took that, too. She never had friends. Beautiful women have few if any friends. France was her friends, the climate, the life, the language. She wasn't made to be faithful to any man or woman. She was faithful to a country."

Meegan nodded. Then she said. "Good-bye, Fayne."

He took a deep breath. Then,— "Good-bye, Meegan."

She went out quietly and closed the door and held tightly to the banisters as she went down the steps.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at different parts of the Sunday paper and ma was looking out the window at the swell weather, saying, My, what a perfect setting for an old time family spin in the car, if times were only different.

It seems too bad, pop said, I mean I just happen to have an extra supply of gas in the car, but of course driving purely for pleasure is out for the duration, pop said, and ma said, now William you dont need to sound so painfullly mealy mouthed and hipocritically regretful. You know very well it was like pulling teeth to induce you to go for a Sunday drive even when gasoleen was as free as the air at so much a gallon. And besides, a moderate little spin wouldn't be pleasure during at all. It would be a patriotic duty, she said.

It would heh? For Peet sakes how would it? pop said, and ma said, Because we'd pass a thousand thriving little Victory gardens, and the continuously multiplied sight of what other men can do would spur your ambition and your patriotic conscience into starting another Victory garden of your own and this time carrying it to a successful conclusion.

On the contrary, my dear, the sight of all those insolently blooming vegetables would give me such an inferiority complex I wouldn't even be able to eat vegetables, much less plant them, and I'd probably sink into a serious vitamin decline, pop said, and I said, Well jimminy pop, it would be a patriotic drive if we kept giving soldiers a lift so they could save their strength to kill Japs and Germans.

Pop claiming it would be just his luck not to have a single soldier ask for a lift, and the result was ma and I took a walk around to my cousin Artie's house for a Sunday visit.

W. F. Connal Retires Under C.N.R. Pension

Montreal, Aug. 9 —(CP)— W. F. Connal, chief mechanical engineer of the Canadian National Railways, has retired under the company's pension regulations, it was announced today. Mr. Connal, a native of Peterborough, Ont., entered the railway business in 1897 as a draughtsman for the British Electric Railway Company at Vancouver. Later he held engineering positions in Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia, Sharon, Pa., and New York.

In 1910 he helped construct the National Transcontinental in the neighborhood of Cochrane, Ont. In 1919, he was appointed mechanical engineer for the Canadian National at Toronto. He was transferred to Montreal in 1923 and in 1940 he became chief mechanical engineer.

R. L. Vallecilla Arrested On Espionage Charge

Washington, Aug. 9 —(AP)— Bond of $50,000 was set today for Roberto Lanas Vallecilla, 35-year-old foreign language translator in the office of the Co-ordinator of Inter-American Affairs, charged with espionage.

Vallecilla, arrested here Saturday by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents after the charge had been filed against him in New York, appeared in handcuffs for his arraignment before a U. S. Commissioner on a fugitive warrant.

He waived preliminary hearing and, unable to make the bond, was returned to jail pending removal to New York.

St. Thomas, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Graham, of Dutton have been advised that their son F/O Donald Graham, 21, has been killed while on air operations in the Sicilian area on July 31.

"Little Washington" Created In Canadian Wilderness For Visit of President Roosevelt

Enjoyed Phenominal Luck and Promised to Return Next Year

ATE MOST OF FISH

Written For The Canadian Press
By WILLIAM HOGLE
(Of The Sudbury Star)

Birch Island Station, Ont., Aug. 9 — (CP) — President Roosevelt of the United States fished and fed last week from Northern Ontario waters in the vicinity of this picturesque Indian village nine miles north of Little Current on Manitoulin Island.

Most distinguished angler ever to gaff a wall-eye in McGregor Bay or haul a small-mouth black bass from Whitefish Bay, the President enjoyed phenomenal luck and has indicated that he will return to this area again.

"He said he was coming back to Birch Island to fish again" probably next year, said Donald MacKenzie of Little Current, who acted as chief guide for the President on his fishing trips.

"Mr. Roosevelt said he ate most of the fish he caught — he loves a real fish fry — and he also had several treats of fresh Manitoulin Island blueberries," added Charles R. Bradley, Little Current tugboat captain who was attached to the Presidential party as official pilot.

Falla Enjoys Holiday

For one full week the President holidayed at the Birch Island retreat in East Algoma, living aboard his special train on a C.P.R. siding at the water's edge, and for affairs of State and formal occasion he was "officially" lost to the world during his days on Canadian soil.

Strict censorship up to today prevented the use of a word about the unprecedented trip—about his plans for departure from Washington on July 31, his passage from Niagara Falls to Sudbury (with every railroad crossing guarded and every switch spiked to guard against accident or design of his life), his arrival at Birch Island on Aug. 1, and his return to American soil last weekend.

Considerable Excitement

Now it may be told—the excitement brought to this part of Canada and the Manitoulin district in particular by the advent of such a visitor and his retinue, the plans and preparations for his comfort and safety, and the special accommodations necessary to create a "Little Washington" in the Canadian wilderness for even the limited vacation period.

Fighter planes brought the Presidential mail and governmental dispatches from Washington, D.C., twice daily: special telephone and telegraph wires carried the more necessitous messages direct to the temporary and improvised capitol a United States ensign was raised over a promontory of land in front of the J. C. Nicholls' and the late Donald MacAskill's summer homes near Birch Island Station to denote the significance of the occasion

Acquires First Tan of Summer

While ostensibly a fishing and vacation outing for the President it was much more than that. The President was exhilarated by landing a five and a half pound "Walleye" (pickerel), a four pound 2 ounce black bass, a four pounder and many other good sized black bass. The President enjoyed eating the fish he caught and the fresh Manitoulin blueberries, and he carried home with him a bit of Canadian sunshine.

"This is the first tan I've acquired this summer," he said to Donald McKenzie. "I had thought I might burn on an outing like this"

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of staff to the commander-in-chief, tough, astute, grizzled seadog, onetime chief of naval operations and one time U.S. emissary to Vichy, France, was one of the President's fishing companions.

Slim, slight, James P. "Jimmy" Byrnes, war time economic czar of the U.S. and former associate justice of the Supreme Court, cast a pearl spoon in McGregor Bay one afternoon while the President munched ham sandwiches with "hot mustard" and talked in a low monotone.

Many Incidents in Trip

Tall, gaunt, Harry Hopkins, the presidential alter ego, was the third boon campaign of the "vacation" period.

There were others—navy admirals and army generals—and Miss Grace Tully and Mrs. James Brady—but the presence of the three leading figures of military, economic and civilian affairs with the President indicated more than "holiday conservations," possibly the formulating of new external policies: Probably the shaping of new internal plans.

History may record a domestic undertaking of no mean proportions, or a foreign project of momentous consequence to all Allied Nations, which was conceived on the bosom of a little island bay in Canada while "Bill" or "Jimmy" or "Hoppy" played a fighting black bass.

Many incidents can be written of the famous visit, but the most interesting is the fact that three well known men of the locale selected for the vacation—Donald McKenzie and Charles R. Bradley, of Little Current, and William "Gus" McGregor, Chief of the Indian Reservation of Whitefish Falls—were as close to President Roosevelt on his fishing expedition as were his three principal golvernment advisors.

What military plans or strategy may have been made only the men concerned and the wind and waves of the northern Ontario fastnesses know, and they are not telling.

What the President said to "Cap" Bradley while he was in the distinguished company, the many remarks to Donald McKenzie chief fishing guide, and to William McGregor, who found the best holes in McGregor Bay for the presidential party, may be told. All three are agreed that President Roosevelt is a "real guy."

Very Democratic

"He was as democratic as the name of his party," observed Captain Bradley, who knows every rock and rill in the waters of the North Channel and many of the water courses of South Sudbury and East Algoma.

"He was very interested in knowing the depth of the waters, the sources and the rock formations along the shore line," Mr. Bradley continued. "He said he was familiar with the nickel industry, when I mentioned that, and seemed to be familiar with the geology of the district."

"The President was as chatty and informal as any man I have ever guided over these fishing grounds," declared Donald McKenzie, who knows the fishing waters of Whitefish Bay and the Bay of Islands thoroughly.

Proud of His Strikes

"He hauled in the biggest pickerel and the biggest black bass caught, and he was as proud of his strike as any fisherman I have ever seen." Mr. McKenzie said the President used only a pearl spoon and a smaller hook in all his fishing, although he tried different sizes of hooks and spoons. His tackle was carried in a sheet steel box about five feet long and about 10 inches square, and included several different steel and split bamboo fishing rods, reels, lures, etc.

"We caught probably five to ten pickerel and pike during the week, and more than 100 black bass, most of them small mouthed," the light-framed Scotsman estimated. "That was for the party as a whole, which included three or four fishermen every time we went out. But I think the President caught probably one-third of all those landed.

"He seemed mighty satisfied with the fishing and his holiday, and he said he was counting on coming back to Birch Island again." Mr. McKenzie continued, in recounting some of the remembered phrases of his different "talks" with the President.

Complimented Guides

"You certainly know the fishing holes for these beauties," the President complimented Chief McGregor. "If I get a few more like this maybe I'll have one left when I get back to Washington to prove to the press boys there that I really was on a fishing jaunt."

On the fishing excursions, which constituted practically his only public appearances while staying at Birch Island, the President was under constant guard but this did not seem to interfere with results. The President did his fishing from a good sized "whaleboat" which came from the U.S.S. Willmette, a coastguard cutter which formed part of the official guard.

Commander J. M. Ross, of the "Willmette," with two or three secret service men preceded the Presidential launch in another speed boat, while a third motor boat loaded with secret service men and R.C.M.P. trailed the important launch. During the fishing three and four outboard motor boats, containing two or three of the special guards, circled the spot at a distance while the two main launches stayed on the "alert" nearby.

The President himself lived aboard the special train during the entire trip, leaving it only for fishing, and a special ramp was built from his car to the water's edge of Whitefish Bay over which he was wheeled to the launch. The only motor drive taken was on the Friday when it was too windy to go to Tobermory Hill and southerly to fishing. The party drove northerly below McGregor's Bay where, from a high hill, the President had a fair view of Manitoulin Island and the countryside.

Five Fishing Trips

"I'm sorry I couldn't have visited the island," he said to one of his aides. "I am told it is noted for turkey raising."

Five fishing trips were arranged during the six week days the President was at the resort. Always there was a lunch. "Oh, yes, they always bought a big basket of eats on each trip" said Mac. "He passed them around to everybody and we had a good time."

Falla, the President's constant companion, and a favorite with all, accompanied him wherever he went.

"He would jump and bark every time the President landed a fish, and seemed to be as happy about the whole thing as the rest of the party."

In reporting the conversation about the Presidential sun tan, Mr. MacKenzie said it became quite noticeable the last two days of his stay at Birch Island and that he looked "somewhat brighter" at the end — "sort of a lot more healthy. Seemed Cheerful.

"The President also seemed a lot more cheerful the last two days" remarked the observing guide. "He talked more freely, whereas the first part of the week he seemed quite preoccupied."

William McGregor was added to the official guide party on Wednesday, when the President expressed a desire to try for bass in McGregor's Bay. On Monday and Tuesday the President fished in Whitefish Lake, landing his prize pickerel on the latter day and having a good catch each time out. On Wednesday, the first day on McGregor's Bay he got the four pound two ounce bass, and the following day he got the mate almost in the same location.

"It was an experience none of us will ever forget," said Chief W. McGregor on Saturday afternoon, after adieus had been made and the word given to "break camp" that evening, many of campers of Birch Island resort, who had met officials of the presidential party during the week, were invited to a late dinner aboard various dining cars of the official train.

Left Saturday Night

About 10 o'clock Saturday night it pulled out from its holiday haven, the regular C.P.R. engine and crew of the Little Current-Sudbury train run handling the special all steel coaches from Birch Island to Sudbury where, at Romford, engines and crews were changed for the run into southern Ontario and the return to American soil.

The presidential train was preceded and followed "work trains."

6¼ POUND BLACK BASS CAUGHT IN HASTINGS

Mr. William Adams, Bull Street, was proudly displaying a small mouthed black bass, caught near MacArthur's Mills in the northern part of the county, which weighed exactly six and one quarter pounds. The fish was 22 inches long and had a girth of 20 inches and was one of the most beautiful specimens of the bass family that has been seen in this district in some time. This bass will likely be close to the largest bass caught in the Province this year and it shows what excellent fishing there is in Hastings County. The fish will be entered in the local contest and also in the Star contest in Toronto.

WOUNDED IN ABDOMEN IS WORD RECEIVED

Mr. and Mrs. James Parkhurst, Pinnacle Street, who received word that their son, Pte. Gordon Parkhurst of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, had been wounded in action in Sicily, received further word over the weekend that Gordon had received gunshot wounds — shrapnel, in the abdomen. His present condition was not given by the Director of Records in Ottawa. Gordon enlisted with the first contingent and went overseas in 1939.

Tokyo Communique

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)—A Japanese communique broadcast by the Berlin radio said today that an Allied destroyer and a Japanese destroyer were sunk during battle between a Japanese destroyer formation and enemy surface craft in the Solomons area Friday night.

The broadcast also admitted damage to another Japanese destroyer.

It said the encounter took place west of Kolombangara Island.

United States southwest Pacific communiques have reported no Friday night naval action, but announced that a Japanese cruiser and two destroyers were sunk in the Vella gulf Saturday night by U.S. surface units.

The American announcement said that U.S. surface units which participated in the hour-long engagement suffered no losses.

Recover Body of Airman Who Tried to Save Woman

St. Thomas, Aug. 9 —(CP)—The body of Flt.-Sgt. John Henry Nestor, of Quebec, who lost his life Saturday afternoon in Lake Erie at Port Stanley, was recovered today near the spot where he leaped into the water to aid Mrs. Velma Faulder, of London. Nestor reached Mrs. Faulder, but was unable to hold on to her. She was later saved by Aircraftman W. Buxton, of the R.C.A.F. Technical School, St. Thomas and Max Greer of London. Nestor, an instructor of the R.C.A.F. Technical Training School here, is survived by his wife and small child living in Port Stanley.

FEWER MOTORISTS

Washington, Aug. 9. (AP)—For every 100 motor vehicles counted on the roads in the Eastern United States in June, 1941, there were only 40 in June, 1943, the Public Roads Administration of the Federal Works Agency announced today. For the middle west and west, in the same months, the drop was from 100 to 57. Comparable figures in June, 1942, were 66 for the east and 76 for the rest of the country.

Today's receipts of cattle was the heaviest this year to date. Prices on bulls about steady with the close of the week. Prices on other classes of cattle not established, buyers bidding lower prices. Lambs and veals strong. Hogs steady. Common calves barely steady. Early sales, bulls, $7.50 to $10.50 with two selling up to $11. No steers or cows sold.

Veal calves $13 to $16. Good veals mostly $15.50, medium around $15. Drinkers $10 to $11. Grassers $8.50 to $9.50 with yearlings up to $8.

Hogs $17 to $17.25 for B-1 dressed. Sows $11.25 to $11.75 liveweight. Grade A drew $1 per hog premium with discounts on off grades.

Good lambs weighing according to the order issued last week 75 pounds or more, $15. Common lambs or culls weighing less than 75 lbs. not sold, buyers bidding as low as $10. Sheep $5 to $10.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 9—Cattle trade was very dull on the livestock market here up to mid-session today with sales too few to establish prices. Bids were lower on all grades. Veal calves and sheep were steady. Lambs were firm to 25 cents higher. No price was established for hogs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 4,100, calves 1,200, hogs 1,000, sheep and lambs 1,100. Unsold from last week was 300 head of cattle.

Prices in the trade were:

Cattle: Butcher steers and heifers $11-$12, butcher cows $8-$10, bulls $10-$10.50, light bologna bulls downward to $8, fed yearlings $12.50-$13.50, stockers $11-$12, stock calves up to $13.25.

Calves: $15-$15.50 for choice vealers with others downward to $10 and grass calves mostly $9.

Lambs: $16.25 for bulk of good ewes and wethers with a few off-truck at $16, bucks $15-$15.25.

Sheep: $5-$9.50.

Hogs closed previously at $16.80-$16.90 dressedweight at yards or plants.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 9 (CP)—The mining groups were stronger this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Turnover was sizeable at 424,000 shares.

Lake Dufault was traded actively and the price firmed 20 cents to 1.40. About half the gain was held in the mid-day profit-taking. Central Patricia, Pamour, Sylvanite, Teck Hughes, O'Brien and Berens River advanced 5 to 10 cents. Mining Corporation and Smelters were stronger base metals.

Most industrials were a bit weak. Imperial Oil, British American Oil, Goodyear Tire, Western Canada Flour, Canadian Celanese, Ford A and Canada Cement pfd. were among the soft spots. Home Oil was down 10 cents to 3.65 and British-Dominion was off 2 to 48.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 9 — (AP) — After two weeks of decline the stock market today bettered its position slightly but dealings continued at low level.

Most steels, rubbers, rails and utilities pushed ahead for moderate gains and a few specialties were up sharply near the fourth hour. Lack of bids continued to work against certain high priced stocks, notably Eastman Kodak which at one time was down more than 4 points.

Among Canadian issues Dome Mines advanced 1-8 while Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore both dropped 1-8. Hiram Walker was unchanged.

Among issues given fair support were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Goodyear, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Pepsi-Cola, Woolworth, United Aircraft, Pan American Airways, American Telephone, International Telephone, Public Service of N. J., Westinghouse, American Can, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Liveweight were up 10 cents at Chatham and prices unchanged at other bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $12.10.

Dressedweight: Hamilton $16.75 delivered, Stratford and London $16.50 delivered, Hull $16.40 plus transportation.

BOOKED ON SUSPICION

Los Angeles, Aug. 9. (AP)—Arrested in connection with the theft of a $25 war bond, Roy Myers, 40, looked amazed when police found such a bond sewed in his trousers, "Fancy that!" he exclaimed. "I did n t know there was a bond there. I bought this suit from a second hand dealer August 1". He was booked on suspicion of burglary. The bond was dated August 5.

REFUSE TO ICE BEER CARS

London, Ont., Aug. 9—(CP)—The London Ice and Coal Company in a further effort to conserve dwindling ice supplies has refused to ice railway refrigerator cars that are to be used for hauling beer, it was learned today.

Company officials stated that available ice will be supplied for transportation of foodstuffs.

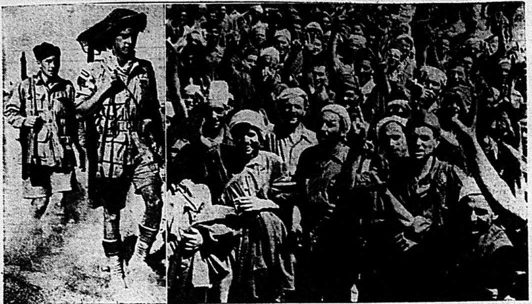
FIRST SICILY BATTLE PICTURES SHOW CANADIANS IN ACTION



Sweep of the tidal wave of Canadian fighting strength across Sicily is recorded in these first battle scenes to reach Canada. Ankle-deep dust on Sicilian trails which compelled the men to hold wet handkerchiefs over their mouths failed to stem the Canucks' onward surge.

Travelling on Alaska Highway No Cinch

By WILLIAM L. WORDEN

Gulkana, Alaska, July 15 (Delayed) (AP).—"The Road" is open, but no speed records are being made on it.

"The Road" means the network of highways which at last is giving Alaska communication between its major cities as well as at least a technical connection with the outside world by highway. Included in the net are the widely discussed Alaska Highway from Dawson Creek to Fairbanks, the Richardson Highway, which connects Fairbanks and Valdez; the Steese Highway, from Fairbanks to Circle, and the so-called Chickaloon Highway, from Gulkana to Anchorage.

On this network of roads it is possible now to visit more of Alaska than by any other method except airplane flight—but a good, stout truck is recommended for the tour.

Opened in November.

The highway network came into being last November with official opening of the Alaska Road. Completion of that road was almost simultaneous with the finishing of the Chickaloon cutoff linking Anchorage—and near-by Fort Richardson—to the rest of the cities served.

Since that widely publicized opening, little has been said about the highway net. Actually, opening of the highway did not mean that it was finished. It is not finished yet, and will not be for a long time. So far, the total freight moved has no measurable effect on the Alaskan war effort, nor is there any immediate likelihood that a major portion of Alaska's supplies will move over it. Ships still supply the troops in the Aleutians; the Alaska Railroad still is the principal supply line for the interior.

Some truck convoys are being operated by the United States Army over the Alaska and Steese Highways, working on a pony-express, relay-station system which allows one driver to become familiar with the peculiarities of one section of road, and then to drive more or less steadily over the section he knows. On a night when the trucks are moving, it is not unusual to see 50 or 100 of them in an hour's drive.

These truck convoys do not move without difficulties. The raging Tanana River, glacier-fed stream which wanders through a huge valley of the same name, at one spot now is at the highest level ever recorded.

Slides Menace Roads.

It is not only floods. In the mountains practically the entire length of the Richardson link, most of the Chickaloon and long stretches of the Alaska—slides constantly menace the road. Maintenance crews of both army and civilian personnel work day and night to clear them away.

Nothing molests the ordinary traveller except the mosquitoes. The mosquitoes are terrible. The stories about them legion, the actuality almost as bad as the stories. No road crewman new to the territory would think of going out on the highway to work without a head-net.

On the face of it, Alaska's highway system just now seems to have been a tremendous expense for the present value received. However, most army officers hasten to straighten out one popular misconception—that the highway was built with the idea that it would immediately begin to carry large quantities of military supplies. Rather, they assert, the "Alcan" portion of the system—and the Chickaloon connection as well—were rushed last year to provide a vital supply system which could be used should other routes be cut off. The road had to be opened just in case.

As for the highway itself, there is word of Edward Glover, Anchorage automobile dealer, who always wanted to be one of the first men to drive a civilian car from there to Fairbanks. He had his chance this week. Sunburned and mosquito-bitten, he stood on a Fairbanks street corner today.

"It took us", he said, "14 hours to go 24 miles over one stretch in the mountains. Part of the way we followed a big truck that was packing the road down, and part of the time we let a bulldozer go ahead of us, because we knew he would have to pull us out of the mud every half-mile or so. I think I'll take the train back to Anchorage".

Four Japanese Warships Sunk In Daring Attack

By WILLIAM HIPPLE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Aboard the Flagship of a Naval Task Force, Aug. 7 — (Delayed) — (AP) — A light American naval force sank at least four Japanese warships today in one of the most daring attacks of the war.

The United States ships steamed right into the enemy's stronghold in Vella Gulf in the Solomons and destroyed one cruiser and three destroyers. I was aboard the flagship of the American task force.

(Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique of Aug. 8 said one cruiser and two destroyers were definitely sunk and the fourth vessel "probably so," in a battle which started shortly before midnight of Aug. 6. And, it added, the United States forces sustained no losses.)

From the bridge deck and the direction platform above, I had an unopposed view of the entire battle in the narrow gulf between strong Japanese bases on Kolombangara and Vella Lavella Islands.

I saw the Nipponese cruiser, a three stacker with an airplane hoist, explode soon after it was hit by torpedoes and shells from our ships in the waters northwest of Munda airfield on New Georgia Island which is now in American hands.

The cruiser, standing broadside to us, first caught fire in her bow from torpedoes, and when our gun batteries opened up on her I saw additional fire break out followed by a terrifying explosion.

The blast sent flames thousands of feet in the air, enabling me to take down notes as if under a hundred watt lamp.

Three Officers Narrowly Escape

By WILLIAM HIPPLE
Associated Press War Correspondent

U. S. Headquarters in the South Pacific, Aug. 9 — (AP) — Three top-ranking officers directing the United States offensive in the Central Solomons narrowly escaped disaster at the outset of the campaign, June 30, it was disclosed here today.

Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmonr, commanding United States Army forces in the South Pacific, and Rear Admirals R. K. Turner and T. S. Wilkinson, jointly commanding operations in the South Pacific, were aboard an unidentified ship which was torpedoed and sunk by a Japanese submarine near Rendova Island, near New Georgia.

Gen. Harmon and two Admirals were not injured. A destroyer came alongside and took them off before the ship sank.

Identification of Harmon, Wilkinson and Turner as commanders of Army and Amphibious Navy Operations under Admiral William F. Halsey in the current campaign has not been disclosed before.

MAKES 'EM INDIANS

Oxford, England, Aug. 9 (CP) — This rural district council in Suffolk warned against bathing because the village sewage runs into the river. Some people insisted, so the district medical officer ordered a brown dye to be dumped in the river upstream and now bathers come out looking like North American Indians.

FREE YEAR IN UNIVERSITY

1270 young men between the ages of 17 and 22 who have university entrance and who have successfully passed physical tests will be selected for one year's free university tuition. This year will apply on their B.A. or B.Sc. on return from duty overseas. Your nearest Recruiting Office will give you particulars.

Are you 18? Well lad, here's a swell chance for you to drive a rough-riding rip-snorting tank. Canada needs men of your age to blast the Axis off the map — you will not be sent on combat duty — until you have reached the age of 19.

For a full year you will enjoy all the adventures of army life — you will be put through a hardening, toughening-up process to prepare you for overseas service — in the meantime the army will provide you with good food, your medical and dental care and you will also receive full army pay and regular dependents' allowances.

Both your Mother and Dad will be proud to know that their son is guiding a giant tank — Canada needs you now — how about it boys?

KHARKOV WITHIN RANGE OF RED ARTILLERY

Evidences Groggy Nazi Army Beating A Hasty Retreat

Fast-Moving Reds Step Up Assaults on German Base of Bryansk

MOVE NEAR SMOLENSK

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP)—The fast-rolling Soviet offensive mounted speed today as Russian troops surpassed the westermost point reached during last winter's campaign and hammered forward along a wide front reaching to within 12 miles of Kharkov.

(The Berlin radio reported heavy fighting in the Kharkov area and also said the Russians had launched an offensive to the north in the direction of Smolensk.)

The Soviet forces also were stepping up their assaults in the drive on the big German base at Bryansk, 250 miles to the north of Kharkov. The spearhead of the Red Army there had covered one-third of the 75-mile distance between Orel, the German base which fell last week, and Bryansk.

The Kharkov assault resulted in the capture of more than 100 villages, the Russian communique said. Indications that the German forces were retreating in some disorder were seen in the Russian reoprt of the capture of 212 tanks, 139 guns of various calibres, 86 mortars, 323 machine-guns, 616 motor trucks, 30 radio transmitters, 11 supply and munitions dumps, 315 loaded railroad cars and 500 horse-drawn carts.

Danger of Entrapment

Among the important towns seized in the Kharkov sector were the railroad town of Trosoyanets; Slatino, 12 miles north of city, and Nikitovka, 30 miles to the northwest.

The speed of the Russian advance on Kharkov presented a definite danger of entrapment to the thousands of Nazi troops occupying the base, the communique indicated. The Soviet air force ranged behind the lines hammering at German rail communications upon which the garrison would be forced to rely for withdrawal.

The Red Army hammered steadily at the railroads in its advance on Bryansk, where the Russian air force bombed the junction town of Unecha, southwest of Bryansk, in an apparent effort to smash a feeder line.

The Germans were resisting the Bryansk advance stubbornly and were paying heavily in manpower. In fighting at Shakovo, Nazi prisoners said, the 253rd Infantry Division lost 50 per cent of its strength and the Russians claimed that German losses were in excess of 3,500 men.

The Moscow radio, in a broadcast heard in London, said two Red Army generals had been killed in the fighting at Belgorod and Orel. They were identified as General Apensenko, 51, formerly with the Russian Far Eastern forces, who was killed at Belgorod, and Maj.-Gen. Gurtyev, one of the heroes of Stalingrad, who died in the fighting at Orel.

Von Ribbentrop Had the Guns to Back His Words

Madrid, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Dispatches of Spanish correspondents in Berlin to Madrid's morning newspapers today mirrored expressions of German official confidence that Italy would continue in the war with the help of German reinforcements and that Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio had abandoned hope of peace with the Allies.

"The weight of German arms," said the Arriba correspondent in Berlin, "has outweighed the mistaken will of some quarters inclined to cede to enemy pressure."

In the two weeks since Mussolini's fall, Italian reports said, the Germans have quietly and carefully moved sufficient troops into the Po and Trieste regions to seize that sector if necessary.

About the time that Badoglio apparently was convinced that his choice was what the Italian press called "dishonorable surrender," or continuation of the war at Germany's side, Von Ribbentrop had the guns to back his words.

Italian reports said Germany promised through Von Ribbentrop to send all troops and munitions necessary to protect the Italian mainland.

It was hinted also that Von Ribbentrop gave Badoglio assurances that the Italian military government would treat with German military men in the future rather than with the Nazis as a further guarantee of an all-out united Axis defence policy.

The Arriba correspondent in Berlin said that Badoglio's military government "now undoubtedly finds itself in a position to continue the struggle."

NORMANDIE'S LIST NOW 42 DEGREES

New York, Aug. 10—(AP)—The list of the former French liner Normandie at 9 a.m. today was 42 degrees, as compared to the 29-degree list when she was mired at the river bottom.

Capt. Bernard E. Manseau, United States navy supervisor of salvage, said he hoped pumping operations would reduce the angle to 30 degrees, after which it would be a question of righting the vessel by removing concrete poured into her during early stages of the repair work.

TURTLE USES WALLET AS RAFT

Delta, Ont., Aug. 10.— (CP) — Bruce Phelps lost his wallet when his canoe capsized and he had little hope of having it returned, but a young girl, Hilda Halladay, found it and returned it the following day. She said she was attracted to it by a small turtle which had climed up on it and used it as a raft as it floated down stream.

Kidnapped Child Is Found Alive

Albany, Ore., Aug. 10 — (AP) — Tiny Judith Gurney, kidnapped from the Albany hospital last Tuesday, was found alive and healthy last night, and police today investigated the bizarre story of a 26-year-old army wife charged with the abduction.

District Attorney Harlow Weinrick said the woman, Mrs. Catherine Wright, fooled her husband, a young couple living with her and neighbors through nine months of feigned pregnancy, then appeared at home last Tuesday with a two-day-old baby.

She confessed to a child-stealing charge, Weinrick said, but only after her story of giving birth to the child in the Albany hospital had been refuted by nurses and doctors who said she had not been a patient and by a doctor's examination which Weinrick said proved she had not borne a child within five years.

There was evidence of an earlier birth, but Weinrick did not disclose what had happened to that child. Neighbors said Mrs. Wright had no child at home until last Tuesday.

At the hospital the baby was identified from footprints. In the Wright home police found a hospital bracelet, used to identify [illegible]. It bore the name, "Gurney."

Demand That Rome Be Bombed Again Sounded in British Press

London, Aug. 10 — (CP) — A demand that Rome be bombed again was sounded in the British press today as the Sicilian campaign moved rapidly toward a climax with Premier Pietro Badoglio's government showing no sign of heeding Allied surrender demands.

Urging a repetition of the July 19 bombing of Rome, the London Daily Express declared that "we should remind 1,000,000 Italians in their capital that their need to force a decision from Badoglio is still more pressing than ours.

This expression of opinion coincided with a Rome broadcast indicating that, for the moment at least, Badoglio had no intention of cutting his ties with Hitler.

"To expect that Italy should desert Germany at this crucial moment of the war and trade her national honor as an escape from fighting is an insult,". said the broadcast, which was recorded by the Ministry of Information.

"Mussolini's downfall was a political and not a military event," the broadcast added. "From the military point of view it enhanced Italy's will to resist. The [illegible] of the Fascist government enabled Italians to face the facts as they are, and the facts are not so bad that nothing can be done to retrieve the situation.

Last Battle Long Way Off.

"The fact that a great part of Sicily is in the hands of the enemy is no reason for throwing up the sponge. The last battle in this war is a long way away yet."

Sections of the London press, meanwhile, joined in urging that the next British-American move—both politically and militarily—be closely co-ordinated with the Russian drive on the Eastern front and warned that Axis propagandists are trying desperately to drive a wedge between the three powers.

The London News Chronicle asserted that the Allies had "failed to establish a unity of outlook" and said there "is needed that full and frank exchange of views between Premier Stalin, President Roosevelt and our own Prime Minister about which Germany is so nervous."

The Daily Herald said "There must be set up without delay new machinery, a political council of the United Nations to settle in advance as far as possible such issues as have been raised by the North African and Italian campaigns."

Naval Units Bombard Enemy's Coastal Positions

BIG FORMATIONS BLAST MANNHEIM, LUDWIGSHAFEN

Speedy Mosquitoes Attack Many Targets in the Ruhr and France

NINE BOMBERS LOST

London, Aug 10. (CP)—Big formations of R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers blasted Mannheim and Ludwigshafen last night while speedy Mosquitos attacked targets in the industrial Ruhr Valley, the Air Ministry announced today.

Flying on the big raid were squadrons from the Canadian Bomber group. Nine bombers, two of them Canadian, were lost during the night's operations.

R.A.F. fighters attacked enemy airfields and railways in France and the low countries, shooting down two enemy aircraft, a communique said.

Large fires were reported set in Mannheim and Ludwigshafen, twin towns situated on opposite banks of the Rhine near its junction with the Neckar, 43 miles southwest of Frankfort.

Important Armament Centre

Great factories there turn out tanks, motor vehicles, Diesel engines and high explosives. The towns, which have a combined population of about 350,000 in normal times, represent the second largest inland port in Europe.

Last night's attack was the 57th raid on the Mannheim-Ludwigshafen area, which was last hit on April 16.

It was the first time the heavy bombers of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. had been over Germany since the night of August 2, when they made their last smashing attack on Hamburg. In the interim, however, Mosquito bombers attacked targets in the Ruhr and Rhineland last Wednesday night and also hammered the Rhineland last Saturday night while the R.A.F.'s heavy bombers were over Milan, Turin and Genoa in Northern Italy.

Berlin Admits Raid Heavy

DNB, German News Agency in a broadcast from Berlin recorded by The Associated Press, admitted that the R.A.F. raid on Mannheim caused "considerable damage" and that the population suffered loss." The broadcast added the claim that 13 planes were shot down.

Fighter planes which participated in sweeps over western Europe last night attacked the German airdrome at St. Didier in France and shot up railway targets near Abbeville, the Air Ministry News Service reported.

One German fighter was reported shot down over Belgium by an R.A.F. wing commander who already had 15 enemy planes to his credit, while another was destroyed over northern France.

Britain, meanwhile, enjoyed another raid free night.

Number Not Disclosed

The number of planes which participated in the Mannheim-Ludwigshafen raid was not immediately disclosed, the Air Ministry merely describing the attack as heavy. Residents on the British east

Edmontons Climb Sheer Precipice Drive Twice Number of Huns Off Peak

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadians in Sicily, Aug. 9 —(Delayed) — (CP Cable) — For six days the loyal Edmonton Regiment advanced through wild mountains northwest of Aderno, driving the Germans from two vital peaks to ensure the success of the Canadian thrust into the Simeto Valley which was a big factor in the collapse of enemy resistance in front of Mount Etna.

From Aug. 1 to 6 the Edmontons were in the mountains with only minimum water rations. Less hardy troops would have folded with exhaustion for it was as tough going as any Canadian unit has had to endure in Sicily.

On Hill 736, a mountain crest named after its height marked in metres on military maps, the Edmontons assaulted a sheer precipice and drove twice their number of Germans off the peak. Hill 736 is eight miles northwest of Aderno.

Two companies of Edmontons next day attacked Mount Revissotta, six miles northwest of Aderno, and here again the Regiment was victorious. When these two mountains were captured, the left flank of the Canadian and tank attack to the Simeto Valley was guarded. On the slopes of Mount Revissotta, as the Edmontons rested on their hard-won positions, I heard the story of the Regiment's mountain exploits.

The Edmontons pushed off from the main road west of Regalbuto, where Canadians were attacking the town. Mule trains hastily organized carried supplies of ammunition and water in to the battalion. Everyone knew this was going to be one of the campaign's most hazardous enterprises but if it succeeded as it finally did it would be well worth the gamble.

The Edmontons started off at night. When daylight came they found the Germans were expecting them. The enemy had some strong positions on slopes overlooking the Salso Valley, and they struck at the Edmontons with mortars and machine-guns as well as self-propelled artillery. The Germans even got in some crossfire and the Canadian advance was held up temporarily.

The first mule trains going to the unit were shot up but on the night of Aug. 2 mules got through and the mountain trek continued. During the night of Aug. 3 the Edmontons engaged the enemy on the mountain sides, aiming principally at giving protection to the Royal Canadian Engineers who were constructing a road down the valley.

The strongest German positions in the Edmontons' path was on Hill 736 and the Colonel decided to launch an attack.

To Maj. Archie Donald of Edmonton fell the task of leading the assault on Hill 736. He sent in his main attack at 4:30 P. M. Aug. 5. By 5:30 o'clock the peak was captured with Germans fleeing down the reverse slope.

There was a bitter scrap on the crest. When the fight was finished the Edmontons estimated there must have been 120 Germans on top of Hill 736, carefully dug in and holding a strong position. It seemed a miracle the Edmontons were able to dislodge them. Some Germans were killed on the Hill and others ran off down the slope with the Albertans firing on them all the way.

The Germans left five machine-guns abandoned on the Hill as well as a complete signals hook-up. This Hill had been used as an observation post covering the whole valley through which the Canadians were advancing in strength. Twenty-one prisoners were also taken.

Bombers Range Whole Length Of Battle Area

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 10. (AP)—Allied bombers ranged the whole length of the Southwest Pacific battle area yesterday, dropping 224 tons of bombs on four Japanese strongholds—Vila, Salamua, Bairoko and Amboina.

There was no attempt at interception by enemy planes.

The heaviest bombloads were released on Salamaua and Vila, presumbly the next major objectives of a two-pronged thrust directed at the great enemy base of Rabaul, New Britain.

Successive flights of heavy bombers roared over Salamaua, dropping 103 tons of bombs in 40 minutes. Heavy anti-aircraft fire met the first waves but when the last left the target area the airdrome, the town and harbor of this northwestern New Guinea base were obscured by clouds of smoke from fires and explosions, a headquarters communique said.

Heavies teamed with medium bombers, under a fighter cover, in two attacks on Vila Airdrome, dropping 63 tons of bombs and setting large fires. It was the heaviest bombing attack yet made on the Kolombangara Island airfield, one of the enemy's few remaining strongpoints in the Central Solomons.

Across Kula gulf, torpedo and dive bombers smashed 22 tons of bombs upon much-battered Bairoko Harbor, ten miles north of Munda. Results were not reported.

Two thousand miles westward, bombers "in strength", the communique said, carried out a night assault on Amboina, the former Dutch naval base on the island of that name. Thirty-six tons of bombs were dropped.

NON-AXIS TEA SUPPLY PURCHASED BY BRITAIN

London, Aug. 10 —(CP)— Lord Woolton, food minister, announced today he had bought the world's non-Axis tea supply for next year estimated at 312,500 tons.

He did it as a representative of the combined food board which, under international agreement, will allot tea to the United and neutral nations on the same basis as last year.

"We lost supplies from the Netherlands and East Indies, but there will be just sufficient for everybody," he said.

Political Tension In Bulgaria And Hungary Rising

Istanbul, Aug. 9 — (Delayed) — (AP) — Rising political tension in Bulgaria and Hungary was reported from the Balkans today, with the situation in Bulgaria apparently the more critical.

Throughout yesterday there was feverish political activity in Sofia, the reports said, as a large number of opposition deputies met under the presidency of the opposition leader, former Premier Nicholas Moushanoff.

The meeting reportedly adjourned after passing a resolution to send a deputation to King Boris informing him that something must be done quickly to save the country from catastrophe.

The Balkan reports said there were unconfirmed rumors that Premier Bogdan Filoff had already fled Sofia and that his government had been replaced by one of pro-Allied sympathies.

In Hungary, student peace riots Saturday night reportedly precipitated a special cabinet meeting.

Premier Nicholas Kallay reportedly intervened when discussions became heated and later laid the situation before Admiral Nicholas Horthy, the Hungarian Regent.

Effective Work In Russian Plants

Moscow, Aug. 10—(AP)—Russian war plants "compare favorably" with those in the United States, according to Admiral William H. Standley, United States ambassador, who has just completed a four-day tour of inspection of Soviet tank factories and steel mills in the Ural mountains industrial region.

Standley said that "very effective work is being done" and that he was "very much impressed" by Russia's eastern war industries.

Standley said food was abundant wherever his party went.

"The people not only looked well fed but they know what they are doing. They looked lean and wiry, but I saw no signs of emaciation or overwork. There seemed to be ample housing facilities everywhere I went," he declared.

ROOSEVELT IN CONFERENCE

Washington, Aug. 10 —(AP)— President Roosevelt arranged a conference today with his state department advisers on post-war planning, headed by State Secretary Cordell Hull.

LIBERALS LOSE 4 FEDERAL SEATS IN BY-ELECTIONS

C.C.F. Wins Two, Bloc Populaire One and Labor Progressive One

SMALL SOLDIER VOTE

(By The Canadian Press)

Four Federal seats formerly held by Liberal members of parliament went to opposition candidates in by-election voting yesterday—two in western Canada to C.C.F. standard-bearers, one in Quebec to a Bloc Populaire representative and the fourth, also in Quebec, to a Labor Progressive.

The voting left the standing in the House of Commons at: Liberals, 170, Liberal Progressives, 3; Liberal Independents, 3; Progressive Conservatives, 39; C.C.F., 11; Social Credit, 10; Bloc Populaire, 4; Independents, 3; Unity, 1; Labor Progressive, 1.

With no Progressive Conservative candidate contesting any of the seats, the Liberals went down to defeat to Fred Rose, Labor Progressive candidate in Montreal Cartier, and to Armand Choquette, Bloc Populaire candidate, in Stanstead, Que.

Unsuccessful in both Quebec ridings, the C.C.F. emerged victorious in the two western constituencies, where William Bryce, C.C.F., defeated both Liberal and Social Credit candidates in Selkirk, Man., and Joseph W. Burton, C.C.F., candidate, was elected in Humboldt, Sask.

Social Credit Beaten

In both western ridings, the Social Credit party did not obtain a thousand votes, and in all four ridings, the soldier vote was confined to those servicemen able to vote in their home ridings.

While Prime Minster Mackenzie King remained aloof from the by-election campaigns, several of his cabinet ministers had been campaigning steadily in the four constituencies, especially in the Quebec ridings.

No comment was made in Ottawa by Liberal leaders following announcement of election results, but in Montreal, Maxime Aymond, leader of the newly-formed Bloc Populaire and member of parliament for Beauharnois-Laprairie, said that "Quebec has repudiated the war policy of Mr. King in such a fashion that the present government has no longer the right to speak in its name."

The Liberal defeat in the four by-elections follows by only a few days the defeat of the Ontario Liberal government in last Wednesday's provincial general election.

Traditional Seats Lost

Montreal, Aug. 10 — (CP)—Two Quebec ridings that have been traditionally Liberal had members of other parties as their House of

Canadian Seaforths And Tanks Rout Stubborn Nazis From Ridge

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Sicily Aug. 8 —(Delayed) — (CP Cable) —The Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, a Vancouver regiment, and a Canadian tank unit climaxed some of the fiercest fighting in Sicily by routing stubborn German defenders from an important ridge in close-quater battle in the brilliant operation that led to the fall of Aderno.

The fight was featured by exchanges of hand grenades.

The Seaforths advance, under a Vancouver lieutenant - colonel, carried them to high ground near the key city of Aderno and dominating the Simento river. There was fighting for nearly every inch of the 15-mile way.

The Seaforth began their big push from the Regalbuto area Aug. 3 and the battalion was taken in trucks to a point near the Salso river which flows north of the Regalbuto-Aderno main road to join the Simento in front of Aderno.

This country was a pile of mountains and hills. Maj.-Gen. Guy Simonds, commander of the Canadian 1st Division, decided on a break through the mountains on Aderno rather than follow the main road.

During the night of Aug. 3-4 the Seaforths, advancing afoot, crossed the Salso, aiming to push east six miles to Troina, then the objective of the American 7th Army. Luck was with the Seaforths, for the Nazis shelled the area before the Highlanders crossed.

Halfway between the Salso and Troina rivers the Seaforths advance guard was fired on from a hill called Tamburino. Despite heavy fire, they wiped out the enemy machine-gun posts. This attack was made in darkness.

Canadian Units Meet on Crest

By coincidence the Edmontons attacked Tamburino from the rear at the same time and the units met on top of the crest. There were a few hectic moments as they identified each other as Canadians.

Not stopping in their advance, the Seaforths pressed forward to attack a 1,00-foot ridge overlooking the Troina river and covering the Troina-Aderno road, then used extensively by the Germans.

The company worked in on the Germans who were crack paratroopers fighting as infantry. It was a man-to-man fight practically all the way to the Simeto and at times the enemy was superior in numbers.

Then tanks came up to fire on the last enemy positions on a toothlike pinnacle jutting from the top of the ridge. There was a final heated infrantry fight on the crest and by 11 a.m. the Seaforths possessed their objective.

"We gave the enemy a very bad licking there," an officer said. The trops went over the Troina River, across the Troina-Aderno Road, and battled their way into a ridge

General Advance Made Despite Many Obstacles

American Raiding Party Takes 1,500 Germans in Surprise Amphibious Action

HOLD AIR SUPREMACY

By RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Allied ground forces made progress everywhere along the front in Sicily, Allied Headquarters announced today. As heavy Allied naval units rained torrents of shells on the enemy's exposed coastal positions.

Royal Navy destroyers shelled the coastal road and railway at Riposto, north of Acireale and nine miles south of Taormina on the East Coast, after blasting at similar targets at Taormina.

Announcing that American soldiers captured 1,500 German prisoners in landing behind the lines near Cape Orlando Sunday night — a feat which resulted in the fall of the enemy's northern coastal anchor positions at San Fratello and San Agata — a naval communique said heavy United States warships continued to batter a way for the 7th Army.

The progress of the troops spearing toward the Messina tip was officially described as "slow and steady" with the enemy resorting to "every device to hold up the relentless advance of our forces."

Heavy Demolitions.

However, the Germans' position "daily becomes more difficult," the communique said, despite heavy demolitions, rugged country and lack of roads which interfere with swift Allied movement.

The British 8th Army was described as making considerable progress in "closing around Mount Etna," advancing up the coastal shelf between that giant landmark and the sea, and pushing on beyond Bronte on the road west of the mountain toward Randazzo. British and Canadian troops were reported less than seven miles from Randazzo, communications hub of the enemy's position.

Flanking patrols of Britons and Americans were said to have closed the gap between the two armies in that sector where the Americans had pushed past Cesaro to within 10 miles of Randazzo.

The American raiding party which landed in the Germans' rear at Torrenova, just west of Cape Orlando, has succeeded in making contact with the main body of Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's 7th Army, it was stated.

This amphibious force, besides capturing 1,500 prisoners, destroyed important military installations and its operation was officialy described as "highly successful."

Meanwhile the Allied air fleets were declared to have enjoyed "absolute air supremacy yesterday, not only over Sicily and the Messina Strait but well into the toe of Italy."

All Forces Busy

Both the strategic and tactical air forces concentrated on bombing and strafing the enemy along his avenues of escape.

Heavy bombers paced the Allied air smashes with heavy wallops at the Messina Outlet, where virtually all enemy motor tranport from base to front must pass.

For the fifth straight night R.A.F. and Canadian Wellingtons attacked landing craft on the Messina Beaches, bombed coastal installations and caused a large explosion and fires at Paradiso.

The Italian toe's rail and road communications were repeatedly smashed by raids in the neighborhood of Catanzaro and Angitalo for the third successive day. R.A.F. Liberators and Halifaxes again thundered over San Giovanni by night.

Six Small Ships Sunk

Six small ships were sunk off the north coast of Sicily near Milazzo.

The narrow enemy roads of the Siclian bridgehead were raked by relays of American fighters and bombers attacking at windshield height. They destroyed 16 vehicles and damaged more than 20 in roaring attacks in the Barcelona area east of Cape Orlando where the Germans were preparing to make a new stand against the Americans. Barcelona is 23 miles east of Cape Orlando and 17 miles from Messina.

Fighter-bombers also maintained their savage raids on the Randazzo area where they piled wreckage upon wreckage in an effort to block that filter point for enemy transport.

In all these operations four enemy aircraft were shot down yesterday, while the Allies reported three of their own planes missing.

Clear Catania Harbor

Meanwhile, improvement in Allied supply and communications was announced with minesweeper operations clearing the channel into the highly important east coast harbor of Catania.

The only place identified in new forward movements of the Allied troops was Pedara, a town on the slopes of Mount Etna which was taken by the British troops.

The position of a considerable force of German troops fighting a hard rearguard action against the Americans between Bronte and Cesaro was not known, but it was possible that these Nazis had been trapped by the junction of British and American patrols.

This joining of forces appeared to have closed the top of a rectangular sector unless the Germans were able to race through a narrow escape lane at the last moment.

The Allied forces were letting go with their heaviest punches and letting the groggy, reeling Axis forces have everything in the book — sea-borne bombardment, air and ground attack and heavy artillery fire — on a 24-hour schedule in an effort to squeeze the enemy into quick submission in the small remaining portion of the island.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

LOCAL MELONS OFFERED ON MARKET

Morley Sine of Frankford probably holds the record for early watermelons in this district. Mr. Sine picked melons from his patch on Friday last and offered them for sale on the local market on Saturday. Melons from this district seldom make their appearance on this market before the middle or latter part of August.

MARKET PRICES ARE UNCHANGED

An exceptionally large mid-week market welcomed potential purchasers of farm produce on Tuesday when prices remained unchanged. A large offering of vegetables was in evidence with green corn on the cob being the principal vegetable moving. The price of the corn on the cob was pegged at 35 and 40 cents according to the grade. Large luscious tomatoes brought a ready market prices being 60 cents the six quart basket. Cucumbers of the pickling variety also found a ready market.

The previous week's prices for raspberries and huckleberries held firm during the early hours of marketing, but falling off slightly as vendors endeavored to rid themselves of their offerings and return to their farms. New potatoes were also plentiful. Farmers attending today's market stated last night's downpour of rain was worth many thousands of dollars to district market gardeners, as well as the mixed farmer.

SWITCHMAN CRUSHED BETWEEN TWO CARS

Suffering from multiple injuries received while switching in the C.N.R. yards on Monday night, Fred Ellis, 52 Forin St., was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where he is reported to be making good progress toward recovery. Mr. Ellis received his injuries when he was caught between two cars and crushed. The extent of his injuries is unknown other than a fractured ankle and suspected internal injury. The accident occurred just before Mr. Ellis was due to leave the yards at the end of his shift. Dr. Van Blakslee, 111 Victoria Ave., attended the injured man and reports his condition as favorable.

BAKERY TRUCK STOLEN AT PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough police reported the theft of a truck from that city on Monday. It was a half-ton Fargo vehicle bearing the name "Wonder Bakers, Peterborough." Two members of the armed services are believed responsible for the disappearance of the delivery wagon.

Accused Claims He's Telling Truth

"You had better tell the police the truth about yourself and your recent activities or I shall have to recommend a mental examination," warned Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., when a lad who claims to be James Edward Alewain, self-styled escaped German prisoner of war appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on a nominal charge of vagrancy.

"I have told them the truth about myself," replied Alewain, who speaks both German and English fluently.

"Maybe, but you've related so many stories we can't tell which one to believe," added Mr. Donnan as he asked for a week's enlargement.

In the meantime Deputy Chief Harman told the court that the youth's finger prints and pictures had been forwarded to the R.C.M.P. headquarters at Ottawa and the F.B.I. offices in Washington DC., in an effort to ascertain the identity of the youth.

The lad who calls himself Alewain and says he was born of German parents in Georgia, was apprehended in Belleville last Friday as he attempted to enlist with the R.C.N.V.R., but could produce no birth certificate or identification card. Later he claimed to be an escaped German prisoner, but these hoaxes were promptly exploded by the police as fictitious. Alewain says he was shot down over Britain during the 1940 blitz, despite the fact he does not appear to be over 18 years of age at present. The result of his fingerprint records are expected back by the end of the week, Chief Probert later stated. In the meantime the youth is being held in custody.

The War Today—
Atrocities Cited to Show Savage Heart of Japanese

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

A West Coast reader has written to reprove me, courteously and in sorrow rather than in anger, for referring to the Japanese as "barbarians" and "savages."

He says (1) that these terms are unsuitable, and (2) that they are unworthy of this columnist. Having lived among the Japanese for 43 years, he has found them cultured, courteous and democratic. They will return to democracy when they get out from under the military dictators who now hold them down.

Well, I hasten to admit that it isn't good form to toss approbrium about loosely. Obviously, too, 73,000,000 Japanese can't all be bad. Further, a news analyst isn't permitted to have any emotions when he is writing.

'Japs Savages at Heart'

I still feel, however, that the vast majority of the Japanese are savages at heart. It's easy enough to teach a savage to use a knife and fork, but that doesn't change his instincts.

I have before me a despatch from J. Norman Lodge, Associated Press war correspondent on New Georgia Island out in the Pacific. He records a report made by Lieut. Nicholas T. Kliebert about the manner in which Japanese soldiers bayoneted helpless wounded soldiers to death. In one instance five of the savages (?) propped a wounded man against a tree and took turns bayoneting him.

"They cut one of the poor lads from the top of his head to his feet," says the lieutenant, "meanwhile laughing deliriously. Then they shot him through the head."

Japan Indicted for Barbarities.

On March 10, 1942, the British government indicted Japan for barbarities at Hong Kong paralleling those during the sacking of Nanking in 1937. Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons that the Japanese forces occupying Hong Kong committed such horrors as the bayoneting of 50 helpless, bound officers and soldiers, and indiscriminate raping and murder of Asiatic and European women.

Of course, one instance of that sort, or 10, shouldn't concern an entire country. But that's the pattern of the whole Nipponese fabric. It may be said that the Japanese soldiers are merely carrying out orders, for the purpose of terrifying enemy people. That's not good enough, however, for no civilized soldier would execute an order of that sort.

Strike in Dark

One of the outstanding characteristics of the savage is that he strikes by stealth. The Japanese struck at Pearl Harbor while two of their emissaries talked peace in Washington.

From Emperor Hirohito, who places his seal of approval on such acts, down to the soldier who rapes the woman and then bayonets her, the Japanese have savage instincts, despite their veneer of civilization. I'm one of those who believe that human nature can be changed. On that basis the nature of the Nipponese can be changed — in the course of generations.

Punishment for Axis Criminals

Meantime it's vital that we recognize what sort of people we are up against. We have a bitter job to do, and that is to render them so utterly impotent in the military sense that they won't in a hundred years be able to arm themselves again to commit aggression.

And when this war is over we shall have fought in vain if such criminals as Hirohito and Tojo and Hitler and Mussolini — and their captains — aren't brought to book for their sins.

Just Got Off Bike When Shell Hits Gas Tank, Wounded Man Tells His Mother In Letter

Marmora, Aug. 10 —(Special)— Mrs. Bruce Wright received a letter by airmail from her son, Private Robert Wright, on Friday, which in part, reads:

North Africa, July 21

"I suppose you will be quite surprised to hear from me out here. I'm in a hospital in North Africa. I got wounded on the fifteenth, but I'll be out of here in a few weeks and back with the boys. I've got a pair of lads from Bancroft here for company and plenty of Englishmen. I just got off my bike when a shell hit the gas tank and it went up in flames. I've found out the Germans are playing for keeps. I lost all my kit but what clothes I had on my back. As I was leaving in the ambulance I gave my revolver to one of my corporals. I was sent from dressing station to dressing station. When they operated on my arm they took off my shirt, boots, socks, wrist watch and paybook, and all I had on was my drill shorts when I came to and that is all I have still got. When the nurses saw me they asked me if I was turning Arab—no boots, and the sand was hot. I was talking to one of the Daily Star reporters today. He was asking all about the battle."

On Thursday Mrs. Wright was in receipt of a letter from the Director of Records, Ottawa, informing her that her son had been wounded by shrapnel in the arm and that fuller particulars would follow when received.

Women Volunteers Needed to Help In Distribution of Ration Books

The distribution of over 30,000 copies of Ration Book No. 3 will again be under the control of the local Belleville Ration Board as it was last year. The books have reached the city and are ready for distribution which will commence on Wednesday, August 25th, and continue until six o'clock on Saturday, August 28th. Mrs. Upper will have charge of the issuing of the new books in Belleville and seven other localities will come under the jurisdiction of the Belleville Ration Board. They are: Foxboro, Holloway, Plainfield, Cannifton, Point Anne, Shannonville and Melrose.

The task of distributing these new books will call for the help of many people and the local Ration Board would like as many women volunteers for this work as possible. The hours are from two o'clock to six o'clock each of the four days and all women volunteering will be especially welcome. Anyone wishing to volunteer for this vital work will please telephone Mrs. Upper at 2382, or the local Board at 579.

Must Be Called For

The new ration book will not be mailed. It must be called for. Residents of rural areas may apply on behalf of their neighbors for books providing that Ration Book No. 2 is properly filled in and presented. The same applies to residents of a town or city and any senior or responsible member of a household may apply for the new books on behalf of the other members of the household. Books will not be issued to children under 16 year of age but these will be issued to parents or sponsors.

A properly filled in card will be submitted to the distributor but not removed from the back of the old book. This will include the prefix letters and serial numbers, name, address and date on which the original cards is completed, age (if over 16) and signature. If the bookholder is under sixteen the signature must be that of a parent or sponsor. All Ration Books No. 2 must be surrendered before the new book will be issued and the return of all ration books must be made of any person who has died or joined the Armed Forces.

Rules For U.S. Citizens

Citizens of the United States must present their Canadian Registration Card before ration books will be issued. They must be permanent residents of Canada. If the American citizen cannot show a Canadian Registration card and it is believed he is not entitled to Ration Book No. 3, application must be made by him direct to the Ration Administration at Ottawa.

Under no circumstance will Ration Book No. 3 be issued to any local resident who is not able to present the card from the back of Ration Book No. 2. If this card is lost, or has been removed from the book, application for Ration Book No. 3 must be made to the local Ration Board, City Hall, Belleville.

The address which will appear on the new ration book will be the one where the bookholder now lives when Ration Book No 3 is issued unless the bookholder is staying at a summer cottage, with friends or relatives, at a hotel as a non-permanent guest, or in the hospital as a temporary patient. In these instances the bookholder must give his usual place of residence.

The local Ration Board chairman assures that there will be no confusion if everyone will follow the instructions given here and those they will be given by the distributing officers.

PTE. SAM WAY

Pte. Sam Way, 24, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Way, 75 Station Street, has been reported killed in action while taking part in the action in Sicily. Pte. Way lived all his life in the city before joining the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment to go overseas in December, 1939. Pte. Way was married while in England where his wife is now living in London. He trained at Picton with his regiment.

POLICE COURT

Pte. Delbert Jiggins, of the G.G.F.G. stationed at Ottawa, appeared in the city police court before Magistrate J. J. Lloyd here today charged with the theft of a radio and an electric iron, said to be the property of Gerald Hineman, 52 North Front Street. Despite the fact Jiggins pleaded he was enroute to Ottawa for discharge from the army, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. was granted a week's enlargement in the matter.

Jiggins was apprehended by Sergeant Arnott and P.C. Carruthers while it was said in possession of a mantel radio and an electric iron as he was about to leave the city early today. The theft of the articles had been reported by Hineman late Monday night.

Otherwise in today's court Pte. John Ousterhout appeared on a charge of obtaining money under false pretences, but his case was enlarged at the request of the prosecution until Friday the 13th, despite the protests of Charles A. Payne K.C. counsel for the defendant.

Nine persons answered guilty to charges of minor breaches of the L.C.A., two being women. All but one paid the conventional "ten and costs" imposed on drunk charges. George Snarr, Belleville, was assessed $5.00 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct, the plea and fine being accepted prior to the opening of the court.

R. S. M. Angus Duffy of H. and P. E. Regt. Wounded in Action

Trenton, August 10 — (Special) — The many friends of Regimental Sergeant Major Angus Duffy of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment, are extremely sorry to learn that he had been wounded in the Battle of Sicily.

Word has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Duffy of Victoria Ave., Belleville, but formerly of Trenton where Angus attended school and made a host of friends.

Angus recently distinguished himself and was mentioned in dispatches when he broke through the German lines bringing supplies to his men after twice scaling the 2500 ft. cliffs at Assoro, Sicily.

He enlisted in 1930 at the age of 16 as a Signaller and gradually rose in rank until in 1939 when he went overseas with his Regiment as Regimental Sergeant Major. He was chosen by his Regiment to represent them at the Coronation of the King and Queen, and during the past year he was awarded the Canadian Efficiency Medal for Meritorious Service.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Dixon and daughter Ruth left today for a vacation to be spent in Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and Western Ontario points.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Bach and Mr. A. Till of Toronto spent the week-end as guests of Mrs. H. D. Graham at her summer home on Lake Ontario. Mrs. Till and daughter Barbara who have been visiting Mrs. Graham for the past two weeks with Mr. Till returned to their home in Toronto.

Friends of Mrs. Vic Ryan, wife of Councillor Ryan, are sorry to learn of her illness in Belleville General Hospital. It is understood she underwent a serious operation on Monday.

Part of Money Lost Recovered

When a person inadvertently drops a roll of bills on the street it is seldom they can return to the exact spot to make partial recovery at least.

Today, Miss Margaret Leslie, 55 Hillcrest Street, attended the mid-week city market, but upon her return home she was minus nine dollars, one five dollar bill and four ones. Immediately returning to the market Miss Leslie reported the incident to city police and while making her report a citizen came into the police station with three one dollar bills, which he had found scattered on Market Street. Accompanied by Plainclothes Constable W. L. Rathwell, Miss Leslie returned to the vicinity of the Hume Arena where another dollar bill was found lying beneath a parked motor car.

The "five spot" could not be located, however, as it had apparently blown away with the light summer breeze.

BIG FORMATIONS

coast, however reported that great formations of planes were seen heading eastward across the English Channel just before midnight and said the moonlit sky "seemed full of them."

Preceding the night raids British fighters carried out patrols over northern France last evening, shooting down seven enemy aircraft in dogfights. Three of the British planes, one of them Canadian, failed to return from these sweeps.

R.C.A.F. fighters were also on intruder operations during the night, an R.C.A.F. communique announced today, attacking airfields and railways in France. One enemy aircraft fell to the Canadians, the communique added.

LIBERALS LOSE

Commons representatives today, following yesterday's Federal by-election in Montreal Cartier and Stanstead.

Fred Rose, running as a Labor-Progressive, was elected in Montreal Cartier, in a closely-contested five-way fight. Close behind him same the Bloc Populaire nominee, Paul Masse, with Liberal Lazarus Phillips and David Lewis of the C.C.F. trailing, followed far back by Independent Moses Miller.

Armand Choquette was the victor in another closely-contested campaign in Stanstead, with Liberal R. G. Davidson close behind and Pierre Thomas, C.C.F. far behind.

Practically all Cartier's 164 polls had reported before the election of Mr. Rose was certain. Final results gave him 5,784 votes, with Mr. Masse collecting 5,462, Mr. Phillips 4,129 and Mr. Lewis, national secretary of the C.C.F., 3,302. Moses Miller lost his deposit with 107 votes.

The result was in doubt until close to the end in Stanstead also, with the final results showing Mr. Choquette ahead with 6,702 votes in the 66 polls, compared with 5,390 for Mr. Davidson and Mr. Thomas last year 248.

C.C.F. Wins in West

Winnipeg, Aug. 10 (CP)—Two men of the soil, farmers who have watched and aided in agricultural developments in the wheatlands of the prairies, today added their names to the C.C.F. membership roll in the House of Commons.

They were the victors in two western by-elections yesterday, Joseph W. Burton winning in the constituency of Humboldt, in Saskatchewan and Wm. Bryce sweeping the Selkirk riding in Manitoba.

Both defeated Liberals, and in the three-way contests Social Credit candidates fared badly, polling a vote insufficient to protect their deposits.

The Humboldt and Selkirk seats were both formerly represented by Liberal members.

With some isolated polls to hear from in both constituencies, returning officers' reports early today showed:

Humboldt:

Burton, 8,423; Frank S. Krenn, Liberal, 5,082, and Theodore Langdenhoff, Social Credit, 220.

Selkirk:

Bryce, 8,762; C. F. Fillmore, Liberal, 3,401, and Miss Salome Halldorson, Social Credit, 809.

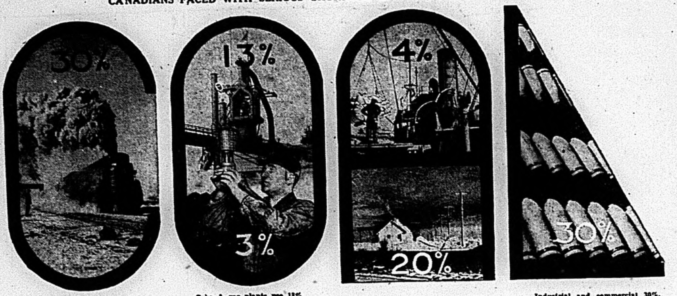
CANADIANS FACED WITH SERIOUS SHORTAGE OF FUEL, VITAL WAR SINEW



Railways use 30% of Canada's coal.

Coke & gas plants use 13%, colliers 3%.

Bunkerage 4% and homes 20%.

Industrial and commercial 30%.

Railroads, industry and home are the biggest consumers of Canada's coal. Smaller quantities are used for manufacturing coke and gas, for ship bunkers, by coal mines themselves to turn out more and more of this scarce commodity. A shortage of labor, a drop in United States output, lateness of navigation on the Great Lakes have created a serious coal shortage. A new order makes it an offence to waste fuel. The government has appealed to consumers, householders and commercial, to save one ton in five this year.

Italians Agitate Strike to Force Badoglio's Hand

Berne Reports Dispatch From Rome Says Italy Has "No Choice" But to Stay in War

NAZI REACTION

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 10 (AP)—Agitation to bring about a country-wide general strike in Italy and force the Badoglio government to make peace with the Allies continued today as troops patrolled strike-ridden industrial areas in the north.

Use of troops was reported by the Swiss Telegraphic Agency in dispatches from the Swiss border town of Chiasso, which said the strikes intensified in volume following heavy R.A.F. raids on Genoa, Turin and Milan Saturday night.

Militray intervention succeeded in halting the walkouts in Genoa the dispatches said, and work was resumed on "regular schedule" after drastic measures were put into effect. German troops stationed in the area helpde extinguish fires which followed the raid, the Gazetta Del Popolo was quoted as saying.

The renewed air raids, however, spurred strike activities as well as underground political opposition to the government, whose failure to respond to peace demands has raised public resentment to new heights, reoprts stated.

Dispatch From Rome

A Rome dispatch to the Tribune De Geve, mowever, said that Italy has "no choice" but to stay in the war, and that if Italy succeeds with German aid in holding Allied troops for a time, "events could take place which would offer unspecified possibilities for Italy to get out of the present situation."

(The Berlin correspondent of the Madrid paper Informaciones said an announcement would eb forthcoming that Italy will continue in the war with "still more active military help from Germany than ever before."

German Reaction

Meanwhile, the sobering effect of Axis reverses on the German population was reflected in an editorial in the Frankfurter Zeitung, copies of which have reached here. The editorial, spread over the front page said Germany now is engaged in a "struggle of life and death" in the east against a "mercilies opponent" and declared this situation has created a "heavy crisis" which always comes in a great war and requires "every German to do his duty."

with tank support.

The Princess Patricia's Canadian light infantry then came into the line, took over the ridge and consolidated the position while the Seaforths teamed up with a tank regiment for the final phase of the attack with their target high round in front of Aderno, overlooking the Simeto Valley.

This attack was the climax of Gen. Simonds' plan for the mountain thrust across this trackless country.

The Seaforths colonel rode into battle in the same tank as the armored unit commander. In this way they achieved complete cooperation in this model action which was witnessed by Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander of the 8th Army, and Gen. Simonds.

The armored cars went within 300 yards of the objective, moving over the brown rocky slope without being fired on. The Germans tried to trap the Canadians by holding their fire until the infantry came up.

Meanwhile the Seaforths riding forward on tanks, clinging to turrets, guns and hulls, advanced for two miles. As they were getting off the tanks for an assault the Germans began to fire. This did not dismay the Canadians, the leading tanks immediately attacked the German positions.

Enemy Completely Surprised

The enemy had no anti-tank guns, illustrating how completely surprise was achieved. There were anto-tank guns all along the main road from Regalbuto to Aderno, where the Canadian push was awaited but never came.

The enemy shelled and mortared the Canadians but the two Seaforth companies with tanks thundering around them stormed towards the top of the ridge. It was some of the fiercest fighting in Sicily and went on for hours.

Finally in mid-afternoon in torrid heat and dust the Seaforths closed with the Germans and there was a bloody exchange of grenades at 30 and 40 yards. The Seaforths hurled Mills bombs and the enemy replied with stick grenades that looked like potato mashers and some small hand grenades.

Seaforths Took Ridge, Enemy Routed

But the Seaforths, tossing in their grenades as if in a ball game, unflinchingly pressed the attack. With one last volley of grenades the Seaforths gained the broad portion of the ridge at about four o'clock.

"The Seaforths shot hell out of the enemy here and routed a large number of them after inflicting heavy casualties," said the colonel.

"I think that in the final close-in fighting it was the superiority of our hand grenades that did the job."

Pte. Jos. Seames Wounded in Sicily

Word was officially received in the city today from Ottawa telling of the wounding of Pte. Joseph P. Seames, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Seames, 61 Foster Ave., in the Mediterranean theatre of war, presumably Sicily. Pte. Seames is in the First Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas in December of 1939. The official announcement received by his parents read: "Sincerely regret inform you Pte. Joseph P. Seames officially reported wounded in action 19th July, 1943. Major and extent of wounds not yet available. Further information follows when available," signed Director of Records, Canadian Army Ottawa.

Pte. Joseph P. Seames enlisted at the outbreak of the war and has been in training in England since December 1939. He proceeded to the present scene of battle in Sicily with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment last month. Besides his parents, who reside at 61 Foster Ave., Pte. Seames has a wife and small daughter in Liverpool, England, two brothers, George Jr., and Herbert of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Morris of Mountain View and Mrs. Cecilia Sword, Franklin Street, Belleville.

Defence Minister Back in Ottawa From England

Ottawa, Aug. 10. (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston was back at his office desk after an absence of several weeks in Britain where he conferred with military authorities and inspected Canadian troops in their training camps.

MINISTRY MOVED IS REPORT

London, Aug. 10 —(CP)— The Morocco radio, in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press, quoted the German clandestine station, "Atlantique," today as saying that the German foreign ministry has been moved from Berlin.

LT. YEARWOOD WRITES INSPIRING LETTER PRIOR TO HIS BEING MISSING

Mrs. W. H. Nobes, College St., has just received a letter from her son, Lt. Manley Yearwood, who was reported missing since July 18th. Lt. Yearwood lived in Picton prior to his enlistment in December, 1939. Two of his brothers from Madoc also enlisted with him in the H. & P. E. Regt. Mrs. K. Blaind, of this city, is a sister. The letter follows:

Dear Mum:

Well folks, it's real fine weather over here. I am fine, best of health, hope same for you all.

Yesterday I lay on a beautiful lawn, had a real good sun-bath. Everything is in full bloom here. The lawns are a maze of flowers. I'm battalion orderly officer today and as I sit by a huge open window I look out at brilliant sunshine and see all kinds of flowers and hear hundreds of birds singing. The view here is simply marvelous. I look away across the levels for miles. The land is flat as a tabletop and as I am on a hill I can see numerous towns and villages in the distance. Spread out in a pattern below, away off to my right, is a great white windmill which looks like a sentinel standing guard over the land. Really, it's a beautiful sight and one you wouldn't associate with war. However, war and its aides are not far away. A few moments ago I heard the air-raid warning go. Innumerable planes are flying about, streaking across the sky like comets. It nearly makes one dizzy just to watch them zooming about.

Now and again we hear machine guns ripping and tearing or a dull heavy boom of a bomb. Today I haven't heard much but it's still a long way off till dusk.

I just wrote a letter home and find myself still in the mood to write. I find it difficult to write unless I feel like it. I guess it's because our minds are occupied with army administration so much that unless things are quiet and under control our minds refuse to function on mere letter writing. At any rate I'm sure you will understand. I'm surprised at some of the boys you spoke of who are being called in the army, but then it's total mobilization we need and must have. Every man has a part to play in this war and I'm glad I saw mine in peace time and trained for it. It means an awful lot to give up the comforts of home and all that it means but my country and what it stands for is worth fighting for. The young men of today must do it. I often think of what General MacArthur said: "Only those who are not afraid to die, are fit to live." It's very true, hard as it may seem. If life, home, loved ones and one's country aren't worth that effort, then that one who dodges that obligation must be a poor citizen, coward and blemish to his community..

Mrs. Lowry wrote to me that her son, Bryden, was in Newfoundland. No doubt it brings a burden to her heart to see him go. She lost her husband, you know, in the last war and that is always in her thoughts. So many are going through the same. There are women here who have not seen their sons and husbands for seven years. Men who had served for years in India and who were on their way home when war was declared were stopped in Egypt and have remained there until the present time. Also one woman I read of who has lost nine sons in this war. Of course, it's heart-breaking and more but it must be in order to clean up this mess. Someone has to pay and who, other than the young who are fit.

I feel we are all to blame for this war, as you said too much good time, not enough of God. We reap what we have sown and gather what we have scattered. Here's hoping it leaves a lesson we won't forget.

My two little girls are getting on fine. One is taking music lessons, learning fast; the other played a solo at the house not long ago for the W.V.S. who met there. I'll bet she was proud as punch. They will be grown ladies when I return. Four years here have seemed so long. I read the story you sent, Mother, "Tho a thousand shall fall by thy side no harm will come nigh thee." A great promise, isn't it? We might all have it if we would. Miracles of God happen every day but I guess we are blinded sometimes by material things and don't see them.

Well, folks, this letter is lengthy. I must ring off. Say a prayer especially for me. God bless you all and may He protect and guide you safely until I get back. Tell Sis to write often whether I answer or not. I'm terribly busy, Mum.

As ever. All my love, your son,
MANLEY

Time's Revenge on Axis

In three weeks' time four years will have passed since Adolf Hitler struck at Poland for world domination. Since September 1st 1939 the greatest war in all history has developed with war production at height and fighting more widespread than ever in history.

Great were the resources with which Germany embarked on her second great war. Hitler and his nefarious Nazis were able to set the pattern for war, for a short, not for a long time. Hitler's blitzkrieg swept Poland, then next spring Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and forced France out of the war, then he went into the Balkans and in June 1941 he crossed the boundary into Russia. He had been turned back in his air offensive against Britain in the September of the previous year. His entry into Russia marked the beginning of his second disaster.

Last year saw the assembling of those powerful Allied forces which turned back Germany and Italy out of Africa. There came then the landing in North Africa, then the end of the Axis in Africa, and now Sicily all but overrun by the Allies and with Italy now in the hands of Badoglio and with Mussolini gone. The latest unofficial news is that Hitler has been ousted by the Prussian military forces and remains only as a figurehead, if the Madrid story of yesterday is founded on fact.

The pattern has changed for the Hitlerites. Withdrawal in place of offensive against Russia, withdrawals through Italy, possible withdrawals hinted in Norway — Hitler's initiative is gone and there is what looks like a Potsdam clique making a last-ditch stand by assumption of the military power exercised by the generals.

Four years of Axis-made desolation on earth have turned out badly for the warmakers, the Hitler, the Mussolini crowds. Hitler is reported fiddling with his name of Fuehrer as fat Nero did with his fiddle in the days of burning Rome. Hitler is now looking to his pal, Goering, and the Prussians, who are reported in charge of Germany.

There is Hess, a prisoner in Britain. Many of the old associations are gone. There are no parades of Hitler and Mussolini, no boast of power and pomp as in the days when the Hun and Italian shed the blood of other nations as well as of their own peopple while Hitler smirked and Mussolini puffed himself out.

War, grisly war, has gripped the fat Duce in his clutch, and will be perhaps be dangling the wild-eyed Hitler at the end of a leash.

War is having its revenge on the warmakers, in the moloch furnace of their own hatred of mankind.

And high over all this is world justice watching the scales. The finger of justice is pointing the way down to defeat for those who have shed the blood of millions for the glory of Hitler and of Mussolini, who now are tasting bitterness.

And when the war is ended, there still awaits the world judgment on those men of evil, all those evil fry of Huns and Fascists who try to dodge the light and escape the justice of the Allied nations to whom has come power and will come victory after victory over the warmakers.

Montgomery's Eighth Army

General Montgomery made a speech recently at Amesbury School in Surrey, and spoke on the familiar theme of the Eighth Army, most famous army in the world today.

Among the things he said of striking interest were these:

He always tried to make the enemy dance to his tune;

He took steps to make the battle in North Africa develop according to plan;

The army must follow that plan ruthlessly and with ample power so that anything else the enemy might do would not make the army react to it;

The army must gain the initiative and keep it.

Here the famous leader has laid down a number of rules. There is no hit and miss in his calculations. Such plans have built up great victories.

Among other things he said at the school were:

The German is good technically with his weapons;

He has an eye for the country and a skill in picking up good positions;

He is completely and absolutely obedient.

The difference between the German and British soldier was that the German laughed at others' misfortune and the British laughed at his own misfortunes, he said.

The British leader also indicated three weaknesses of the German soldier:

He could not stand up under really heavy fire;

He was inclined to be a little stupid about over-indulgence in sun-bathing, becoming muddle-headed from the heat;

He was not as robust or strong as he thought he was.

For the British soldier here are General Montgomery's words which tell why he thinks him the best fighting man in the world:

The British soldier responds easily to leadership;

He serves under the best corps of officers of any army in the world

He has tremendous enthusiasm when he needs it most.

General Montgomery has a good word for the Scottish as the easiest soldier to work up to a high pitch of enthusiasm. The Eighth Army's morale was quite amazing and so high as to be almost "dangerous." This showed in the sick list. He would not be worried if his sick rate was two men per thousand each day. But the sick rate was never above 0.5 per thousand per day one man per thousand evacuated to hospital every other day.

Since Italy and Germany having been receiving smashing blows the Japanese were also getting their share. The loss of Munda airbase on the anniversary of Guadalcanal was a severe blow to the Japanese who have always stoutly defended it as means of attacking American positions.

Over nine million tons of German and Italian shipping has been sunk or captured or damaged by Allied forces from the beginning of the war to the end of June of this year and these figures do not include losses inflicted by Russian warships and air force. This is a tremendous loss for nations which are not among the greatest marine powers. These figures reveal the thoroughness of the search by British and American sea and aircraft on the ocean lanes.

If a man think it is a small to bridge his tongue, he is much mistaken; for it is a point to be silent when occasion requises and better than to speak though never so well. — Plutarch.

THE SPELLING GAME

When we start spelling out candy and gum
Says Ellen Elizabeth: "Let me have some!"
Speak but the letters for ice cream or cake—
She has the answer without a mistake.
Take it from grandpa, she's right on the dot.
Ellen Elizabeth knows what is what!

Quick as a ferret or quicker is she;
Bit of a wonder for just half-past three,
Knows if we spell it, it's candy or pop.
"Me, too!" she answers and won't let it drop.
Take it from Grandpa, a smart little tot!
Ellen Elizabeth knows what is what!

Oft in the days when her daddy was small
He paid to our spelling no notice at all.
We lettered out "candy," as most parents do,
And never the rascal let on that he knew.
But now with the answer she's there on the spot.
Ellen Elizabeth knows what is what!

Worked it but once, and the next time it came
She made it quite clear she was onto the game.
Spelling out "candy" she shouted: "Me too!"
And there wasn't a doubt that our meaning she knew,
"C-a-n-d" was as far as we got.
Ellen Elizabeth knows what is what!

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By ALAN RANDALL)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, (CP) — Third ranking ace in the R.C.A.F. is Squadron Leader R. W. (Buck) McNair of Battleford, Sask. He has a score of 12 enemy aircraft destroyed and has earned a bar to his D.F.C.

The commander of the Canadian Red Indian squadron in Fighter Command is topped only by George Hill, D.F.C. and bar of Pictou, N.S., and Flt. Lt. H. W. McLeod of Regina, who both have 13 destroyed. (F.O. George Beurling of Verdun, Que., has 29 to his credit but is in the R.A.F.)

McNair took over command of his present squadron after a rest in Canada during the winter. Flying in Malta last summer he accounted for eight enemy aircraft destroyed.

Recently he came into the news when his Spitfire's engine cut some distance inland from Boulogne and he glided 30 miles across the English Channel to a safe landing at an airfield on England's South Coast. For that some newsman wrote a bit about "Glider" McNair . . . and some day Buck hopes to catch up with the fellow because the boys around the station immediately took up the nickname for a short time. (Note to McNair: It wasn't us.)

Popular promotions in the press relations staff of the R.C.A.F. at overseas headquarters in London are those to Bob Forster of Montreal and C. A. (Chick) Spence of Listowel, Ont. They've been boosted from flight lieutenants to squadron leaders.

Chick, with his own weekly newspaper back home, wears the wings he won in the last war and operates from a desk at the Air Ministry in Whitehall where London newspapermen find him helpful indeed.

Forster recently returned to England after a tour of "special duty" in Canada, during which time he got married. In 1939 he was the non-playing captain of Canada's Davis Cup Tennis team and finds time now and again to get out on the courts a bit here with his tennis-playing pal and fellow Davis Cup teammate, Flt. Lt. Walter Martin of Toronto.

Tribute to Britain's Air Training Corps was paid by Sir John Salmond, marshal of the R.A.F. and former chief of the air staff. He said two out of every three men entering the R.A.F. now have passed through the A.T.C. as boys. There are more than 2,000 A.T.C. squadrons in Britain. Air Commodore J. A. Chamier who organized the A.T.C. has been called Britain's "Baden-Powell of the Air."

First Canadian to lead an air unit in the Burma theatre is Squadron Leader John S. Hart of Sackville, N.B., and Halifax, one of the pilots who took part in the Battle of Britain. He received the command after nearly a year in action against the Japs. Hart came to England before the war and joined the R.A.F. on a "short service commission."

Keeping the Epileptic Bright and Free From Depression

A few years ago a not uncommon sight on the street, church, theatre or elsewhere, was a patient having an epileptic fit. No treatment during the attack was given except that the patient was prevented from hurting himself (biting his tongue or striking against hard objects). Between attacks the drug in general use for quieting purposes was the bromide drugs.

Unfortunately while the bromides quieted the patient and undoubtedly reduced the number of attacks, they greatly depressed the mental and physical condition of the patient. It was a great step forward then when the barbital drugs were found to give more freedom from attacks and the depression of spirits was much less than by the use of bromides.

However, as some cases of epilepsy require larger doses, it has been found that these patients, though free or nearly free of attacks, are drowsy and depressed, and unable to properly carry on their work. It is not surprising therefore that the drug benzedrine sulfate or amphetamin sulfate has been suggested to overcome this drowsiness and depression.

I have mentioned benzedrine sulfate frequently. It was first used by students wishing to keep themselves "bright" and free from tiredness during examinations or while studying for examinations. It is being used with success in the treatment of alcoholism as it not only takes away the desire for alcohol but provides a "stimulant" to overcome depression.

In "Diseases of the Nervous System", Dr. G. Cook states that the drowsiness and depression due to large doses of phenobarbital may be counteracted by benzedrine sulfate. The patient feels better mentally and because he feels better he avoids convulsions caused by fear, frustration and hidden compulsions or obsessions. The dose of phenobarbital is gradually increased until all the convulsions are prevented.

The benzedrine sulfate is given in large doses preferably during the morning and early afternoon, so as to avoid any tendency to wakefulness at night.

Winston Churchill And Roosevelt May Meet Soon

New York, Aug. 10 — (CP)—The New York Times said today reports are current in Washington that another meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt is imminent. The story mentioned that these reports said "Canada would be an appropriate setting for the sixth Churchill-Roosevelt meeting."

Lending credence to these reports, the newspaper said, was the fact that when Mr. Churchill left Mr. Roosevelt following their last meeting in May it was said they hoped to see each other every 90 days.

FAMED BEACH OUT OF BOUNDS

Honolulu, Aug. 9. (AP)—Famed Waikiki Beach was out of bounds to all military personnel today because of ten cases of dengue fever among civilians, the first appearance of the tropical disease here since 1924. Dr. James Enright, director of the City and County Bureau of Communicable Diseases, said the fever was brought in by persons infected in the South Pacific area.

CANADIAN CHINESE

Albert Mah, Canadian-born of Chinese parents, born in Prince Rupert, B.C., was a civilian pilot in air observer schools at Edmonton and Quebec, for Canadian Pacific Air Lines for two years. He flew east from Canada, and has been accepted by China National Aviation Corporation as a pilot to fly from India to Chungking. He hopes in some way as yet undisclosed to aid his mother and sister who are in Jap-held part of China.

PATERNITY OF JEEP

The Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., replying to a Federal Trade Commission complaint, insists that its engineering staff created and perfected the jeep in collaboration with the army quartermaster corps and did not copy the design from any other manufacturer.

In the fall of 1939, says the company, its chairman discussed with army authorities the subject of a light car capable of great flexibility, speed in manoeuvring and carrying both protective and offensive weapons.

On March 15, 1940, officials of the firm first saw the small motorized machine-gun carrier built at Fort Benning under supervision of Major Howie and other military authorities.

In July, 1940, the quartermaster corps requested bids for seventy 1200-pound vehicles. Willys-Overland took exception to the specifications and submitted a bid based on an original design prepared by its engineering staff. This design called for use of Willys-Overland's standard four-cylinder 'Go-Devil' engine and a car weighing about twice as much as required by war department specifications. The firm was not the successful bidder, but, upon the suggestion of the commandant of the Holabird Quartermaster Depot, it began to build a pilot model under its design for submission for a test.

Willys-Overland says it delivered this pilot model November 13, 1940, before either the Ford Motor Co. or the American Bantam Car Co. had produced a car to conform to the army specifications of July, 1940, and when no member of the Willys-Overland had access to any of the work of those companies.

In November Willys-Overland was advised it would be awarded a contract for 1500 of these vehicles provided the weight was reduced.

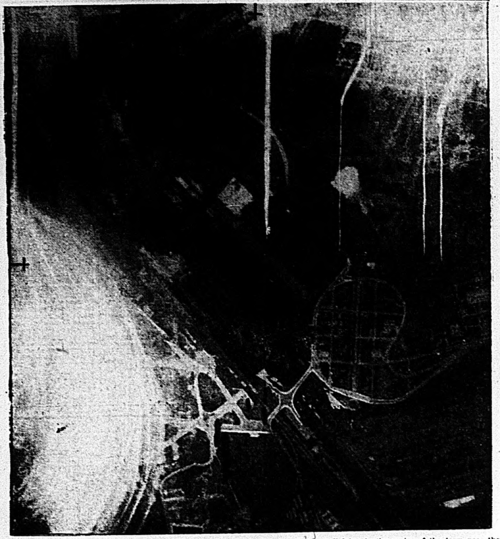
The vehicles made under this contract were service tested in June, 1941, along with vehicles made by Ford and the American Bantam Car Company.

Willy-Overland says it was the successful bidder for 16,000 vehicles to be produced according to designs submitted by it, and was then advised that the quartermaster corp desired to adopt the Willys-Overland vehicle as a standard for all ¼-ton, 4x4 trucks.

The War Department then designated the Ford Motor Company as a second source of supply of "jeeps" and Willys-Overland, under an agreement with the army, furnished Ford with all specifications and technical data connected with the manufacture of the car.

Although the design of the "jeep" has been modified and perfected as a result of experimentation and specific war department requirements, the Willys-Overland Company insists that all the cars of this type since manufactured have been patterned after and based on the original designs of that firm.

CANADIAN BOMBS HIT NAZI ARM PLANT "ON THE NOSE"



One of the most remarkable pictures ever taken at night by a bomber over a German target, this photograph was brought back by Flying Officer "Chick" MacIntosh of 121 Luxton Ave., Winnipeg, and his Halifax crew of the famous R.C.A.F. Moose Squadron. Taken as the big four-engined bomber roared over the Schneider armament works at Le Creusot, the picture shows several of the aircraft's bombs falling directly toward one of the plant's great workshops, demonstrating that the Canadian crew, like many of their mates that night, hit the target "on the nose." "We moved in early and thanks to flares and moonlight we could see everything as though it were daylight," MacIntosh said afterward. "Two small lakes in the centre of the town near the armament works showed up quite clearly. As we went in for our run, the bomb aimer could see buildings crumbling from the weight of heavy bombs and the picture we took showed our bombs going right on the building we were sent to prang. The fires had started when we took the picture and the reason it turned out so well was pure luck, because a lot of the fellows who followed had dense smoke clouds to contend with." Others in the crew were Flying Officer Larry Noble of Prince Albert, Sask., Sgt. W. M. Joy of Mackey, Ont., Sgt. Armie Lemire of Melville, Sask., Flying Officer Ken Harrold of 123 Westbury Crescent, Toronto, and Sgt. E. J. G. Hancock of Gourock, Scotland. — (R.C.A.F. Photo).

CANADIANS BRING BACK PROOF OF SUCCESSFUL RAID

Following a raid on the Schneider armament works at Le Creusot, four airmen of the famous R.C.A.F. Moose Squadron study the remarkable picture of the raid which they brought back with them. One of the cleverest ever taken at night over an enemy target, it shows bombs from their big Halifax dropping directly toward one of the great Schneider workshops — the building they were sent to bomb. Left to right are Flying Officer Chick MacIntosh of Winnipeg, the pilot; Flying Officer Larry Noble of Prince Albert, Sask., rear gunner; Sgt. Ted Hancock of Gourork, Scotland, bomb aimer; and Flying Officer Ken Harrold of Toronto, the navigator. So highly was the photograph regarded by intelligence officers that the intelligence staff of Canadian Bomber Group Headquarters presented the crew with a special certificate and copies of the picture. — (R.C.A.F. Slaughtering Order Amended for Villagers

The position under the slaughtering regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board of villagers and others who not being farmers, nevertheless keep or raise live stock for the provision of meat for themselves and their families is clarified in an amending order issued by the Board. People falling into this category have been in doubt concerning their responsibilities under the slaughtering regulations.

The new order defines a farmer for such purposes as "a person who derives the major portion of his livelihood from agricultural pursuits carried on by him on his farm." Villagers and others accustomed to keep a few live stock —but not farmers under such a definition are to be allowed to continue to keep them, provided they do not raise more than two head of any kind within a year. Moreover, they do not need a slaughtering permit to kill this livestock or have it killed for them if it is for the use of their own family.

Under the meat rationing regulations, however these people are under an obligation to register with their Local Ration Boards as meat producers and they are also required each month to surrender to those Boards meat coupons covering the meat of their own kill which they consume during that month at the rate of one coupon for every two pound. They are, however, permitted to keep half of their meat coupons coming due each month and these they may use to buy other kinds of meat when and if required.

Briefs From Around the World

Stratford, Aug. 10 — (CP) — W. R. Pratt, returning officer for Perth constituency, said yesterday that no returns had been received from Ontario military camps since Saturday and he believed there were no Perth men in the camps not yet reported. W. Angus Dickson, Liberal, at present leads Fred Edwards, Progressive Conservative, by 17 votes.

Hamilton, Aug. 10 — (CP) — W. G. Merritt, Agriculture Department representative, said last night that unfavorable weather and a farm labor shortage have resulted in a poor crop outlook. The oats crop yield will be cut by about 25 per cent because of heavy rains in the Hamilton area

Toronto, Aug. 10 — (CP) — Mayor Fred J. Conboy will head a committee which will consider plans to impress on the government the need for a new military hospital in Toronto, it was learned yesterday.

Hamilton, Aug. 10 — (CP) — James F. Berry, city clerk, announced yesterday that births in the city of Hamilton in the first seven months of 1943 totalled 2,872, an increase of 396 compared with the like period of 1942.

Montreal, Aug. 10 — (CP) — T. C. Lockwood, transport controller, said last night that to "speed up shipments of war materials and to conserve freight car supply, it is essential that all receivers of carload freight in Canada remove from the cars, after the contents have been discharged, all dunnage, nails, strapping and other debris."

Edmonton, Aug. 10 — (CP) — Completion of work on the Alaska Highway this fall is expected to release between 3,000 and 3,500 Canadian civilians by Dec. 31, Selective Service officials said yesterday.

Vancouver, Aug. 10 — (CP) — Wreckage of a Canadian Pacific Air-lines plane which disappeared eight months ago with 10 passengers and three of a crew has been sighted from the air but it will be Friday before a ground party can return with details of the crash, officials said last night.

Washington, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Elmer Davis, Director of the U.S. Office of War Information, predicted yesterday the opening of a third front" in Western Europe but shied away from any guess as to when it might be launched by the Allies.

New York, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Declaring that his country lies "under the guns" of Russia, Dr. Edouard Benes, President of the Czecho-Slovak Government, said yesterday he did not "fear Soviet interference in my country's way of life after the war."

PRODUCTION AT NORMAL

Richmond Hill, Ont., Aug. 9 — (CP) — Egg production is back to normal on the farm of A. Caffin, Richmond Hill, since air raids on the chicken coop have ceased. Cessation of hostilities came with the ensnarement of a great horned owl four feet four inches from wing tip to wing tip.

ONLY ONE BAND AT CAMP

Shelburne, Ont., Aug. 9 — (CP)— For the second year in succession the Lorne Scots brass band from this district was the only regimental band at Camp Niagara during its two-week stay. The other two regiments had bugle or trumpet bands.

ITALIAN PRESS OFFERS EXCUSE FOR BADOGLIO

Says He is Trying to Conduct War to an Honorable Conclusion

APPEAL TO WORKERS

By THOMAS HAWKINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berne, Aug. 9 —(AP)— The ambiguous assertion that Premier Pietro Badoglio now is studying the problem of "how to conduct the war to an honorable conclusion" was offered by the Italian press today as an explanation of the policies of the two-week-old Rome government.

Dispatches to the Tribune de Geneve said the explanation was printed in a number of Rome papers on the heels of the Allied break-through in eastern Sicily and the renewal of massed air raids on northern Italy.

Meanwhile, advices from Italy indicated, underground political parties agitating for peace are emerging into the open despite a ban on their activities.

The Swiss newspaper Volksrecht, quoting dispatches from the frontier, said the Italian Socialist Party was appealing to workers, farmers and middle class intellectuals to join in a general strike to force an end to Italy's participation in the war and abolish the monarchy.

The Volksrecht said the appeal was contained in a resolution printed in an Italian Socialist newspaper condemning Premier Badoglio because "behind the phantom of military symbols the real organisms of the Fascist dictatorship have been retained and even strengthened," and describing the new Italian government as "Fascism without Mussolini."

(Madrid dispatches said reports from Rome yesterday told of fresh peace disturbances in Bari and declared that Italian troops had refused to obey when ordered to fire into a crowd of demonstrators. The troops were reported to have been marched to their barracks and replaced by others who broke up the demonstration.

(Stockholm advices said that while rigid censorship continued to govern neutral correspondents in Italy, information reaching Swedish newspapers through private channels seemed to indicate a new crisis in Italian affairs is brewing.)

The Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera announced that Babuscio Rizzi, former chief of cabinet at Chigi Palace, was named charge d'affairs at the Vatican succeeding Count Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of Benito Mussolini.

Tweed

Tweed — (Special) — Word has been received by friends here that Pte. "Ted" Frizzell, formerly of the Bank of Montreal staff, is with the Canadian troops in Africa. "Ted" arrived in England a few months ago after training at Camp Borden and Kingston. He is a member of the R.C.A.M.C.

Mrs. Edith Hammett received a cable this week from LAC. Bill McIvor advising her of his safe arrival in England with a detachment of the Royal Canadian Air Force. "Bill" was a popular young resident of the village before enlisting in the Air Force. He took his training at Manning Pool in Toronto and in Western Canada.

Word has been received that Lt. Shannon LaFontaine, Tweed, has been promoted to the rank of Captain. Capt. La Fontaine, who was the publisher of the Frankford Advocate prior to his enlistment, has been overseas for some time. He is now adjutant of the Stormont Dundas and Glengary Highlanders.

Capt. La Fontaine is a son of Mrs. M. La Fontaine and the late Zed La Fontaine of this village. His many friends here are very glad to hear of his rapid promotions.

YOUTH KILLED BY TRAIN

North Bay, Aug. 9 — (CP) — Provincial police said today that a youth killed when struck by a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train near here early Sunday has been identified as Joseph Tremblay, 15, of Montreal.

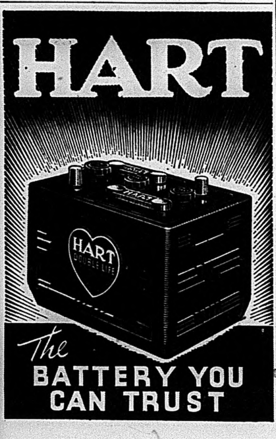
Officers said Tremblay was sitting in a huddled position and apparently asleep on the railroad track and was not seen by engineer R. Nickle of North Bay until the train was nearly upon him.

COLUMN OF THREE'S

Nothing has thrilled troops in Canada so much since the outbreak of war as the achievements of the Canadian Army's 1st. Division in Sicily. The exploits of the First Division are also being watched closely by civilians across the Dominion who have fathers, sons and brothers in the European invasion action, in addition to grateful Canadians unable to take part in the history making events.

However, the greatest interest in Military District No. 3 is being taken by both soldiers and civilians alike in the courageous fighting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment of Picton which is an M.D. 3 home unit. It is the oldest rural regiment in Canada, and in its ranks are members from all over Ontario.

With many "firsts" claimed among its records, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is also distinguished by the fact that in this war it provided two generals to the Canadian Army overseas. Its commanding officer in 1940 was placed in command of the 1st. Division as a major general. He was Lt.-Col. H. L. W. Salmon, M.C., who was killed in a plane crash in England in April 1943. Lt.-Col. Howard D. Graham of Trenton, who succeeded Lt.-Col. Salmon as officer commanding the H. and P.E. Regiment, was later promoted to Brigadier and placed in command of the 1st. Canadian Infantry Brigade.



HART

The BATTERY YOU CAN TRUST

"Please take good care of your Telephone!"

A damaged telephone may be hard or impossible to replace — repair parts are scarce and material for new equipment has gone to war. So please guard your present telephone with extra care. Here, for instance, are six common causes of damage:

AVOID THESE MISTAKES:

1. Never place your telephone on the wall box or on a narrow shelf. Keep it on a wide, firm table or desk.
2. Be careful that the cord does not loop over the drawer handle or knob. Opening the drawer may pull the telephone over; closing it may pinch and damage the cord.
3. Keep your telephone cord unkinked—twisting may injure the wire and necessitate replacement.
4. When painting, protect your telephone with a cloth or paper. When washing floors or woodwork, be sure that the cord does not get soaked with water.
5. Always replace the receiver carefully. Banging it down may injure the delicate mechanism inside. (Be sure it is placed correctly on its support, too, to avoid causing a "busy" signal.)
6. If you have dial service, please do not use a pencil or other sharp point when dialing. It disfigures and damages the dial and often causes a wrong number as well.

FASHION FLASHES

There's a new look about the turban of black satin as it makes its reappearance after several seasons. A neat model in black waxed satin, is draped to a low one-sided effect with a high, narrowed line opposite where loops of fabric are held by gilt and jewelled rings.

There's cheer in color, and the shops can't keep bright red or green coats in stock. A grand coat is a full-length model in bright red tweed fitted and held by a broad tailored self belt. Sloping inset self bands of black wool start at the shoulder and are structurally seamed to emphasize the easy drape of the bodice.

HEROIC WOMEN OF RUSSIA

Two of Russia's front line nurses are shown munching on chocolate bars that came to them from Britain, which supplies many of the luxuries enjoyed by Red Army warriors. These nurses go into the fighting lines with the Red Army. Nurse Anya Vesnicheva, LEFT, won a medal for "liquidating" 17 Germans. With her here is Nurse Antonina Dogina. When not nursing they take a turn behind a gun.

WEDDINGS

POWER—DAWSON

On Saturday morning, July 31, a pretty wedding took place in St. Peter's Catholic Church, Toronto, when Charlotte Eileen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dawson, Richview, Ont., was united in marriage to Raymond William, son of Mrs. Power and the late James Power, of Read. Father Curtin, assisted by Father Stone, performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Vincent Kanary, entered the church to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin played by Mr. Harry O'Grady. She was wearing a street-length dress of white triple sheer with lace bodice, white accessories and corsage of gladioli, roses and baby breath.

Miss Margaret Feeney, niece of the groom, as bridesmaid, was attired in blue sheer with white accessories and corsage of gladioli and baby breath. Mr. Frank Power, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman.

BEAN—PEACOCK

A pretty midsummer wedding was solemnized on Saturday morning, August 7th, at nine o'clock in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, when the Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G., united in marriage Mabel Laura Peacock, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Peacock, of Colborne, Ont., to John Ferris Bean, son of the late Mr. John Ferris Bean and Mrs. Bean. The altar, banked with white gladioli, formed an impressive setting for the occasion. Mrs. Grant presided at the console of the organ and Mr. Ed. Brown delightfully rendered "Ave Marie," "Mother Beloved" and "I Love You Truly."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a radiant picture in her traditional bridal satin wedding gown, fashioned in long torso effect with full skirt, sweetheart neckline and long sleeves ending in points over her wrists. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was caught to her dark hair by a headdress fashioned in a pompadour effect and arranged with orange blossoms. She carried Johanna Hill roses and bouvardia.

Miss Irene Bean, sister of the groom, was the bride's only attendant and was charmingly attired in a Queen's blue brocaded bodice dress, with full, net skirt and sweetheart neckline. Her matching shoulder-length veil fell in graceful folds from a pleated halo of blue net, adorned with pink rosebuds. Roses and summer flowers in dainty pastel hues completed her ensemble.

Mr. Arthur Venters, of Toronto, attended the groom.

For the wedding breakfast at Rene's White House, Brighton, the bride's mother received the guests gowned in an ensemble of navy figured crepe with matching picture hat, accessories of the same shade and corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother was wearing navy crepe with matching accessories and corsage of Dream roses.

Following the reception, the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Deer Lodge, Haliburton, the bride wearing an attractive turquoise two-piece suit and chocolate brown accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

CHAPLIN—TRUMAN

Standards of gladoli formed the setting in Chalmer's United Church in Kingston on Saturday afternoon, August 7th, when Betty Arlene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Truman was united in marriage to Corporal Robert Cameron Chaplin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert E. Chaplin, of Perth, Ont. Dr. J. M. Shaw, of Queen's University, officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of blush ivory slipper satin with a fitted bodice, square neckline and shirred cordings holding the skirt out bouffant style. Her tinted finger-tip veil of bridal illusion was held in place with a Mary Queen of Scot's halo of shirred net. She wore a string of pearls, the gift of the groom. Her bouquet was of crimson roses and bouvardia.

Her only attendant was Miss Doris McIntyre in a street-length frock of pastel blue crepe with matching flower hat and carrying a Colonial bouquet of pastel flowers.

Mr. John Chaplin, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were PO. R. G. Armour and WO. J. A. Robinson, R.C.A.F.

At the reception held at the Cataraqui Golf and Country Club, Mrs. Truman received in a two-piece frock of aqua with matching lace trim, brown accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother was gowned in light blue with navy accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

For travelling, the bride selected a suit of Nile green gabardine with tobacco brown accessories and corsage of gardenias.

Waitress Angered When Tip Stolen

Some people are thoughtless and some are inconsiderate, or selfish. These people do not leave tips for waiters or waitresses. But we can only class as plain mean the two women who in a Belleville restaurant pocketed the tip left by preceding customers.

The generous patrons had been an elderly couple, all dressed up in their newest clothes, and frankly enjoying themselves. They rather shyly mentioned something about a second honeymoon. The waitress enjoying their obvious pleasure gave them excellent service and joked with them a bit. Her services were well appreciated, for when they left, they also left a quarter on the table as a tip.

Imagine the indignation of the girl when on returning to the table she found that it was again occupied, by two women this time and that the quarter had disappeare*. Her disappointment was nothing compared to her rage at the complete lack of a sense of decency shown by these women. What kind of service they received can only be guessed at.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The August meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Cannifton was held Thursday in the Sunday School rooms. The President, Mrs. Armstrong, gave the call to worship. After singing a hymn, Mrs. Mills led in prayer and all repeated the Lord's Prayer. The secretary read two letters, one from Mrs. W. Clapp, thanking the society for cards she had received while ill in the hospital and one from Mrs. (Rev.) Davis, of Dobbinton, thanking all for the beautiful rugs given to them when leaving Cannifton, the gifts being sponsored by the W.M.S. The president took charge of the worship service, the 'theme' being "Christian Stewardship of Time." Scripture readings were given by Mrs. R. Pound, Mrs. Putman, Marguerite Armstrong and Mrs. D. Brenton. There was prayer by Mrs. Empson from the Missionary Monthly. The temperance program was in charge of Mrs. Holgate, who invited Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth and Mrs. Maguire, of Belleville. Mrs. Farnsworth is the county president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union. Her first remarks were, "What a great privilege it is to be a member of the Women's Missionary Society when you think of the wonderful world-wide work they have done and are still doing, their motto being 'Win the World for Christ.'" She gave a splendid temperance message that was very worth-while. Thanks were most cordially extended to Mrs. Farnsworth by Mrs. Holgate and Mrs. Armstrong. Mrs. (Rev.) Trumpour closed the meeting with prayer.

SHANNONVILLE W. M. S.

The monthly meeting of the W. M. S., of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Barlow on August 5th with nine in attendance. The opening hymn was preceded by the National Anthem. Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted and the roll was called. A card of thanks was read from Mrs. Harry Murphy for the card of sympathy she had received at the time of her husband's death. The president, Mrs. Doxtator, welcomed the visitors and thanked the hostess for opening her home for the meeting. Mrs. Everett Stratton, group leader, then took charge and gave a reading on the theme for the month, "Christian Stewardship of Time." After the singing of the next hymn Bible readings were given by Mrs. Claude Clarke, Mrs. Doxtator, Mrs. Orval Stratton and Mrs. Harvey Shetler. Mrs. Everett Stratton led in prayer and very graciously thanked all who had helped her with the two meetings of which she, as group leader, had charge. The meeting closed by all repeating the Mizpah benediction.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

NOT MANY BRIDES ARE HAVING RING-BEARERS THESE DAYS.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is to be married in church in the morning, wearing a white dress and veil. The groom is in the Army.

1. She wants to have a flower girl and a ring-bearer. Is this correct? If it is correct for her to have a ring-bearer, should he wear white, an Army uniform, since all the male attendants will be in Army uniform?

2. The bride is to have a maid of honor and four bridesmaids. Is it correct for the maid of honor to wear a dress made different from the dresses of the bridesmaids? And is it good taste for the maid of honor to wear white or yellow? The bridesmaids are to wear pastel-colored formal gowns.

L.N.

1. The bride may indeed have a flower girl, and if she especially wishes, she may have a ring-bearer, too, although very few brides have ring-bearers these days. If there is to be a ring-bearer he should wear a white linen suit. He most definitely should not wear a uniform...this would be in bad taste.

2. The maid of honor's dress may be either of the same or different design from the bridesmaids' dresses. And since the bridesmaids are wearing pastel-shaded dresses, it would be best not to have the maid of honor's dress of white (not enough contrast to the bride's white dress), but to have it of a shade to harmonize with the shades of the bridesmaids' dresses ... perhaps yellow, perhaps leaf green.

DRESSING FOR 8 P. M. WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At my small church wedding in August I shall wear a white dress and have one attendant. The groom and best man will be in uniform. The hour set is 8 p. m. which was chosen not because I wanted formality, but because this seems to be the most convenient hour under all the circumstances that must be considered.

Therefore is it in order for my father to wear a dark business suit, or should he wear more formal attire? (Everyone will be in street clothes except the bridal party.)

One usher will be in sailor uniform. What should the other ushers wear?

M.A.

Judging by the way you worded your third sentence I think you have a mistaken idea about the "formality" of an evening wedding, and I would like to set you straight about this. An 8 p. m. wedding may be either formal or informal ..., as in a day-time wedding the degree of formality depends not on the hour, but on the wedding plans.

Your father and the civilian usher may wear white or light-colored dinner jackets or since the wedding is to be small and informal, they may just as properly wear dark business suits.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN
President, Chicago Board of Health.

Especially in elderly persons, sores which do not seem to heal may develop on the legs. These are called indolent ulcers. Their failure to heal may be the result of scar tissue in the skin which has been produced by diseases affecting the veins and arteries, thus cutting down the circulation to the tissues. Repeated injury to the ulcer also will interfere with healing.

After one of these ulcers starts, infection with germs may occur, which increases the amount of scar tissue present around the ulcer, and makes the condition worse. These ulcers usually are located in the centre of a discolored and hardened bit of skin in the lower half of the leg or around the ankle, where injuries frequently occur, and where the blood supply is not very great. The edges of the ulcers are usually rounded. The bottom of the sore is gray-yellow in color and usually there is a fluid present.

Certain of the varicose ulcers are due to inflammation of the veins. Such things as heart disease, diseases affecting the blood vessels, such as hardening of the arteries, inflammation of the veins and also excessive weight all may help make varicose ulcers worse. Sometimes the ulcers may occur without any varicose veins being present.

In treating the ulcers, Dr. Richard E. Heller suggests either the use of an elastic adhesive bandage or a plaster-like cast which is known as Unna's paste boot. The former method seems to be the most satisfactory treatment.

Various types of medicine may also be used directly on the ulcer. If the ulcer is painful, an ointment containing an anesthetic or pain-relieving substance may be used. Such preparations as bentian violet or sulfathiazole help to eliminate the odor and reduce the amount of secretions. In some instances, ointments containing vitamins A and D have been used with benefit. It is helpful in most cases to get rid of the varicose veins by injections into them if possible. Anything which can be done to improve the circulation is beneficial. Thus, gentle massage, properly applied, and exercise may be of some help.

Even with these forms of treatment not all of the ulcers clear up. In such cases, it may be necessary to cut out the ulcer as well as all of the hardened tissue around it. Then a skin graft from another part of the body to the affected area is carried out.

MATCHING UP THE hat and bag has resulted in some attractive sets for Autumn wear. A beige felt casual trimmed with a swathed crown band of green snakeskin is shown with a green snakeskin bag with a big clasp of carved plastic in beige.

Warm beauty is part of the new dress program. Come next winter it would be grand to own a smart little number in thin tweed in oatmeal beige with copper sequin collar, bow-tie and buttons.

There's nothing to equal the charm and importance of the fur trimmed suit. Hunting pink woollen is used for a suit with a fitted hip-length jacket with cutaway line in front. A black seal collar merges into high pocket bands and buttons match.

"Why I am going to Enlist..."

"I've thought this thing out carefully. The one thing I can't get away from is that there is no excuse for anyone doing less than their best these days.

"I'm young and no one is dependent on me. So my place is in the Forces, where I can do a full-time job. I'll have the pride of knowing I'm doing my duty, too.

"Mother says I'll have opportunities I never had before. I'll learn new work. I'll meet girls from all over Canada and see a lot of new places. Dad says in years to come I'll look back on this as one of the finest experiences of my life. He says the comradeship of the service is something you can't duplicate anywhere else.

"It'll be a healthy life ... good meals, plenty of exercise, interesting things to do on and off duty. And as Dad says, the pay is all clear income because everything is provided, including even medical and dental care."

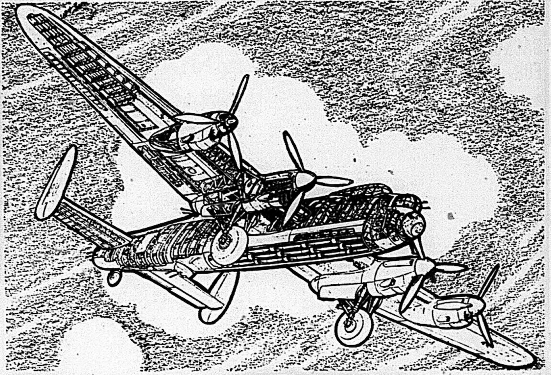
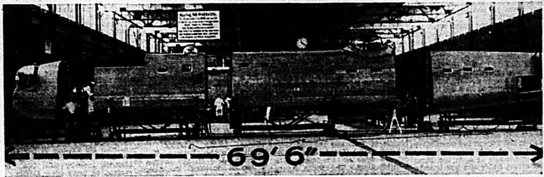
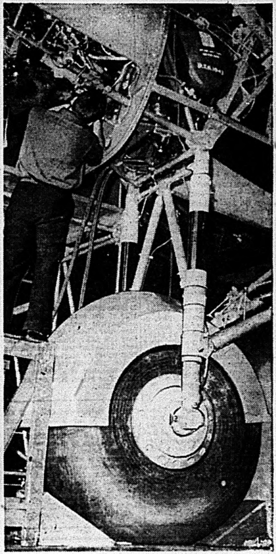
World's largest, fastest, and most devastating heavy bomber, the Lancaster, is being produced in Canada. Here, Bob Burns bores holes inside giant sky bird.

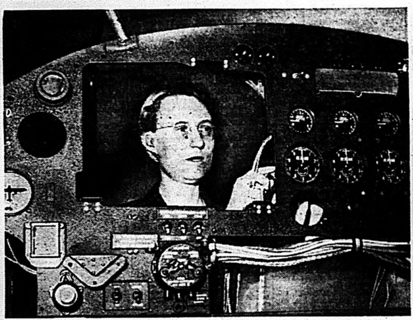




Truly a battleship of the air, the Lancaster has a wingspan of 102 feet. Exclusive of rivets, nuts and bolts, plane has 50,000 different parts, counting engines and turrets as one. Top illustration gives an idea of tremendous task involved in building the Lancaster. In bottom picture, huge 69-ft. fuselage.

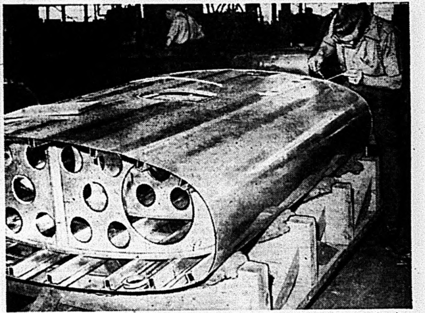


Engines, of which there are four, are famed Rolls-Royce Merlins, only components of Lancaster which are not made in the Dominion. Note gigantic wheel.

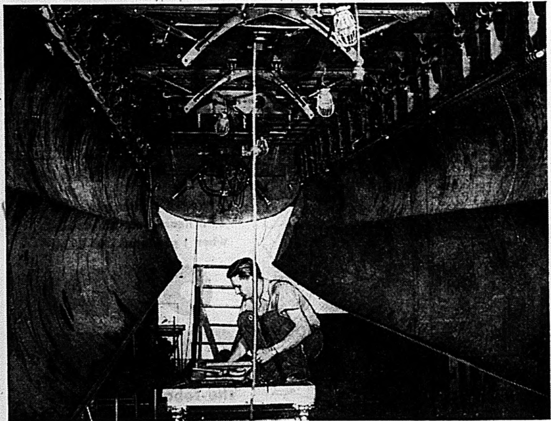


Government-owned Victory Aircraft Limited, Malton, Ont., builds Lancaster, employs 5,000 persons, requires as many more within next year. Plant has million square feet of floor space. Florence Orr wires instrument panel.

Thousands of man-hours are required to put the half-million dollar bomber in the air. Plane is a maze of wiring and tubing. Above, Iola Allen, a riveter.

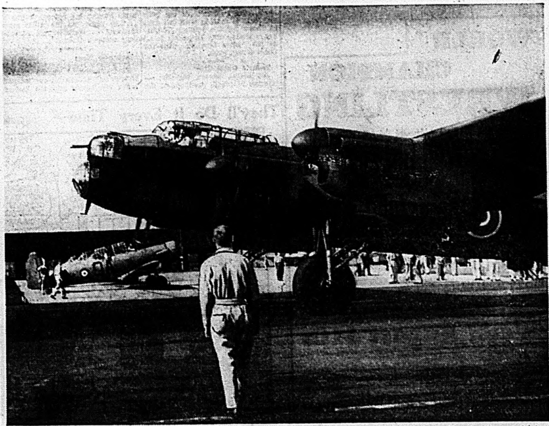


Alvin Cox, whose brother, Harry, is in the R.C.A.F., welds one of the plane's huge bullet-proof tanks. Lancaster carries six tanks with total capacity of 2,000 gallons. Its maximum speed is 300 m.p.h., maximum range, 3,000 miles.



A Spitfire fighter, minus wings, would fit easily in 33-ft. bomb bay of mighty Lancaster. Maximum bomb load is 8 tons, equal to the weight of 5 automobiles.

First Canadian-built Lancaster was flown yesterday, 16 months from the day blueprints arrived in Canada, a truly outstanding Canadian production achievement.



A Lancaster is brought out of the plant. Harvard trainer in background is dwarfed by mammoth bomber. Switching from production of Ansons to that of the Lancaster presented problems similar to those which would confront a Canadian shipyard required to stop building corvettes and turn out huge battleships.

WHAT BASEBALL NEEDS RIGHT NOW IS MIRACLE TEAM

Everyone Taking it for Granted Races Are Over in Both Loops

ALL CLUBS IDLE

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

The major leagues need a miracle team right now.

The baseball standings today show St. Louis Cardinals in front of the National League by 13 games and New York Yankees on top of the American League by nine. Practically everyone is taking for granted that the pennant races are over and this seems to be a fair assumption.

But it was just about this time last year that the Cardinals began their amazing drive to overhaul the Brooklyn Dodgers and go on to beat the Yankees in the world series.

On this date a year ago the Redbirds were nine games back in second place, but starting Aug. 11 they won 11 of their next 12 games and never let up the pressure. They showed what still could be accomplished in the remaining two months of the present season if there was any challenger of the 1942 Cardinals' calibre around.

Dodgers Out of Running.

In the National League this year the Dodgers, of course, already are out of the running and neither the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates nor the third-place Cincinnati Reds are manned strong enough for a sustained drive even if the Cardinals should crack — which would be the biggest miracle of all.

The distance between first and second in the American League is not so great and Washington Senators have surged back into second place by winning nine of 11 games. Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland all are closer to the Yanks than the second-place Pirates are to the Cardinals. But all of them have had earlier changes to make their bids and have failed.

Opportunity will be knocking for the last time as the teams embark on another intersectional series this week, starting with a pair of games in the American League — New York at St. Louis today, and Boston at Chicago tonight.

All clubs were idle yesterday.

ON TITLE CARD

On the card that includes "Wild Bill" Longson, world champion heavyweight wrestler, will be Earl "Moose" McCready, the former British Empire titlist. "Big Earl" meets Bunny Dunlop in the semi-final, while Longson defends his world title in a go against John "Killer" Katan in the main bout at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. It is the second appearance in Belleville of the wearer of wrestling's heavyweight crown, Longson winning over "Irish Jerry" Monahan here last fall. Strange as it may seem, Monahan will appear at the local palace de sport on Wednesday night's title bout show, but this time Monahan is a prelim, and meets Doc Pelice. How the mighty have fallen.

WHAT'S DOING IN SPORT

Baltimore — (AP) — Harry Bobo of Pittsburgh, now a U. S. Army private, went out by a technical knockout in the eighth of a scheduled 15-round go with Lee Murray, South Norwalk, Conn., amid a terrific uproar as Bobo's supporters climbed into the ring to claim he had been fouled. The referee admitted it but said a second foul was committed when the fans piled inside the ropes.

Chicaga — (AP) — Les Savold, blond Norwegian of Paterson, N.J., stopped Lou Nova, one-time Yogi man, in the second round of their heavyweight battle in Wrigley Field last night, this being his second victory over the California Giant in a year. A blow to the heart caused the knockout.

Port Colborne — (CP) — Port Colborne Victorias showed a reversal of form in their scheduled Niagara Senior Baseball tilt last night when the St. Catharines-Merritton Combines administered an 8-0 whitewash. A win for the locals would have clinched first place in the loop.

Stratford — (CP) — After winning the National Baseball Congress title at Toronto, London Army proceeded to clean up on Stratford Nationals, 14-1, in the Inter County senior series here last night. Stratford also lost the services of its starry catcher, "Irish" Mismimmons, during the tilt when he sustained an injury to his hand.

Regina — (CP) — Regina will definitely enter a senior football club in competition with Winnipeg this year, it was announced following a meeting of sportsmen here last night. At Winnipeg, the Winnipeg Rugby-Football Club announced last week its willingness to sponsor one or two teams and mentioned efforts were being made to revive western interprovincial competition.

Niagara Falls, Ont. — (CP) — Widely known for his development of athletes, Johnny Eccles, director of sports at Stamford Collegiate, has resigned his interscholastic post and reported yesterday at Hamilton for duty with the Royal Canadian Navy.

Chatham — (CP) — The Kent County Baseball League has been reorganized for the remainder of the season, the decision being made last night to shorten the schedule to make way for the playoffs in which Basic Training Centre, Shermans and the Dresden town team are assured of places.

'BLIX' DONNELLY BACKONWARPATH FOR ROCHESTER

Speedball Artist Having Great Season With the Wings

BISONS BEAT BEARS

By The Associated Press

It is no consolation to the remaining members in the International League, but Sylvester (Blix) Donnelly of Rochester Red Wings is back on the warpath.

The big right-handed speedball artist began the season as though the Shaughnessy circuit was to be his own personal oyster but then didn't appear in the lineup for almost a six-week period. Since July 2, however, he's been doing some of the better pitching for manager Pepper Martin's crew and last night chalked up his sixth win in a month.

This time Syracuse was the victim — 4-1 — with Donnelly giving the Chiefs only five hits for his 4th triumph over them this year. He struck out four.

Since July 2 Donnelly has started 10 times, won six, lost three and was batted from the hill once before being involved in the decision.

That's still a far cry from the record of 21 triumphs he hurled for Martin's Sacramento champions in the Pacific Coast League last year when he had an earned run average of 2.84.

He won out last night when the Wings concentrated their attack and counted all their runs in the third frame, two scores coming on Earl Naylor's home run.

The Buffalo-Newark contest, only other game played in the International League yesterday, looked as if it were going to be a 2-0 shutout for Mike Roscoe but the Bears pushed across one run in the eighth and then tallied another in the 9th to send Roscoe to the showers.

Buffalo, however, punched out the winning marker in the 3-2 game in their last turn at bat when Mayo Smith ended a batting slump by hitting a single to open the Bison half of the frame and was brought around on a sacrifice, a walk and another single. Otto Denning got Buffalo's first two runs with a homer and also contributed the sacrifice in the making of the deciding tally.

Grand Circuit Classic To Be Raced at Empire City

(By The Canadian Press)

Empire City track, within sound of New York's Broadway, will be Goshen, N.Y., Wednesday—in name if not in atmosphere — with the holding of the 1943 Hambletonian. The Grand Circuit classic has been brought to the big city because of war-time difficulties.

The Hambletonian, named after the famouse horse whose remains were interred at Goshen, has been held at the historic spot since 1930 and the crowds each had ranged up to 40,000. The purse for the inaugural running at Syracuse in 1926 was $73,000 but with 15 starters this time the money will be around $40,000. The popular favorite is Volo Song and two contenders, Phonograph and Worthy Boy, are blood relatives. The Hambletonian record of 2:01½ was set by Shirley Hanover some years back and the best time this season by any of the three name horses was 2:02¾, made by Phonograph in the champion stallion stakes at North Randall, Ohio.

There will be a Gotham touch to the 1943 classic and the Ladies' Aid will not be rushing with preparations for fried chicken dinners country style. But the mutuel handle is expected to be heavy when the city folks watch 70-year-old Ben White guide Volo Song around the oval in an effort to score his fourth Hambletonian win.

Kay Byrne of Rye, N.Y., and Catherine Fox of Glen Ridge, N.J., both scored two-below-par 74's in the qualifying round yesterday of the Women's Eastern Amateur Golf Championships at the Evanston, Ill., golf club, leading the parade of 32 qualifiers.

Brooklyn Dodgers lost no time in grabbing a 22-year-old outfielder even though it was only for a month. Eugene Hermansky, who batted .341 for Olean in the Pony League in 1941, was released from the U.S. Coast Guard to enter the aviation wing of the navy in a month's time. The Bums signed him up for the month.

In his 1943 turb debut, Alsab tried hard yesterday at Pawtucket, R.I., but the best he could get was third in the $5,000 Pawtucket handicap, opening feature at Narragansett Park. J. B. Hatfield's Cherrydale led from start to finish for his fifth straight win.

A report at New York that Jimmy Slattery, world's light-heavyweight champion in 1930, had died at Kings County Hospital was exaggerated. The real ex-champ, all the while, was busily engaged as an iron-worker in his home town, Buffalo.

President Branch Rickey, of the Brooklyn Nations took the rap from critical fans yesterday for the Dodgers' long slump but declared that, unfortunately, it had been necessary because he was engaged in rebuilding the team.

Shooting at par 70, Bob Gray, former Scarboro Club pro, yesterday won the playoff at Montreal with four other contenders of the Quebec Victory Bond golf tournament, edging out Gerry Proulx, of Montreal by one stroke. The five who had tied with scores of 149 comprised Rodolph Huot of Montreal; Phil Farley, Toronto; Red McKenzie, Montreal, Proulx and Gray.

A 17-year-old High School boy of Passaic, N.J., who batted .490 with the school team for which he played shortstop, signed a contract with the New York Giants, it was announced last night. The youth, Dick Lajeskie, said he had agreed to accept a $10,000 bonus for signing. His father is Charlie Lajeskie, first baseman with Boston Braves in 1928.

By a technical knockout in the fourth round, Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight champ, won from Sgt. Kid McCoy in a scheduled 10-rounder at Pittsburgh last night. McCoy held Zivic to a draw 18 months ago. It was the 171st bout for Zivic in 13 years.

Seven teams retained their franchise in the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League at its annual meeting in Atlantic City last night when Thomas Lockhart was re-elected president. Three other clubs, Baltimore, Washington and Atlantic City Sea Gulls, were given until Sept. 15 to take up their league berths. The loop opens late in October.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—A conglomeration of comparatively useless information this week has disillusioned us. Snapshots had been one of those who ventured three kopeks (or a part thereof) across the board a couple of times a year in hopes of getting a share of the fortunes reputedly won at race tracks. Now we are told that chances of winning are slimmer than meat on a twice-picked sparerib.

First of all we learned through Jim Coleman of the Toronto Globe and Mail that Phineas T. Barnum did not originate the wisecrack that "there's a sucker born every minute." After considerable research Jimmy has discovered that the phrase was born from the tongue of Mike McDonald, a Chicago gambler. And, what is worse, the phrase is a model of conservatism. Says Jimmy: "The birthrate of the United States in 1940 was 2,360,399. There are 1,440 minutes in a day and 365 days in a year. This means that there are 525,600 minutes in a year....Therefore, in the United States alone actually 4.46 suckers are born every minute.

In other words we assume that every live-born child sooner or later will visit a race track."

Then came Johnny Park of the Vancouver Province, an expert on racing matters. Johnny asked 300 of Vancouver's "better known race players" if they were winner or loser on betting transactions during the first 21 days of the British Columbia racing season. Only two were paying expenses.

Trying to figure this out, we found the Dominion government takes a five per cent cut from each pari-mutuel bet. The provincial cut varies but in most provinces it is around five per cent. The track takes a graduated cut of from three to seven therefore an average of about 15 per cent comes off each race.

On the surface, it's hard to realize why the lads rush back the next day with more dough. Johnny Park explains it this way. The race punter will never admit he is using poor judgment or that the government and track percentage cause his losses. "He'll figure out that he was touted off at least two winners."

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 10 (CP)—Knight's Daughter, a royal filly which once all but reached the auction block through a lack of promise, bids fair to emerge as Britain's best two-year-old of the season.

Giving 10 pounds to all but one rival up Newmarket way, the Daughter romped to her third successive triumph in winning the five-furlong Balsham Stakes for the King. If it hadn't been for the temperamental filly, His Majesty's stables would show no victories this year.

Lord Derby's Booby Trap, who provided one of the biggest upsets of the Derby by finishing last in the large field, finally won a race. He took an apprentice handicap affair at Newmarket. Optimists who took another chance on Booby Trap after his dismal Derby display were pleasantly shocked when bookmakers paid off at 10-1.

Incidentally, the one-day race meet, featuring eight races, started at 11.30 in the morning.

The latest acquisition to riding ranks is, no kidding, Donald Goose. A 14-year-old stable boy, he rode in a Newmarket apprentice race but didn't finish in the money. Trainer Harvey Leader, one of Britain's best, believes young Goose has the makings of a good jockey.

About dogs: Things like this just aren't done in rationed Britain, so a trainer who fed racing greyhounds with fresh milk was fined $900. A milkman was fined $28, for supplying the milk and charging an excessive price.

The days when favorites for greyhound Derbys had police guards and top-notch racers were rushed about the country by automobile to compete in big events ceased when the first air-raid siren wailed. Nowadays even the most valuable dogs travel in the baggage coach of trains with only a boy or girl to look after them.

Take Arnold Johnston for instance. At the age of 15, he's kennelman for Trainer Sidney Orton. When he made his first trip out of London recently with two dogs valued at more than $13,000 he first had to get his mother's permission!

Boxing Bits: Jake Kilrain of Glasgow, former British welterweight champion, was punched into submission by Pat O'Connor, rising young Eire middleweight, in a London bout. The referee stopped the fight in the sixth round with Kilrain on his knees.

Deputizing for Cpl. Harry Hurst of Montreal, classy Montrealer who was unable to get leave, Jimmy Bray of Liverpool was knocked out in the last minute of a bout with Harry Lazae of London. Bray was ahead on points when his chin collided with a right hook.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

Chicago—Lee Savold, 192, Patterson, N.J., knocked out Lou Nova, 201 1-4, Van Nuys, Calif. (2); Dan Merritt, 209 1-2, Cleveland, knocked out Lem Franklin, 200 1-2, Cleveland, (1).

Pittsburgh—Fritzie Zivic, 149 1-2, Pittsburgh, stopped Sgt. Kid McCoy, 153, Detroit (4).

Philadelphia—Jose Basora, 152 3-4, Puerto Rico, outpointed Holman Williams, 155 1-2, Chicago (10).

Washington—Chalky Wright, 130, Los Angeles, stopped Angel Avila, 126, Mexico City (7).

Newark—Wild Bill McDowell, 162, Patterson, N.J., outpointed Pte. Gib Jones, Cincinnati, Ohio, (12).

Baltimore — Lee Murray, 193, South Norwalk, Conn., stopped Harry Bobo, 207 1-2, Pittsburgh (8).

New Haven, Conn.—Julie Kogon, 133, New Haven, Conn., outpointed Ruby Garcia, 138, Puerto Rico, (10).

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

Rimouski, Que., Aug. 9 — (CP)— Verdict of accidental death was returned last night at a coroner's inquest into the drowning in the Neigette River yesterday of Alfred Halle, 25, of St. Donat.

Halle, who was posted as being absent without leave from the Army, ran to the river and plunged in head first when members of the Army Provost Corps came to apprehend him.

Jupiter Pluvius Again.

For anyone with a yen for figures —and we don't mean Lana Turner or Ann Sheridan— the girls' softball picture is still as jumbled as it was last week. With the batters holding sway at the Armouries last night, Reliance and Bell-Sargent lassies were well on their way to see which could crowd over the greater number of runs within a space of seven innings when old Jupiter Pluvius put an abrupt halt to things along about the fourth stanza and no decision was arrived at.

Like the men's league, that continues tonight between Reliance and the Flyers, the girls are getting pressed for time. Today President Chuck Barnett announced Bristol and SWACO would still play their saw-off for first place tomorrow night while last night's postponement will be played over again on Friday night and if all goes well the league play-offs will commence next Monday.

Lottsa Play-Offs.

According to the O.A.S.A. softball zone play-offs, Convener Harry Rollins is going to be a busy man. Up around the Trenton Air Station they have entered in the Senior "B" series, as well as the Intermediate "A" grouping, but the former category has no bearing on district civilian league winners. The Air Force has entered its Bay of Quinte Service League winner, which is confined pretty much to the Trenton Air Station and No. 6 R.D. The Service League winner has been drawn against the champions of the Trenton Town loop, the series to commence Aug. 17th.

On Aug. 18th the winners of the Belleville and District League (No. 5 I.T.S. or Reliance) meet the Kingston City champions, according to the O.A.S.A. draw. However if the local series goes the full limit of seven games, the Belleville moguls will have to ask for a few days extension.

Congrats to Tilly

Although it's a bit late, congratulations are in order to T. A. "Tilly" Donihee, who centre-aisled it last week. Miss Ruth Kyle of this city, was the stunning bride. Tilly, who left the playing ranks of the Reliance Hockey Club to act as coach last season, is well known in Ontario hockey circles having played with the Cornwall Fliers, Allan Cup finalists in 1938. However, Tilly had to come to Belleville before Dan Cupid successfully fired that final arrow. The sports fraternity of the district wish Mr. and Mrs. Donihee all of the success and happiness married life can bestow upon them.

Remember When—

Rain deluged New York's Polo Grounds just before the bell rang for the Henry Armstrong-Lou Ambers fight for the world's lightweight championship bout three years ago tonight. The fight was postponed until a week later when Armstrong took the title, afterwards admitting Lou was "the most bothersome fighter" he had ever met.

And Sold the Car.

Dick Wakefield, Detroit Tigers' $52,000 prize rookie outfielder, started his baseball career at six swinging a bat in his parents' Chicago backyard, revealed his mother as Dick was recently drafted into the United States Army.

"His dad (former major league catcher) was always taking hm out in our back yard and teaching him how to swing a bat, just how he should stand up there at the plate, and when he should try to knock the cover off the ball", said Mrs. Wakefield.

"When Dick got a little older, Mr. Wakefield was confronted with a tough problem of not having enough space in the back yard. You see, our other three boys were getting that training, too, and with four kids swinging around, there wasn't room enough to duck. Mr. Wakefield chopped down a tree and tore down the garage and kept on training his sons in the enlarged swish area".

This And That.

Even if Branch Rickey takes the blame for the collapse of the Brooklyn Dodgers that isn't much consolation to the Flatbush fans when they see their "Bums" bordering the second division spot today. . . On Sunday only 6,755 saw their once beloved "Bums" play the Braves in Ebbett's Field, the smallest Sunday crowd of the year. . .Everyone loves a winner, whether it be in Brooklyn or Timbuctoo. . . ."Wild Bill" Longson is practicing the famed "running broad jump" with which to subdue John "Killer" Katan here tomorrow night. . .Incidentally it was with a running hop that "Man Mountain" Dean broke Longson's back in a bout at Salt Lake City over three years ago, so watch out you Palermo farmer. . .See they've substituted "Killer" for "black-jack" in advertisng Katan these days. . . An interesting spectator Wednesday night will be Earl "The Moose" McCready, who's wondering just what a guy has to have on the ball to get a shot at Longson.

Nearly all of the great pitchers in baseball history were fast workers, says Bill McKechnie, Red manager.

The Yankees this year are winning two out of three games played at home.

Record streak of errorless fielding has ended for Pitcher Elmer Riddle of the Cincinnati Reds, who made his first bobble since entering the majors in 1939 in a game with the Giants. Riddle's string of 101 games without an error far surpasses the former majors' record for hurlers of 88 set by Ted Lyons.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Follow the Band"

Revelry, rhythm and romance, plus a galaxy of well known entertainers are impressively featured in Unversal's "Follow the Band" now playing at the McCarthy theatre. Winning approval in the large cast are such favorites as Leo Carrillo, Leon Errol, Mary Beth Hughes, Eddie Quillian and Anne Rooney.

Seen and heard to advantage are Frances Langford, Alvino Rey and the King Sisters, Ray Everle, The Bombardiers, Hilo Hattie, The King's Men, and Skinnay Ennis and the Groove Boys.

Other outstanding players include Samuel S. Hinds and Bob Mitchum.

"Follow the Band" features ten songs in its gay musical score. Second feature hit on the same program is "Two Tickets to London," starring Michele Morgan and Alan Curtis. A timely short subject Corvette Port Arthur and the latest Universal News rounds out an excellent program.

AT THE BELLE

"The Human Comedy"

Every once in a while an outstanding and inspirational story comes to the screen. Today, through the combined efforts of the great Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization, the screen has to offer William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy", a story of human life—the cosmorama of the Macauleys—in terms of gripping entertainment. It is now playing at the Belle theatre.

Action is in a typical small town. The comedies, joys, sorrows and tragedies of all manner of people are viewed through the eyes of its central character, a telegraph messenger, played by Mickey Rooney. His association with a philosophical old telegraph operator (Frank Morgan), his life with his widowed mother (Fay Bainter), the inspiration of his employer (James Craig) and other factors that mould the boy's approaching manhood as he learns life by delivering fateful telegrams, are woven into a heartwarming narrative. There are comical episodes. Also there are tragic moments, such as the old operator dying at his key while receiving a message that the boy's brother had been killed in action.

Clarence Brown, who produced and directed, wove the varied elements together with a deft human touch. An inspiring musical score by Herbert Stothart accentuates the dramatic values.

Marsha Hunt, Donna Reed, Van Johnson, Dorothy Morris, Jack Jenkins, Mary Nash, Darryl Hickman, Rita Quigley, Barry Nelson, Henry O'Neill, Katharine Alexander, Ann Ayars and John Craven were literally hand picked for the characters they play. Harry Stradling contributed outstanding photography to the vivid episodes.

The Canadian Movietone News, described by Lowell Thomas, and a funny M-G-M colorfun cartoon "Red Hot Riding Hood" precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Blonde Inspiration"

Judging from his work in the hilariously entertaining "Blonde Inspiration," which is now at the Capitol theatre. John Shelton will be the next star in Hollywood. Cast as a youthful writer who is anxious to establish his name so that he can sell a Western novel he has written. Shelton gives as fine a portrayal as has been seen in many a picture. In romance, with Virginia Grey, and in comedy, the keynote of "Blonde Inspiration," he proves that he is very close to being ready for stellar rating. But this in turn brings offers from every publisher in town.

A strong supporting cast, including Albert Dekker, Charles Butterworth, Donald Meek and Reginald Owen keeps the hilarity at a record high. Marion Martin, blonde and glamorous, adds to the laughs in a unique pantomime role. Much of the credit for the success of the new picture goes to Busby Berkeley who repeats his directorial triumph of "Strike Up the Band."

"The Avengers"

There's excitement aplenty in Paramount's new picture at the Capitol theatre. Titled "The Avengers," this powerful production spins its tale of individual love and courage against a tremendous background—the unflinching struggle of the Norwegian people aginst the Nazis invaders and against their own Quislings.

The story concerns a young British newspaperman, played by Hugh Williams, who finds romance and high adventure, and who almost finds death, while working with the Norwegian "underground" against the Nazis. With Deborah Kerr as his partner in romance, Williams makes his role a thrilling one.

"The Avengers" raps out its thrills at machine-gun speed. There's the Commando raid on the Norwegian Coast, the dropping of a British agent by parachute into occupied country, the destruction of a Nazi U-boat base by R.A.F. bombs, the dramatic rescue of Norwegian patriots from a Nazi firing squad, and half a hundred other moments that make your heart beat faster with excitement.

The Canadian Universal News completes the double program.

Little Miss Karan Redner spent a few days with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Fox.

Master Carl Brickman spent a few days holidaying with his grandmother Holmes, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin, Peterboro, were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Brickman, Saturday night.

Miss Mae Brooks visited Thursday with her cousins, Wilbert and Ronald Green.

Sunday visitors at Mr. Will Hubbs' were Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Brown and children, Mr. and Mrs. Smith Brown and Eva, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse and children, Rev. and Mrs. Robt. Wragg and girls, Mr. and Mrs. G. French, Rossmore, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Adams, Frankford, Mr. Haviland Hubbs and Miss Bessie Sager.

Point Traverse

Point Traverse, August 10—Catches of lake herring taken during the month of July by Point Traverse commercial fishermen were considerably higher than those taken during the month of June, fishermen state. Lifts of trout and whitefish are very light at the present time. Prices for all lake fish are remaining very high, and buyers state that there is a scarcity of lake trout.

An open air church service will be held here in the near future, according to plans being prepared now. A choir from the Milford United Church will assist with the service, which will be conducted by the Rev. Lehigh.

Lake Ontario fishermen operating in local waters about the county, report that smelt, a small European food fish, are infesting their fishing grounds and are increasing in numbers each season. The fish, allied to the salmon, inhabit salt water about the mouths of rivers. They are silvery white in color, the head and body being semi-transparent, and are from four to eight inches in length. They are said to inhabit fresh water from August to May, and after spawning return to the sea. When first taken out of the water, smelts have a strong smell of cucumber. Several hundred pounds of smelt were netted and shipped to American markets this spring.

Sportsmen report good catches of bass are being taken from local waters.

MARTIN - TOWNSEND - McMULLEN REUNION

Holloway — The 13th Reunion of the Martin, Townsend, McMullen families was held at Searles' Beach, July 26th with 48 singing the register.

After dinner in the absence of the president, Mr. Don Harrison, the vice president, Mrs. Herbert Townsend, called the gathering to order. The secretary treasurer's report was read and adopted and it was unanimously agreed to hold the 1944 picnic the last Sunday in July at Searles' Beach. The following officers were elected for 1944: President, Mr. Harry McMullen, Vice President, Mrs. Harry Preston; Secretary Treasurer, Mrs. Gordon Garrison. A two minute silence was observed for the members who had passed away during the last year.

It was decided to use the collection to send cigarettes to members of the reunion now serving overseas on active service: Garnet Juby, Airforce; Fraser McMullen, Airforce; Norman O'Neil, Airforce; Albert Shoner, Airforce; Gerald Langman, Army; John Mitts, Army; Percy Kelly, Army; John Townsend, Army; Jack Burry, Army; Clare O'Neil, Army; Grant Blakely, Army; Robert Reid, Army; Geo. O'Neil, Navy; Clarence Blakely, Navy.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson spent Tuesday in Bancroft.

Two surprise parties were held in this community recently for members of the armed forces. One was held at Mr. and Mrs. Embury Hough's in honor of Pte. Bert Eggleton when he was presented with a wristwatch. On Thursday evening at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reid, Pte. Oscar Reid was presented with a money belt, a new Testament and a sum of money.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Townsend attended the Grills' annual picnic on Thursday.

The Holloway Red Cross unit held a dinner and quilting in the hall with a good attendance.

Mr. John Downey, Centenary, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Herb Townsend.

Mr. Roblin and Miss Lena Roblin, Toronto, are holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Embury.

Mrs. Percy Kelly and Garry spent a day recently with Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Kelly.

Mr. and Mrs. George Foster, Gordon and Bev., Moira, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Townsend.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McMullen and Don, Cannifton, called on Mr. and Mrs. Blake McMullen on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Emerson and boys spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Emerson, it being the occasion of Mrs. Emerson's birthday.

The Dead End Kids, Norman Abbott (Top), Bobby Jordan, Gabriel Dell and Huntz Hall are starred with the Little Tough Guys in Universal's "Keep 'Em Slugging", coming Thursday to the McCarthy.

Wrecked Airliner Sighted From Air

Vancouver, Aug. 10 — (CP) — Wreckage of a Canadian Pacific airliner which disappeared eight months ago while carrying 13 persons has been sighted from the air but it will be Friday at the earliest before a ground party can return with details of the crash scene, C.P.A. officials announced last night.

E. R. R. Field, C.P.A. Pacific superintendent, said wreckage of the plane was scattered over a wide area 7,000 feet high on a mountainside in the rugged country 74 miles southeast of Vancouver and near Agassiz.

The plane, en route from Prince George, was last heard from when only 15 minutes flying time from Vancouver last Dec. 20. This final message made no mention of any trouble.

Sergeant John Thomson of the B. C. Provincial Police and Game Warden Arthur Butler will lead the search party into the ground scene. Mr. Field estimated the party will reach the scene some time Thursday at the earliest.

The crew consisted of Pilot Ernest Kubicek of Edmonton, co-pilot W. J. (Bill) Holland of Hamilton, Ont., and Stewardess Edna Young of Edmonton.

Passengers were Hugh Stuart, W. M. Scharfe and Reg Battye, all of Vancouver; A. L. Smith, Surrey, B. C.; Mrs. Braden Herron, Fort St. John, B.C.; Mr. and Mrs. B. Stouse, Pinchi Lake, B.C.; Rudolph August Schroeder, Milwaukee; James J. Coyle, Butte, Mont., and Capt. W. R. Kehr, Auburn, Wash.

AT THE BELLE

Warmly tender and romantic—richly humorous and dramatic is William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy," now on the Belle Theatre screen. Mickey Rooney, Frank Morgan, Fay Bainter and Marsha Hunt head a large cast in a story to be long remembered.

Virginia Grey and John Shelton as the romantic couple of "Blonde Inspiration," fast-paced comedy which is now on the Capitol screen with the timely attraction "The Avenger."

Hospitality Is Still Dispensed By Historic Augustinian Monks

One of the oldest alpine Roman roads still in use is the Simplon Pass connecting Brig in Switzerland with Iselle, Italy. Today serving as a little used highway, it was once a trade route between the two countries but since the building of a tunnel short cut in 1906 there has not been heavy traffic.

On the summit of the Simplon is a hospice, rich in history. Before it became what it is today it served many a purpose—for instance, when Napoleon crossed the Great St. Bernard Pass with his army, he encountered great difficulty for the passage was steep and rough. So he immediately put 5,000 men to work to build the Simplon road, a work which took five years and seven million francs to complete its 30 miles.

Napoleon also conceived the plan to build a hospice for travellers on the summit of the road, but before its completion the St. Augustine Monks of the Great St. Bernard bought it.

Generous donations helped them to complete it, and ever since then four brethren of the order of St. Augustine, with several of St. Bernard dogs, have always been stationed in the Simplon Hospice.

Their main object of living there is to rescue or help anyone in distress as it is on the Great St. Bernard. Today, however, there are hotels in the district and it has not been in such great demand as the one on the St. Bernard road.

Father Darbellay, a Simplon dweller, made a report recently on the life of the hospice. The tiny community, under the direction of a prior, leads a strictly religious life. The youngest students come from the mother institution and are students preparing themselves for the priesthood by studying classics and religious sciences.

In winter snow lies deep on the pass for seven months and icy winds blow across the summit. An old fashioned diligence, drawn by horses runs daily between the two linked towns and at the hospice, 6585 a/s, the half frozen driver, is glad to take his passengers inside for a hot drink.

Skiers, too, are common visitors here. The Simplon is widely known for its beautiful scenery. Should any skier or traveller get lost or have an accident in those parts, the brethren, who are all skilled skiers, are ready to go to their rescue. In this work they are faithfully assisted by their trained dogs.

July brings vacation time and the young students return to their homes. They take a little rest and recreation. They fish, climb mountains and garden.

Father Darbellay points out in his report that while so many people are spending their lives in trying to get money, fame or pleasure, these young monks are devoting themselves to things spiritual. Their goal is the happiness beyond this earth's sphere.

Argentina Not Pro Allied

(Ottawa Journal)

When early last June, Argentina politics boiled up into a revolution and change of government the world was given the general impression that anti-Axis sentiment had gained weight over pro-Axis sentiment. First despatches were jubilant about an Allied victory. Later despatches were more qualified and hesitant. For many weeks now there has been little but silence—and the Atlantic Monthly's August report from Latin America indicates the silence is ominous.

The Atlantic says the Nazi-tutored General Pedro Ramirez who now heads the government is giving Argentina the stiffest dictatorship it has had since "Tyrant Rosas" 91 years ago. It has called off the constitutional presidential elections due in September. It has banned all political party meetings. It has outlawed Freemasonry and has imposed a stricter censorship on news than Ramon Castillo ever imposed. It has collaborated closely with Fascist and Falangist organizations and it has suspended Congress. "The pronunciamentos of the new president—who has decreed it illegal to describe his administration as 'provisional'—have bristled with such Fascist catchwords as 'authority' and 'discipline.

The Atlantic reports, ... that the new regime is doing everything it can to discredit investigations that might reveal pro-Nazi activity, and it has been rigorous in pursuit of any pro-Allied comment that might sneak into the newspapers. It has suspended the English-language newspaper in Buenos Aires, the Standard, for certain mild criticisms or Argentine neutrality which the Castillo administration overlooked last February. It has even closed the "Victory Club," a society of pro-Allied women functioning as a relief and bandage-rolling station.

"To be sure, the new administration suspended the right of Axis embassies to send code messages to their governments, ignoring in the meantime the excellent chance that, with the radio and transoceanic telephone services fully open, the Axis agents may possibly have plenty of deeper codes to fall back on by using the apparently innocent language of personal messages and conversations. Nothing has been done, in any case, to rid Buenos Aires of the hundreds of Nazi and Japanese embassy attaches who cannot have any conceivable business in South America except propaganda and espionage."

All of this is a vastly different thing than a pro-Allied revolution, and the Atlantic hints that the Argentine is playing a sly poker game with the Allies. Argentina will swing to the Allies if we will pay her enough in trade and prestige. But to pay her what she wants in trade and prestige would be to give her a chance to re-establish military superiority over Chile and Brazil, Bolivia and Paraguay.

The Atlantic says that Washington is turning a cold shoulder to these Argentine machinations, (a) because Argentina really has not much to bring the Allied war effort at this time and (b) because any appeasement to Argentina would justly incense the smaller countries nearby who have been in the Allied camp for some time. Argentina's food supplies are immensely valuable to the Allies but she is obliged to sell them to us anyway or face economic collapse. And where she used to be a dangerous aid to Nazi submarine warfare the gradual beating of that Axis weapon consequently lessens Argentina's nuisance value.

The Atlantic says that Argentina's action is uniting the other South American countries against her and that Washington refuses to talk "Lend-Lease" until the Argentine not only quits her mock neutrality but joins the Allies. It is an interesting story that we should not forget too soon.

CHAPTER 31

Three weeks later on Sunday afternoon Meegan was walking over the Hopkins campus with Toby. Meegan looked at him as they crossed the street and walked up the rolling green slope to the campus soon to be dotted with students going to and from classes. The same Toby in appearance, she thought, except for his roughened hands. On one of them was a broad piece of clean adhesive.

"How do you like your job, Toby?"

"It's swell. It never occurred to me before that a man with a college degree would stare in open-mouthed admiration at a man who never went beyond the eighth grade but who is a whizz at using his hands. Nor did it occur to me in all the jobs I got fired from that I should have been using my hands. Machinery has been a greater challenge to me than trying to sell bonds. It never entered my head to try technical work. I'm crazy about it!

They walked for quite a long time without speaking.

Then he said, and in his voice there was a careful effort to be gentle with her, "Mother told me that you found Clare that morning. She said you fainted when you got home and when you came to, you told her. You probably would not have told anybody if you had not passed out. And I believe that is one story Mother will keep to herself. Or would you rather not talk about it?"

"I'd rather not talk about it. I'd like to forget it."

"But you can't forget it, Meegan, when there are some things you don't understand. That's why I suggested this walk. That's why Erica knew I suggested it. I want to straighten it out for you as I did for her." When she turned and looked at him anxiously, he said, "I told her all about it the day we left the island before we made our first stop."

Meegan looked ahead. She had thought that in the glare of the sun he would see the troubled look that would not go from her eyes and that she was thinner. Indeed the brown suit she had not worn since spring seemed not to touch her body.

Toby said, "Here's a bench. Let's sit down here. You look all in. You've been through quite an experience. . . . Clare had diabetes."

"Fayne told me that."

"She had a nasty reaction the night I asked you to get him out of the house. She was ill. She didn't want him to know. And the next day when she went away for a week she went to a hospital for a check-up. She lied, of course. She could lie with the straightest face of any person I've ever known."

"Who was Clare and what was she, Toby? Can you tell me that?"

"And what was she to me? I'll try to tell you that, too. The secret of Clare's success was that she always surrounded herself with inferior people, people inferior to her in looks and intelligence and cunning. She was always two jumps ahead of them."

"Fayne, too?"

"No. That's the point. She married a man who was her superior in every way. She never got over it when she couldn't dominate him. That's why it was no marriage in the true sense of the word. They were going to be divorced until she got her illness. Then he never suggested divorce again and then she needed him. After that he closed his eyes to the things she did and went on living in the same house with her. He was too decent to do anything about it."

"Miss Willoughby told me. I went there one day and Clare was upstairs and Miss Willoughby was on the porch. They had had a fight

"How do you know this?" and Miss Willoughby was furious with Clare. She stayed, she said, only because of Fayne and the big salary he was paying her. He tried to keep Clare alive. He didn't love her any longer but he tried to keep her alive. He probably loved her deeply in the beginning and because she was still his wife he tried to keep her alive This is my side of the story, Meegan. Clare is gone. She can't tell hers. Funny, how dispassionately I can speak of her now."

"You loved her."

"Listen, I'm no gilded lily, but I was only a kid who had had everything he wanted and no responsibility when I saw Clare in Rome three years ago. I didn't see Fayne. If I had, I'd never have had a romantic notion about Clare. I'd have felt my own shortcomings and inexperience too keenly if he'd been there. But he wasn't there and I was romantic about Clare. I was another inferior person to her.

"When I came back, Dad died and everything collapsed. It had all been so rosy before. Then everything went boom and I saw you working and worrying and going shabby when you were born to be a social butterfly and I saw Mother's friends dropping her. And I couldn't get interested in any of those jobs. I thought about Clare a lot. Too much. She was the one remaining symbol of life as it should be with leisure and money and beauty and romance. We wrote. She never mentioned that she was ill. And when she came back this summer, I thought I was in love with her. But the island and knowing Fayne and knowing that she was ill wasn't Rome again. It was not love either. I saw her as you and Adele and others saw her.

"Then I met Erica and Helen and Roy and I began to think the things they talked about. They were so filled with the spirit of progress and sacrifice. They'd worked so hard. Yet Helen and Roy were the happiest people I knew. They amused me at first. I felt sort of condescending. Then I felt that they were amused and condescending and that I wasn't doing them any favor going there. Then I knew that I loved Erica.

"It gets better each day, living with her, knowing her. When I did a fool thing at the plant and hurt my hand, the only thing I could think of, the thing that panicked me, was the thought of not going home to her that night."

"The screams that Jimmie, the caddie, heard from Clare's house one morning were Clare's screams. Miss Willoughby was trying to give her an injection of insulin. You and Clare were in the apartment one night, Toby."

"How do you know?"

"There was a copy of the Rubaiyat on the table and you didn't put the glasses back as they were. You left them with the rims up."

He nodded. Then he took a deep breath. "I went on seeing Clare. Is that what puzzles you? She was so sensitive about her illness and I was the only person who knew about it. Somehow I couldn't drop her suddenly. That would have seemed cruel. In spite of everything I was sorry for her. She had everything her cold, scheming mind had gone after and she was still flawlessly beautiful on the surface, but she was sick. But all of you were wrong about her in one sense. She wasn't a passionate woman, she was cold.

"We stopped in at the apartment one night for a drink. She picked out the Rubaiyat and started to read it aloud. She said she never read anthing. I think she meant by that that she never read anything new. Only one phrase she read that night stuck with me. I thought about it when Mother wrote me that she was dead. It was, 'Hour of Grace.' When she read that she looked at me defiantly and said, 'I've had my Hour of Grace, Toby'. I think she knew she was doomed.

Meegan turned to him. "Your failure to tell me this before turned you, turned all of us, into potential murderers. My mind has been full of poison this summer. Dirty and suspicious and afraid."

"What happened to Fayne?"

"I don't know. I didn't see him again that morning. Mother and I sent flowers. She insisted. That seemed highly ironical." Standing, she smiled at him. "The most important thing you've told me is that you love Erica. I had serious doubts about that. Did you see Clare the morning before you were married?"

"I didn't. I swear it. I went to get cigarettes just as I told you. By the way, how is Adele?"

"She's gone in for Red Cross work and she's giving it everything she has

"Good old Adele. I'd like to see you looking better."

"Oh, I shall. You've purged me of poison this afternoon."

"All of it?"

"Not quite. Sue left Van. He was very drunk one night. She left him in the house and brought the children to town and told me, told everyone, that Van's father was worse. Mother and I saw Van's father walking down Charles St. the other day with the dog."

He got up slowly. "Wait a minute, why did she leave him? Because he drank or because she had some bug in her head about Clare?"

"Clare, I suppose. Van had been seen with her in town. I suppose Sue found out. And everyone knew how he felt about Clare before he married Sue."

Toby's mouth pulled at one corner. "This is one time everyone is wrong! I know why Van was drinking. How do you know that running into Clare wasn't an accident? Van was drinking because he knew if we get into this war, his business will be finished. He's been seeing the handwriting on the wall. And it wasn't so much losing the business that bothered him as breaking the news to Sue. She's one gal who wouldn't take a comedown in her standard of living. You know how she is. So Van's been drinking away his sorrows this summer as a schoolboy afraid to show a bad report card. It wasn't Clare. I don't believe it. That's nonsense."

"Are you sure?"

"Of course I'm sure. I'd bet on it."

"But Sue's the sort of girl who wouldn't listen to an explanation once she is convinced she is right in her own mind."

"But Clare," Toby said, "is dead. Sue and Van are probably back together again and everything is ironed out between them and she's still wearing the pants in the family. Without Sue Van would be nothing. She's necessary to him. It is a good thing she does wear the pants in the family."

MEETING WAS COSTLY

Brantford, Aug. 10.— (CP)— A London citizen who visited Brantford met two strangers, one of whom said he was from Ottawa, the other from Kansas City, but the meeting cost the Londoner $312. He told police they started tossing pennies for stakes which mounted steadily.

CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 10. (AP)— The charge of "robber"—in it fullest legal sense—was lodged against an umpire for the Annual Phoenix Policemen and Firemen Benefit softball game. A soldier reported he was robbed of $2 as he walked from the ball park. Two suspects were jailed and charged with robbery. One was an umpire.

Oakes Jovial, In High Spirits On Night Before

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 10. (CP) —Sir Harry Oakes was described today as jovial, full of life and in high spirits the night before his bludgeoned and burned body was found, July 8, on a charred bed at Westbourne, the multi-millionaire's rambling estate.

Charles Hubbard, owner of a group of cottages near Westbourne, described from the witness stand a dinner party with Oakes, Harold G. Christie and Mrs. Dulcibel Effie Hennage.

He testified at a preliminary hearing for Alfred De Marigny, Sir Harry's son-in-law, who is charged with murder.

Hubbard said he accepted an invitation to dine with Sir Harry and Christie, and took Mrs. Hennage with him to Westbourne. They played checkers, he related, until about 11 p.m., when he and Mrs. Hennage departed.

"Sir Harry was jovial", Hubbard said. He was in good spirits and was full of life".

He told of receiving a telephone call July 8 from Christie, who said "something has happened to Sir Harry".

Hubbard said he went to Westbourne and entered the master bedroom without knowing that Sir Harry was dead.

Defence Attorney Godfrey Higgs, on cross-examination, asked Hubbard whether he noticed any smoke as he entered Oakes room.

"I wouldn't say so", Hubbard replied.

CABINET HOLDS FINAL MEETING

Announcement is Expected Concerning Resignation of Ontario Government

Toronto, Aug. 10 — (CP) — The Ontario Cabinet, under Premier Harry Nixon, will hold its final meeting today and it is expected that an announcement will be made concerning the resignation of the government.

The Liberal party was defeated last Wednesday in the Ontario election, with only 14 members being returned. Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, Progressive Conservative Leader, heads the largest group with 38 members while E. B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. Leader, has 34 members elected to the Legislature.

Col. Drew also is expected back in Toronto from a brief weekend fishing trip.

Some sources said the change in government may not take place until next week, although it was believed the Liberal cabinet would submit its resignation to Lieutenant Governor Albert Matthews.

Mr. Jolliffe Monday inspected the opposition quarters at the Legislative Building and said the C.C.F. members elected to the legislature would meet in Toronto toward the end of the month.

Wednesday Night Best Time to See Summer Meteors

New York, Aug. 10 —(AP)— This is the week of the midsummer meteors, the Perseids, which for 1,112 years straight have been seen in the northeast sky each summer.

The nights to look are tonight and Thursday. The largest numbers should be seen Wednesday night, and the best time is after midnight after the moon has set.

The meteors are small, swift, traveling at more than 40 miles a second at about 60 miles above the earth.

They are part of a vast river of meteors, whose orbit is between 2,000,000,000 and 3,000,000,000 miles long. That takes them thousands of times farther away from the sun than the earth at its greatest distance.

Each midsummer the earth cuts through the stream in August. The width of the stream has been variously estimated at from a few miles to 15,000,000 miles.

VOTE OF SERVICEMEN PREDOMINATELY C.C.F. IN TWO RIDINGS

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—The vote of servicemen in last week's Ontario election for Toronto St. David and Toronto Riverdale constituencies was predominantly C.C.F. It was announced last night by returning officers of the two ridings, but did not change the result as C.C.F. candidates were elected in both constituencies.

In Toronto St. David the military vote was: William Dennison, C.C.F., 240; Alan Lamport, Liberal, 92, and D. R. Mitchener, Progressive Conservative, 160. The total official vote was: Dennison, 5,678; Lamport, 3,074, and Mitchener, 5,059.

In Toronto Riverdale the military vote was: Flt. Lt. L. E. Wismer, C.C.F., 250; W. A. Summerville, Progressive Conservative, 181, and W. A. Allen, Liberal, 66, with the total official vote as follows: Allen, 2,255; Summerville, 7,340 and Wismer, 7,526.

Casualties Sustained by Canadians In Sicily Moderate in Proportion To Number of Troops Involved

Ottawa, Aug. 10. (CP)— Defence Minister Ralston said today casualties "sustained by the Canadian army in Sicily have been moderate in proportion to the number of troops involved".

The statement was made in a release from defence headquarters containing the Minister's comments following his return yesterday from a 10-day visit to the United Kingdom.

He gave no indication of the number of casualties but said they were considered moderate, "in view of the particularly heavy and bitter fighting which prevailed in the first 25 days of the Sicilian campaign."

While in the United Kingdom he conferred with Prime Minister Churchill, Sir James Grigg, Secretary of State For War, officers of the Imperial General Staff, Lieut.-General A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian Army Commander, and Senior Officers at Canadian Military headquarters in London on matters relating to the manning, equipment, training and employment of the Canadian Active Army.

He also visited a number of the Canadian units and formations and said the spirit of all ranks, which he found keen on previous visits, had been raised to great heights by the news from Sicily regarding the achievements of the Canadian force there.

The Minister also noted satisfaction on the part of the people of Great Britain regarding the Canadian army's exploits.

The British people, he said, have always shown the warmest feeling towards the Canadian armed services and on this visit, wherever he went, people seemed to have taken a personal pride in the fact that Canadian troops have unmistakably proved themselves from the moment they took to their landing craft right up to Aderno and beyond. He said that Canadians were receiving prominent and widespread attention in the British press.

Germans Lavish In Their Use Of Explosives, Stores

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 10 — (AP) — The retiring Germans have begun a lavish spending of their supplies, particularly explosives and equipment, in a large-scale effort to retard the Allied advance in Sicily.

Until the last day or so they apparently tried to conserve their stores because of the difficulty of receiving more from the mainland.

But since the collapse of the Mt. Etna line they have been shooting the works. Huge quantities of explosives have been used.

Roads running through the mountains are being systematically choked with avalanches loosed by the dynamiting of overhanging cliffs.

Bridges and culverts are being blown up and narrow defiles blocked.

Consequently the final push toward Messina may be slow.

International at a Glance

Fail to Reach Men Trapped in Colliery

Lethbridge, Aug. 10. (CP) — Twenty hours after an explosion and cave-in trapped four colliery workers in the Keralta Coal Mine on the west bank of the Old Man River near here Monday afternoon, rescue workers, toiling in squads of five under extremely cramped and hazardous conditions, had failed to reach the men.

The trapped men are Sam Crabb, overman; William King, mine electrician; John Zubrey, miner; and J. Penta, miner.

Six men reached the surface and safety after a large section of the drift mine had been badly shattered and plugged with debris by the blast.

TRUCK WINDSHIELD BROKEN BY STONES

The practice of that time-honored pastime of small boys throwing stones usually proves either costly or results in personal injury of some description. Yesterday proved no exception to the rule in Belleville. 'Teen-aged lads throwing stones in the vicinity of the Swift Canadian plant on Station St., are believed the cause of the breaking of a company truck windshield, company officials complained to police. Naturally when the authorities arrived the fleet-footed lads had long since made their presence scarce from that area.

Few Enemy Aircraft Seen Over Sicily

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 10 (AP)—Hundreds of Allied aircraft engaged in bombing and strafing sweeps over Sicily, Sardinia, Messina Strait and the toe of Italy saw exactly 15 enemy planes yesterday.

"Nowhere did our aircraft encounter opposition worth noting," said an Allied air force statement.

In one of the few dogfights of the day, a fighter pilot, shot down a Messerschmitt-109 while escorting Marauders on a bridge-bombing mission at Angitola in southern Italy.

Heavy bombers tangled up the crossroads in the Messina area, R.A.F. and Canadian Wellingtons went after landing craft on the Messina beaches and caused fires at Paradiso, and other raiders sank six small ships off Milazzo on Sicily's north coast.

Tactical air force assaults caused traffic jams at Floresta and Novara in the Sicilian tip.

Medium bombers hitting at the Catanzaro area on the Italian toe for the third straight day, badly damaged a railway bridge, highway railway yards and a repair shop.

Fighters, stabbing at the tip of Italy, strafed six small boats and about 50 German soldiers, destroyed a locomotive and damaged two others, wrecked radio installations at Cape Spartivento and Galati and raided the areas of Roccela, Locri and Sidi Marino.

It was disclosed that American fighters caused an ammunition train of 30 cars to explode near Milazzo Sunday. Fighter bombers the same day destroyed 18 vehicles and damaged 60 and put four locomotives out of action. Fighters also hit 20 small barges, destroying four, in patrols over Messina Strait.

Poison Causes Death of Two

Montreal, Aug. 10 —(CP)— Two teen-aged boys died in hospital early today from the effects of poison which police believe may have been given them in a glass of beer.

Morgue and police officials said they heard a report that the boys, Marcel Roy, 14, and Marcel St. Jean, 15, had accepted a glass of beer yesterday from a stranger and that it was thought some acid had been placed in the glass.

The boys were admitted to hospital yesterday afternoon. Roy died shortly after midnight and Jean died about four hours later.

No date has been set for the holding of an inquest, pending result of police investigations.

First Casualty List In Sicily Operation Issued Likely Friday Night

Ottawa, Aug. 10—(CP)—The first casualty list arising out of the operations of Canadian troops in Sicily will probably be issued Friday night, Aug. 13, it was learned at Defence Headquarters today. It is expected to contain between 75 and 100 names and will be followed by other lists, possibly on Aug. 16 and Aug. 19.

In a statement today Defence Minister Ralston said casualties in Sicily have been "moderate in proportion to the number of troops involved."

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—Cattle trade was very slow on the livestock market here up to mid-session today with prices 25 to 35 cents lower on steers and heifers. Hogs, calves, lambs and sheep were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 500, calves 300, hogs 600, sheep and lambs 180. Unsold from yesterday were 2,100 head of cattle.

A few butcher steers and heifers sold at $10-$12, butcher cows were $8-$9.75 with a few at $10, butcher bulls $9.50-$10.50, light bologna bulls downward to $8, a few stockers $8.50-$12.50.

Choice vealers were $15-$15.50 with other grades downward to $10.

Lambs were $16-$16.25 with a few at $16.50 for good ewes and wethers with bucks at $15-$15.25.

Sheep were $5-$9.50.

Hogs sold at $16.85-$16.90 dressed-weight.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)—Stocks developed a soft tone in the early hours of the Toronto stock exchange, the industrials, base metals and western oils posting index losses at noon while the golds held steady. Heavy trading in several penny issues lifted volume to 592,000 shares for the first three hours.

Ontario Nickel traded about 125,000 shares and weakened 1-4 to 4 1-4. Aldermac was active and strong and Normetal gained 4 cents. Mild weakness was shown by Smelters, International Nickel, Pend Oreille and Steep Rock.

Food and Utility stocks were stronger and the building issues weakened moderately. Canadian Food Products Pfd and Western Canada Flour Pfd gained about 2 points.

San Antonio, Hollinger, Leitch and Malartic Gold Fields gained narrowly. In the western oils, Home, Foothills and Vermilata were lower.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 10—(AP)—While prices improved moderately in a number of departments the stock market today gave no pronounced signs of emerging from its recent spell of inertia.

The "wait and see" attitude of traders generally was sharpened by reports that some "big news" might come out of Washington soon.

Stocks ahead fractionally near the fourth hour included Bethlehem Steel, Republic, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, U.S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Homestake Mining, Pepsi-Cola, Philco, Pullman and Westinghouse.

Showing wider advance at times were Case, Montgomery Ward, McIntyre, Porcupine and Pan-American Airways. A few leaders rested in slightly lower territory.

McIntyre was up 1 3-8 to lead the Canadian list. Dome Mines gained 1-4 and Lake Shore a similar amount.

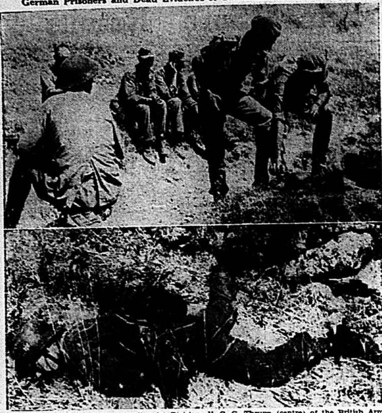
German Prisoners and Dead Evidence of Canadian Success in Sicily



Smashing successes of the Canadian 1st Division in Sicily are brought home by these "on the spot" pictures just received in Canada. In the TOP view, intelligence officers sort over the equipment of disconsolate German captives who are seen in the background. This picture was taken after the battles which paved the way for the fall of Enna. Captain V. C. G. Thrupp (centre) of the British Army, and Captain G. M. C. Sprung, of Winnipeg, conduct the examination. At BOTTOM, a dead German soldier sprawls grotesquely as mute evidence of the bitter fighting which took place when the Canadians of the Carleton and York Regiment met the Germans south of Enna. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

Church's Attitude Toward Present War Discussed By Rev. J. B. Creeggan at Rotary

Addressing the weekly Rotary luncheon at the Quinte Hotel in Belleville on Monday, Rev. J. B. Creeggan of Picton, Ontario, spoke on "The Church and the Quest for Durable Peace". Rev. Creeggan was born in Bancroft and attended Queen's University and later became rector of St. Mary Magdalene Church. Mr. Creeggan opened his address with the statement, that we must consider the Church's attitude toward the present war, saying that there were three main attitudes; first, the attitude of those, who reject war as incompatible with the teachings of Christ and principle of Christian faith: religous pacifism. The second attitude is that to take part in war is just if it is to preserve and restore justice and freedom, and the third attitude is that wars, under any circumstances, are holy crusades which serve God's righteous cause.

Elaborating on these three attitudes, the Rev. Creeggan said that the Roman Empire waged wars and persecuted the Christians for three centuries until the Christians dominated power in the Roman Empire and then the attitude changed and the Christians then looked upon war with a different opinion and called it just if the war was fought to preserve or restore order, justice and peace. "This has come to be the dominant attitude to war in Christian tradition", said Mr. Creeggan. "Pacifism has never died out", he continued. "In this war the attitude has been divided among leaders of great religious bodies. There is little of the fire crusading spirit, that was so noticeable in the last war, when men were appealed to from the pulpits to get out and join and fight for their country and, although this spirit has died out, and pacifism is in the minority, the majority still maintain, that this war is justified if fought for the preservation, restoration and extension of essential human rights, for freedom, justice and a lasting peace. The present attitude to war is not an exuberant mood but rather a repentant mood and the majority see the war as tragic and grim but an inescapable necessity".

Church Differs From State

"The Church differs from the State", said Rev. Creeggan, "for the Church as such is not at war and is different from the State in its essential nature, its tasks are different from those of the State and must take on tasks not undertaken by the State. The main point of the Church crusade is winning the Peace, presupposing, that we win the war, and today no large body other than the Church has studied and worked to establish a workable peace and post-war plan".

Quoting from the notes of an Inter-church Conference held at Delaware, Ohio, Mr. Creeggan said: "We believe that it is contrary to the moral order that nations in their dealings with one another should be motivated by a spirit of revenge and retaliation. There should be no punitive reparations, no humiliating decrees of war guilt and no arbitrary dismemberment of nations". "Peace and revenge based upon two main convictions should be governed by the thought, that we are not wholly innocent of guilt and a vindictive peace would only continue the old vicious circle of war and revenge", said Rev. Creeggan. "Political shortsightedness would only drive the Germans back to Hitler. By making suggestions, that humiliate we are playing into the hands of the enemy's propaganda agents. A more successful method of attracting the German mind to a peaceful settlement of war would be to drive a wedge between the German masses and Hitler by proclaiming a dynamic peace program built upon reconstruction. We must realize that wars are not made by men like Hitler but other factors at work, such factors which would have led to this catastrophic war, the factors of economic reconstruction".

Profit An Incentive

"Profit has been the principal incentive relied upon to turn the wheels of industry and to bring forth the fruits of the soil", said Rev. Creeggan returning to the events discussed at the Delaware, Ohio, conference. "This system has in recent years developed grave defects. There has occurred mass unemployment, widespread dispossession from homes and farms, destitution, lack of opportunity of youth and security for old age. These calamities, which have often been accentuated by short range self-seeking trade policies of various nations have made for war, they have opened opportunities for violent and unscrupulous men to seize leadership, and we must realize that nothing short of world organization will be able to keep a permanent peace.

"A world government of delegated powers, an international legislative body, an international court with adequate jurisdiction, international administrative bodies with necessary powers, and adequate international police forces" and provisions for world wide economic sanctions", said Rev. Creeggan declaring these necessary to the establishment of a durable peace. "Studying by groups of these problems and suggestions are the practical steps towards these great goals. The League of Nations would have lived had the people understood it, had they been taught the objectives of the League. The Church suggests, that all existing efforts toward relief of starving population be increased. All organizations now in existence: Missionary societies, Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A., and established Service Clubs such as the Rotary, should be kept alive and going as they are the best available channels to take up large scale enterprises of international reconstruction and rehabilitation".

Spiritual, Moral Crisis

"The question will be raised", said Mr. Creeggan in conclusion, "what right do these representatives have to speak of economics and international politics? 'Churchmen talk politics and economics and politicians talk religion', has been a long standing joke. Not, perhaps, technicalities, but where they deal with human beings, human lives, who are affected by an economic order. The Christian faith believes in the sacredness and dignity of individual personality. We must come to a system, where human rights are put above property rights, where stewardship and sharing and not profit and gain are ultimate motives. The addresses of leading statesmen read like sermons and are often used as sermons because the interpreters of our time are realizing that the crisis of our age is in its deepest sense not an economic, not a political, but a spiritual and moral crisis".

Before Rev. Creeggan's address was delivered, a report on the progress of the Rotary Carnival now being offered to the public was made, and the chairmen of the various committees associated with this work made an appeal for the support of all to create more interest among their friends.

An announcement that Wednesday and Saturday afternoons of this week would be special matinee days for children was made. At these times the price for all rides at the carnival grounds will be reduced to 5c plus 1c tax. Rotarians are doing a worthwhile job in their effort to help the crippled children of this and other localities, they are giving freely of their time and money and the fullest co-operation by the public as is possible should be as generously added to the supporting of these gentlemen in their commendable work.

CANADIAN INFANTRY AND ARTILLERY ROUT AXIS IN SICILY

These first pictures of the Canadians in action Canadian artillery and infantry which blasted Axis in Sicily give striking evidence of the teamwork of troops from their positions. TOP view shows men of the famous Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry advancing towards a German transport convoy which has been blasted to a halt by mechanized artillery. BOTTOM picture was taken while Canadian gunners were laying down a deadly barrage on the convoy. They left it ablaze and easy prey for the infantrymen. Puffs of smoke in the background, on the hillside leading toward Enna, are exploding shells. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

Cheese Gradings Down Slightly

Cheese gradings again took a slight drop in the Central Ontario District for the period ending Friday night, it was reported by Chief Dairy Grader, J. L. Irwin of Belleville. During the past week a total of 10,584 cheese were graded at the five grading stations of Belleville, Kingston, Campbellford, Peterboro and Lindsay. The week previous 11,069 were graded.

Campbellford district was high in the number of 95 score cheese graded, 453 of this score being graded at this point as compared to the 433 cheese of 95 score graded in Belleville. No 95 score cheese were graded at the other stations.

A total of 7,477 cheese were graded in the Belleville station: 1,194 at Kingston: 1,740 at Campbellford, 124 at Lindsay and 49 at Peterboro.

At Belleville 3,680 cheese graded 94 score 3,090 graded 93; 174 graded 92 while there were 100 seconds.

I GOT RID OF MY CONSTIPATION WITHOUT "DOSING"!

● When we're all doing our best to help win the war none of us can afford to be slowed up physically and mentally by common constipation . . . the kind caused by lack of "bulk" in the diet. If you're troubled that way, why not get right at the cause instead of "dosing" with purgatives that give, at best, only temporary relief.

Here's a simple, "better way" to prevent constipation caused by lack of "bulk"—eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day . . . grand-tasting as a cereal or in crispy muffins . . . drink plenty of water. Then see if you don't notice a big difference in the way you feel and look! Get started right away. Your grocer has ALL-BRAN in two convenient sizes. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Little Benny's Note Book

My sister Gladdis and Harvey came over to play bridge with pop and ma, and pop said, Why dont we just sit around and talk for a change. The art of conservation has been languishing ever since bridge became a habit instead of a game, he said.

The art of bridge is what needs developing as far as you are concerned, ma said, and pop said, That's what I meant.

And he got out the bridge table and they started to play, and ma said to Gladdis, Are you having much luck marketing these days?

Yes, much bad luck, Gladdis said. My stars if I told you what I had to pay for 2 pounds of peas, you'd swoon away, she said, and ma said, Then I'd at least swoon gracefully, because I've had plenty of practice swooning over food prices these passed few weeks. Have you any idea what I paid for 2 undernourished artichokes? she said.

Dont tell me, Gladdis said, and pop said, Goody goody, Harvey, the art of conservation is getting a boost after all. Let's talk about the early Romans. It seems one of the chief delights —of the early Romans was to stop at roadside stands on their way to the chariot races and refresh themselves with spagettyburgers. It seems a spagettyburger was a roll filled with spagetty and sardines, and they got so expensive during the 7 year war with the 57 Heintz tribes that the populace rebelled, and that was the beginning of the fall of the Roman Empire, pop said.

Now William this is suppose to be serious bridge, ma said, and pop said, By gollies nobody would of suspected it.

Being a good answer, and the result was bridge with hardly any talking.

CHURCHILL'S APPROACH TO THE GREAT QUESTIONS.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

The secret of Churchill is to be found, we believe, in his calm, unemotional approach to the great questions before the United Nations and before his country. It is revealed in the determined way in which he carries on under all circumstances. This is not to say that Churchill is not a man of deep feeling. He is. But he does not expose his feeling to public gaze. He dresses his emotions in one of the finest vocabularies used by any public figure. Thereby he inspires and encourages those it is his task to lead through the greatest crisis in world history.

AN IDEA FROM AFRICA

London (CP) — For some time Britain has used a rocket apparatus which releases a steel cable in the air as a means of anti-aircraft defence at sea. Now it comes out that A. G. CHURCHILL IN QUEBEC FOR VICTORY PARLEY

British Minister And Premier King Exchange Views

Chiefs of Staff For The Army, Navy And Air Force In Churchill Party

CONFER AT CHATEAU

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill went to the Chateau Frontenac today to attend a meeting of the War Committee of the Canadian Cabinet, presided over by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

First Official Act

It was Mr. Churchill's first official act of his stay here, which began with his carefully-guarded arrival Tuesday afternoon and will later include conferences at a time and place not disclosed with President Roosevelt and the Combined Chiefs of Staff of the United Kingdom and United States.

"The Canadian Chiefs of Staff are meeting the British Chiefs of Staff throughout the day," said an official statement.

The British Prime Minister, accompanied by Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council, drove down to the Chateau from the Vice-Regal summer residence in the Citadel where he has living quarters.

Announcement of this part of the program was made at mid-morning by A. D. Dunton, Wartime Information Board official who said there would be no press conference with either of the Prime Ministers.

War Committee Meets.

Today's meeting of the War Committee was the second in as many days. A meeting was held here yesterday before Mr. Churchill's arrival from overseas — probably the first time the War Committee has met outside Ottawa.

Few Quebecers have had much opportunity for even a fleeting glimpse of Mr. Churchill or the other distinguished conferees who with their staffs, have crowded the huge Chateau Frontenac to capacity.

The British Prime Minister was described by those close to him, however, as in "fine form" and excellent spirits.

Because there is no advance information on his movements the usual crowds which would await his comings and goings have been avoided.

Blueprint Under Review.

A United Nations blueprint for final victory in Europe was under review by British, American and Canadian military leaders while Mr. Churchill and Mr. King conferred in the storied citadel of the old capital of French Canada.

While today's official statement referred only to conferences between Canadian and British Chiefs of Staff, there has been considerable United States military activity around the Chateau Frontenac in recent days.

The British Prime Minister, accompanied by his military advisers, arrived here yesterday and shortly will start his sixth and possibly most portentious strategy conference with President Roosevelt of the United States.

As a preliminary of the Roosevelt-Churchill conference, the two leading figures of the British Commonwealth discussed some of the military and political problems arising from the rapidly-changing war picture in Europe and Asia, while staff officers of the three nations conferred in the famous Chateau Frontenac Hotel here.

Accompanied by Staffs

The British Prime Minister was accompanied by Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, the First Sea Lord; Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, Chief of the Air Staff; Lt.-Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, Chief of Staff to the Prime Minister, and Vice-Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Chief of the Combined Operations.

Among the high-ranking Canadian leaders here were Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, Chief of Staff for the Army; Rear Admiral Percy W. Nelles, Chief of Staff for the Navy, and Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of Air Staff.

It was impossible to identify American officers by name but it could be said they have arrived in Quebec for the conference.

The British Prime Minister and his party left the train on the south shore of the St. Lawrence yesterday and motored into the city after being greeted by Sir Eugene Fiset,

Important Blows Possibly From U.K. Predicted as Result Of Present Parley

NEXT MOVE BROADER

By JAMES F. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Prime Minister Churchill's journey across the Atlantic for his sixth wartime meeting with President Roosevelt and his conferences with Prime Minister Mackenzie King stirred spontaneous and optimistic talk in London today of a "Victory-this-Year" assault on Europe.

Virtually unanimous agreement was expressed on all sides that the Allied chieftains were getting together to lay final plans for the grand offensive in theatres of war other than the Mediterranean where overwhelming Allied military might has already asserted itself.

Military Leaders Attend.

The presence of Britain's top-flight military men with Mr. Churchill in Quebec led to one conclusion — that British, United States and Dominion forces would soon be storming the European continent from many directions in fulfillment of Mr. Churchill's own prediction of a combined action before winter.

The absence of Premier Joseph Stalin was noted by most commentators.

The Yorkshire Post said it was understood that he had been invited but was unable to attend. The Post added that Stalin was being informed of developments "almost hourly."

Declaring that the problems facing Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are more than just military, the Post asserted, "The hour is at hand when it will be imperative for the United Nations to pursue a united course not only with regard to military operations but equally with regard to the politics of Europe.

Need Agreement with Russia.

"It could hardly be expected that Marshal Stalin would be able to travel to Montreal or Washington at the present time; but it is nonetheless important that all steps be taken to secure a far-reaching agreement with Soviet Russia on these wider problems of war-winning and peace-making."

The Times, in an editorial dealing with the Atlantic Charter which was an outgrowth of another Roosevelt-Churchill meeting two years ago, stressed the necessity for unity among the Americans, British and Russians.

"If mutual jealousies were to drive these three countries along separate paths of narrowly-interpreted self- interest," the Times said, "or if national rivalries and ambitions of lesser powers were allowed to assert themselves to the detriment of a firmly-welded common organization for the prevention of aggression and the maintenance of peace, then little hope would exist of averting a fresh calamity for Europe and the world."

Says Stalin's Absence Disappoints.

Believe 50,000 Persons Killed In Hamburg Raids

Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 11—(AP) — The record bombing of Hamburg by the Allies destroyed 11 of the city's 40 districts and is believed to have killed at least 50,000 persons, reports reaching Sweden said today.

The chief editor of the Hamburger Tageblatt told foreign correspondents in Berlin that the city was only "partly alive."

He described the bombardments as "so terrific nothing can compare with them in the world's history."

Berlin Reported Moving All Schools, Digging Trenches, Building Shelters

Stockholm, Aug. 11 — (AP) — German dispatches said today that Berlin's entire school system is being moved to undisclosed points in Brandenburg, East Prussia and Warthegau before the capital becomes "another Hamburg."

The dispatches said the city's president announced that all instruction has stopped, although the children have not yet been removed.

City-wide digging of slit trenches, construction of new air raid shelters, reinforcement of old ones and the building of water reservoirs started two weeks ago, were reported continuing

RAIL JUNCTION OF NUREMBERG IS HEAVILY BLASTED

Nazi Party Rallying Point Given Taste Of Might of R. A. F. Bombing Force

16 BOMBERS LOST

London, Aug. 11 — (CP) — British and Canadian bombers made a heavy attack last night on the city of Nuremberg, important railway and industrial centre in Southern Germany and a Nazi party rallying point, the Air Ministry announced today.

Halifax squadrons from the Canadian Bomber Group joined with the R.A.F. in hammering Germany for the second successive night, The Canadian Press learned today.

Sixteen bombers were lost in the raid, a communique said, but all Canadian planes returned safely. Three enemy fighters were reported shot down.

Ironically it was just four years ago today that Reichmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering boasted to the German public that not a single enemy bomb would be permitted to fall upon Germany.

Nuremberg had been raided six times previously, the last time on March 8. It is 525 miles from Britain by airline and just 75 miles short of Berlin.

The city is the junction of two great trunk railway lines — one running from the Ruhr to Southeast Germany and the other from Berlin and Central Germany to Munich and Italy.

Used as Reinforcing Depot

There have been many recent reports that Italy is being reinforced with German troops and munitions, and if this is the case probably much of these reinforcements are flowing through Nuremberg.

The city is the site of large factories engaged in the manufacture of Diesel engines for submarines and producing tanks, aircraft parts and motors.

On the outskirts of Nuremberg is located a Messerschmidt manufacturing plant.

The communique announcing the raid said that the city had been "very heavily bombed" but gave no other details. Residents on the British southeast coast, however, declared that great numbers of British aircraft had headed across the Channel at dusk last evening and said the force apparently was one of the biggest to leave Britain in some time.

The raid followed by 24 hours thundering R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. attacks on the twin cities of Mannheim and Ludwigshafen in the Rhineland.

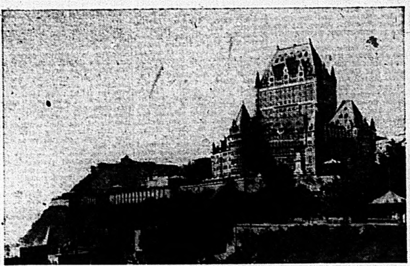
BBC Warns Hungarians To Move Away From War Industries

New York, Aug. 11 —(AP)— The BBC issued a "final" warning today to Hungarian workers to "move away from industrial centres so as to save themselves and their families from the danger of bombing."

The broadcast recalled that the previous warning was on Sunday when Hungarians were reminded of the successful air attack on the oil centre at Ploesti in neighboring Rumania.

SHORTAGE OF CROWN ATTORNEYS

New Toronto, Aug. 11—(CP)— Manpower shortage in these parts now is breaking the wheels of justice. Magistrate W. N. Robinson proclaimed to an astonished court here Monday: "Owing to a shortage of crown attorneys, all cases listed to be tried today will be heard in Mimico later in the week."



The world-famous Chateau Frontenac, Scene of Meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and Canada's War Cabinet

Churchill Appears Cheerful and Confident As He Poses For Pictures With War Cabinet

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Prime Minister Winston Churchill is in Quebec — beyond doubt.

You can prove it by me, now, because I've finally seen him, his long cigar cocked at jaunty angle, his hand raised with fingers forming the V-sign of victory and his face wreathed in the Churchill smile of confidence.

Until this glimpse, afforded 100 newspapermen and cameramen in the quadrangle of the Chateau Frontenac, we knew only what a tighty-worded official communique told us: that Mr. Churchill and his wife and daughter had arrived in Quebec.

Shortly after 11:30 a. m. E.D.T. today reporters were told they might enter the main arch of the Chateau entrance and watch Churchill alight from his car in the quadrangle, to attend a meeting of the Canadian Cabinet's War Committee in the Chateau.

In due course the long, black car drew up to the entrance and the crowd of correspondents and photographers closed in. Uniformed forces of Canada and the United States co-operated.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mr. Churchill's host in the Citadel, Vice-Regal Residence here, was first to alight.

Then came Mr. Churchill's cigar, followed by the great man himself, already smiling. He looked about at once and raised his fingers in the V-sign while the crowd cheered and photographers shouted instructions.

On the steps of the Chateau Mr. King presented Mr. Churchill to nine members of his cabinet who form the war committee and the entire group posed for pictures.

"Stand over here," said Mr. Churchill to Munitions Minister Howe who seemed to be crowded out of the pictures. He proceeded to group the Canadian ministers to best advantage.

It was the first opportunity for a sure sight of the British Prime Minister since his guarded and unheralded arrival yesterday afternoon for a stay in North America during which he will hold his sixth war conference with President Roosevelt of the United States, at a place and time not yet disclosed.

The British Prime Minister wore semi-formal morning attire—striped trousers and short black jacket, white shirt, dark polka-dot bow tie and black Homburg. He carried gloves and a stick.

"They want me to shake hands with a minister," Mr. Churchill said, and turned to grasp the hand of bareheaded Air Minister Power, at his right.

After a few minutes of posing Mr. Churchill indicated it was all over. He puffed his cigar, waved one last V-sign, turned and pushed his way into the Chateau lobby to be swallowed up by conferences in which British, Canadian and American military officials have been participating.

DREW SUMMONED TO QUEENS PARK BY LT.-GOVERNOR

Prog. Conservative Leader Accepts Invitation to Form Cabinet

MAKES STATEMENT

Toronto, Aug. 11 —(CP)— Lt.-Col. George A. Drew, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, announced today he has accepted an invitation of Lieutenant Governor Albert Matthews to form a government in Ontario to succeed the Liberal administration of Premier Nixon which was defeated in the Ontario election last Wednesday.

Col. Drew, leader of the largest group in the new Ontario legislature with 38 seats, issued a statement after an interview with the Lieutenant Governor, which followed an earlier meeting between the Lieutenant Governor and Mr. Nixon.

The Progressive Conservative leader said the new government will take office early next week at a date to be agreed upon between Mr. Nixon and myself."

Progressive Conservative Gov't.

He added: "The government will be a Progressive Conservative government. I believe that our 22-point program will win support in the legislature as it has with the people of Ontario."

Premier Nixon had no statement to make after his conference with the Lieutenant Governor but it was learned from Queen's Park sources that he had tendered the resignation of his government which won 14 of the 90 seats in last week's election. The C.C.F. party, led by E. B. Jolliffe, won 34 seats, two went to Labor candidates, one to an Independent Liberal and one is still undecided.

After issuing the statement, Col. Drew said that Progressive Conservative M.P.P.'s-elect and defeated candidates will be his guests at a luncheon here Friday at which the election and the parties policies will be discussed.

OFFER VILLAGE JAIL FOR SALE

Winthrop Harbor, Ill., Aug. 11—(AP)—This village's jail seems no more popular among real estate investors than it was among lawbreakers. Because the three-cell establishment hadn't had a customer in three years the village decided to sell it. Nobody appeared before the village board with an offer.

SALAMAUA SEEN AS "HAMBURG" OF SOUTH PACIFIC

Japs on New Georgia Is. Confronted With 'Bataan in Reverse'

ENEMY ENCIRCLED

Allied Headquarters, the Southwest Pacific, Aug. 11—(AP)—Japanese forces with their backs to the sea in the Bairoko area of New Georgia Island are confronted with a "Bataan in reverse," front line dispatches said today.

American army and marine forces completed encirclement of the enemy Sunday in this last remaining point of organized resistance on the island. Since then United States forces have tightened the jaws of a steel trap along a six mile front.

With American forces advancing along a semi-circular front, a spokesman said the only remaining chance for the Japanese at Bairoko to escape annihilation was by means of a night withdrawal to Kolombangara Island, nine miles to the northwest across Kula Gulf.

At the other end of the 750-mile battle arc, Salamaua was fast becoming the "Hamburg" of the South Pacific.

85 Tons Bombs Dropped

Today's communique from Allied headquarters reported that 85 more tons of bombs were dropped Tuesday on that northeastern New Guinea air base of the Japanese, raising to at least 892 the tonnage to fall from Allied planes in that sector since the new offensive opened June 30.

The actual total must be much higher. Salamaua has been raided on at least 30 of the first 42 days of the present campaign. On only 12 of these raids are actual bomb tonnage figures listed in the communiques, adding up to 892.

Possession of the Salamaua airport, toward which Americans and Australians are fighting in the vicinity of Bobdubi, five miles below Salamaua, would give the Allies a good field from which to attack New Britain, a short water hop to the northeast.

The communique reported fifth enemy bombers and fighters attempted a raid on Rendova Island Tuesday but were dispersed by 14 Allied fighter planes. Two of the raiders were downed. One Allied plane was lost but the pilot was saved.

ELECTRIC EELS GO TO WAR

New York, Aug. 11 (AP)—The New York aquarium's five electric eels have gone to war. Dr. Christopher W. Coates, aquarium director, disclosed yesterday that the eels have been removed from public view and are being used in secret war research.

RED ARMY ROLLING ON UNCHECKED IN TWIN DRIVES

Capture Village After Village in Advance Against Kharkov And Bryansk

MOVE TOWARD KIEV

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 11 — (AP) — The Red Army is rolling on unchecked in its twin drives toward the Ukranian city of Kharkov and Bryansk to the north, capturing village after village and inflicting heavy losses on the retreating Germans, the Russians declared today.

With Kharkov pocketed on three sides by a five-pronged drive, another Russian column has bitten deep into the rich Russian grain territory and is only 14 miles from Sumy and 190 miles east of the capital city of Kiev, a Soviet communique disclosed.

Sumy, an important railroad point, is located some 90 miles northwest of Kharkov on the line linking the steel centre with the German base at Bryansk.

Advance Along Railway.

The Russians announced that their forces advancing toward Bryansk along the railway from Orel had captured a railway town 45 miles east of the city.

Seventy towns and villages were reported captured by the Russians in the Kharkov sector and 30 more in the Bryansk area as the Red Army marked up important gains in a general advance along the entire active front almost 300 miles in length.

One of the five Russian columns threatening Kharkov has captured Slatino, 12 miles north. A second was reported 30 miles due west and a third 45 miles northwest. Another force has stormed across the upper Donets River and is within 20 miles of the city on the east, while a fifth is 25 miles due east, the Russian communique declared.

Stubborn Resistance

The Russian advance was made in the face of stubborn German resistance. Large numbers of Germans were killed in the struggle, the Soviet war bulletin said, and large quantities of mechanized equipment, food and ammunition fell into Russian hands as the Nazis, cracking under the sledge hammer blows of the Red Army, fell back.

The drive on Bryansk, another vital base for German operations in Russia, was still in its early stages. As yet there were no indications of the development of an encircling movement such as marked the capture of Orel from which the advance was launched a week ago. Nevertheless, the Red Army was making rapid progress, having covered more than half the distance from Orel.

Activity on other fronts was limited largely to reconnaissance, the Soviet war bulletin said.

The Berlin radio still persisted in its claims that the Russians have launched a large-scale attack at Vyazma in the Smolensk area, Westernmost point in the Russian lines. The Red Army was using tanks, planes, flame throwers and infantry, the Germans said, adding that "the struggle is growing in intensity and extension." The Russians have made no mention of such a battle in recent communiques.

Two Mobile General Hospitals Organized For Canadian Army

Ottawa, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Two mobile general hospitals, first such units in the Canadian Army, are being organized, Defence Headquarters announced today. They will be under command of Lt.-Col. J.A.A. Harcourt, Toronto physician, and Lt.-Col. Pierre Tremolay, permanent force medical officer who went overseas with a field ambulance in 1940.

The new hospitals will serve just behind front-line scenes of action and provide full surgical and pathological facilities for treatment of casualties. In each, one or more complete surgical teams, consisting of surgeon, specialist in medicine, radiologist and anesthetist, all holding the rank of Major, will furnish operative and post-operative treatment.

A dental officer and two assistants will specialize in treating injuries to jaws and dentures and will assist plastic surgeons.

There will be 20 nurses on the staff of each hospital, in charge of a matron and assistant matron. In addition, a pool of nurses will be attached to each hospital, from which emergency teams for front-line evacuation duty will be drawn. The Nursing Sisters will work nearest to battle-lines of any members of their profession.

The aim, the announcement said, is to transport serious cases back to permanent base hospitals as quickly as possible.

7-Mile Gain On Coast

Shipyards in Bay Of Naples Shelled By Warships Of British Navy

RANDAZZO BATTERED

By DANIEL De LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Allied Headquarters, North Africa, Aug. 11 — (AP) — The British 8th Army in Sicily advanced to within sight of the Italian mainland while British warships bombarded Italian shipyards in the Bay of Naples, 130 miles south of Rome, and other mainland military targets, Allied Headquarters announced today.

British forces advanced seven miles along the east coast of Sicily under the shadow of Mount Etna to capture the town of Guardia, 16 miles south of Taormina and 40 miles from Messina, the bulletin announced. British Tommies in the east slopes of Mount Etna thus gained their first view of the Italian mainland.

The inshore bombardment of the construction and repair yards at Castellammare at the southern edge of the Bay of Naples took place Monday night, with British destroyers and cruisers moving in close to the target to pour round after round into the yards which were capable of handling ships up to 500 feet in length.

Cape Vaticano Bombarded.

At the same time other units of the fleet attacked Cape Vaticano on the instep of the Italian boot about 25 miles north of San Giovanni where the main Italian railroad lines operate close to the shore of the Tyrrhenian Sea.

The communique said railway bridges were bombarded in the naval attack at Cape Vaticano at the same time that the daring seamen shoved their grey warships between Naples and the romantic Isle of Capri and let loose their thunderous salvos almost in the shadow of Mount Vesuvius.

Poultry producers are urged to bring their poultry problems to the conference and receive expert and capable practical advice.

Lunches are supplied by attending poultrymen and women and the beautiful parks of Peterborough, which are conveniently located near the Collegiate Auditorium, will afford an excellent place and occasion for a picnic.

HOTELMEN SEND 10,500 CIGARETTES TO BOYS OVERSEAS

Using the facilities of the Kinsmen Fag Fund, the Belleville District Hotelmen's Association sent another shipment of 10,500 cigarettes to Belleville boys serving overseas this week. Secretary Walter Allore revealed today that he is beginning to receive messages of thanks for the past shipments of Canadian smokes from local boys serving in various theatres of this globular war.

CAR IS STRUCK BY HIT-RUN DRIVER

Property damage resulted to a motor car driven by Lyall Pringle, 66 1-2 Catherine Street at the intersection of Octavia and Catherine Streets Tuesday evening, when his automobile was struck by a hit-and-run driver. P.C. Evans investigated the complaint and was told that Mr. Pringle had stopped his car for the stop street coming off Octavia Street when the second vehicle came off Catherine Street and sideswiped Mr. Pringle's car damaging a fender at an estimated value of $15.00. The second vehicle was driven away so speedily that Mr. Pringle was unable to obtain the licence plate number.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH SHOPLIFTING

Following complaints from two local department stores a woman, who police say is Ella Morris, 11 Willard St., was apprehended by Plainclothes Constable W. L. Rathwell Tuesday afternoon . The woman was taken to the police station and after being searched she was charged with shoplifting. She will appear in Friday's court.

Cigarettes Mean Much to the Boys Serving Overseas

Thanks for cigarettes already received through the Kinsmen Fag Fund continue to be received at the office of Chairman Matt Currie. In each instance the recipients continue to urge the shipment of Canadian cigarettes overseas.

"These cigarettes mean so much to us," wrote G. Morris. "They come at the right time and the boys over here do appreciate them, I can assure you," added Mark Storms. "Thanks a million, your fags always seem to arrive at the needed time," stated R. Lavender. There are but three of scores of such replies received from Belleville boys receiving cigarettes through the Kinsmen Fag Fund.

The list of local lads sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes etch this week include:

Norman Adams, Lloyd Allison, C. A. Anderson, W. J. Anderson, Gerald Archer, Harry Artis, Roy Ashmore, Jack Barrett, E. F. Bassett, M. C. Bassett, Ralph Bassett, J. T. Beckwith, William Carson, W. A. No Fingerprints Of Self-Styled Escapee Available

There is no record of the fingerprints of James Edward Alewain, self-styled escaped Nazi prisoner of war, in the records of the R.C.M.P. at Ottawa, Chief Probert revealed today after a check had been made through the Federal authorities. Alewain is being held by Belleville police on a nominal charge of vagrancy after he was apprehended last Friday in Belleville, when he was arrested, when unable to produce a registration card or other identification. Alewain was attempting to enlist in the R.C.N.R. when it was disclosed he had no identification credentials

When first confronted at the police station the youth who calls himself Alewain contended he was an escaped German prisoner from Bowmanville. Later, police exploded this story and Alewain switched his alleged escapings to other prison camps, including one in Alabama, but still Belleville police are of the opinion Alewain is not telling the truth, although he insists he was shot down over England during the Nazi blitz of 1940.

"We also sent this man's finger prints and photographs to the F.B.I. in Washington and are in hopes that some light may be thrown upon his identity when we receive a reply from John Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation at Washington," added Chief Probert today. In the meantime Alewain is being held on a nominal charge of vagrancy. Yesterday in police court Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. threatened to have the youth examined by a psychiatrist if he did not co-operate with police and identify himself.

S.S. Restrictions On Advertising Modified

Toronto, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Bart G. Sullivan, regional superintendent of selective service, announced last night that restrictions on advertising for labor have been modified. He said that employers now may advertise for help with the approval of selective service which reserves the right, however, to prohibit advertising wherever there is a shortage.

Official notification by the Casualties Office in Ottawa received by relatives in various parts of Ontario, lists some of the first casualties of the Sicilian campaign. Among those reported to have been killed in action are:

Cpl. Basil Rorabeck, 25, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Rorabeck of Picton. He was born in Carleton Place and was an active hockey player.

Pte. Gordon Leavitt, 35, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, whose home was in Picton.

Pte. Fred Punchard, 25, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mrs. Punchard and the late Herbert Punchard, Picton. He was born in Suffolk, Eng. Two brothers are overseas.

Nelson L. Vaillancourt, 20, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Vaillancourt of Oshawa. He enlisted in the Ontario Regiment (Tank) at the age of 17, but was discharged when his correct age was revealed.

Former Union Organizer.

Pte. Hugh Anderson, 28, Royal Canadian Regiment, whose wife Helen lives in Hamilton and whose parents live in Guelph. He was organizer for the United Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union before enlistment at St. Catharines.

Pte. Edward Hie, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, whose wife and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hie, live in Cobourg, where he was born and educated. Also surviving are his three-year-old daughter and three sisters.

Among those reported to have been wounded in action are:

RSM. Angus Duffy Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Duffy of Belleville formerly of Trenton.

Gnr. Robert Hamilton, whose wife, Ethel, and mother, Mrs. Alice Hamilton, live in Paris. He went overseas with the 54th Battery in December, 1939.

Brothers Are Wounded.

Pte. Charles Harrington, 26, and Pte. Reginald Harrington, 21, 48th Highlanders sons of Mrs. M. A. Harrington, of Trenton. A brother Peter, 24, has been overseas three years.

Pte. Donald McPherson, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mrs. McPherson and the late Dr. A. W. McPherson. His mother lives in Peterborough.

Pte. Norman R. Bugg, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mr and Mrs. G. Bugg of Peterborough.

Pte. Robert Bennett, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bennett of Cobourg. He was born in England and lived in Port Hope and Toronto where he was educated in public school and Danforth Tech.

Picton, Aug. 11 — Prince Edward County casualties in Sicily now number five killed in action and ten wounded. All were members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. There have been at least two other members of the regiment living outside of the county killed in action, and at least fifteen more wounded. One of these is Signaller Frank Peters, whose wife, formerly Eva Morris, resides in Peterborough. He was seriously wounded.

Casualties officially reported this week gave no details. Killed in action were, Gordon Leavitt, Scoharie; Cpl. Basil Rorabeck, Picton; Cpl. Charles Lloyd, Salmon Point; with C.S.M. Charles Nutley, Picton, and Pte. Harold Lawson being reported killed last week.

Wounded were, Pte. Frank Franklin, Pte. Rex. Shannon, Cpl. Oswald Milner, C.Q.S.M. Elmer Dunkley, Sgt. Keith Sharpe, Picton; Pte. Kenneth Watkins, Cressy; Pte. Leonard VanCleaf, Wellington. Reported wounded last week were Pte. Eric Mead, Bethel, Cpl. Ivan Johnson, Cherry Valley, Pte. Kenneth Bryant, Picton.

Gordon Leavitt was reported killed on July 22nd., the day after he had marked his 35th birthday. He was born at East Lake. Surviving are his wife and young daughter, Fay; a sister, Mrs. Ray Preston, Gilead; four brothers, Howard, Leighton and Clayton of East Lake and Orval of Port Huron, Mich.

Basil Rorabeck was the 25-year-old son of Sgt. and Mrs. Arnold Rorabeck, who, with a younger brother, Charles, and a sister, Mrs. Ernest Weaver, survive. He was well known to sport fans, being a member of Bloomfield hockey teams in Junior O.H.A. and county leagues. He was born at Carleton Place and went overseas in 1939.

Cpl. Charles Lloyd, killed, was a native of Salmon Point, and is survived by four sisters and a brother, Mrs. Stanley Rankin, Salmon Point, Mrs. Victor Morgan, of Toronto, whose husband is at present taking an army course at Kingston, Mrs. Albert Norman, Picton, Mrs. James Cory, Main Duck Island, and C.S.M. Frank Lloyd, now stationed at Three Rivers, Que., since his return from overseas.

Kenneth Watkins, wounded, is the son of Donley Watkins, Cressy, and has a brother, George, overseas and a sister, Ella Watkins, in the C.W.A.C. at Halifax.

Frank Franklin, wounded, was recently given space in dispatches from Sicily, when he set up a barber shop after the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment had captured Assoro after scaling a 2,500-foot precipice. He has two brothers, Arthur and Ernest, also overseas. His wife and his mother, Mrs. Herbert Franklin, reside here.

Oswald Milner, wounded, is the son of Arthur and Mrs. Milner and went overseas in 1940. His father is a veteran of the last war.

Rex Shannon, wounded, will be recalled by hardball fans as a youthful catcher with Picton teams. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Shannon, he went overseas in 1939.

Leonard VanCleaf, wounded, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman VanCleaf, Wellington.

Elmer Dunkley, wounded, is the son of County Engineer and Mrs. John Dunkley, and his wife resides at East Lake.

Keith Sharpe, wounded, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sharpe, Picton, R. 1. His wife resides in Picton. He went overseas in July, 1940.

Lack of publication of an official casualty list is being deplored here, as many unfounded rumors are circulated.

8-Year-Old Boy Saves Lives of Two Children From Drowning

Picton (Special)—Bobby Hughes, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Hughes, Waupoos, is a hero, yet refuses to be one. He states that he is a Cub and that every Cub is expected to do a good deed every day. What Bobby did was surely a good deed for he is credited with saving the lives of two young friends. Four-year-old Ross Bongard and his young sister, Mary, were playing on a raft in Smith's Bay, off Waupoos. Ross slipped off the raft and was held up by Mary. She was beginning to slip on the wet boards and was becoming exhausted when Bobby saw their plight from shore. He waded and swam to the raft and grasped hold of the hands of the children and towed the raft to shore. The water was some feet deep and had the two younger children not been rescued at the time they were they would have been drowned.

Lieut. J. McKibbon, Wounded In Sicilian Campaign, Report

Trenton, Aug. 11—Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McKibbon, 124 Henry Street, that their son Lieut. Jack McKibbon of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has been wounded in the battle of Sicily. The extent of his injuries was not learned. Lieut. McKibbon enlisted two years ago at the age of 18 and after graduating from Brockville Officers' Training Centre was posted to Brantford Basic Training Centre where after only nine weeks he led his platoon to win drill competitions. He was recently mentioned by Ross Munro as one of those taking a leading part in the battle.

A brother of Lieut. McKibbon, Pilot Officer Nelson McKibbon of the R.C.A.F. is stationed on the West Coast and a sister Jean Clunis McKibbon is with the R.C.A.F. at Headquarters, Ottawa, Ont. Lieut. McKibbon's father, who is Collector of Customs at this port is a veteran of the Great War and was for some time a lieutenant in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment during this war until discharged because of a physical disability.

Pole Broken Off

While proceeding towards town on the Carrying Place Road about 5 p.m. Tuesday a large National Defence truck with trailer driven by LAC. John Gosson of 6 R.D. failed to make the turn at the corner of Dufferin and the trailer swung to the east side of the highway, smashed into a telephone pole, breaking it off, and tearing wires down for a considerable distance. Local police investigated.

Police Court

Twenty-six cases came before Magistrate Lloyd in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday, all of which were disposed of with the exception of two.

Four were charged with creating a disturbance and paid $7.50 each.

As the result of an accident A. Gray was fined $12.50 for having defective brakes. J. Gray was fined $12.50 for driving without a licence.

Annie Fletcher paid $4.50 for failing to observe a traffic signal.

W. Howard, B. Burbridge, Keith Garbutt all paid $2.00 for breach of the Traffic By-law.

James Vincent for reckless driving was fined $18.

Percy Dafoe charged with assaulting Bert Ryckman, inflicting grevious bodily harm was found guilty and case was enlarged for one week.

Child Suffers Severe Cuts

Picton, Aug. 11 (Special)—Tony Bailey, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Bailey, was admitted to P. E. County Hospital on Sunday afternoon. He suffered severe cuts and bruises and facial lacerations when he was hurled from a buggy to the road. The accident was caused by a run-away horse, driven by his mother . The mother and a small sister escaped serious injury when the buggy overturned.

Canadian Women As Well as English Assured of Beauty Aids

The greatest fear of the ladies may safely be laid to rest, there will be no noticeable shortage of cosmetics in Belleville during the war. For a time it seemed that the ladies would be forced to forego their favorite pastime, making themselves attractively beautiful with the aid of rouge, lipstick and powder, and a reversion to nature was imminent, but with the further release of cosmetics by the government, men must continue indefinitely before they see their lady friends and wives as they really are.

One year ago the cosmetic situation in England was drastic and English druggists, chemists over there, were consuming ninety per cent. of their stocks of aspirin tablets trying to relieve their headaches. English women made a rush to put in a sufficient supply of their favorite shades of powder and lipsticks of the most alluring shades until the chemists were completely out. The government set up a quota release to each chemist which was delivered from the manufacturers monthly and the rush began again, but only for a very short time; 60 lipsticks with 600 purchasers will not last long. Then the benevolent government finally coming to the conclusion that the war effort was suffering more from a complete lack than from time-out for repairs to the paint-jobs, shifted in their seats and lifted the embargo and now English compacts are once again filled, lipstick marks became the laundries' bane, the aspirin situation returned to normal and everyone was made happy.

IMPORTANT NEW

dard said, "Only one disappointment, which the principals, themselves, avow frankly, clouds this sixth war conference of the President and Premier. This is the absence of Premier Stalin, upon whose sturdy shoulders the main burden of the battle still falls."

The attention given to the political aspects of the situation was overshadowed by a feeling that Allied military operations will soon be forthcoming to provide the relief for which the Russians have been calling.

The dominating position of the Allies, who now hold the initiative everywhere — in the Pacific and Europe as well — was admitted in a broadcast by German radio commentator Lt.-Gen. Kurt Dietmar who told the German people, "Germany and her allies are now on the defensive."

The possibility that Germany may be defeated this year is being discussed — even though cautiously — in all quarters, and the fact that Premier Joseph Stalin has committed large armies to his present summer offensive underscores this hope.

Britain May Be Scene

Indications that Britain may be the scene of major military operations are:—

1. Reports that large areas of Britain's coastline will be barred to visitors in the near future.

2. Arrival in Britain of substantial reinforcements of fully-trained Canadian and American troops together with a great increase in the number of available air bases.

3. A noticeable influx of high-ranking Allied officers from other war theatres, together with a heavy increase in railway traffic throughout Great Britain.

Creation of a new military command even more comprehensive than the combined command in the Mediterranean for military tasks on the European mainland was suggested by the Times as a possible major objective of the Churchill-Roosevelt conference.

"The Allies have gained so much during the summer that even the widest and most far-sighted plans are in danger of being outmoded by events," the Times said.

The Daily Herald said the "time has come when Britain, America and Russia should be announcing with a single voice their program for the restoration of political liberty to Europe."

The political correspondent of the Daily Telegraph said the chief object of the Churchill-Roosevelt talks would be to "review Anglo-American war strategy in the light of the breakdown of the Fascist regime in Italy and in view of the probability of the early collapse of Italian resistance."

Called by Italy's Collapse.

Both the News-Chronicle and the Daily Sketch asserted the conference was called as a direct result of the collapse of Mussolini and his Fascist regime in Italy. The News-Chronicle quoted authoritative quarters as suggesting that invasion forces were already two to three months ahead of schedule.

Those who anticipate an attack against the European mainland from Great Britain pointed to increased sabotage reported by Belgian guerillas and the fact that Lord Leathers, Minister of Transport, was a member of Mr. Churchill's party. The presence of Lord Leathers in any parleys on war strategy, they said, emphasized the importance of the shipping question, which is vital in any offensive against Europe.

BRITISH MINISTER

Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, Adelard Godbout, Premier of Quebec and Lucien Borne, Mayor of the City of Quebec.

Mr. Churchill was accompanied by his wife and his daughter, Mary, a member of the British Auxiliary Territorial Services.

They went directly to the Citadel, the old, fortification overlooking the broad St. Lawrence where Mr. King had tea with them. Later in the evening the Canadian Prime Minister dined with Mr. and Mrs. Churchill and during the evening the two Prime Ministers discussed war topics.

A press statement from Mr. King's temporary office here last night reported that "Mr. Churchill expressed his delight at being back in Canada and spoke particularly of the Canadian participation in the Sicilian campaign.

An earlier announcement said Mr. Churchill "after his discussion with the Canadian Prime Minister will attend a conference with President Roosevelt and the combined chiefs of staff of the United States and the United Kingdom," but there was no indication where it will be held or when.

Most members of the Canadian cabinet war committee are in Quebec, including Defence Minister Ralston, Air Minister Power, Navy Minister Macdonald and Munitions Minister Howe. They held a short meeting here yesterday — probably the first time the committee has met outside Ottawa since the war started.

Quebec has been agog for a week while elaborate preparations went ahead for the momentous conferences here. Guests were turned out of the Chateau Frontenac, on the crown of Cape Diamond, the site of the old Palace of Governors of the French regime.

Newspaper correspondents were housed in the nearby Clarendon Hotel but military guards kept them away from the Chateau and the Citadel.

There was no public welcome for Mr. Churchill and his immediate party, who were whisked into the Citadel without advance notice. Not a single newspaper reporter or news cameraman was permitted to witness the arrival — an indication of the official "hush-hush" air that has been thrown around the whole conference.

Second Visit to Canada

Included in the British Prime Minister's official party were Lord Leathers, Minister of War Transport; Lord Moran, his personal physician; J. M. Martin and T. L. Rowan, secretaries, and Cmdr. C.R. Thompson, R.N., his personal assistant.

It was Mr. Churchill's second visit to Canada during the war, the first being a two-day trip to Ottawa during his conference with President Roosevelt soon after Pearl Harbor.

The Roosevelt-Churchill conference will be the sixth the two master strategists of the United Nations have held, the first being in August, 1941, off the Newfoundland coast when they drafted the Atlantic Charter.

Although it has become a practice for them to meet in times of crisis, this time they will meet while the whole complexion of the war in Europe is reaching a new and vitally important phase.

IN MEMORIAM

PATRICK — In loving memory of Doris (Darvell) Patrick, who passed away one year ago, August 11th., 1942.

She suffered patiently and long.
Her hope was bright, her faith was strong.
The peace of Jesus filled her breast
And in His arms she sank to rest.

—Fondly remembered by Dad, Brothers, and Sisters, George, Jack, Gertrude, Myrtle. All

BLAKELY — In loving memory of James Blakely, who passed away August 11th., 1942.

No one knows the silent heartaches,
Only those who have such can tell
Of the grief that is borne in silence
For the one we loved so well.

—Sadly missed by wife and Bernard. All

Problems Facing Cheese Producers Discussed By C. La Barge at Kiwanis

An appeal was made to the War Services Committee of the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon in the Quinte Hotel, Tuesday, for magazines for the troops and naval services. Kiwanians are urged to unearth all the magazines and books they can for this worthy purpose. It was shown that the commission which handles these books and magazines for the troops had handled and sorted over ten million periodicals and other reading matter in the last four years. Magazines pre-dating 1941 are not wanted.

With the annual street Carnival just two weeks away and final plans showing results from much application of time and effort on the part of the various chairmen, Kiwanian Jack White addressed the luncheon on several details still to be cleared up and introduced the information that a Gruen wristwatch will be given away each of the three nights of the carnival. Kiwanian Ted Schwab reported on the progress with arrangements for the "Miss War Worker" contest and stated that the contestants' photographs will be on display in the window of Lipson's Store from Tuesday onward to the end of the contest. Sixteen candidates for the title have been entered from five local war industry plants.

Born in Hungerford Twp.

The guest speaker for the day was Mr. Charles H. LaBarge of Ottawa. Mr. LaBarge was born in Hungerford township and a resident of Hastings County for years. He is president and general manager of the Chateau Cheese Co., a company he established himself and operated until 1929. In 1929 Mr. LaBarge sold out to Borden's Ltd., and was elected president of the reorganized firm. He had three sons in the service at one time, two of whom have been killed in action, one outside Paris and the other outside Tobruk, and one daughter is a trained nurse. Mr. LaBarge is the vice-president of the Capital Trust Company, director on the Hospital Board for 15 years, vice-president of the Soldiers' Advisory Board and vice-president of the Children's Aid Board. He is also a charter member of the Ottawa Kiwanis.

Mr. LaBarge regaled the Kiwanians with reminiscences of his past life in and around Belleville where he said he first became interested in the cheese business. His recounting of the first job he ever held was most entertaining and the foresight he displayed in remaining in the business he understood best, as he put it, instead of accepting a position with the Grand Trunk Railway in Montreal, accounts for his exemplary success. His humorous reference to former days in Belleville, saying that he could not recall the firm of Haig, McDougall & Bateman, but did recall most vividly the firm of Haig & Haig as doing good business brought out the laughter of his audience.

Mr. LaBarge remarked that the trend of events in the recent provincial elections, and the further demonstration more recently illustrated in the Federal by-election, had forced him to revise his speech to meet the conditions and reversals that it was now pared down to almost a few words: "as scanty as the Liberal party today," were his words.

Keener Competition After War

He went on to a more serious vein to discuss the problems facing the Ontario Cheese Producers. He said that, "We would always be sure of our share of the cheese business so long as our producers are careful to manufacture as economically as our neighbors or their competitors and provided they maintain the quality. Our producers are going to be faced with keener competition than they have ever had before but that a normal point will come some day. England "will be as concerned with the reconstruction of Denmark and Holland as they will be with the reconstruction of our own cheese market and it behooves our producers to put themselves in the same place as the business does when faced by keen competition."

Mr. LaBarge said that, "too often we look upon the farmer as one of us and treat him and deal with him as though he had gone to college. We have permitted him to enter into business without the proper preparation and education necessary to deal in competitive business and that until the government makes some move to educate the farmer there will be slight understanding of the business end by the producers."

Likes Danish System

"I came back from Europe", Mr. LaBarge said, "all steamed up with what I had seen in the way the farmers in Denmark were educated. Instead of having an agriculture representative stationed miles from the farmer's home they have an agricultural representative stationed in the midst of every thirty farmers and spends one day a month with each farmer helping him settle his problems and educating him for better production and results.

Every morning and evening this agent takes a sample of the milk and tests it for the percentage of butterfat, and at the end of a certain time he is able to point out to the farmer the cows which are producers and those who are boarders. This system resulted in increased production and today, or just prior to the outbreak of war and the German occupation of Denmark, the country produced twenty-five percent more milk per capita than is produced in Canada. At first this educational program was wholly financed by the government but gradually it was reduced and the farmers assumed fifty percent of the cost, and today the farmers bear the total cost willingly for the benefits they derive."

Mr. LaBarge spoke of other improvements which could be instituted in the country whereby the voting in elections could be simplified. He suggested the abolition of polls as we now know them and utilizing the Post Office organization. He concluded by saying he believed in compulsory voting: "If the voters are compelled to poll their votes and go to the polls, even if they do not understand why they are voting the first time, they will soon learn."

"A" Company of the 2nd (R) Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Bancroft, returned home this week from Connaught by motor convoy with the exception of officers who remained in camp. Most of the boys were allowed to return earlier this year on account of their desire to exercise their franchise in the recent provincial election. While at camp, the boys had a real outing and enjoyed every minute of their time. Most of the syllabus called for range work and these northern boys were keen on rifle and Bren firing. They returned really bronzed by the ten days' sun.

Wednesday in the village was very quiet despite it being voting day. No unusual stir was noticeable throughout the day until after the poles closed and then a large gathering assembled at the Conservative committee room on Hastings Street to await the election returns, which were being relayed to the room from the telephone exchange.

The past few weeks tourist influx has been quite noticeable. Many of the local resorts are taxed to the limit as are private cottages on all the lakes. Local tourist proprietors prepared as usual for the summer activities and were more than surprised to have reservations taxed to capacity and some turned nearly as many away as they have accommodated.

"A" Company of the 2nd (R) Battalion of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Bancroft, returned home this week from Connaught by motor convoy with the exception of officers who remained in camp. Most of the boys were allowed to return earlier this year on account of their desire to exercise their franchise in the recent provincial election. While at camp, the boys had a real outing and enjoyed every minute of their time. Most of the syllabus called for range work and these northern boys were keen on rifle and Bren firing. They returned really bronzed by the ten days' sun.

Wednesday in the village was very quiet despite it being voting day. No unusual stir was noticeable throughout the day until after the poles closed and then a large gathering assembled at the Conservative committee room on Hastings Street to await the election returns, which were being relayed to the room from the telephone exchange.

The past few weeks tourist influx has been quite noticeable. Many of the local resorts are taxed to the limit as are private cottages on all the lakes. Canadian Troops Praised

Canadians at home and in England have watched with interest the progress of the Canadian force in Sicily associated with the famous Eighth Army and General Montgomery. Recent news has touched upon the smashing of the Mount Etna line which has been called a triumph for the Canadian division. In the words of Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, "the Canadian-British drive hammered home near the plateau city of Adrano had broken the German Mount Etna defence line dead in the centre. The last 24 hours have been the most dramatic period in this sector as major enemy resistance suddenly collapsed and the Etna line folded up."

This was in a delayed dispatch dated August 7th.

Canadians know that the Canadian Army in Britain under command of General McNaughton has developed during its long and thorough training into a most powerful and mobile army, noted for its armament. General McNaughton has described it as "a dagger pointed at the heart of Berlin."

Dispatches have told of the concentrated power of the artillery of the Canadians in some of the earlier battles in which the Germans who were taken prisoner were found speechless.

General Montgomery has praised the Canadians on their share in the operations in the Sicilian invasion. In the latest operations at Adrano, according to Munro, "for the Germans the game was up. Under cover of spasmodic artillery fire and considerable mortar fire they left their strong plateau positions and fled . . . It was a momentous day here. It is hard to realize the full significance. The mountain squeeze play ends a phase of the first Canadian campaign. "It has been a good effort on all counts. The First Division has won the praise of Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander of the Eighth Army and the respect of the British and American troops."

The campaign has been of more than usual interest to the people of this section for men of the Hastings and Prince Edward Reg't. have been engaged in it, playing their share in the victories which are steadily driving the enemy backward. Of their courage and effective service the people of these parts are very proud.

Ross Munro's news accounts of the battles in which the various regiments have taken part are graphic pictures of conflict as they show Canadians in action.

Holidays

"We came to the conclusion that it was good business to give the people holidays," said Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council in the British Government, the other day in a statement made at Ottawa, where he has been. He told how the good war news was having the result of a rush of people flocking to the beaches and watering places in Britain.

How steadily and stoutly the British people have worked in the war is clearly known to the world.

Holidays have the effect of restoring health, spirit and morale through a change of activity during a rest or through new surroundings.

The heart of Britain has been beating healthy music as it continued to beat healthy music during the blitz period. In these days it beats the healthy music of confidence and victory. The tonic effect of Allied victories is felt. And there is a tonic too in holidays for the sense of freedom they inspire fits in well with the spirit of the people at large.

Shrinking Nazi Air Force

Less and less the Nazi Luftwaffe or air force has been felt over Europe. Allied raids of great power and destructiveness have struck German war industrial cities and made them desolate and the Luftwaffe has not been able to prevent them being smashed. German planes are destroyed in good numbers when they dare to face the Allied invaders. On the Russian front the attrition of the Hermann Goering air force proceeds apace.

The might of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. and the American air power has conducted systematic bombing of German war potential plants, airplane plants, and prevented effective raids over Britain. Plants which could have turned out planes for Goering's air force are in rubble.

More and more as the Luftwaffe weakens, more and more the Allied air armies grow and the proportion becomes greatly multiplied in favor of the Allies. It is said that now the German air force is losing planes at about twice the rate of production. The more the Hun air power declines much greater becomes the relative power of the air fleets of th United Nations over the Luftwaffe.

Axis plane losses are reported at 1,202 in July on the European, African and Middle East fronts while the Russians have shot down 2,302 Axis planes, a total destruction of 3,504 in thirty-one days, a rate of loss which Germany cannot endure for her plane production is thought to be at most 20,000 a year or more probably two-thirds of that, while Allied production is many times greater.

Britain and the United States are downing Nazi planes in the air and destroying the possibility of the manufacture of others.

The Allied aim is to make the difference so great between the United Nations' and German Luftwaffe's striking power that in time the Huns may be left utterly defenceless from the air.

Hitler's "fortress" of Europe is neither invulnerable on land or from the sea and from the air. Allied raiders pass over its bastions to attack its industrialized cities and its armament and airplane plants.

Pine Sap Gas Runs Buses,

Gasoline distilled from pine tree sap will run motor buses in Fukien Province, China. Discovery that a crude oil and gasoline substitute could be obtained from pine tree roots was made some years ago by a young Chinese professor of Fukien Christian University in Shaowu. The Fukien Transportation Company arranged for large-scale tests at government expense. In a year results were so successful that the provincial government financed production. The university has made other scientific contributions to render Fukien, which is one of the most isolated provinces in China, self-sustaining. It has improved raising and caring for tea plants and found new ways for processing the tea for export after the war. It has planted 13,000,000 pine trees and tung oil seedlings.

Men Catching Up

(Edmonton Journal)

Not so long ago there was a large surplus of men in Edmonton over the other sex. The girls could then pick and choose as they could not do in older communities. But this state of affairs has been gradually coming to an end, though the process was arrested temporarily by the arrival of members of the armed forces in large numbers. The civic census shows that among permanent residents of this city there are only 675 more men than women over 21 and that there are approximately a thousand more girls than boys under that age.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Noyes of Oswego, N.Y., are visiting his sister, Mrs. Sargeant, Frank Street.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E O'Flynn left today for New York City. They will spend some time at the seashore.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mott are spending a holiday in Hamilton and will attend the Centennial celebration in that city.

40 YEARS AGO

AUGUST 11TH., 1903.

Mr. Ross Blye of Trenton has accepted a position in Mr. Alex Ray's drug store here.

Owen Roblin, postmaster at Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County died on August 8th. He was in his 97th year and was postmaster at that place since 1845 and was probably the oldest postmaster in Canada. He received his commission from Earl Lonsdale Postmaster General of England as there was no postmaster general in Canada at that time. He was a justice of the peace and a great uncle of Mr. R. P. Roblin, Premier of Manitoba.

The Belleville Rolling Mills which have been idle for a long time passed into the hands of new owners today. The owners now are Dr. Alf. Wills, Mr. Jackson of Paris France, and Mr. C. Barbonneau. The two latter are Frenchmen and Dr. Wills is a Belleville man. The deal was made with Messrs. Kirkwood and McKinnon. The capital of the syndicate is $250,000. It is expected that the mills will soon be in operation. The full capital is available to conduct the business of the syndicate. Dr. Wills and Mr. Carbonneau met in the Yukon.

Mr. John H. Holden, Front of Sidney, has sold to Mr. J. Hagerman of Sidney Township, the purebred Ayrshire calf bull, "Sir Joh A.", for the sum of $200.

Large crowds stand and watch the workmen engaged in building the roadway for the Grand Junction Railway on Pinnacle Street.

The Rev. John Douse, pastor of Bridge Street Wesleyan Methodist Church ten years ago, preached in that church on Sunday last. He preaches as forcibly as ever.

The Merryweather steam fire engine ordered by the town is daily expected to arrive. Delivery is late.

Ludwigshafen And Mannheim Pasted by R.A.F.

London, Aug. 11 — (CP Cable)—Mannheim and Ludwigshafen must have taken a real pounding from Canadian and British-manned bombers during Monday night.

Canadian air crews returning to their various stations said the fires caused by the bombs were so large the glow could be seen more that 100 miles on the journey home.

Cloud over the target made it difficult to determine accurately the amount of damage caused by the bomb loads.

An R.C.A.F. communique called the attack "heavy." It added that R.C.A.F. fighters on intruder operations during the night attacked airfields and railways in France, destroying one enemy aircraft in combat.

Later the air ministry announced this plane was destroyed by F/O F. W. Hallwood of Winnipeg and his plane-mate, an English Sergeant, in a Mosquito plane.

In the Mannheim-Ludwigshafen raid two Canadian bombers were lost.

Sgt. Maurice Renaud, mid-upper gunner from Victoriaville, Que., said after landing that he had counted 50 separate fires as he left the target and when 30 miles away he could still see them spreading.

Sgt. Mike Wood of Greenbank, Ont., was among crews reaching the target early and it was then a mass of dull yellow fires "turning to bright red before we left."

P/O Lindsay Vogan, who helped his squadron batter Mannheim in Wellingtons before it was converted to Halifaxes, considered the defences were much weaker than during earlier attacks.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Foods That Prevent Inflammation of the Gums—Gingivitis

A few years ago the reading public was told that inflammation of the gums (gingivitis) was a forerunner of pyorrhoea and that once pyorrhoea occurred, all the teeth should be removed.

Fortunately our dentists immediately warned their patients that gum inflammation was a sign of some disturbance of the body but it did not mean that pyorrhoea was bound to follow gingivitis. Also that both gingivitis and pyorrhoea could be cured or corrected by proper treatment. Gingivitis is an inflammation of the soft tissues around the teeth; it may be caused by some general disturbance in the body.

In the Journal of the American Dental Association, Dr. Willa Yeretsky, Grand Rapids, Michigan, states that many teeth need never have been lost at all; they were sacrificed because it was thought that inflamed gums caused pyorrhoea-pus in the gums.

Dr. Yeretsky outlines the causes of gingivitis—poor fitting, plates impacting of food at certain places because of faulty contact points between upper and lower teeth, formation of calculus which is deposited from the saliva, the digestive juice of the mouth. As calculus is the chief "local" cause of gingivitis and cannot be deposited on the teeth if the number of organisms in the mouth is kept low, it can be seen how necessary it is to keep the mouth as clean as possible.

Dr. Yeretsky points out that it is eating the wrong foods that causes the saliva to deposit calculus and set up inflammation of the gums. The gums themselves are not receiving the right kind of nourishment to prevent gingivitis.

The diet outlined to keep the gums in a healthy condition is:

Daily: One half pint of orange or tomato or grapefruit juice.

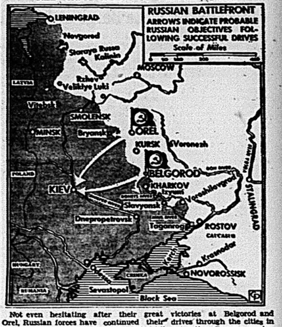
Twice Daily: Protein in the form of meat, eggs, fish, or cheese. Four or five eggs, at least, should be eaten every week. One portion of the following vegetables lettuce, cabbage, watercress, swiss chard, Brussels sprouts, turnip greens, cauliflower, kale, broccoli, beet greens.

One Daily: One or more of the following vegetables: carrots, beets, peas, beans, corn, pumpkin, onions, cucumber, squash, turnips, artichokes, asparagus.

Carbohydrates one at each meal to fill balance of diet: bread, potato, noodles, macaroni, cereals, with fortified bread, or whole grain cereal at two of the meals.

One pint of milk every day; may be in form of cottage cheese, cream soups, or custard. Fifteen drops of cod liver oil daily. Any amount of fruit.

RED ARMY KEEPS UP VICTORY PACE



Not even hesitating after their great victories at Belgorod and Orel, Russian forces have continued their drives through the cities in pursuit of the bitterly fighting, but still retreating German armies. Light arrows on this map show the probable objectives of the renewed Soviet assaults on the losing Nazis.

SCRIPTURES SPEAK

"Where the Scriptures speak, we speak; and where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent."

Who first said that?

Thomas Campbell (1763-1854), a noted Protestant clergyman, was the author of that famous quotation.

He and his son, Alexander Campbell, were the real founders of the sect known as the Christian Church, or the Disciples of Christ (and also as the Campbellites) although they renounced all denominationalism and always contended that they were not the founders of a religious denomination in the accepted sense of the term.

Thomas Campbell emigrated from Ireland to western Pennsylvania in 1807, and in 1809 he called a religious meeting at the house of Abraham Altars in Washington county.

He made an eloquent address in which he advocated a return to the simple teaching of the Bible and the abandonment of everything in religion for which Scriptural warrant could not be produced.

In Campbell's opinion the Bible could be relied on as a complete and sufficient moral and spiritual guide.

He then announced the rule upon which he thought that he and those associated with him should act.

"That rule, my highly respected hearers," declared the clergyman, "is this, that where the Scriptures speak, we speak; and where the Scriptures are silent, we are silent."

This meeting was the actual beginning of the Campbellite reformation and it resulted in the Christian Association of Washington County, which was organized "for the sole purpose of promoting simple evangelical Christianity" and which was the forerunner of the group of Christians who refer to themselves as the Disciples of Christ.

POST-WAR PLANNER

"SURE there will be changes after the war . . . some are overdue. But I'm no robot. Whatever our post-war plans, I still want to see hard work rewarded and dividends paid on brains and initiative. I want the privilege of going into business for myself if I choose. That's why I am building a nest egg now at The Royal Bank of Canada."

Canada has grown to rich nationhood through the courage, resourcefulness and initiative of individual citizens. These qualities must be preserved in the challenging days ahead.

Comrade Camken, of Belleville Ladies' Auxiliary, Canadian Legion visited Picton branch on August 8th. She was accompanied by Comrade Gulliver and a very interesting meeting was held. Comrade Camken as zone representative, gave a very inspiring talk and was more than pleased to learn of the wonderful work Picton branch has done and are still doing. The president of the Men's Legion also gave a very interesting address. The members thanked Comrade Camken in the usual manner and remarked how happy they were to have the zone representative pay them a visit. A short address was then read and a small token of appreciation was presented to Comrade Camken after which she thanked the ladies. Comrade Gulliver also gave a little talk and remarked how delighted she was to meet Picton comrades again. The meeting closed with the National Anthem after which light refreshments were served. Comrade Camken and Comrade Gulliver both thanked their fellow comrades for the wonderful hospitality afforded them.

A pale yellow moon, dancing in the sky over the placid waters of the Bay of Quinte and flooding the rooms of the Country Club house with shimmering midsummer loveliness, created a beautiful setting for the very gay occasion of the St. Michael's Hospitality dance on Tuesday evening. A large number of airmen and girls were in attendance and contributed to making the function the success that it was. The "Melody Makers" Orchestra furnished delightful music for the merrymakers and spot dance winners were Doris Peets and Aircraftman Don Gardiner, of Hamilton and Airwoman Viola Selnes of Alberta and Aircraftman Don Flood, of Woodstock. Guests of the evening were a group of airwomen from Mountain View who reported a most enjoyable time. A game of consequences was conducted and created a great deal of fun and laughter.

Do What Your Doctor Does If Child Is Listless

Because the tongue is the upper end of the stomach and bowels, it is usually the first thing a doctor looks at when he examines a sick child. He knows that a coated tongue and bad breath is a danger signal —a warning of an upset condition below, which may lead to real illness.

Don't you take chances—look at your child's tongue and check the breath every day! And at the first sign of bad odor on the breath or a coated tongue, give Children's Own Tablets. Small, pleasant-tasting tablets made especially for youngsters from runabout age to 15 years, they are wonderfully effective in helping to clean out harmful wastes and sweeten sour, upset stomachs. No drastic weakening flush-out action like many old-fashioned laxatives have.

WEDDINGS

TUPPER—INNES

Bridge St. United Church parsonage was the scene of an interesting wedding on Aug. 7th, at 11 a.m., when Ella Eileen Innes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Innes, Black Creek, was married to Charles Andrew Tupper, son of Mrs. Bertha Tupper, Tweed, Ont. Dr. Myers officiated.

Given in marriage by Mr. Harry Lee, the bride wore a tailored turquoise blue, spun rayon suit with white accesories and a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee, Belleville, were the attendants.

Pte. and Mrs. Tupper left for a trip to Toronto and Tweed.

Pte. Tupper is with the R.C.O.C., stationed at the East Coast. His bride will continue to reside at home for the present.

GRAY—NOAH

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Aug. 4, at West Flamboro Manse, West Flamboro when Rev. J. S. Ross united in marriage Helen Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah of Bloomfield, Ont., to Spr. Wilfred Gordon Gray, Petawawa, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gray, Burlington, Ont.

The bride was lovely in a blue silk jersey dress, white felt hat and white accessories. She wore a corsage of Better Time roses and sweet peas.

The bride was attended by Norine Gray, sister of the groom, who looked charming in a pink chiffon dress and black accessories. She wore a corsage of Better Time roses and sweet peas. The groom was supported by Sam Minnes, Burlington Beach.

The couple left for a short trip to points North.

WALKER—COUSINS

The Southam Inn, Belleville, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Friday evening, Aug. 6, when Rev. James A. Payton officiated at the marriage of Frances Marguerite, youngest daughter of Mr. Wilkie Cousins of Picton, to Wilson W. Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil W. Walker, of Toronto.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was very pretty in a street-length gown of white lace, a small white flower hat with short veil and matching shoes and gloves. She wore a lovely corsage of roses.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Ross McMahon, sister of the bride, wore sky blue silk jersey with white accessories. Her corsage was pink roses.

FO. R. McMahon, I.T.S., Belleville, was best man.

Later the happy couple left on a trip to Toronto, the bride travelling in a smart brown suit with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Kingston.

FRAUTS—CHILDERHOSE

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Rene's White House in Brighton, on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 3rd, of Iva Evelean, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Childerhose of Trenton and Raymond Alexander Frauts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Frauts, Trenton.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. McKee, of Grace United Church, Trenton. The wedding music was played by Mrs. McKee.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Joseph Childerhose, of Gananoque, wore a street-length dress of turquoise blue triple sheer and lace, white flower hat with shoulder-length veil and white accessories. Her corsage was pink roses, bouvardia and maiden hair fern.

The bride was attended by Mrs. J. McMaster, sister of the bridegroom, and was wearing a street-length ensemble of midnight blue sheer and corsage of roses and baby breath. Mr. Lorne Childerhose, brother of the bride, was best man.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served. The table, decorated with pink and white snapdragons, was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake with a miniature bridal couple on top. The bride's mother received in a two-piece ensemble of British navy crepe with white accessories. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing pastel blue sheer with white accessories.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was an Evening in Paris set and to the best man, a gold cigarette case.

Later the young couple left for Muskoka and points north, the bride wearing a green alpaca suit with matching accessories.

Out-of-town guests were present from Gananoque, Hamilton, Toronto, Camp Borden and Belleville. —Bancroft Times please copy.

HP RATION-GRAM

Cheese Roulades

In France they are called "ROULADES" . . . Here they are known as "cheese and meat balls". But anywhere, when made according to this new wartime recipe, they're delicious.

Blend 1 small package of plain cream cheese with 1 teaspoon of H. P. Sauce, 1 teaspoon of minced onion, ¼ teaspoon of salt and a sprinkle of pepper. Spread this mixture on 12 thin slices of bologna. Roll each slice tightly by itself and secure with a toothpick.

Buy a bottle of H. P. today and try this new economy dinner. There is never "flat taste" when H. P. Sauce is used. Serve H. P., that grand old British thick sauce—also with soup, stew, salad, sandwiches, fish and fowl.

MOON—MANTLE

Gladioli formed the colorful setting for a very quiet but lovely wedding which was solemnized in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Monday, August 9th, at three o'clock when Corinne Yvonne Mantle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Mantle became the bride of Sgt. J. W. H. Moon, R.C.A., of Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H Moon, of Cobourg, formerly of Belleville, the Rev H. S. Graham performing the ceremony. Professor W. E. Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O., presided at the console of the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in a two-piece street-length ensemble of exquisite ice-blue moire with matching accessories and arm bouquet of pale yellow rosebuds.

Mrs. Russell Dougherty, as matron of honor, was wearing an attractive dress of daffodil yellow with matching hat and white accessories. She was carrying a Colonial bouquet of summer flowers.

The bride's sister, Mavis Mantle, attended her as bridesmaid and was attired in a particularly striking shell pink gown with matching hat and white accessories. A Colonial bouquet of mixed summer flowers completed her costume.

Sgt. Michael Prescesky, R.C.A., of Kingston, was groomsman and Howard Mantle, brother of the bride, acted as usher.

For the buffet luncheon at the home of the bride's parents, the rooms were tastefully decorated with garden flowers in multi-colored hues. The bride's mother was attired in beige crepe with brown accessories and corsage of Delight roses. The groom's mother was wearing rose figured crepe with navy accessories and corsage of blue batchelor buttons.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and points west, the bride selected a two-tone ensemble of yellow and lavender with navy redingote and accessories and corsage of yellow roses.

GANTON—REDNER

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 7, when Rev. E. Farnsworth united in marriage Muriel Marie, youngest daughter of Mrs. J. E. Redner and the late J. Edgar Redner to LAC. Earl Robert Ganton, R.C.A.F., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Ganton, Jasper Park, Alberta.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, looked charming in an ensemble of Queen's blue sheer and lace with white hat and accessories. She carried Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Phyllis Frost, cousin of the bride, attended her and was dressed in dove blue crepe with white hat and accessories and carried Johnana Hill roses. Sgt. Robt. G. Simpson, R.C.A.F., brother-in-law of the bride, acted as groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. After a wedding trip to Montreal and points east, Mr. and Mrs. Ganton will make their home in Belleville. The bride chose for travelling a suit of midnight blue with black hat and accessories.

UNIONVALE W. I.

The August meeting of Unionvale W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Burkett with forty-six in attendance including guests from Quinte View and Pine Grove, local institutes.

With the president, Mrs. M. Sine in the chair, the meeting opened with community singing. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Mrs. K. Paul gave a report on the bale of clothing to be sent to Russia. Mrs. B. Bush took charge of the following program: A solo by Mrs. E. Hough with ukelele accompaniment; a reading by Miss Barbara Carr of Quinte View; a topic, "Post-War Planning For Peace," very ably given by Mrs. M. Sine; a guitar solo by Lois Bush; a quiz conducted by Mrs. George Morrow brought the program to a close. The National Anthem was sung. Lunch was served by the tea hostesses.

The Marry-Go-Round

Falling Out of Love.

To a man falling in love is like falling into a cellar in the dark. He doesn't know what has happened to him, nor just where he is.

But, falling out of love is as painful as coming out from under the anaesthetic after an appendicitis operation. It is like hearing the bugler in the middle of a pleasant dream or being awakened out of a sound sleep by the telephone at midnight.

The harrowing thing about it is that it is not sudden, but a gradual awakening Most love-affairs are not "broken off"; they just slowly sag in the middle and come apart from their own weight. The pain is long-drawn-out.

The girl can't quite admit it at first; she is too dazed. But when she at least discovers that the curtain is going down on her romance, she wants to end it with a dramatic scene and a grand finale. A man prefers to sneak out quietly through the wings before the drama is over. The Big Scene idea does not appeal to him. He doesn't even want soft music.

When she discovers that love is actually dead, a girl likes to give it a beautiful burial service with flowers, organ music and dim purple lights. Tears are a big relief. But a man just flings a shoveful of earth on the coffin and hurries off in search of consolation or distraction. Or else he tries to drown his memories in a sea of cocktails. This takes the pain from the heart to the head, where it wears off in a hangover.

Philosophy is a splendid parachute, which lets you down slowly but more easily, from your flight to the clouds.

Breaking of a REAL love-affair of long standing is like having a tooth extracted you do not feel the pain until the anaesthetic of anger or jealousy wears off—and then you suddenly realize that what is gone has left an awful hollow.

Those little light loves are different. They are like birch canoes and you are lucky, if somebody "rocks the boat", before you get into deep water.

The "morning after" love's intoxication, most people think that they want to die. But as soon as the heartache (or headache) subsides a little, they begin to look around for an antidote—or another stimulant, in the person of an attractive, flattering man or a sympathetic girl.

Fortunately, just as you think you are going to die, because of a lost heart-interest, a shattered romance or a wrecked love—another love comes along and interrupts you, and before you know it, you are "taking of" for the rosy clouds, again.

Oh well, there is always the good, old parachute—philosophy!

The Chateau Frontenac

Internationally famous as a world crossroads, a place where the travellers of sea lanes and rail lines have congregated for almost half a century, the Chateau Frontenac, one of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's finest hostelries, has established a world-wide reputation. It's popularity and fame date from December 17, 1893, when its doors were first thrown open to the public.

The Chateau Frontenac was constructed after the design of the late Bruce Price on the site of the Chateau St. Louis, official residence of the early French governors and was named after Louis de Buade, Comte de Frontenac, and governor of New France. Many interesting remembrances of early Canadian history including the citadel, and the Plains of Abraham, are located near the Chateau Frontenac, and the Norman-like lines of the Chateau itself blend admirably with the old-world history of the Ancient Capital.

Used by Royal Couple

It was at Quebec that Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth first set foot on Canadian soil to begin the Royal Tour in 1939, and it was at the Chateau Frontenac that they attended their first Canadian social function, a banquet, given in their honor by the Governor General. Their Majesties also availed themselves of Chateau Frontenac facilities during their stay in Quebec City. Other notables who have been guests at the Chateau include, the Duke of Windsor, when he was Prince of Wales, the late Duke of Kent, Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States and the King and Queen of Siam.

Enlarged Several Times

The Chateau Frontenac, as originally constructed in 1893 was a far cry from the contemporary, majestic edifice that dominates the Quebec skyline. Keeping pace with its growing popularity and the expanding volume of tourist traffic, the Chateau was enlarged by the Canadian Pacific first in 1904 and subsequently in 1906, 1916 and 1923, while additional major improvements were effected in 1926.

On January 14, 1926, the old wing of the Chateau was destroyed by fire and one of the most serious losses of the famous hotel was the destruction of the Habitant, or French-Canadian suite in which had been gathered together a most interesting collection of old Canadian furniture dating back to the days of the French regime in this country. The suite was refurnished after the reconstruction of the wing which immediately followed the fire.

French Chateau Design

The design of the Chateau is in the spirit of the Chateaux of the 16th century France and originally furnished a structure of moderate size, well planned for the comfort and entertainment of its guests and eminent in its purity of style. Additions that have been made from time to time by other architects during the expansion of the Chateau's facilities have adhered to the style of the original building.

Exclusive of all public rooms, and including a large number of two and three room suites, the Chateau Frontenac houses 723 rooms.

6th Tyendinaga

6th Tyendinaga — A pleasant time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton on the evening of Aug. 5th when about two hundred relatives, friends and neighbors gathered to honor their daughter Olive and husband. The first on the program was a very noisy serenade on the lawn by the young people. An appropriate address was read by Miss Annie Clare. The number of lovely and useful gifts showed the esteem of Olive's many friends. Both Olive and Clare made suitable replies thanking everyone for the gifts and inviting all to visit them. The remainder of the evening was spent in social activities. Lunch was served and all departed for their homes after wishing the bride and groom happiness and prosperity in their home.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Answers to Wedding Questions of the Summer Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Do I, the bride-to-be, have to pay for the dress of my attendant? (I am having only one attendant.)

2. My mother has a very good-looking 2-piece black street-length dress with light-pink accessories. Would this be correct for her to wear? Would this dress answer just as well as a navy-blue dress with white accessories? Or must she wear a dress of pastel shade? (Our budget is limited.) It is to be an informal wedding, and I am going to wear a floor-length white taffeta dress with finger-tip veil.

3. We will be married either at 4.30 or 5 o'clock. Would it be correct for my fiance to wear a tuxedo?

4. I am having a 3-tier wedding cake. Please advise the correct cutting of the cake.

—G. W.

1. No, your attendant is expected to pay for all the details of her costume .. even though it is you who plans what she is to wear.

2. Black is too sombre a color for your mother to wear at your wedding, the navy-blue dress with white accessories would be more suitable.

3. For your informal wedding the groom may wear a dark blue business suit. It isn't proper for him to wear a tuxedo .. before 6 p.m.

4. You, the bride, cut the first slice of cake (from the bottom tier) and divide it with the bridegroom .. as evidence that you and he will share everything, good and bad, through life! Then you may, if you wish, cut the other slices for the guests, or a servant or caterer's assistant may cut the other slices, or you may ask a friend to take on this responsibility. At a buffet, the guests may cut it themselves.

Starting Off With "I"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Why shouldn't one begin a letter with "I"? I think it's quite natural to start a letter with "I" if you wish to, and have often wondered why this rule is so often quoted.

— Cornelia.

I agree with you completely that it quite often is most natural to begin a letter with "I" .. for example, "I was so glad to have your letter saying that you arrived home safely and that the trip was fairly comfortable." No one is justified in criticising such a letter-beginning. You may forget about this so-called "rule" about not beginning a letter with "I" .. it's only fuddy-duddy old-fashionedness, and quite unreasonable.

Correct Clothes for Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance is a lieutenant in the army, and so is his best man. At our semi-formal in mid-August would it be proper for my father and the civilian ushers to wear white flannel trousers and dark blue jackets, or would white jackets and dark trousers be more appropriate? (My gown has a lace bodice and a marquisette skirt, with no train, and my attendant's gown will also be of marquisette.)

— Josephine.

Your father and the civilian ushers may properly wear dark business suits at your semi-military wedding, or for a mid-summer wedding they may correctly wear white linen suits, or dark blue coats and white or dark-grey trousers.

I. T. S. Take Distinct Edge In Softball Finals by Taking Reliance For 2nd Straight Time

Pounce on Bawden in Eighth for Two Runs and Ball Game

SCORE IS 5-2

It was a good softball game up until the eighth when the No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" got to Johnnie Bawden for four solid base blows and two runs and that was enough to give the Flyers a clean-cut 5 to 2 win over Reliance in the second game of the City Softball League finals at the Exhibition Park last evening. Now the final series for the league title stands at two games to nothing for the Airmen as they enjoy a marked edge in their best-in-seven series that continues Thursday night when a loss for Reliance would be close to curtains.

Despite the fact the score was rather even for seven frames before the Flyers unleashed their torrid eighth inning attack, the Airmen held a distinct edge in all departments. They out-hit Reliance 12 to 10, five of the winners' base blows being of the extra base nature. They out-fielded them for good measure and then scored four earned runs, while the losers failed to chalk up a single earned run off the Flyers' new moundsman, Steve Borovitch, erstwhile Detroit mound ace, who recently joined the R.C.A.F. and was posted to the local Initial Training School over the weekend. Johnnie Bawden was again Skipper Pryke's choice to subdue the Airmen, but his team mates kicked in with a quartette of miscues as the veteran Belleville hurler was touched for two triples, three doubles and five singles. The Reliance failed to register a single extra base blow off Borovitch, the straight-arm pitcher from Michigan.

Reliance Opens Scoring

Reliance opened the scoring in the second when Cy Barriage beat out a bunt and raced around to third on Ethier's hit and the latter stole second unmolested. Barriage scored on a passed ball, Ethier taking third. On an identical same pitch Ethier tried to score but when he failed to slide in home Kerr threw him out at the plate for an easy killing that robbed Reliance of a possible run. The Airmen evened matters in their half of the second as Kerr doubled, went to third on Mullins' single and scored on Bancroft's infield out. The Airmen moved ahead in the third when Muldoon singled, advanced on Daniels' sacrifice and scored on two subsequent errors by Tuttle and Htnn respectively. Re- Tuttle and Henn respectively. Re- to tie the knot in the top half of the fifth when Tuttle, Jim Barriage and Henn all hit safely in succession, the latter two beating out bunts to cram the base lines. St. Louis forced Tuttle at the plate for a second out and Green waited for four balls and J. Barriage strolled in with the tying run on the walk. Green and Whalen gave life to the Reliance in the eighth, but Bancroft's stellar fielding of Cy Barriage's liner halted the last rally of the Reliance. A triple by Daniels and Gignac's single gave the Flyers their third run in the bottom half of the fifth.

Pounced on Bawden

Not satisfied with a one-run lead the Airmen pounced on Bawden for four hits and two runs to cinch the piece in their half of the eighth. Mullins opened with a triple, Bancroft followed with a double and although Bawden struck out pinch-hitter Hobson and himself tossed out Borovitch, Muldoon and Daniels singled in succession and the ball game was all over.

Borovitch retired the Reliance in order in the sixth and ninth, while Bawden turned the same trick in the seventh. J. Barriage, Green, Cy Barriage and Ethier stood up defensively for the losers, but it was player like Muldoon at short, Bancroft in centre, Mullins and Borovitch himself that played sensational defensive ball for the winning Flyers, who looked much the better club and deserved the night's honors.

Daniels with a triple, double and single in four tries paced all hitters, while Mullins followed with a triple and single, as only McKay went hitless for the Flyers. Jim and Cy Barriage wielded the most potent sticks for Reliance, getting two singles each.

GAMBLE BATTING HERO FOR LEAFS AS THEY WIN TWO

Toronto Increases Margin and Looks Cinch to Capture Pennant

BEARS BLANKED

By The Associated Press

There have been times this season when Gabby Hartnett's red face has been even redder than usual.

His International League Jersey City Giants have been in the cellar most of the year and right now they have a record of 45 victories and 68 defeats by virtue of a tiny rally during the last month.

However, the Little Giants lost a twin bill to Toronto last night and Hartnett will be more than eager to get a look at the $10,000 Passaic, N. J. high school shortstop, Dick Lajeski.

The youngster, who still has a year to go in high school, is rated an outstanding fielder and his .490 prep school batting average includes numerous extra-base blows.

Hits of any kind would have helped the Jerseys yesterday. They got only five in the opening defeat off Tom Ananicz, who stifled them, 8-2. They hammered Luke Hamlin for seven in the nightcap but lost, 4-1. Lee Gamble was the batting hero for the winners.

Baltimore also won two games, turning the trick by invading Montreal while Buffalo and Newark shared their bargain attraction and Rochester scored three runs in the ninth inning to trim Syracuse, 5-4.

Jack Tising blanked the Bears, 1-0, in the first game but the Newark nine exploded for seven runs in the third inning of the afterpiece to run off with a 10-3 triumph. Joe Page, who hurled for Newark, also blasted out three of the 16 safeties.

Steve Gromek bested Lloyd Dietz, late of the National League, 2-1, in the first Baltimore-Montreal game and the second game was decided when Bob Chipman of the Royals weakened in the eighth and permitted three hits, issued a walk and saw the Orioles helped along by an error. The combination meant four runs and Baltimore finally won out, 5-1.

HE'S A DADDY.

No wonder Ralph (Highpockets) McCabe is smiling. He's the daddy of a ten-pound baby son. Ralph, who was farmed out to the Albany Senators of the Eastern League by the Toronto Maple Leafs last month, recently returned to Canada and joined the Canadian Active Army, but later was rejected by his medical board as physically unfit. It was his second such rejection within a year. He immediately viewed his son and heir and returned to his chores of pitching for the Albany Senators, who are today in second place in their league.

Toronto, Aug. 11 — (CP)—Those Highland Scots of Cape Breton take their boxing seriously and before the war they produced many a grand scrapper. Many of these now are in the Armed Forces and one is Johnny Nemis of New Waterford, newly appointed boxing instructor for Army ringmen in the Halifax area. Johnny started in the ring in 1920 and won the Maritimes welterweight and middleweight titles before he retired in 1939 after 278 professional fights. Nemis studied boxing and physical culture under Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Jimmy De Forrest and Sam Langford, the old Boston tar-baby who himself came from Nova Scotia — at Weymouth.

The Sport Chute:

Rann Matthison of the Vancouver News-Herald, a former star at basketball and lacrosse, thinks the day of the all-round athlete is past because of the trend toward specialization. He recalls Hop Wilkie of New Westminster played on Canadian championship teams in three different sports, basketball, lacrosse and soccer, and says he doesn't think that record will ever be equalled.

Incidentally:

Chances are better now that New Westminster Salmonbellies will show up in the national lacrosse final again this year. Salmonbellies, leading the British Columbia intercity league, have induced the veterans Ed Downey and Pete Meehan to turn out for the final drive ... apparently that spring enthusiasm for a Montreal return to big-time football has waned. Baz O'Meara of the Montreal Star says "It doesn't look as though we will have better than intermediate rugby around here this fall."...Eddie Gillis, coach of the Army team in the Halifax Senior Baseball League, has been discharged from the service. A medical examination showed Eddie had suffered a fractured pelvis in a Cape Breton mine accident in 1938. He was one of the Maritimes' best-known athletes.

Athletes at War:

Don Willson of Orillia, Ont., has won his wing as an Air Gunner, first member of last season's Toronto R.C.A.F. hockey team to graduate into Air Crew...Vancouver has always produced a good share of Canada's best tennis talent. A couple of years ago two of the best in prospect at the coast were Wally and Gordon Walker. Both now are in the R.C.A.F. Wally has been commissioned as an Air Gunner and Gordon is training as a navigator.

LET'S ALL DO MORE TO WIN THE WAR

BEFORE THE WAR: Piling the family into the car to go for a drive, or a picnic, was lots of fun.

TODAY: Gasoline is too valuable to waste on pleasure-driving. A picnic in your back-yard can still be loads of fun for the whole family.

THE MORE WE'RE IN IT THE QUICKER WE'LL WIN IT!

Our boys overseas are certainly not having any picnic. They have sacrificed plenty for us. Here, at home, we should cheerfully accept every sacrifice we are asked to make to help get this war over . . . and won! Saving gas is one of them. After all, there's plenty of fun to be had in our own back-yard!

SON OF VOLOMITE LIKELY TO WIN HAMBLETONIAN

Corn-Tassel Derby Will be Raced at Empire City Track

EXPECT 25,000

By Sid Feder
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 11—(AP)—The corn-tassel derby comes to town today for the first time in its 18-year history, and the chances are one of Volomite's fancy-stepping sons will wind up as the city slicker of this wartime-transplanted Hambletonian.

As a matter of fact, it looks like a Volomite family reunion for this edition of the trotting horse world series, which the war's transportation troubles forced out of Goshen, N.Y., and dropped onto Empire City's racing strip, where the gallopers have been the whole show for more than a quarter of a century.

Not only are the three "favorites" in the field of 12—Volo Song, Worthy Boy and Phonograph—all sons of the sturdy 1929 stepper who has become one of the sport's great sires, but four others of the dozen three-year-olds also call him "Papa."

The buggy-whip wizards in the crowd of 20,000 expected to sit in on the Hambletonian's first showing in the New York neighborhood gave all except the top three a brush-off. And of the trio, Volo Song, two-year-old champ of 1942, unbeaten this year and a probable 3-2 betting chore, was Mr. Big. Bought for $5,000, he figured to make it two straight for Owner Bill Strang, the Brooklyn warehouseman and to become the fourth winner 70-year-old Ben White would drive to the paying teller's window. Strang and White hit the jackpot with the Ambassador a year ago and before that Ben did the steering for Rosalind in '36 and Mary Reynolds in '33.

Volo has dropped a heat apiece this summer to Worthy Boy, from the barn of Mrs. James B. Johnson of Rochester, Mich., and Phonograph, a $7,000 yearling buy owned by Joe Burke, of Plainfield, N.J. Because of this, as well as the fact that Phonograph has a 2:02 ¾-mile to his credit and Worthy Boy has run a 2:03 effort, these two are rated the leading magicians to pull a rabbit out of the hat—provided anything is going to beat Volo to the $23,263 purse waiting for the one who can come home first in two of the three-mile heats, which gets under way at 3:15 p.m. E.D.T. Phonograph will be handled by Tom Berry, who won in 1930 and Sep Palin, who piloted the great Greyhound in 1935, will be in the "cradle" behind Worthy Boy.

Lawson Named Referee For Main Bout of Card

With the importance of a title bout looming up between "Wild Bill" Longson, of Salt Lake City, and "Killer John" Katan, the Palermo assassin, at the Hume Arena tonight, the Ontario Athletic Commission today announced that Phil Lawson, popular Toronto ring official, had been named as special referee for this title bout.

Elated with the appointment of Lawson as referee for his bout with the champion, "Black-jack" Katan offered to bet his entire share of the night's purse he would beat Longson before the final bell tolled at the Hume Arena tonight. "With Maxwell out of the way and a man the calibre of Lawson on the job I have a better chance to eat this puffed-up, broken-down, self-styled champ from Salt Lake City," Katan declared to Promoter Tunney today. Longson merely smiled and added — "So, I've got to beat a Canadian rassler and Canadian referee. Well, I've done it before and I'll do it again."

In support of the championship bout Earl McCready meets Al Dunlop in the semi-final, while Jerry Monahan takes on Doc Felice in what should be a thrilling opener.

TOO BIG FOR ARMY

"Too tall," says the army, so Mike Naymick, 6-foot 8-inch right-hander of the Cleveland Indians, has been turned down for service. Mike, who ranks with Johnny Gee of the Pittsburgh Pirates as the tallest pitchers in baseball, is a native of Weirton, W. Va., and hurled for Wilkes-Barre during the 1942 season.

Flyers Play Strong Trenton Softball Team This Evening

Entered in the Bay of Quinte Sports Service League, as well as the O.A.S.A., the No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" meet the strong Trenton Air Station softball team in a league match to be played at No. 5 I.T.S. this evening. F/O. Warren, sports officer at the local Initial Training School situated on the old O.S.D. cite, telephoned the Ontario Intelligencer this morning to state that the general public would be welcome to attend this important R.C.A.F. league scheduled game this evening.

New York, Aug. 11—(AP)—Six sons and a daughter of Volomite are in the Hambletonian field of 12 today. . . Would you say Volo might? Okay, we were just asking. Zeke (the banana man) Bonura is handling the army's baseball in North Africa and Johnny Goodman has been decked out in his G. I.'s at Fort Crook, Neb. . . The tip is out that George P. (Wetwash)) Marshall is trying to trade his Washington Redskins' holdout, Anvil Andy Farkas, to New York Giants for Tuffy Leemans, even up. How about throwing in three shirts, damp-dry, George?

Dis-A and Dat-A

S'pose you noticed where today's big league schedule has games starting at 10:30 a.m. and 12:30, 1:30, 2:30, 3:30, 5:30, 5:45, 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. . . and what time does the midnight train leave? Next step probably is a time table with "X-runs Sundays and alternate blue Mondays." . . That'd be for the Athletics naturally. Pat Purcell, of the Minneapolis Times notes it is unlawful out that-a-way to use narcotics while hunting deer and inquires when is it legal?

Today's Guest Star:

Dick Freeman, Boston Chronicle: The woes of a wartime coach are many and varied. Jess Neely at Rice expected to look over some 90 youths in the summer football practice session last Thursday. The number was cut down with no notice. The reason? It was payday for the naval trainees stationed at Rice, and if you think they are going to abandon the line in front of the pay-window to practise football, you don't know youths" . . (or old guys, either, Dick.)

YANKEES HAVE HARD TIME TO WIN ON ROAD

Receive 10-2 Setback in St. Louis in Last Swing Around Circuit

GORDON IS HURT

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York Yankees, when they were better known as the Bronx Bombers and Murderers' Row, used to sweep through the parks of their opponents as though they were at home.

But this year the American League leaders are having a lot of difficulty trying to keep from getting lost every time they stray away from the subway circuit.

On their first western trip they dropped six of seven games. On their next time around they lost four of their first five games and might have come home in disgrace except for the feat of capturing two doubleheaders in two days at Chicago at the end of the trip.

The Yanks started their last swing of the western circuit yesterday again on the wrong foot — collapsing 10-2 before St. Louis Browns.

Hank Borowy started on the mound against the Browns, gave up a pair of two-run homers to George McQuinn and Chet Laabs in the first four innings and finally was shelled to the showers by a four-run rally in the fifth.

Altogether the Browns made 13 hits, including three by Mark Christman, who was at shortstop because Vernon Stephens has a lame ankle and a weak bat.

The Yanks not only lost the ball game, but also Joe Gordon, temporarily. The star second sacker strained his back making a force play in the first inning and in the fifth retired from the game.

In yesterday's only other major league game Chicago White Sox beat Boston Red Sox 4-2 at night to break their third-place tie with Detroit. Lefty Edgar Smith pitched six-hit ball and both runs off him were unearned.

Eleven games are on the schedule today, giving baseball a continuous program from morning until late at night.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 141

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bridge gives leisure time employment in a game of much enjoyment. How much pleasure you get from it may depend on how you gum it.

To some, the joy of bridge is in playing the game without strict adherence to routine. To others, the real charm is in being accurate and consistent.

Horse Sense bridge gives you the rules that are straight down the middle. When you know them and want to deviate, that's your own funeral.

The backbone rule in Horse Sense is T-A-N; the order of choice of bids: takeout, assist, no-trump. It is the routine to follow in any round of bidding.

You have this hand:

♠9 6
♥A K Q
♦A J 9 5
♣K 7 4 2

Your opening bid with that hand is one diamond. What will be your second round bid? That depends on the kind of response you get from partner. After that, T-A-N will tell you exactly.

An opening bid of one in a suit promises, among other things, five suit tricks with four no-trump tricks. A no-trump trick is any high card, an ace, or a king or a queen. Suit tricks include short cards.

Your hand contains six suit tricks with five no-trump tricks. So, you have an unshown suit trick and an unshown no-trump trick. Either or both may be shown later, if necessary.

Each raise in suit consumes another suit trick. Each voluntary no-trump bid consumes another no-trump trick. Each forced bid in no-trump does not consume another no-trump trick.

Suppose partner responds with one spade. That is a takeout to a new suit. A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. So, you are now forced to bid again.

Following T-A-N, you have not another takeout. Nor have you support for spades. So, the only bid left is no-trump. You are forced to bid one no-trump on the second round.

Since you were forced to bid no-trump, you did not consume your fifth no-trump trick. Since you did not increase the last partnership number with a suit bid, you did not consume your sixth suit trick.

In that manner, you now have a later round raise in a suit bid, if necessary. Also a later round voluntary no-trump bid, if you find it necessary or advisable.

LESSON NO. 142

Listen, baby. You were weaned from opening bids of one and their immediate responses. And I just got through nursing you regularly with an opener's second round bids.

Now, for awhile, I'm going to put you on a steady diet of second-round bids by the responding hand. You may get sick of so much of them for so long a time. But I am doing it for your own good.

Before I forget it, let me show you how to improve your bridge. First you deal out a hand. Not four hands. Just one hand of 13 cards. And handle it as a solitaire game.

Do not deal a hand for your partner. You do not see any cards in your partner's hand. You merely assume his bids and decide what your next bids should be.

First, assume your partner opens with one club. When you have decided your answer to that, start over. Assume he opens with a diamond, then a heart, then a spade, then a no-trump.

Exhaust your answers to any opening bid of one. Then start on the second round. Keep the same hand and decide your bids after any second round bids by partner.

That's the kind of practice you need to give you confidence in subsequent rounds of bidding with any hand. You need no experienced player with you. If in doubt, refer to my 25-cent booklet. Or ask me.

You have this hand:

♠9 5 2
♥K 7 6 3
♦8 5
♣A Q 7 4

This random hand will be our daily guinea pig for the next two weeks. We'll experiment with it for second round responses after second round bids by an opening bidder.

The best time to practice solitaire bridge is after coffee is served at breakfast. Or after dinner. That will give friend husband a chance to read his newspaper without being pestered.

Except for that, I don't give advice to the lovelorn.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

First Lesson

On the first morning after the honeymoon the husband got up early, went down to the kitchen, and brought his wife her breakfast in bed. She was delighted.

Hubby spoke later: "Have you noticed every detail on the tray?"

"Of course; every single thing, darling."

"Good! Well, that's how I want my breakfast served every morning after this."

Old Kingston Custom.

"Kingston has requested a delay in the date of declaring a winner for the O.A.S.A. playdowns. The winner of the Kingston league is slated to enter the provincial eliminations Aug. 18th., but it will be almost impossible to complete the local semi-finals and a three out of five series by that time. The Ontario Association was notified that Kingston will have to drop out of the playdowns unless the time for playoffs is extended until Aug. 25th.," stated Scribe Bill Walshe in the Kingston press Monday.

Belleville softball play-offs were perhaps in just as precarious a position as the Limestone City situation last week end, but the local mushball heads didn't go off half-cocked threatening to bolt from the O.A.S.A. unless their demands were adhered to. Annually the Kingston league comes up with some special demand, usually for an extension in the O.A.S.A. playdowns, until other leagues in the district would be disappointed if some concessions weren't asked for by Art Casterson, Ernie Simpson and company.

All the Kingston heads had to do was merely request an extension and such would have been granted, but to threaten withdrawal if their requests weren't adhered to is just small town business.

After all the Kingston winners were drawn against the Belleville champions, if and when crowned, in the first round of O.A.S.A. playdowns. Belleville would not have objected to any suggestion of postponing the O.A.S.A. zone opener, but on the contrary welcomed it as we cannot declare a winner much before the 21st of the month as it it. However, Harry Rollins, vice president of the O.A.S.A., granted the Kingston concession and now everybody's happy, including Mister Simpson and company.

Flyers Too Good.

Not only did the No. 5 I.T.S. "Flyers" make it two straight over Reliance in beating them 5 to 2 last night, but the Airmen turned the trick in a most convincing manner. True enough it was anybody's game up until the eighth and should have been tied at that point had Gerald Ethier slid home in the second. But he didn't. When the Airmen unleashed their power attack in the eighth it was all over. Mullins' triple and Bancroft's double cinched the piece, but even after Johnnie Bawden had retired the next two batters practically singlehanded, back bounced Muldoon and Daniels (he got three hits) with singles to salt the bacon away.

Although the Flyers only out-hit Reliance 12 to 10, this fact must be taken into consideration—the Airmen touched Bawden for two triples (those kind always hurt), three doubles and five singles. The best the Reliance could do was to get to Steve Borovitch, the Flyers' new pitcher from Detroit, for one-base blows, and even they were well scattered.

Remember When . . .

Jimmie Braddock lost a ten-round decision to Babe Hunt, Ponca City boxer, 13 years ago tonight at Boston. Braddock defeated Max Baer for the world's heavyweight boxing crown in 1935 and lost the title to Joe Louis June 22, 1937. Braddock acted as referee in a wrestling bout at the Hume Arena in the fall of 1942. Incidentally "Wild Bill" Longson, current world's heavyweight wrestling champion, defends his title against John Katan, the Canadian challenger at the local Palace de Sport here tonight by the way of suggestion.

A Lesson To Him.

In 1927 when Master Melvin Ott was just a brash young boy of 18 and beginning to bud as one of baseball's greatest stars, John McGraw discovered him in a poker game with Bill Terry and a few other veterans. "That will cost you a $100 fine," McGraw told him. "You're too young to be playing poker." That finished the Ott career as a poker player even though McGraw, in his typical fashion, returned the $100 as a bonus at the season's end.

McCabe's a Daddy.

Perhaps the proudest hurler on the Albany Senators' staff these days is Ralph (Highpockets) McCabe, the Belleville lad who was farmed out by the Toronto Maple Leafs to that Eastern League club. Ralph is the proud father of a ten-pound baby son.

Incidentally it was reported recently that Ralph had quit baseball and joined the Canadian Active Service (army). Actually he did return from Albany and join the Active Army recently, but was only in long enough to receive his medical examination and a permanent discharge owing to physical disability. It was the second such examination within a year. He immediately returned to Albany and joined the Senators, who are now perched in second place with McCabe having won his last two starts before his proud moment of becoming a father. Mother and baby doing well; so is poppa.

THIS AND THAT—

With over 50 games to go, Luke Appling, 33-year-old White Sox shortstop, needs but seven more hits to place himself in the coveted 2,000-hit class in the major leagues ...It should be like breaking sticks for a man who's heading for the American League batting championship of 1943, and that's Luke Appling ... Other active players in the 2,000 and more hit class are Joe Cronin, Dick Bartell, Billy Herman, Roger Cramer, Mel Ott, Joe Medwick and Paul Waner ... Of this crowd Waner has cracked out more than 3,000 safe blows ... Regina Rough-riders will remain in the Western Canada Football Union again this year ... Dean Griffin will continue as playing coach. ... Did you know "Wild Bill" Longson, who defends his world heavyweight wrestling crown here tonight, was in hospital ten months with a broken back three years ago ... Longson sustained his injury, a pile-driving, backbreaker at the hands of Man Mountain Dean, but today uses that same hold on his opponents. ... So watch out "Palermo John" ... F/O Warren, who has taken over the reins of the No. 5 ITS. softball team since Archie Green left, phoned in today to say the Belleville Flyers were playing the Trenton Airmen at No. 5 ITS. in a Bay of Quinte Service League game this evening ... Belleville fans will be made welcome.

AT THE BELLE

She learned to say "Johnny I Love You," but it took a lot of teaching from a fighting Yank. In this scene from the new 20th Century-Fox hit, "China Girl," Gene Tierney and George Montgomery find time for thrilling romance in a world teeming with fury and flames. "Dixie Dugan," the honey of the funnies, is the second hit.

AT THE CAPITOL

Mary Martin and Dick Powell are that way about each other in Paramount's new filmusical "Happy Go Lucky," the Technicolor comedy coming next to the Capitol. The added action hit "Riders of the Northwest Mounted" features Russell Hayden.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Happy Go Lucky"
(In Technicolor)

Five hit tunes, plus a couple of catchy extras, is the score for Paramount's newest musicomedy, "Happy Go Lucky," which comes next to the Capitol Theatre in Technicolor glory, with Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken, Rudy Vallee and Sir Lancelot and his Calypso songs.

The music, written by Frank Loesser and Jimmy McHugh, is already being sung far and wide. It includes, "Happy Go Lucky," "Let's Get Lost," "Murder, He Says," "The Fuddy Duddy Watchmaker," and "Sing a Tropical Song." The latter is sung by Sir Lancelot, the Trinidad Calypso man, along with a little number called "Ugly Woman." To give you some idea of how a Calypso song goes, "Ugly Woman" lyrics start out with "From a logical point of view, better marry a woman uglier than you." It goes on from there.

"Riders of the Northwest Mounted"

Russel Hayden, popular Columbia cowboy star, wears the red-coated uniform of a Canadian Mountie in his latest outdoor adventure drama, "Riders of the Northwest Mounted," the added action hit coming next to the Capitol Theatre, the new thriller also features Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys in the cast.

A color Cartoon and Zane Grey's "King of the Mounties," completes another grand show for the whole family.

AT THE BELLE

"The Human Comedy"

Fay Bainter at the peak of her career as the result of her performance in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" plays one of the leading dramatic roles in William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy" now closing at the Belle theatre with a cast of many of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's top-flight players. "The Human Comedy" was brought to the screen by Clarence Browin, and has Mickey Rooney Frank Morgan, James Craig, Marsha Hunt and many other well known players in the cast.

The Canadian Movietone News described by Lowell Thomas and a funny color cartoon "Red Hot Riding Hood" complete the program.

Gene Tierney "China Girl"

Mrs. Charlie Chan, screen wife of the philosophical sleuth, appears in support of Gene Tierney, George Montgomery and Lynn Bari in 20th Century-Fox's "China Girl", her first picture since Charlie Chan retired from the screen. And, strangely enoughg, her real name is Ole Chan. She has not let the retirement of Charlie stop her career.

Director Henry Hathaway, convinced by here Oriental bearing, awarded her a speaking part in the romntic adventure film, coming next to the Belle theatre and featuring Victor McLaglen, Alan Baxter, Sig Rumann, Myron McCormick and Bobby Blake.

"Dixie's" in Pictures!

That sweetheart of the funnies, "Dixie Dugan", makes her screen debut at the Belle theatre as the companion feature.

Introducing lovely Lois Andrews in the title role, the hilarious new picture is set in wartime Washington. James Ellison plays Dixie's boy-friend, while Charlie Ruggles and Charlotte Greenwood enact the parental roles in the flimization of the famous comic strip originated by J. P. McEvoy.

Dixie in on the warpath—she sabotages saboteurs and foils fifth columnists in a way that will make you roar, ccording to reports from advance previews.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Keep 'Em Slugging "

Tingling, melodramatic action, the kind originated by the famous Dead End Kids and Little Tough Guys, is said to dominate their newest Universal picture, "Keep 'Em Slugging," coming next to the McCarthy Theatre.

The popular movie kids, including Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan, Gabriel Dell and Norman Abbott, have leading roles in the exciting film, which features Evelyn Ankers, Don Porter and Elyse Knox. Others in the cast are Samuel S. Hinds, Shemp Howard and Frank Albertson.

The original story, by Edward Handler and Robert Gordon, deals with a hi-jacking enterprise in which the lads become involved. A great metropolitan department store is the background for much of the thrilling entertainment. As employees of this institution the boys have brand new opportunities to reveal their resourcefulness in coping with the criminals.

Miss Ankers and Don Porter have romantic roles. Shemp Howard, one of Universal's leading comedians, supplies many laughable scenes and the villain of the film is portrayed by Frank Albertson. Highlight of the story, a free-for-all fight in a warehouse, is declared to be one of the season's most furious cinema events.

CHAPTER 32

"Pearl Harbor" had come and gone, bringing swift changes in national thinking and living. Christmas had come and gone and the damp, raw days of January and February.

Because she had little exercise these days Meegan got off the bus one night six blocks from the apartment house. The hint of early spring lifted her spirit. There was newness in spring, always. But there was newness about everything now, a keen awareness of danger, a new appreciation of a freedom heretofore indolently taken for granted and a sharp desire for hard work that stimulated the mind and body.

She wondered if anyone could be working harder than Toby. He was working seven days a week. He had been promoted. Now Roy's quiet approval of him meant everything to him.

In a short while and in the people she saw she had seen startling changes. The changes were as startling to Van as to the old cobbler who had been repairing her shoes for as long as she could remember. For while Van's business had failed for the duration, the old cobbler's business had tripled. People could not buy Van's products now—but the probable scarcity of leather had sent them to the cobbler's with their old shoes, heretofore discarded, to be mended. Van's former showrooms were closed but one had to wait in line at the old cobbler's whose worn and weary look had given way to the look of a successful and very busy man.

Sue and Van were together again though the circumstances of their coming together again would never be known. With no apology but rather with pride Sue had announced to her friends that Van had gone to work at the shipyard, that she had discharged the two maids and that she had rented two rooms to war workers. New people admitted into her life, Meegan had thought. And knowing Sue she had thought that there was nothing Sue liked more than the feeling of being capable and creative. Now her capabilities and creativeness ran not to decorating rooms but to managing on a slim budget and doing a superlative job of it. In this new struggle she would be perfect, too, Meegan thought. For it was the same proud, unbending Sue who walked down Charles Street with her children and her husband and her dog. It was Sue who always dominated her family scene. But it was Sue who held her family together during this critical time, whose strength Van borrowed until recently he had lost the look of a whipped man. Her friends were saying nice things about Sue now. When they wanted to speak of a woman who had made sacrifices uncomplainingly and whose patriotism was sound, they spoke of her.

Tonight would be a quiet evening at home, Meegan thought, there was no class to attend and no social function. She wondered how many soldiers and sailors and marines she had danced with this winter at parties arranged specifically for them. They came from everywhere, lingered a short while and were gone. Several wrote to her. One boy from a Montana ranch wrote poetry to her from Cairo.

And always at those parties she looked vainly for Fayne. Even in the moving mass of uniforms she believed that if he had been there, she would have seen him. But she never saw him. As she read the newspapers, hoping to see his name in them, she had come to believe recently that he was out of the country. One night she dreamed that he was dead. Another night she dreamed that they were together. There were few hours in the day when he was out of her mind. She did not want him out of her mind. When he left, she always called him back.

Her mother greeted her as she came into the apartment.

"I had such a nice day, dear! Erica called for me and we drove out to Helen's farm. Really, Helen is marvelous, the things she does. They're going to have pigs next year and she said she'd give us a large ham. And of course they'll have quantities of fruit next summer. Helen works like a man. Roy does not have to think of the farm she manages so well. I told her you were looking much better and had gained five pounds."

"How are the children?" She slipped out of the camel hair coat and lifted the small brown hat from her hair. The brown wool jumper and yellow sweater she wore had been a favorite winter costume.

"The healthiest children I've ever seen. Fat and rosycheeked. They're becoming quite fond of me."

They went into the dining room for dinner. For months Meegan had thought how fortunate it was that her mother did most of the talking and was so filled with the little events of her life she did not notice the sadness that lay heavily over Meegan. Nor was it any longer a sadness resulting from worry over money. The island house had been sold and the money invested in war bonds. Toby had paid back the money he had borrowed and Meegan had received an increase in her salary at the hospital. They were out of debt and living within their income at last.

But the sadness that lay heavily upon her came from the shame of making murderers of Toby and her friends and from the finality of her good-bye with Fayne. Because Clare was dead and he was free she had had to construct her thoughts of him anew and think of him unattached from Clare and marriage. He would be different now, she thought, a younger, gayer person. He had nothing to conceal, nothing to pretend and his loyalty would not be sorely tried. To know him now would be to know the real Fayne, the man he was before his marriage to Clare. At times the poison that had infected her throughout the summer seemed as nothing to the sorely tried loyalty of Fayne.

They were having coffee in the living room when the telephone rang and she went into the foyer to answer it. Adele usually called at this hour.

She said, "Hello," and waited for Adele's raucous, good-natured voice.

But it did not come. No voice came to her ear for a minute.

Then, "Meegan?"

"Yes, this is Meegan."

"And this is Fayne."

Forever after she knew how she looked at that moment because there was a mirror over the hall table that revealed her face as if suddenly lighted from within.

"Fayne?"

"Yes," he said briskly. "I'm calling from the station in Washington. My train leaves in a few minutes for Baltimore. I want you to meet it."

Brisk and forceful. She could see him. He was in uniform, he was always in uniform now, his fair head bent toward a telephone, his firmly cut mouth speaking briskly and forcefully over forty odd miles.

He would think her a fool if she cried. Besides, she wouldn't like the picture of herself in the mirror if she cried. She smiled and there was new vitality in her voice when she said, "Of course I'll meet it. It will be awfully good to see you again."

He laughed quietly. "I'll forgive you for your understatement this time. It will be nothing short of wonderful to see you again. I don't know why I don't wait to see you to tell you how long I've waited to make this call."

"I think I've been waiting for it."

"That's all I wanted to know. I'll see you very soon."

When she replaced the telephone she saw her mother looking with lifted brows and parted lips.

"Who was that, dear?"

"That was Fayne Christopher. I am going to meet his train."

"Oh! And I'm going to meet him at last! Oh, I hope so!" She frowned then. "Meegan, is he . . I don't want to pry."

"And I don't want to keep it to myself any longer. I love him and now I can say it and live it."

"Where are you going?"

"To get my hat and coat."

"But aren't you going to change your dress and shoes. You're wearing your working clothes!"

She was putting on the small brown hat that sat back from the high wave of her fair hair when she turned and said, "He'll be wearing his working clothes."

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma went to the movies with Mrs. Hewes, and pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, saying, According to the clock and your mother's last words, it's time for you to go to bed.

Yes sir, I was just thinking, pop, I said, and pop said, If you were thinking of going to bed of your own volition, it's too bad I spoke up and spoiled your innocent little game.

No sir, pop, I was wondering whether to stay a batcheler or whether to get married, I mean later, I said, and pop said, It's a choice that confronts the best of us, have you settled on your final choice?

Well if I stay a bacheler and keep house for myself I could go in the kitchen all I wanted and even make myself 4 different kinds of candy for dinner if I felt like it, only then of course I'd have to clean it all up myself and I guess it would be a pretty big of a job, I said, and pop said, I guess it would at that, especially after 4 kinds of candy. It seems there's something to be said for and against every important decision. For instance there's something to be said for having a family of well trained children always ready and willing to run your errands for you, he said.

G, that's right, only there's something to be said against it too, pop, because I might always be worrying about whether they were breaking their legs, and if I had a lot of children it would make a lot of legs to worry about, but a rich batchelor could hire a row of messenger boys to sit in the front hall waiting to be sent places. And anyways, pop, how do I know I wouldn't make a mistake and pick out the wrong wife? I said.

That's easy you just wait for some obliging lady to pick you out, and if she shows that much good taste and discrimination, she must be okay, pop said. Now scram, he said.

Meaning to bed.
